One Zabur Ali mortgaged by conditional sale certain shares in each of four villages. Two of these villages were of pure zamindari tenure, the others were imperfect pattidari. Proceedings were taken in 1881 by the mortgagee under Regulation No. XVII of 1806. The year of grace provided by s. 8 of that Regulation expired in 1882. Before the expiry of the year of grace the heirs of the mortgagor deposited in Court what they thought was sufficient to discharge the mortgage-debt. They subsequently brought a suit for redemption, which was dismissed [316] by the Privy Council on the ground that the deposit which had been made was not sufficient. Thereupon the heirs of the mortgagee brought a suit for possession, and obtained a decree from the first Court on the 28th of July 1891, which was confirmed in appeal by the High Court on the 6th of July 1893. Formal possession was given on the 27th of November 1893. Whether or not actual possession was given under the decree of the 6th of July 1893 was a matter disputed by the parties. The mortgage by conditional sale did not entitle the mortgagees to possession during the currency of the mortgage. The plaintiff brought her suit for pre-emption on the 4th of July 1894. The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur) dismissed the suit as barred by limitation, having regard to the provisions of art. 120 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, and the case of Ali Abbas v. Kalka Prasad (1). The plaintiff appealed to the High Court.

On the appeal coming on for hearing before a Division Bench of two Judges, an issue was remitted to the lower Court under s. 566 of the Code of Civil Procedure as to whether the property in suit admitted of physical possession. The lower Court returned a finding that the property did not admit of physical possession. After the receipt of this finding, to which the appellant took objections under s. 567 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the appeal was laid before a Full Bench.

Pandit Sundar Lal (with whom Mr. Ghulam Mujtaba) for the appellant contended that the suit was not barred by limitation. Article 10 of schedule II of Act No. XV of 1877 applies to all cases of sales of property. It applies equally to a sale which, though in its inception it was only a mortgage by way of conditional sale, has now matured into an absolute sale by foreclosure. On the facts found by the Court below on the issue remitted by the High Court under s. 566 of the Code of Civil Procedure the whole of the property sold is susceptible of physical possession being taken. Each co-sharer collected his share of rent [317] directly from the tenants, and being thus in possession of his share in the zamindari, he was also in possession of the joint lands unoccupied by tenants which appertained to the zamindari. The word "physical" implies some corporal or perceptible act done which of itself conveys, or ought to convey, to the mind of a person notice that his right has been prejudiced. (Shiam Sundar v. Amanant Begam) (2). The collection of his share of the rents from the tenants was such act, and it indicated that the vendee had taken physical possession. The suit being instituted within a year from the date the physical possession was so taken is within time.

Mr. T. Conlan and Munshi Jwala Prasad, for the respondents, do not appear to have been called on.

The judgment of the Court (EDGE, C. J., BLAIR, BANERJI, BURKITT and AIKMAN, JJ.) was delivered by EDGE, C. J.:—

(1) 14 A. 405.

(2) 9 A. 234 (239).

1898
FEB. 16.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 315
(F.B.) =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 61.

1898

JUDGMENT.

FEB. 16.

FULL BENCH.

20 A. 315

(F.B.)=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 61.

This was a suit for pre-emption. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that it was barred by art. 120 of the second schedule of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877. The facts of the case are shortly these:—In 1868 Zahur Ali Khan mortgaged by conditional sale certain shares in each of four villages. Two of those villages were of pure zamindari tenure, the others were imperfect pattidari. Proceedings were taken in 1881 by the mortgagee under Regulation No. XVII of 1806. The year of grace provided by s. 8 of that regulation expired in 1882. Before the expiry of the year of grace the heirs of the mortgagor deposited in Court what they thought was sufficient to discharge the mortgage debt. They subsequently brought a suit for redemption, which was dismissed by the Privy Council on the 13th of July 1886, on the ground that the deposit which had been made was not sufficient. Thereupon the heirs of the mortgagee brought a suit for possession, and obtained a decree from the first Court on the 28th of July 1891, which was confirmed in appeal by this Court, on the 6th of July 1893. It is alleged on the one side and denied on the other that the heirs of [318] the mortgagee obtained possession in execution of the decree of the 6th of July 1893, on the 27th of November 1893. Formal possession at any rate was given on that date. The mortgage by way of conditional sale did not entitle the mortgagees to possession during the currency of the mortgage. This suit for pre-emption was brought on the 4th of July 1894. It is contended on behalf of the plaintiff, appellant here, that art. 10 of the second schedule to Act No. XV of 1877 applies—that contention being based on the argument that the property sold, in respect of which pre-emption was claimed, does and did admit of physical possession being obtained of it. The Court below, misunderstanding the question actually decided by the Full Bench in Ali Abbas v. Kalka Prasad (1), applied art. 120 to the suit, and, as the year of grace had expired more than six years before suit, dismissed the suit on the ground of limitation. We should point out here how the Full Bench ruling has been misunderstood by the Court in question. The Full Bench in that case had not to decide what article of the Limitation Act applied. In effect what the Full Bench had to decide was—when does a pre-emptor's right to sue accrue when he claims pre-emption in respect of a mortgage by conditional sale which has become absolute? That question, although the Bench referring the case had to decide the question of limitation, was one, so far as the Full Bench was concerned, apart from the question of limitation.

The real question before us turns on what is the meaning of "physical possession." The first question is—can art. 10 apply to a sale which was in its inception a mortgage by conditional sale, but which in the result has become an absolute sale? In Nath Prasad v. Ram Paltan Ram (2), the Full Bench decided that the limitation applicable to a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption in respect of a conditional sale of a share in an undivided mahal was that prescribed by art. 120 of the second schedule to Act No. XV of 1877. So far as we can ascertain from the record, the Full Bench in deciding that question decided more [319] than was necessary for the disposal of the case before them. The learned Judges said:—"We think that the sale referred to in art. 10 must be an absolute one having immediate effect and operation, in those cases where the interest passed is capable of physical possession, by physical possession, and where it is not by the creation of a title under an instrument duly registered."

(1) 14 A. 405.

(2) 4 A. 213.

We cannot see how a sale is any the less an absolute one because it is not to take immediate effect and operation. There is certainly nothing in art. 10 to suggest that the sale mentioned in that article is limited to a sale which is to have immediate effect and operation. In our opinion, the other conditions being present necessary to make art. 10 applicable, art. 10 would apply to a sale which in its inception was a mortgage by conditional sale, but which, either by the operation of Regulation No. XVII of 1806 or by the operation of Act No. IV of 1882, had become in effect an absolute sale with the right of redemption gone. In such a case, the other conditions existing, art. 10 would apply as soon as the mortgagee had acquired the complete interest of the mortgagor. No doubt in the case before the Full Bench to which we have been referring, art. 120 was the only article which could have been applied at the particular stage of the transaction at which it came before the Court. We dissent from the proposition of law expressed obiter in that case.

In the present case if the whole of the property sold was capable of physical possession being taken by the mortgagee vendee, we should hold that art. 10 of the second schedule of Act No. XV of 1877 applied. The question really turns, as we have said, on what is the meaning of "physical possession" as that term is used in art. 10 of the second schedule to Act No. XV of 1877. It must mean something different from "actual possession," and it must mean something different from ordinary possession. In cl. (1) of s. 1 of Act No. XIV of 1859, which was the clause prescribing the limitation in suits for pre-emption, the term [320] used was "possession," and limitation ran from the time of possession being obtained by the vendee. In Goordhun v. Heera Singh (1) a Full Bench of the Sadr Diwani held that the "possession" of Act No. XIV of 1859 must be an actual and not a constructive possession. In 1868 the question came again before a Full Bench, then of this Court, and in Ganeshee Lal v. Toola Ram (2) the Full Bench decided that the possession of Act No. XIV of 1859 included constructive as well as actual possession. It is probable that that decision led to the alteration of the wording of the article relating to limitation in pre-emption suits in the next succeeding Limitation Act. In art. 10 of the second schedule to Act No. IX of 1871 it was prescribed that limitation should run from the date when actual possession was taken under the sale. Then came a Full Bench of this Court in 1876, Jageshar Singh v. Jawahir Singh (3), in which a majority of the Full Bench held that the "actual possession" of Act No. IX of 1871 was the same thing as the possession of Act No. XIV of 1859, and included constructive possession. The then Chief Justice of this Court, Sir Robert Stuart, in our opinion, was right in differing from the rest of the Full Bench. He held that the purchaser does not take actual possession of the property sold to him until he takes physical and tangible possession. The next matter to which we have to refer is that when Act No. XV of 1877 was passed, the Legislature, still determined, in our opinion, to exclude constructive possession from the possession from which limitation should run under art. 10, used the term "physical possession," and they added

1898
FEB. 16.

FULL BENCH.

20 A. 315
(F.B.)=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 61.

(1) S. D. A. N. W. P. (1866) 181.

(2) N. W. P. H. C. R. (1868) 376.

(3) 1 A. 311.

1898
FEB. 16.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 315
(F.B.) =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 61.

a different terminus of limitation in respect of property which did not admit of physical possession. As we have said, two of the villages here were of pure zamindari tenure, that is, they were villages in which the zamindars got no shares allotted to them by metes and bounds, but held fractional shares, in respect of which fractional shares they received a proportionate amount of the profits of the village. [321] It is said that the mortgagor used to receive direct from the tenants of the zamindari body his proportion of the rents payable by them. That in our opinion does not alter the case. In Unkar Das v. Narain (1) it was held that a share in an undivided zamindari mahal was not susceptible of physical possession in the sense of art. 10 of the second schedule to Act No. XV of 1877. We adhere to that decision. The Legislature meant some limitation of the term "possession" by the use of the term "physical." In our opinion, for instance, the owner of a house who has let the house to a tenant cannot be said to be in physical possession of that house so long as the tenancy subsists and his tenant remains in exclusive possession of the demised premises. In such a case the owner has parted with the physical possession to his tenant for the period of his tenancy, and the tenant alone is the person who has physical possession. It appears to us that it would be straining the English language and going contrary to the obvious intention of the Legislature to hold otherwise. In this particular case art. 10 cannot apply, because the whole of the property sold is not capable of physical possession within the meaning of that article, and no instrument of sale has been registered. The result is that, art. 10 not applying, art. 120 must apply in this case. As art. 120 applies, we have got to see when the right to sue accrued to the pre-emptor. That point is concluded by the Full Bench ruling of this Court in Ali Abbas v. Kalka Prasad (2) which in our opinion was rightly decided, but which must always be regarded as deciding merely the point referred to the Full Bench and not the question of limitation. This suit was barred by limitation when brought, and we dismiss this appeal with costs. The costs of translating and printing must be borne by the appellant.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 322 (F.B.) = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 58.

[322] FULL BENCH.

Before Sir John Edge, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Blair, Mr. Justice Banerji, Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Aikman.

SUNDAR SINGH AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. BHOLU AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [17th February, 1898.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 85—Civil Procedure Code, s. 43—Cause of action—Mortgage—Holder of two mortgages on the same property suing separately on each.

There is nothing in the Code of Civil Procedure or in the Transfer of Property Act to prevent the holder of two independent mortgages over the same property, who is not restrained by any covenant in either of them, from obtaining a decree for sale on each of them in a separate suit.

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 1030 of 1894, from a decree of L. G. Evans, Esq., District Judge of Aligarh, dated the 18th June 1894, confirming a decree of Babu Ganga Saran, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 10th July 1893.

[Diss., 30 M. 353=17 M.L.J. 301=2 M.L.T. 330; F., 3 Ind. Cas. 175 (176); R., 25 M. 108 (115)=11 M.L.J. 373; 3 A.L.J. 238=A.W.N. (1906) 112; 7 O.C. 152 (154); 22 M.L.J. 231 (237)=11 M.L.T. 63 (69)=1912 M.W.N. 59 (63)=13 Ind. Cas. 458 (461); D., 26 A. 14 (18); 37 C. 599 (596)=11 C.L.J. 551=6 Ind. Cas. 159.]

1898
FEB. 17.

FULL BENCH.

20 A. 322
(F.B.)=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 58.

THE plaintiffs in this case held a mortgage of certain property from one Bholu, dated the 21st of October 1878. In January 1883 they acquired the mortgagee interest in a mortgage given by Bholu over the same property in August 1882. In December 1890 the plaintiffs obtained a decree for sale on the mortgage of October 1878. In the suit in which that decree was obtained the plaintiffs made no mention of their claim under the mortgage of August 1882. In May 1893 the plaintiffs, not yet having executed their decree obtained on the former mortgage in December 1890, brought the present suit asking for a decree for sale in virtue of their second mortgage of August 1882.

The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Aligarh) dismissed the suit as being barred by the provisions of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The plaintiffs appealed. The lower appellate Court (District Judge of Aligarh) dismissed the appeal, holding that the suit was barred by the operation of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure read with s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. From this decree the plaintiffs appealed to the High Court.

Mr. W. K. Porter, for the appellants.—Neither of the sections upon which the judgment and decree of the lower appellate Court were based applied to the facts of the case. Section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not apply, because the plaintiffs' [323] two mortgages gave rise to two separate causes of action. Section 85 of the Transfer of Property Act could not apply, because all the necessary parties were in fact on the record. So long as the plaintiffs had not executed their first decree by sale of the mortgage property there was nothing in law to prevent their getting a decree on their second mortgage and executing both decrees together.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondents.—Section 67 of Act No. IV of 1882 contemplates a sale of the "property" as distinguished from merely the bare rights and interests of a mortgagor, and s. 85 insists upon the joinder in a suit for sale of all persons having a claim based on a mortgage of the property sought to be sold with the object of either redeeming or foreclosing them, so that the property may be sold from the mortgage in favour of the person so joined—Mata Din Kasodhan v. Kazim Husain (1). If the mortgage in suit had been assigned to a third person the plaintiffs would have been bound to implead him in their suit on the bond of the 21st of October 1878 and the sale in execution of the decree on the mortgage of the 21st of October 1878, would have been free of the incumbrance of the mortgage in suit. The plaintiffs being the mortgagees under both the mortgages, in obtaining their decree on the mortgage of the 21st of October 1878, must be taken to have abandoned their claim on their second mortgage.

JUDGMENT.

The judgment of the Court (EDGE, C.J., BLAIR, BANERJI, BURKITT and AIKMAN, JJ.) was delivered by EDGE, C.J.—This appeal has been referred to the Full Bench. The plaintiffs were mortgagees under a mortgage of the 21st of October 1878.

1898
FEB. 17.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 322
(F.B.)=
18 A.W.N.
(1898 58.

On that mortgage they obtained, on the 2nd of December 1896, a decree for sale under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act. Before they brought the suit in which they obtained that decree the plaintiffs had become assignees of a mortgage of the 1st of August 1882, which was made to a third party by the same mortgagor and which mortgaged the same property as that [324] which was mortgaged by the mortgage of the 21st of October 1878. The mortgage of 1882 was a mortgage by which it was agreed that the amount of the mortgage debt should be payable on demand. The present suit, which was brought on the 10th of May 1893, was brought for the enforcement of the mortgage of 1882, and in this suit the plaintiffs seek a decree for sale under s. 88 of Act No. IV of 1882. The first Court dismissed the suit, applying s. 43 of Act No. XIV of 1882 and s. 85 of Act No. IV of 1882. The application of s. 43 had reference to the previous suit. What application s. 85 of Act No. IV of 1882 could have had to this case it is impossible to say: all the necessary parties were before the Court. The plaintiffs appealed and the Court of first appeal dismissed their appeal on the same grounds. From that decree dismissing their appeal this appeal has been brought.

Each suit was a suit for the enforcement of the security which was given for the debt. Consequently each suit was a suit in respect of which the cause of action was different from the cause of action in the other. Section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure could have no application to such a case as this. This is conceded by the learned advocate for the respondents. So far as we are aware there is nothing in the Code of Civil Procedure or in the Transfer of Property Act which prevents a holder of two independent mortgages over the same property, who is not restrained by any covenant in either of them, from obtaining a decree for sale on each of them in a separate suit. Here the plaintiffs were entitled to obtain their decree for sale on the mortgage of 1878. It appears to us that their having obtained that decree can be no bar to their right to obtain a decree for sale on the mortgage of 1882. What benefit the two decrees will be to the plaintiffs it is difficult to see, except that the plaintiffs may execute one of these decrees by sale of the property, and, if there is a surplus arising from the sale, they may probably attach that surplus in execution of the other decree. One thing is quite clear, that the plaintiffs cannot sell the property twice [325] over, and they cannot sell under the second decree subject to the first. That would be selling the equity or redemption, a right which is not acknowledged or recognized by Act No. IV of 1882, and would be a mischief which has been struck at by s. 99 of that Act. This Court in Mata Din Kasodhan v. Kazim Husain (1), which has been followed in many other cases, has recognized that the intention of the Legislature was to put an end to the abuses which existed before Act No. IV of 1882 came into force, and that there can be no sale of the equity of redemption apart from the property itself at the instance of the mortgagee.

We allow this appeal with costs, and we set aside the decrees of the lower appellate Court and of the Court of first instance with costs and remand this case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the Court of first instance to be disposed of on the merits.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

(1) 13 A. 492.

20 A. 325=18 A.W.N. (1898) 59.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

BHAGIRATHI MISR (Plaintiff) v. SHEOBHIK AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [1st March, 1898].

1898
MARCH 1.APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.*Hindu law—Joint Hindu family—Rights of son in joint ancestral property—Mortgage.*20 A. 325=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 59.

A member of a joint Hindu family has no power in his father's life-time to make a mortgage of any part of the ancestral family property. Balgobind Das v. Narain Lal (1) and Madho Parshad v. Mehrban Singh (2) referred to.

[R., 6 A.L.J. 11=A.W.N. (1908) 163=5 M.L.T. 56=1 Ind. Cas. 83; D., 33 A. 783 (789)=8 A.L.J. 901=11 Ind. Cas. 220 (221).]

THE facts of this case are as follows :—

The land in question in the suit was the ancestral property of one Mattu and his son Daulat. Mattu sold the greater portion of the property to the plaintiffs by deed dated the 15th of January [326] 1889. The remainder of the property was hypothecated by Mattu to the plaintiffs by a registered bond, under which the property mortgaged was brought to sale and bought in by the plaintiffs on the 20th of June 1894. On the 1st of September 1891, during the life-time of Mattu, his son Daulat gave a bond to Sheobhik and Balkaran mortgaging a certain share in the property in question. Subsequently, after the death of Mattu, the plaintiffs sued for a declaration of their right to the entire property and that the mortgage given by Daulat to Sheobhik and Balkaran was of no effect so far as he was concerned. The Court of first instance (Munsif of Jaunpur) decreed the plaintiff's claim, holding that Daulat in the life-time of his father had no authority to mortgage any portion of the property so as to defeat the alienations made by his father Mattu. The defendants Sheobhik and Balkaran appealed. The lower appellate Court (Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur) decreed the appeal, holding that Daulat had a right to mortgage his share of the ancestral property. From this decree the plaintiffs appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—This is the suit of a plaintiff mortgagee for a declaration of right under his mortgage and also under a deed of sale of a certain land which were made by one Mattu. The defence was that the son of the mortgagor had during his life-time, upon the 1st of September 1891, given a mortgage to the defendants of a portion of the property. The Court of first instance decreed the claim of the plaintiff. The Court of first appeal held that the defendant's mortgage was a good and subsisting mortgage. That finding is the part of the judgment impeached in this appeal. The case of the appellant is simple. He says that Daulat as a member of a joint Hindu family, which he is found to have been, had no power, during the life-time of his father, to make a mortgage of any part of the ancestral family property.

^{*} Second Appeal No. 1185 of 1895, from a decree of Babu Mohan Lal, Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur, dated the 19th September 1895, modifying a decree of Maulvi Shah Amjad-ullah, Munsif of Jaunpur, dated the 18th June 1895.

(1) 15 A. 389.

(2) 18 C. 157.

1898
MARCH 1.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 325 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 59.

The plaintiff's contention is supported by two cases decided by the Privy Council. One is reported in [327] I. L. R., 15 All. 339; the other in I. L. R., 18 Calc. 157. It seems to us that those cases go to the full length of the appellant's contention. It is suggested for the defendants respondents that the deed executed by Daulat was voidable only and not void, and that his mortgagees ought to have been impleaded in the previous suit brought by the appellant upon his mortgage. No authority was cited in support of that proposition, which is at all upon all fours with the facts of this case. The authority upon which Mr. Gobind Prasad relied is in I. L. R. 19 Calc., 123. That was a special case, and the facts do not, in our opinion, appear to be upon all fours with the facts of this case. The appeal will be allowed with costs. The effect will be to restore the decree of the Court of first instance setting aside that of the lower appellate Court.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 327 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 54.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Banerji.

PHUL CHAND (Defendant) v. CHHOTE LAL AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*
[1st March 1898.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 135—Actionable claim—Person claiming the benefit of s. 135 not obliged to pay the amount paid by the assignee before judgment.

Held that a person who is entitled to claim the benefit of s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882 does not lose the benefit of that section if he puts the assignee to proof of the price paid by him and waits until the amount of the price has been determined and declared by the Court. There is nothing in the section to preclude the debtor from securing his discharge by payment of the decree. Rani v. Ajudhia Prasad (1); Muchiram Barik v. Ishan Chunder Chuckerbutti (2); Jani Begam v. Jahangir Khan (3) Haikim-un-nissa v. Deonarain (4) and Nilakanta v. Krishnasami (5).

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court.
Pandit Sundar Lal and Munshi Ram Prasad, for the appellant.
Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

[328] BANERJI, J., (KNOX, J., concurring).—This was a suit for sale under a mortgage, dated the 3rd of September 1873, executed by one Mohan Singh for Rs. 4,200 in favour of Mansukh Das and his son Dungar Mal. After the death of the aforesaid mortgagees, the widow of Dungar Mal, three of the sons of Mansukh Das and the widow of another son assigned, on the 8th of November 1891, their rights under the mortgage to the first four plaintiffs for a consideration of Rs. 10,000. Out of that amount, Rs. 600 was paid in the presence of the registering officer and Rs. 1,858-9-3 was kept back for the purpose of discharging a decree held

* First Appeal No. 40 of 1896. from a decree of Babu Bepin Behari Mukerji, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 20th September 1895.

(1) 16 A. 315.

(2) 21 C. 568.

(3) 9 A. 476.

(4) 13 A. 102.

(5) 13 M. 225.

against the widow of Dungar Mal and Baldeo Das, one of the sons of Mansukh Das, by Rao Balwant Singh. That decree was, however, not satisfied, and it was purchased from Balwant Singh by Kishan Lal, the fifth plaintiff. He put the decree into execution, and having caused the two-fifths share of Baldeo Das and Dungar Mal's widow in the aforesaid mortgage to be sold by auction, purchased it himself. The five plaintiffs having thus acquired the rights of the mortgagees have instituted this suit, claiming Rs. 10,500 as due under the mortgage. The mortgaged property was sold in execution of a decree obtained upon a subsequent mortgage, and was purchased by Than Singh and Nathu Ram, who are now represented by the appellant Phul Chand. The defendants to the suit were the legal representatives of the mortgagor and subsequent transferees of the mortgaged property. The defence raised on behalf of the defendants, whom Phul Chand appellant represents, was that the mortgage had been discharged and the mortgage bond returned to the mortgagors; that the plaintiffs had not paid consideration for their purchase; that the purchase had been made to carry on litigation and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover any portion of the amount claimed. The defendants produced the mortgage bond bearing endorsements of payment, which, if genuine, showed that the mortgage had been discharged in full in 1889. The Court below has held the plea of payment not to be established. It found that the bond had somehow come into the [329] possession of the mortgagors, that the indorsements on it were not genuine and that the mortgagors and their heirs had not the means to make the alleged payments. It also held that the assignment of the mortgage bond to the first four plaintiffs was the transfer of an actionable claim to which s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act applied; that the purchase of the bond was in reality made by Kishan Lal in the names of the other plaintiffs; that only Rs. 600 were paid as consideration for that purchase, and that in virtue of that purchase the plaintiffs could not recover more than that amount and incidental expenses. As regards the share of the mortgage debt purchased by Kishan Lal at auction, the Court below was of opinion that by reason of cl. (d) of s. 2 of Act No. IV of 1882, the first portion of s. 135 of that Act did not apply. That Court accordingly made a decree for two-fifths of the mortgage money, with interest, and for Rs. 600 with incidental expenses and interest.

Both parties have appealed from this decree. In this appeal, which has been preferred by the defendant Phul Chand, two contentions have been raised on behalf of the appellant; first, that it has been proved that the mortgage has been discharged by payments, and, second, that since it has been found that Kishan Lal, plaintiff was the real purchaser of the mortgage under the assignment of the 8th of November 1891, he took the place of the judgment-debtors to the decree of Balwant Singh, and the purchase of that decree by him had the effect of discharging that decree. Consequently by virtue of the auction purchase of the rights of Dungar Mal and Baldeo Das, he acquired no interest in the mortgage in question and is only entitled to recover the price paid by him for the assignment of the 8th of November 1891, with incidental expenses and interest. On behalf of the plaintiff it is urged that there is nothing to show that Kishan Lal is the real purchaser under the sale of the 8th of November 1891; that payment of the full amount of consideration for that sale has been proved and that s. 135 of Act No. IV of 1882 does not apply to a case like this.

1898
MARCH 1.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 327 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 54.

1898
MARCH 1.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

20 A. 327 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 54.

[330] As regards the discharge of the mortgage by re-payment of the mortgage money we agree with the conclusion at which the learned Subordinate Judge has arrived. The mortgage deed is no doubt in the possession of the heirs of the mortgagor, Mohan Singh, by whom it has been produced. It also bears indorsements of payments. These circumstances certainly raise a presumption in favour of the defendants; but the evidence and the probabilities to which the Subordinate Judge has referred in detail completely negative that presumption. According to the indorsements on the mortgage deed, payments were made on account of it between the 9th of June 1883 and the 2nd of June 1889, and the number of payments was five. It is rather surprising that for ten years from the date of the mortgage not a farthing was paid to the mortgagees, but in the course of the next six years such a large sum as Rs. 7,025 was paid by the mortgagors, and the bond was taken back. The evidence on the record clearly shows that the mortgagor had not the means to make such large payments, that they were in very involved circumstances, that they were not even in a position to pay the Government revenue, that their moveable property had to be sold for the realisation of the revenue and that their zamindari share had to be let out in farm for the recovery of arrears of revenue. It is in the highest degree improbable that persons in such impecunious circumstances made the alleged payments. It appears from the evidence of Lala Lokman Das, a respectable pleader of the District Court of Aligarh, that shortly before February 1883, Dungar Mal, one of the mortgagees, showed the bond to him with a view to raise money for the purpose of bringing a suit on the basis of the bond, and, as far as Lala Lokman Das could recollect, it bore no indorsements of payment. If the indorsements which now appear on the bond are genuine, all of them, except the last, must have been on it at the time when it was shown to Lala Lokman Das, and his attention would undoubtedly have been attracted by them. Further, the only amount which would have remained due on the mortgage at that time would have been a sum below [331] Rs. 800, upon payment of which about eighteen months afterwards the mortgage is alleged to have been discharged. It seems to us to be extremely improbable that for the purpose of meeting the expenses of instituting a suit to recover that small sum, Dungar Mal would have been endeavouring to raise money by negotiating with Lala Lokman Das. There is another piece of evidence which to our minds clearly shows that no payments were made to the mortgagees on account of the bond in question. On the 16th of December 1889, Dungar Mal applied for the execution of a decree held by him against Chitra Singh and others, heirs of the mortgagor Mohan Singh, and he prayed for the sale of the 10 biswas share comprised in the mortgage now in suit subject to that mortgage. With his application he filed an affidavit in which he stated that he held a mortgage over that property for Rs. 4,200, that is, the mortgage upon which the present claim has been brought. Had the mortgage been discharged in the preceding month of June, Dungar Mal's statement that there was a subsisting mortgage on the property for Rs. 4,200 would not have been allowed by the debtors to go unchallenged. It appears that they did raise objections in regard to Dungar Mal's application for execution, but they never traversed his statement that their property was subject to the mortgage for Rs. 4,200.

These facts, and the other facts stated in the judgment of the lower Court, clearly show that the mortgage was never discharged and that payments were never made on account of it. We agree with the learned Subordinate Judge in considering the oral evidence adduced on the point to be wholly unworthy of credit. The Subordinate Judge has also, in our opinion, conclusively shown that the purchase of the mortgage bond in suit in the names of the first four plaintiffs on the 8th of November 1891, was in reality a purchase by Kishan Lal, and that the amount paid as consideration for that purchase before or at the time of the sale was Rs. 600, the sum which was paid in the presence of the registering officer. We have carefully considered the evidence [332] on the point to which our attention has been directed, and we think it unnecessary to refer to it in detail further than to say that we fully concur with the Court below in its estimate of that evidence and with the conclusions at which that Court has arrived. The impecunious circumstances of the first four plaintiffs, the non-production of account-books, the fabrication of accounts, the non-production of the documents by which were secured the debts alleged to have been discharged with the consideration money, and the fact that the decretal amount due to Balwant Singh was not paid by these plaintiffs clearly show that the full amount of consideration for the sale deed of the 8th of November 1891 was not paid and that the first four plaintiffs did not make that purchase on their own account. Had they been the real purchasers, why did they leave the decree of Balwant Singh unsatisfied? Why did they allow Kishan Lal to purchase that decree and why did they allow the shares of the judgment-debtors to that decree to be sold for the small sum of Rs. 200 and purchased by Kishan Lal himself? The fact is, as the learned Subordinate Judge has pointed out, that under the deed of the 8th of November 1891, Kishan Lal himself purchased the rights of the mortgagees, that, being apprehensive that the subsequent purchasers of the mortgaged property would claim the benefit of the provisions of s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act, he took an assignment of the decree held by Rao Balwant Singh, and, putting that decree into execution, purchased at auction the shares of Dungar Mal and Baldeo Das in the mortgage in order to avoid the operation of that section. We hold, in concurrence with the Court below, that Kishan Lal plaintiff was the real purchaser of the interests of the mortgagees by virtue of the sale deed of the 8th of November 1891; that the other plaintiffs were only benami for him and that they were not beneficially interested in the purchase. That being so, the contention of the learned counsel for the appellant that the claim of the first four plaintiffs ought to have been dismissed must prevail.

[333] It is next urged on behalf of the appellant that as Kishan Lal was the real purchaser under the sale deed of the 8th of November 1891, and thus acquired the rights of Dungar Mal and Baldeo Das in the mortgage of 1873, which Rao Balwant Singh had caused to be attached in execution of the decree held by him against Baldeo Das and the widow of Dungar Mal, he took the place of the judgment-debtors to that decree, and, as he subsequently purchased the decree from Rao Balwant Singh, the decree became extinct and incapable of execution, and consequently he acquired nothing under the auction purchase which subsequently took place at his instance in execution of that decree. The correctness of the proposition raised by this contention seems to us to be open to doubt. We are, however, of opinion, upon another ground, that no title passed to Kishan Lal under the auction sale referred to above. We have held that he was the actual purchaser of the property conveyed by the sale deed of the 8th of November 1891, so that he acquired the interests of Baldeo Das and Dungar Mal in the mortgage in question by virtue of

1898
MARCH 1.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

20 A. 327 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 54.

1898
MARCH 1.

—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

—
20 A. 327 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 54.

that purchase. As the assignee of the decree held by Rao Balwant Singh, against those persons he could not put up to sale and purchase the interest which those persons originally had in the mortgage and which he himself had purchased before the date of the assignment of the decree. Those interests had on the date of the auction sale ceased to be the property of the judgment-debtors to the decree and had become his own property. He could not, as the holder of Rao Balwant Singh's decree, cause his own property to be sold in execution of that decree, and, as that property had, as we have said, ceased to be the property of the judgment-debtors to the decree, the auction-sale of the interests of the judgment-debtors in that property, which were no longer in existence at the time of the sale, could not and did not confer any title to the property on the auction purchaser. The auction-sale was only a device resorted to by Kishan Lal for the purpose of evading the operation of s. 135 of Act No. IV of 1882 and in our opinion he did not acquire any title [334] by virtue of the auction purchase. His only title in respect of the mortgage in suit consequently rests on the sale deed of the 8th of November 1891. The consideration for that sale was not only the sum of Rs. 600 which was paid in cash at the time of the registration of the sale deed, but the amount paid to Rao Balwant Singh as the price of the decree purchased from him must also be deemed to be a part of the consideration. The agreement under the sale deed was that Rao Balwant Singh's decree should be discharged out of the consideration. Instead of paying him the amount due upon the decree Kishan Lal took from him an assignment of the decree and adopted this mode of satisfying his claim. The amount paid to him must therefore, we think, be regarded as a part of the consideration for the sale deed of the 8th of November 1891. That amount, it has been proved, was Rs. 1,800. The total sum which was paid as the price of this mortgage debt in suit was thus Rs. 2,400, and if s. 135 of Act No. IV of 1882 is applicable, that is the only amount which Kishan Lal is entitled to recover, besides interest on that amount and the incidental expenses of the sale. The learned vakil for the respondent, however, contends that s. 135 of Act No. IV of 1882 has no application in this case.

This contention leads us to the consideration of the only point which remains to be determined, namely whether the appellant is entitled to the benefit of the provisions of s. 135 of Act No. IV of 1882. It is admitted that on the 8th of November 1891, when the mortgage-debt now in suit was assigned by the mortgagees, the debt had become recoverable by suit, and had matured into an actionable claim. It is also conceded that the provisions of Chapter VIII of Act No. IV of 1882 apply to a debt secured by a mortgage. That is the effect of the ruling of the Full Bench of this Court in Rani v. Ajudhia Prasad (1). It is urged, however, that a debtor cannot claim the benefit of s. 135 of Act No. IV of 1882 unless he pays before judgment the amount paid by the assignee of the actionable claim, and [335] in support of that contention the Full Bench ruling of the Calcutta High Court in Muchiram Barik v. Ishan Chunder Chuckerbutti (2) has been cited. That ruling is no doubt an authority in favour of the respondents. But a contrary view has been held in this Court in Jani Begam v. Jahangir Khan (3), and Hakim-un-nissa v. Deonarain (4) and by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in Nilakanta v. Krishnasami (5).

(1) 16 A. 315.
(4) 13 A. 102.

(2) 21 C. 568.
(5) 13 M. 225.

(3) 9 A. 476.

We agree with the learned Judges who decided the cases last mentioned. The object with which s. 135 was enacted was evidently to discourage trafficking in litigation by precluding the purchaser of an actionable claim from recovering any thing beyond the actual price paid by him and the incidental expenses of the sale together with interest. That object would surely be defeated were we to hold that it was the intention of the Legislature that a debtor could not avail himself of the provisions of s. 135 if he put the assignee to proof of the price paid by him and waited till the amount of the price had been determined and declared by the Court. The section, it is true, provides that the debtor is discharged by payment to the assignee of the price and incidental expenses and interest on the price, but it does not limit the period within which the payment must be made in order to secure a discharge. There is nothing in the section, as far as we can judge, which would preclude the debtor from securing his discharge by payment after decree. Clause (d) of that section in our opinion contemplates the case of the sale of an actionable claim in respect of which at the time of the sale a judgment has been delivered affirming the claim or the claim has been made clear by evidence. The four clauses of s. 135 were evidently intended to provide for cases of sale of actionable claims which would not be affected by the provisions of the first paragraph of the section as in those cases the probability of gambling in litigation would be very remote. The "claim" referred to in cl. (d), we consider, is the claim which is sold and which at the date of the sale has been affirmed by a judgment or is about [336] to be so affirmed. Such a claim, if sold, would in the ordinary course of things fetch its proper value, and therefore, like the actionable claims referred to in the preceding clauses, it was excluded from the operation of the section. We fully agree with the observations contained in the judgment of Shephard, J. in the Full Bench case of Nilakanta v. Krishnasami cited above, and we are of opinion that it would be placing an unreasonable construction on s. 135 to hold, as we have said above, that a debtor would lose the benefit of the section if he called upon the assignee of the debt to prove the price paid by him. Such a construction would, we think, frustrate the very object with which the section was enacted. We may refer to the present case as an instance in point. The assignee alleged the price to be Rs. 10,000. The defendant denied that any price had been paid. We have held the true price to be Rs. 2,400. We do not think the Legislature intended that such a case would not come within the purview of s. 135, and that the defendant must pay the full amount due upon the mortgage, namely, upwards of Rs. 11,000, although the plaintiff actually paid for his purchase a much smaller sum. We hold that s. 135 precludes the assignee of an actionable claim from recovering from the debtor any sum in excess of the price paid by him, the interest thereon and the incidental expenses of the sale. That being so, the plaintiff Kishan Lal was only entitled to a decree for Rs. 2,400, the price paid by him, to interest on that amount at the rate payable under the mortgage from the 8th of November 1891, and to Rs. 39, the incidental expenses of the sale.

We accordingly vary the decree below by making a decree in favour of Kishan Lal plaintiff for Rs. 2,400, together with interest thereon at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum from the 8th of November 1891, to the 20th of August 1898, which we hereby fix as the date on or before which the decretal amount should be paid, and also for Rs. 39 the incidental expenses of the sale to him. We award to him proportionate costs here and in the Court below, and we direct that, in the event of the [337] amount

1898

MARCH 1.

—
APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

—
20 A. 327 =

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 54.

1898
MARCH 1.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

20 A. 327 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 54.

decreed by us not being paid on or before the date above mentioned, the mortgaged property, or a sufficient part thereof, be sold. We dismiss the remainder of Kishan Lal's claim, and totally dismiss the claim of the other plaintiffs with costs. The appellant will recover from Kishan Lal his costs here and in the Court below proportionately to the amount of his success.

Decree modified.

20 A. 337 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 59.

REVISIONAL CIVIL.

Before Sir John Edge, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

LAKHO BIBI (Defendant) v. SALAMAT ALI (Plaintiff).*
[5th March, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 206—Application to bring decree into accordance with the judgment—Decree erroneous but in accordance with judgment—Decree not susceptible of alteration.

Where a decree is in fact in accordance with the judgment on which it is based, such decree, however erroneous it may be, cannot be altered on an application under s. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure to bring the decree into accordance with the judgment.

[F., 31 B. 417 = 9 Bom. L.R. 547 ; D., 4 Ind. Cas. 231 (232) = 5 N.L.R. 159.]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court. Pandit Datti Lal and Babu Buidiya Nath Das, for the appellant. Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the opposite party.

JUDGMENT.

EDGE, C. J. and BURKITT, J.:—This is an application in revision under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It arises out of an order made by the Subordinate Judge of Allahabad on an application presented under s. 206 of the Code. The facts are these. The respondent here, Syed Salamat Ali, was the holder of a second mortgage of mauza Sondhia. The appellant here, Musammat Lakho Bibi, was the holder of a third mortgage over mauzas Sondhia, Khaura and Gaura. Her mortgage money had been applied to the discharge of the first mortgage in which the three mauzas had been mortgaged. Salamat Ali brought a suit under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property [338] Act for sale of mauza Sondhia in discharge of his mortgage. That was the only relief which he asked. Musammat Lakho Bibi had pleaded her third mortgage and the discharge of the first mortgage as a shield to protect mauza Sondhia being brought to sale until the money paid by her to discharge the first mortgage had been repaid to her. The subordinate Judge found that Lakho Bibi was entitled to avail herself of the discharge of the first mortgage as a shield, and in his judgment he held that Salamat Ali was bound to pay Lakho Bibi Rs. 2,050, being the amount paid to discharge the first mortgage, and he also held that Salamat Ali having made that payment, if Lakho Bibi did not redeem him, Salamat Ali was entitled to his decree for sale. The decree as drawn up was, in our opinion, in accordance with the judgment. It decreed that Salamat Ali should pay Rs. 2,050 to Lakho Bibi, that in default of redemption by Lakho Bibi at a specified time mauza Sondhia should be sold. Here we may observe that in our opinion the judgment and decree were incorrect. On the finding that Lakho Bibi was entitled to avail herself of the discharge of the first mortgage as a shield in this suit, the Subordinate Judge ought to have ascertained what proportionate part of the Rs. 2,050, should be attributed to the discharge of the first mortgage on mauza Sondhia as far as it was concerned, and he should have given the plaintiff, of course subject to redemption by Lakho Bibi, a decree for sale of mauza Sondhia on payment of that proportionate amount to Lakho Bibi. No party appealed; but after the decree had been drawn up and signed Salamat Ali applied under s. 206 of the Code to have the decree amended by making it a decree for sale of not only mauza Sondhia, but also of mauzas Khaura and Gaura. The Subordinate Judge granted that application and altered the decree in accordance with it. It is with reference to that order that this application for revision has been made. Now the decree as first made was, in our opinion, strictly in accordance with the judgment. The judgment was incorrect in the particulars to which we have referred, but still the decree was a decree in [339] accordance with the judgment, whether that judgment was right or wrong in law. The decree as altered on the application under s. 206 is not a decree in accordance with the judgment. The judgment did not decide that mauzas Khaura and Gaura should be sold: Salamat Ali had not asked in his plaint that they should be sold. In law he was not entitled to a decree for sale of those mauzas. He was not a mortgagee of those mauzas, and did not become a mortgagee of those mauzas by payment of the amount paid by Musammât Lakho Bibi in discharge of the first mortgage. If the result has been that he has paid more than he ought to have been compelled to pay in order to obtain the sale of mauza Sondhia, that result could have been avoided; it was due to his own laches in not appealing. He has brought that result upon himself. The law cannot be altered to relieve a man from the effect of his own laches. The application under s. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure should have been dismissed and not granted. Under s. 622 of the Code we make the following order. We allow this application with costs. We set aside the order passed on the application under s. 206 of the Code with costs. We dismiss that application, and we restore the decree as originally drawn up and signed.

* Civil Revision No. 36 of 1897.

Application allowed.

20 A. 339 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 60.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. AJUDHIA AND ANOTHER.* [12th March, 1898.]

Criminal Procedure Code, s. 437—Order for further inquiry—Order to the prejudice of an accused person—Notice to show cause.

Before any order is made to the prejudice of an accused person, notice should be given to that person to appear and show cause why the order should not be passed. Queen-Emress v. Chotu (1) referred to.

[R., 35 A. 78 (80) = 10 A.L.J. 531 = 18 Ind. Cas. 146; 8 Bom. L.R. 703.]

* Criminal Revisional No. 88 of 1898.

(1) 9 A. 52.

1898
MARCH 5.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CIVIL.
—
20 A. 337 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 59.

1898
MARCH 12. IN this case the applicants Ajudhia and Punni had been charged before the Cantonment Magistrate of Allahabad with [340] the offence of causing grievous hurt whilst committing house-breaking, under s. 459 of the Indian Penal Code. The accused were discharged by the Cantonment Magistrate, and against this order the complainant filed an application in revision before the District Magistrate. The District Magistrate considered that there was sufficient evidence against both the accused and ordered them to be re-tried. This order was upheld by the Sessions Judge. The accused persons then applied in revision to the High Court on the ground that the Magistrate before ordering a re-trial ought to have called upon the applicants to show cause why a re-trial should not be ordered.

Mr. W. Wallach, for the applicants.

The Government Pleader Munshi Ram Prasad and Babu Parbati Charan, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—I think it would have been well if the District Magistrate had acted on several precedents of this Court which lay down that, before any order is made to the prejudice of an accused person, notice should be given to that person to appear and show cause why the order should not be passed. It is quite true, as remarked by the learned Sessions Judge, that there is no distinct provision to that effect in the Code of Criminal Procedure, but several able and experienced Judges of this Court have laid down the rule that it is most advisable that such notice should be given. I may refer to the cases of Queen-Empress v. Chotu (1) and Queen-Empress v. Mushtaq Husen (unreported), Criminal Revision No. 183 of 1897, decided on the 28th of April 1897. The order made in this case was undoubtedly prejudicial to the accused person, inasmuch as, whatever may be the result of the further inquiry, the accused person is subjected to the worry and nuisance of that further inquiry. I must set aside the order of the District Magistrate directing a re-trial, and I direct that, if he thinks it necessary to take any further action in this case, he should do so after notice to the accused person. I would further point out to the District Magistrate that he was [341] wrong in directing a re-trial of the case. All that the Code empowers him to do is to direct that further inquiry be made. I order accordingly.

20 A. 341 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 65.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

TRIBHUWAN SUNDAR KUAR (Plaintiff) v. SRI NARAIN SINGH
 (Defendant).^{*} [14th March, 1898.]

Hindu law—Hindu widow—Succession—Legal representative—Civil Procedure Code s. 365.

A reversioner succeeding to the estate of a deceased person after the death of the widow of that person would be bound, by a decree obtained against the widow provided that there was a fair trial of the suit in which the decree was passed. Consequently the widow's right to sue survives to, and devolves on, the ^{*} First Appeal No. 185 of 1896.

(1) 9 A. 52.

heir of her husband entitled to the estate, and such heir, and not her personal heirs, should be held to be her legal representative for the purposes of s. 365 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Katama Natchiar v. The Raja of Shivaqunga (1); Hari Nath Chatterjee v. Mothurmohun Goswami (2); and Premmoyi Chowdhurani v. Preonath Dhur (3); referred to.

[R., 33 A. 15 (16)=7 A.L.J. 960 (1961)=7 Ind. Cas. 97; 34 C. 642=5 C.L.J. 491=11 C.W.N. 593=2 M.L.T. 207; 23 M. 125 (133); 2 C.L.J. 602; 8 C.W.N. 843 (850).]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the order of the Court.

Mr. W.N. Colvin, Munshi Ram Prasad and Munshi Jwala Prasad, for the applicant.

M. T. Conlan, Pandit Sundar Lal and Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the respondent.

ORDER.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ:—Rani Tribhuwan Sundar Kuar, the appellant in this appeal, having died since the institution of the appeal, two applications have been presented, one by Rani Balraj Kuar, asking to have her name entered on the record in place of the deceased appellant, and the other by Babu Sri Narain Singh, respondent, praying that the appeal and the suit be declared to have abated. Similar applications have been made in the connected appeal No. 144 of 1896.

The suit out of which the two appeals arose, was instituted by Rani Tribhuwan Sundar Kuar for a declaration that the property in suit was the separate estate of her deceased husband [342] Raja Shambhu Narain Singh and that she was entitled to it as a Hindu widow; that the defendant Babu Sri Narain Singh had no right to interfere with it, and that an agreement, dated the 7th of November 1892, was void and not binding on her. She further prayed that, should the Court hold that she was not in possession and that the property was in the possession of the defendant, she should be put into possession.

The claim was resisted on the ground that the defendant and the deceased Raja were members of a joint Hindu family and that the defendant was entitled to the estate in preference to the widow. The Court below partially decreed the claim, and thereupon the two appeals mentioned above were preferred, one by the plaintiff and the other by the defendant.

Rani Balraj Kuar is the mother of Raja Shambhu Narain Singh, and it is conceded that, if the estate was the divided property of the Raja to which the ordinary rule of succession of Hindu law would apply, she would be the next reversioner after the widow.

It is contended on behalf of Babu Sri Narain Singh that the cause of action upon which Rani Tribhuwan Sundar Kuar brought her suit was a cause of action personal to her; that it did not survive to Rani Balraj Kuar and that she is in no sense the legal representative of the deceased Rani Tribhuwan Sundar Kuar.

The whole question, in our opinion, turns upon whether, after the death of Rani Tribhuwan Sundar Kuar, the right to sue survives. And the decision of that question again depends upon the determination of the further question whether the decree passed in the suit of the widow is one which would bind the reversioner after the widow, for if the decree be binding on the reversioner the right of action would survive to him. Both these questions seem to us to be concluded by the ruling of

(1) 9 M.L.A. 599 (543).

(2) 21 C. 8.

(3) 23 C. 636.

1898
MARCH 14.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 341 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 63.

their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Katama Nat-chiar v. The Raja of Shivagunga (1). Their Lordships held that [343] "upon the death of a Hindu widow, the right of action formerly vested in her devolves, not upon her heirs, but upon the next heirs of her husband." Upon the question whether a decree passed in a suit brought by a widow for the estate of her husband would bind those claiming the estate in succession to her, their Lordships were of opinion that "unless it could be shown that there had not been a fair trial of the right in that suit—or, in other words, unless that decree could have been successfully impeached on some special ground, it would have been an effectual bar to any new suit * * by any person claiming in succession to" the widow. "For, assuming her to be entitled to the zamindari at all, the whole estate would for the time be vested in her absolutely for some purposes, though, in some respects, for a qualified interest; and until her death it could not be ascertained who would be entitled to succeed. The same principle which has prevailed in the Courts of this country as to tenants in tail representing the inheritance would seem to apply to the case of a Hindu widow; and it is obvious that there would be the greatest possible inconvenience in holding that the succeeding heirs were not bound by a decree fairly and properly obtained against the widow" (p. 604). This view was adhered to by their Lordships in the subsequent case of Hari Nath Chatterjee v. Mothurmohun Goswami (2). Upon these authorities it must be taken to be settled law that a reversioner succeeding to the estate of a deceased person after the death of the widow of that person would be bound by a decree obtained against the widow, provided that there was a fair trial of the suit in which the decree was passed. Consequently the widow's right to sue survives to and devolves on the heir of her husband entitled to the estate, and such heir, and not her personal heirs, should be held to be her legal representative for the purposes of s. 365 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The cause of action of the widow as against the defendant to the suit is not a cause of action personal to herself. Therefore the heir of the husband, and not her personal heir, is [344] the person entitled to prosecute the suit. This view is supported by the ruling of the Calcutta High Court in Premcyi Choudhrani v. Preonath Dhur (3). Rani Balraj Kuar being the next heir of Raja Shambhu Narain Singh, is in our opinion the legal representative of Rani Tribhuwan Sundar Kuar for the purposes of the suit.

Mr. Conlan has contended that Rani Balraj Kuar should not be allowed to continue Rani Tribhuwan Sundar's suit or appeal for two reasons, namely, first, that she could not have brought the suit, as she was not in possession, and, second, that she is estopped from claiming the estate under the terms of the deed of agreement, dated the 7th of November 1892, referred to above. As regards the first point, we observe that the estate is in charge of the receiver appointed by the Court and not in the actual possession of either of the parties. Under such circumstances the person who has the title to the property must be deemed to be in possession, and if Rani Balraj Kuar is entitled to the estate she must be held to be in possession. As for the other point, we do not deem it necessary to decide at this stage of the proceedings whether the defendant would or would not be entitled to set up the agreement as a bar to Rani Balraj Kuar's right to claim the estate. We think that, notwithstanding the existence of the agreement, she is the legal representative of Rani Tribhuwan Sundar for the purposes of this suit. We accordingly direct that the name of Rani Balraj Kuar be entered in the record of the two appeals before us in the place of Rani Tribhuwan Sundar, deceased. Rani Balraj Kuar will have the costs of her applications.

... (1) 9 M.I.A. 539 (543).

(2) 21 C. 8.

(3) 23 C. 636.

Application allowed.

20 A. 345 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 68.

[345] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

HAJI SYED MUHAMMAD (Defendant) v. GULAB RAI (Plaintiff).^{*}
[23rd March, 1898].

Injunction—Discretion of Court as to granting mandatory injunctions—Delay on the part of the plaintiff in bringing his suit.

A plaintiff brought his suit for proprietary possession of a plot of land, and, secondly, for a mandatory injunction to demolish certain buildings which the defendant had erected on such plot. The suit, however, was not brought until upwards of two years from the time when the buildings complained of were completed. It was found that the plaintiff was not entitled to proprietary possession of the land claimed by him, but that he had a right of user over it, and that the defendant was not entitled to build upon the land. The Court, however, on account of the plaintiff's delay in bringing his suit declined to grant the mandatory injunction asked for. Benode Coomaree Dossee v. Soudaminey Dossee (1), referred to.

[R., 9 Bom L.R. 1117 (1120); 6 Ind. Cas. 1006 (1008) = 78 P.W.R. 1910; 2 N.L.R. 4.]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court.
Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba for the appellant.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri (for whom Babu Satish Chandra Banerji), for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—This appeal and the connected appeal No. 16 of 1897 arise out of two cross-suits brought by one party against the other. They relate to two plots of land adjacent to each other on which each party has made certain constructions. The claim of Gulab Rai, who brought the suit out of which this appeal has arisen, was that the land on which the defendant Haji Syed Muhammad had built certain buildings was his (Gulab Rai's) property, and that Haji Syed Muhammad had no right to build on it. Haji Syed Muhammad, on the other hand, alleged himself to be the proprietor, not only of the piece of land on which he had built the buildings complained of by Gulab Rai, but also of the adjacent plot of land on which Gulab Rai had built certain shops. Gulab Rai claimed to be the proprietor of that piece of land also. Each party, in addition to the claim [346] for possession, has prayed for the removal of the buildings. Both parties relied on a decree of the 31st of August 1846. The Court of first instance construed that decree to have declared that the land claimed in the two suits was the property of Haji Syed Muhammad. It accordingly dismissed the suit of Gulab Rai and decreed that of Haji Syed Muhammad.

^{*} Second Appeal No. 17 of 1897, from a decree of Rai Sanwal Singh, District Judge of Agra, dated the 29th September 1896, reversing a decree of Babu Hari Mohan Banerji, Munsif of Agra, dated the 10th June 1896.

1898
MARCH 23.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 345=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 68.

The lower appellate Court reversed the decree of the Court of first instance. It placed on the decree and judgment of 1846 a construction different from that put on it by the Court of first instance. It is evident that there was some confusion in the mind of the learned Judge of the lower appellate Court as to what was determined by the decree of 1846. In one part of the judgment the learned Judge says that "the decree of 1846 shows that the ancestor of Haji Syed Muhammad was declared to be the owner of all the lands on the north of a line drawn from the said platform towards the west to the shop of the ancestor of Gulab Rai and towards the east to his own shop adjoining the eastern of the four shops built." He evidently meant that the land now in dispute which lies to the north of the line referred to above had been declared by the judgment of 1846 to be the property of Haji Syed Muhammad. A few lines lower down he says that the judgment of 1846 shows that the whole of the land lying to the north of the line referred to above was the land of Gulab Rai. It is difficult to account for this inconsistency, except on the assumption that the learned Judge never carefully perused the judgment of 1846. As both the parties rely on that judgment, and as it is common ground that their right to the land in suit was determined by it, the first question to be decided in this appeal is what is the true construction to be placed on that judgment and what are the rights of the respective parties declared by it. It appears that the suit in which the judgment was passed was instituted by Ali Raza, the ancestor of Haji Syed Muhammad, against the predecessor in title of Gulab Rai for a declaration of his right to a piece of land on which he had erected certain buildings. That suit was compromised by the parties and the [347] judgment referred to above was passed in accordance with the compromise. It is abundantly clear that the dispute between the parties to the litigation of 1846 related to the plots of land in respect of which the present suits were brought. The property claimed in that suit was a plot of land lying to the north of an enclosure belonging to Haji Syed Muhammad's ancestor up to a public road, and that is the land claimed in the two suits before me. It was distinctly stated in the judgment of the 31st August 1846 that the land then in dispute had been declared by the compromise to be the property of the plaintiff Ali Raza. The judgment further declared that Ali Raza was to construct buildings towards the north up to a line drawn from the western end of his existing shop on the one side to the eastern extremity of the buildings of Gulab Rai's ancestor on the other; that the land lying to the north of that line as far as the road was to be used by Gulab Rai's ancestor as phar land, that is, as land on which he was to stack his grain, and that neither party was to build on that land. There can be no doubt that this is what the decree of 1846 declared. Under that decree the ownership of the land now in suit was, as I have said, determined to exist in Haji Syed Muhammad, but Gulab Rai's predecessor in title was granted the right of using the land for the purpose of stacking grain, and neither party was to build on it. That being so, the suit which Haji Syed Muhammad brought against Gulab Rai to which Second Appeal No. 16 of 1897 relates was bound to succeed. Gulab Rai is not the owner of the land claimed in that suit, and he has no right to build on it. As regards the other suit, namely, that brought by Gulab Rai against Haji Syed Muhammad, Gulab Rai was not entitled to be declared the owner of the land claimed by him. A further question, however, arises in that case, namely, whether Gulab Rai is entitled to the mandatory injunction he seeks in that case for the demolition of the buildings erected by Haji Syed Muhammad. It is contended on his behalf that under the decree of 1846 he was granted the right to use the land as phar land and Haji [348] Syed Muhammad's ancestor was declared not to have the right to build on it, and consequently Gulab Rai was entitled to ask for the removal of the buildings erected by Haji Syed Muhammad. It is urged on behalf of Haji Syed Muhammad that Gulab Rai is not entitled to the mandatory injunction claimed by him for two reasons. First, that he claimed the demolition of the buildings on the basis of a proprietary title and he has not been able to prove that he has such a title; secondly, that as the buildings were upon the showing of Gulab Rai himself completed upwards of two years before the institution of his suit, the Court in the exercise of the discretion which it possesses in the matter of granting mandatory injunctions should not grant the injunction he prays for. I am of opinion that the contention raised on behalf of Haji Syed Muhammad must prevail. It is true that if a plaintiff asserts a proprietary right but can only prove a right of easement or any other inferior right which entitles him to the relief he seeks, such relief should not ordinarily be refused to him, but when the granting of such relief on the basis of a right not originally asserted depends upon the determination of issues of fact which were never raised in the Court of first instance, an appellate Court should not allow the plaintiff to change front in such a way as to prejudice the defendant. If, in this case, the plaintiff had asserted a right of easement in the Court of first instance, that assertion might have been traversed on various grounds, the determination of which might involve the decision of several issues of fact. Further, it is alleged in the plaint that the buildings of which the plaintiff seeks the demolition were constructed in January 1893. He did not bring his suit till November 1895. It is thus clear that the plaintiff has not brought his suit or sought legal proceedings at the earliest opportunity, but has waited till the building has been completed. If under such circumstances, he seeks to have the building removed, a mandatory injunction will not be granted except under special circumstances. This was laid down in the authorities quoted in the judgment of the Calcutta High Court in Benode [349] Coomaree Dossee v. Soudaminey Dossee (1). No special circumstances have been alleged or shown to exist in this case, and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to the mandatory injunction which he prayed for. A case like this is different from a suit in which a mandatory injunction is sought for the removal of buildings erected by one of several co-sharers on joint land. The plaintiff's suit ought to have been dismissed in its entirety. The result is that I allow the appeal with costs, and, setting aside the decree of the lower appellate Court with costs, restore that of the Court of first instance.

Appeal decreed.

1898
MARCH 23.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 345 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 68.

(1) 16 C. 252.

1898

20 A. 349 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 63.

MARCH 23.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt.

THAKUR PRASAD (Plaintiff) v. GAYA SAHU AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [23rd March, 1898.]

20 A. 349 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 63.

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 52—Transfer pendente lite—Lease of property in respect of which a decree for sale had been made under s. 88.

Held that a lease of property made by a judgment-debtor against whom a decree for sale had been made under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act for sale of that property came within the purview of s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act.

[R., 13 C.P.L.R. 145 (151); 15 C.P.L.R. 6 (8); 17 C.L.J. 384 (386) = 17 Ind. Cas. 1; 8 Ind. Cas. 288 (289) = 6 N.L.R. 140 (142)]

THE facts of this case are as follows:—

The plaintiff Thakur Prasad was the mortgagee of a 4 pie share in a certain village from one Chandi Prasad, under a mortgage executed in April 1885. In January 1892, Thakur Prasad obtained a decree for sale on that mortgage. On the 9th of March 1893, Chandi Prasad, the mortgagor, gave a lease of a portion of the mortgaged property to one Gaya Sahu. On the 20th of September 1893, Thakur Prasad executed his decree for sale, and, having caused the mortgaged property to be sold, purchased it himself. He was, however, unable to get possession of [350] that portion of the property which had been subsequently leased by Chandi Prasad. He accordingly brought a suit for cancellation of the lease and to obtain possession of the property, the subject of the lease.

The Court of first instance (Munsif of Gorakhpur) dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed, and the lower appellate Court (District Judge of Gorakhpur) dismissed the appeal. The plaintiff thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Munshi Ram Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—From a perusal of the order of the Subordinate Judge it would appear either that the learned Subordinate Judge did not comprehend all the bearings of the case then in appeal before him, or that the appeal was not properly argued before him. I note, however, that the memorandum of appeal which was before the learned Subordinate Judge contained and set forth all the pleas which have now been raised before me to-day. The admitted facts are that in April 1885, one Chandi Prasad mortgaged a four pie share in a certain village to the plaintiff; that on the 19th of January 1892, the plaintiff got a decree for sale of the mortgaged property in a suit on that mortgage; and that on the 20th September 1893, the plaintiff mortgagee purchased the same property and was put in possession by the Court. He was, however, unable to obtain possession of the whole. It appears that on the 9th March 1893, that is to say, more than a year after the plaintiff had obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property, Chandi Prasad leased a certain portion of that property to the defendant-respondent. By the present suit the plaintiff appellant seeks to have that lease set aside and to obtain possession of the property the subject of the lease. He also asks for mesne profits. These were the reliefs asked for at the hearing of this appeal. As to the lease, it is contended that it is bad with reference to the provisions of s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act. In my opinion that contention is sound. The lease was executed undoubtedly during the active prosecution of a contentious suit, a suit which [351] had been commenced by the plaintiff in September 1891, and in which the plaintiff in January 1892 had obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property, which included the land leased to the respondents. The transfer under this lease which is for a period of no less than eleven years undoubtedly must affect the rights of the auction purchaser. The auction purchaser certainly in my opinion comes within the wording of s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act as being a party to an order which might be made in the suit. In a somewhat similar case, though no doubt, in a case arising under the Code of Civil Procedure and not under Act IV of 1882,—Debi Prasad v. Baldeo (1)—it was held that even an ordinary agricultural lease made during the pendency of an attachment came within the mischief aimed at by s. 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure. A fortiori it appears to me that a lease of property made by a judgment-debtor against whom a decree had been made under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act for sale of that property comes within the provisions of s. 52 of the latter Act. The lease executed by the judgment-debtor, Chandi Prasad, whatever be its object, cannot but have the effect of, to some extent, defeating the auction purchaser of that property. I am therefore of opinion that the appellant here is entitled to my judgment. I set aside with all costs in those Courts the decrees of both the lower Courts, and, allowing this appeal, I give a decree in the plaintiff's favour for possession of the sir lands mentioned in the schedule of his plaint, with the exception of Nos. 716 and 718, of which he is in possession. I further give to the plaintiff a decree for mesne profits to be ascertained in execution up to the date the plaintiff is put in possession under this decree. The plaintiff appellant will recover the costs of this appeal.

^{*} Second Appeal No. 1008 of 1896, from a decree of Babu Nil Madhab Roy, Officiating District Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 12th September 1896, confirming a decree of Maulvi Ahmad Ali Khan, Munsif of Gorakhpur, dated the 31st March 1896.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 352 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 64.

[352] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir John Edge, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

RAM KUAR AND ANOTHER (Opposite Parties) v. SARDAR SINGH
(Applicant).^{*} [28th March, 1898.]

Act No. VII of 1889 (Succession Certificate Act), ss. 6 and 7—Certificate to collect debts—Minor.

Held, that a certificate of succession may be granted under Act No. VII of 1889, to a minor through his next friend. Kali Coomar Chatterjee v Tara Prosunno Mookerjee (2) referred to.

[R., 28 B. 344; 15 Ind. Cas. 408 = (1912) M.W.N. 411 (412).]

^{*} First Appeal, from Order No. 100 of 1897, from an order of L. G. Evans, Esq., District Judge of Aligarh, dated the 5th August 1897.

(1) 18 A. 128.

(2) 5 C.L.R. 517.

1898
MARCH 23.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL
—
20 A. 349 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 63.

1898
MARCH 28. IN this case Sardar Singh, a minor, applied through his next friend, Dip Chand, for a certificate under s. 6 of Act No. VII of 1889 to collect debts due to one Gur Prasad, his alleged adoptive father. On this application notices were duly issued to the other relations of the deceased, but on the day fixed for the hearing no one appeared and the District Judge granted a certificate, as prayed, to the applicant. At the hearing, the applicant's next friend appeared and gave evidence to the effect that the applicant was duly adopted by the wife of Gur Prasad, in pursuance of an authority given by him to her to adopt. After the certificate had been granted, the two widows of Gur Prasad, Ram Kuar and Mahtab Kuar, appealed against the order of the District Judge, on the ground that there was no legal evidence of the adoption of the applicant.

APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 352 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 64.

Mr. D. N. Banerji and Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the appellants.

Munshi Ram Prasad and Pandit Moti Lal, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

EDGE, C. J., and BURKITT, J.—Kunwar Sardar Singh, minor, made an application to the District Judge of Aligarh by his next friend under Act No. VII of 1889, for a certificate to collect debts alleged to have been due to his alleged adoptive father, then deceased. Notice to persons who might have been interested in opposing the application were duly served. These persons had three several opportunities of opposing the grant of such certificate. No one opposed the grant, and the District Judge made [353] an order granting a certificate as prayed. After the grant of the certificate had been made Musammam Ram Kuar and Musammam Mahtab Kuar, filed an appeal against the order of the District Judge, on the grounds that there was no legal evidence of permission to adopt the minor having been given by the deceased creditor to his wife, and that a certificate should not have been granted. The question which has been argued before us is—can in law a certificate under Act VII of 1889 be granted to a minor? That is the only question which has been presented to us for consideration in argument. It has been contended on behalf of the appellants that a certificate under Act No. VII of 1889 cannot be granted to a minor although he appears and applies for it through his next friend. Mr. Dwarka Nath Banerji, in his argument, was compelled to admit that it was not intended that a debt due in such a case to a minor should by effluxion of time become barred by limitation, and he contended that any near relation of such a minor might apply for, and obtain, a grant of a certificate to himself to collect the debts which might be due to the minor. For that purpose Mr. Dwarka Nath Banerji had further to contend that the grant of a certificate gave the holder of such certificate a cause of action. In our opinion the grant of a certificate neither gives a cause of action nor is it a part of the cause of action. S. 4 of Act No. VII of 1889 suggests quite the contrary. That section does not debar a person entitled from suing until such person has obtained a certificate, but merely prohibits the Court from making the decree in favour of such person until that person has produced a certificate under the Act, or one or other of the documents referred to in the section. If the granting of a certificate was part of the cause of action, it would follow that no suit would lie unless before the commencement of the suit a certificate had been obtained. Now, in our opinion, the Legislature intended under Act No. XXVII of 1860, and under Act No. VII of 1889, that a person to whom a certificate might be granted should be a person who had some title or interest in the debt to collect [354] which a certificate is applied for, and that a mere interest in the minor or in the person entitled to sue for the debt is not sufficient to entitle a stranger, or even a relation, to a certificate. That is the conclusion which we draw from s. 3 of Act No. XXVII of 1860, from cl. (d), sub-s. 1 of s. 6 of Act No. VII of 1889, from cl. (b) of sub-s. 1 of s. 7 of the same Act, and from sub-ss. 2, 3 and 4 of s. 7 of the same Act. Now the Legislature has not prohibited, by Act No. VII of 1889, the grant of a certificate to a minor through his next friend, nor was there any such prohibition in Act No. XXVII of 1860. Where the Legislature considered that probate or administration should not be granted to a minor, it said so expressly. Such prohibition will be found in ss. 183 and 189 of Act No. X of 1865, and in s. 8 of Act No. V of 1881. As far back as 1879, the Calcutta High Court in Kali Coomar Chatterjee v. Tara Prosunno Mookerjee (1) inferentially decided that a certificate to collect debts under Act No. XXVII of 1860 might be granted to a minor through his next friend. In our opinion the Calcutta Court was right. We dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 354=18 A.W.N. (1898) 70.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt.

HARJAS RAI AND ANOTHER (Defendants) v. RAMESHAR (Plaintiff)
[4th April, 1898.]

Execution of decree—Sale in execution—Stay of sale upon payment into Court of decretal amount and costs—Civil Procedure Code, s. 291—Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act.) s. 89.

Held that s. 291 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be taken to have modified s. 89 of Act No. IV of 1882 when the debt and costs (including the costs of the sale) are tendered to the officer conducting the sale, or when it is proved to his satisfaction that the amount of such debt and costs has been paid into the Court that ordered the sale. Raja Ram Singhji v. Chunni Lal (2) followed.

[Diss., 10 Ind. Cas. 981=4 S.L.R. 266 (267); F., 28 A. 28=A.W.N. (1905) 168.]

[355] THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, and Munshi Madho Prasad, for the appellants.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—On the 13th of August, 1870, one Chajju executed a mortgage of the property in suit to one Nathu Singh. A suit for sale was brought in July, 1895, and after decree an order absolute for sale was passed on the 14th of November, 1895. Under the order absolute the mortgagor's right to redeem became extinguished. That order absolute for sale is now vested by transfer in the appellant Kure. I may mention that there were three other mortgages over the same property

* Second Appeal, No. 120 of 1897, from a decree of Pandit Raj Nath Sahab, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 24th November 1896, confirming a decree of Munshi Shiva Prasad, Munsif of Bijnor, dated the 19th August 1896.

(1) 5 O.L.R. 517.

(2) 19 A. 205.

1898
APRIL 4.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 354 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 70.

held by the present plaintiff respondent Rameshar, and that Rameshar was in compliance with s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act made a party to the suit on the mortgage of 1870. As subsequent incumbrancer, he could have redeemed within the period given by the decree under s. 88, but he failed to do so. I may also add, that no sale has yet taken place under the order absolute of November 1895. Subsequently Rameshar, the present plaintiff respondent, brought a suit for sale on the three mortgages he held, impleading under s. 85, the defendant appellant Kure as transferee of the decree enforcing the prior incumbrance, and he also impleaded Harjas Rai, who had purchased the property by private sale in May, 1893. At the same time the plaintiff respondent, inasmuch as he could not bring the property to sale without discharging the prior incumbrance held by Kure, paid into Court the amount due on Kure's incumbrance, expressing the payment to be made to the credit of Kure in discharge of his incumbrance. It is admitted by Kure's vakil that money was so paid in to his credit. The lower appellate Court found that two of the plaintiff's mortgages had been discharged and gave him a decree for sale on the third only. Kure now appeals contending that the payment into Court to his credit was improperly made, it being made in the plaintiff's suit and not in Kure's suit, and [356] also because it was made after the expiry of the two months fixed by the decree of July 1895. His contention is that the right to redeem is extinguished. Whether Kure, appellant, can now proceed to sell the property is hardly worth considering, seeing that if he were to do so, he would at once be met by the admitted fact that the debt to recover which the property could be sold under the order absolute has now been paid into Court. In the recent case of Raja Ram Singhji v. Chunni Lal (1) it was held that "s. 291 of Act No. XIV of 1882 must be taken to have modified s. 89 of Act No. IV of 1882 when the debt and costs (including the costs of the sale) are tendered to the officer conducting the sale, or when it is proved to his satisfaction that the amount of such debt and costs had been paid into the Court that ordered the sale." Here it is admitted that a sufficient amount has been paid in to satisfy the decree for sale held by the defendant appellant Kure. That being so, and in view of the ruling just cited, I cannot say that the Subordinate Judge was wrong in giving the plaintiff respondent a decree for sale of the property mortgaged to him under his mortgage of February, 1892. The appeal therefore fails on that point. Another question was raised on behalf of the appellant, Harjas Rai. He had in December 1894 deposited in Court under s. 83 of Act No. IV of 1882 the amount due to Rameshar on his mortgage of February 1892. Notices as required by law were duly served upon Rameshar, who took no notice of them. The Court for some unknown reason rejected the application which had been made to it under s. 83. Harjas Rai subsequently withdrew the money out of Court. The whole matter therefore falls to the ground. By his own stupidity Harjas Rai has lost a complete answer to Rameshar's suit, and for that he has only himself to thank. I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 357 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 71.

[357] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt.

1898

APRIL 4.

APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.PARMESHRI LAL AND OTHERS (Judgment-debtors) v. MOHAN LAL (Decree-holder).^{*} [4th April, 1898.]*Limitation Act No. XV of 1877 (Indian Limitation Act), sch. ii, art. 179—Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 87—Execution of decree—Application for order absolute for foreclosure—Limitation.*20 A. 357 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 71.

An application for an order under s. 87 of Act No. IV of 1882 is, like an application for an order under s. 89 of the said Act, subject to the limitation prescribed by art. 179 of the second schedule to Act No. XV of 1877. Oudh Behari Lal v. Nageshar Lal (1) and Chunni Lal v. Harnam Das (2), referred to.

[R., 24 A. 542 (545); 33 C. 867 (875, 876) = 4 C.L.J. 141; 6 O.C. 114 (115); Cons., 26 M. 780 (787).]

IN this case one Mohan Lal obtained a decree under s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act on the 21st of September 1886. On the 21st of January 1895 the decree-holder applied in the Court of the Munsif of Mainpuri for an order absolute under s. 87. The Munsif dismissed this application as barred by limitation. The decree-holder appealed to the Subordinate Judge, who, relying on the cases of Ranbir Singh v. Drigpal (3) and Tiluck Singh v. Parsotein Proshad (4), held that there was no limitation prescribed for such applications, and accordingly decreed the appeal and remanded the case to the Court of the Munsif. The decree-holder appealed to the High Court.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the appellants.

Munshi Madho Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—Under the ruling of this Court in the case of Chunni Lal v. Harnam Das (2), it was held, following the case of Oudh Behari Lal v. Nageshar Lal (1) that an application to obtain an order absolute under s. 89 of Act No. IV of 1882 is a proceeding in execution and is subject as such to all the rules relating to execution. The present application is not one under s. 89, but is one under s. 87 of the [358] Transfer of Property Act, its object being to have an order made debarring the judgment-debtor from all right to redeem the mortgaged property. I am unable sufficiently to distinguish proceedings under s. 89 from those under s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act, so as to be able to say that the former are, and the latter are not, proceedings in execution. I must hold, following the ruling of this Court quoted above, that the present application is an application in execution to which the provisions of art. 179 of sch. II of the Limitation Act apply. It is admitted that a period of more than three years has elapsed between the date of the decree and the date of the application. The application was therefore time-barred when made. I allow this appeal, and, setting aside the decree of the Court below, restore the decree of the Court of first instance and dismiss the decree-holder's appeal to the lower appellate Court with costs.

Appeal decreed.

^{*} Second Appeal No. 133 of 1897, from a decree of Maulvi Muhammad Mazhar Husain, Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri, dated the 17th November 1896, reversing an order of Maulvi Muhammad Inamul Haq, Munsif of Mainpuri, dated 8th June 1895.

(1) 13 A. 278.

(2) 20 A. 302.

(3) 16 A. 23.

(4) 22 C. 924.

20 A. 358 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 67.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox.

ANWAR-UL HAQ (Plaintiff) v. JWALA PRASAD (Defendant).^{*}
[5th April, 1898.]

1898
APRIL 5.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—

20 A. 358 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 67. Pre-emption—Mortgage—Limitation—Date of accrual of cause of action—Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), ss. 86 and 87.

Held that where a right of pre-emption arises on the foreclosure of a mortgage under the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, the right to sue for pre-emption accrues, not from the date fixed in the decree under s. 86 as the date upon which the payment is to be made by the mortgagor, but from the date on which the mortgagee obtains an order absolute under s. 87 of the said Act. Raghbir Singh v. Nandu Singh (1); Ali Abbas v. Kalka Prasad (2); and Poresh Nath Mojumdar v. Ramjodu Mojumdar (3), referred to.

[F., 20 A. 375.]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court.
Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.
Munshi Ram Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

[359] KNOX, J.—The question which arises for determination in this second appeal is whether a right of pre-emption accrues from the date upon which a mortgagor is, under a decree given under s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882, declared absolutely debarred of all rights to redeem the property, or from the date on which the mortgagee obtains an order absolute in terms of s. 87 of the same Act. In order that the question may be more clearly apprehended, it will be well to set out the facts out of which this question arises. Har Prasad was the owner of the property, the subject matter of this appeal. He transferred his interests under a deed of conditional sale to the father of one Mata Din. On the 11th of April 1893 Mata Din sued for foreclosure, and obtained a decree ordering Har Prasad to pay to the plaintiff or into Court the sum due on or before the 11th of October 1893, and declaring further that if the payment was not made on or before that date, Har Prasad would be absolutely debarred from all rights to redeem the property. The amount was not paid by the time fixed, and has not up to the present been paid. On 15th of March 1894, Mata Din sold his right under his decree of the 11th of April 1893 to Jwala Prasad, the present respondent, and on the 13th of April 1894 Jwala Prasad got his name entered in the village papers as mortgagee. On the 9th of March 1895, Anwar-ul Haq, the present appellant, purchased a share in the village in which the property in appeal is situated. Upon the 6th of April 1895 Jwala Prasad applied to the Court for, and obtained, an order absolute in the terms of s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act, and on the 2nd of April 1896 Anwar-ul Haq instituted the present suit. The defence made to the suit was inter alia that Anwar-ul Haq was not a sharer in the village on the 11th October 1893, when the date fixed by the Court for payment of the mortgage money by Har Prasad expired; that therefore he had no right of pre-emption:

^{*} Second Appeal No. 1014 of 1896 from a decree of F. W. Fox, Esq., District Judge of Jhansi, dated the 1st October 1896, reversing a decree of Maulvi Muhammad Tajammal Husain, Munsif of Orai, dated the 9th June 1896.

(1) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 134.

(2) 14 A. 405.

(3) 16 C. 246.

that on the said date the respondent's title of conditional vendee had become that of an absolute vendee and the sale had become [360] an absolute sale. The learned Judge accepted this contention: he held that the mortgagee having been all along in possession of the mortgaged property, "his title became complete when the mortgagor failed to pay before the 11th of October 1893. If the mortgagee chose to take further steps under s. 87 such steps were merely proceedings in execution with the object of clearing his title. The title itself was acquired on the 11th of October 1893." Upon this view he held that the title to pre-empt arose on the 11th of October 1893, when the appellant was not a co-sharer. The appellant adheres to the case stated in the plaint, namely, that no right of pre-emption accrued to him till the 6th of April 1895, when, as he maintains, the sale in favour of the respondent became complete in law. In support of this contention he relied on the precedent Raghubir Singh v. Nandu Singh (1). Against that the learned Advocate for the respondent referred me to a Full Bench ruling of this Court, Ali Abbas v. Kalka Prasad (2), and to certain other precedents of this Court, in which it has been laid down that applications for an order absolute under s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act are steps in execution. Neither of the cases above cited are any safe guide in the case before me. They were both decisions governed by Regulation No. XVII of 1806, and the law applicable was that which prevailed before Act No. IV of 1882 came into force. It has been held by this Court in Ali Abbas v. Kalka Prasad that on the expiration of the year of grace provided by ss. 7 and 8 of Regulation No. XVII of 1806, if anything remained to be paid under the mortgage and the proceedings under the Regulation had been regular, the title of the conditional vendee became that of an absolute vendee and the sale became an absolute sale on the day when the year of grace expired. An important change was, however, introduced by s. 87 of Act No. IV of 1882, and it is by this section that the present appeal is governed. This section provides that if payment be not made by the mortgagor on the day fixed by the Court the plaintiff may apply [361] to the Court for an order that the defendant be debarred absolutely of all right to redeem the mortgaged property; when he has so applied the Court shall then pass such order, and on the order being passed the debt secured by the mortgage shall be deemed to be discharged. These words are without meaning, it seems to me, and the procedure provided in s. 87 is a purely superfluous procedure in the case of a mortgagee in possession, if his title has become complete and the sale an absolute sale as soon as the date fixed by the Court for payment of the mortgage money has expired. Under s. 87 a Court can upon good cause shown from time to time postpone the day appointed for payment. In other words, it can postpone the date on which the title of the mortgagee would become complete. This power was not given in Regulation No. XVIII of 1806, nor was there any provision made for an application for an order absolute like that provided for in s. 87 of Act No. IV of 1882. The Calcutta High Court has held in the case of Poresh Nath Mojumdar v. Ramjodu Mojumdar (3) that a mortgagor can redeem at any time till the order absolute is made under s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882. I need not, and do not, determine that point here; but I am satisfied that the procedure enjoined by s. 87 is not superfluous or procedure merely to clear title, and that until such an order absolute has been 1898

APRIL 5.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

20 A. 358 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 67.

(1) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 134.

(2) 14 A. 405.

(3) 16 C. 246.

1898 made a right to pre-empt does not accrue. The right to pre-empt accrues, not from the date fixed in the decree under s. 86 as the date on which the payment is to be made by the mortgagor, but from the date on which the mortgagee obtains an order absolute under s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882.

APRIL 5. —
APPELLATE
LATE
CIVIL.

I accordingly decree the appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the lower appellate Court, and restore that of the Court of first instance.

20 A. 358 = Three months from the date of this decree is allowed for the payment of the pre-emption money.

18 A.W.N. (1898) 67.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 362 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 72.

[362] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt.

NARAIN SINGH AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. CHATURBHUI SINGH
(Defendant).^{*} [6th April, 1898.]

Act No. VII of 1870 (Court Fees Act), ss 10 and 12—Court fee—Procedure—Second Appeal—Appeal to lower appellate Court by respondent in High Court insufficiently stamped.

Where it was discovered in second appeal in the High Court that the respondent, when appellant in the lower appellate Court, had not paid a sufficient Court fee on his memorandum of appeal in that Court, and up to the date of the hearing of the appeal in the High Court, though called upon to do so, had not made good the deficiency, it was held that the proper procedure was not to dismiss the respondent's appeal to the lower appellate Court, but to stay the issuing of the decree, if any, of the High Court, in favour of the respondent until such time as the additional Court fee due by him might be paid.

[F., 28 A. 270 = 2 A.L.J. 839 = A.W.N. (1905) 280; 15 Ind. Cas. 463 (464) = 109 P.R. 1912 = 136 P.W.R. 1912.]

IN this case the plaintiffs came into Court claiming, first, a declaration of their proprietary right in respect of certain land, and, secondly, cancellation of an order of a Revenue Court. They paid a Court fee of Rs. 10 on their plaint. The plaint was accepted and filed, the suit heard, the issue raised by the defendant as to insufficiency of stamp being decided against him, and a decree given in favour of the plaintiffs by the Court of first instance (Munsif of Sahaswan).

The defendant appealed, paying on his memorandum of appeal the same Court fee as had been paid on the plaint. The lower appellate Court (District Judge of Shahjahanpur) allowed the appeal and dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court. On this appeal being presented for report as to limitation and Court fee, it was reported that there was a deficiency of Rs. 10 on the plaint and a similar deficiency on the memorandum of appeal due by the plaintiffs, and a deficiency of Rs. 10 due by the defendant on his memorandum of appeal in the lower appellate Court. The deficiency due by the plaintiffs was made good, but at the time the appeal came on for hearing the deficiency due by the defendant was still unsupplied. Under these circumstances the appeal was put up for disposal.

^{*} Second Appeal No. 100 of 1897, from a decree of D.F. Addis, Esq., District Judge of Shahjahanpur, dated the 1st December 1896, reversing a decree of Munshi Prem Behari, Munsif of Sahaswan, dated the 19th August 1896.

[363] Mr. A. H. C. Hamilton, for the appellants.

Mr. Karamat Husain, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—In this case it appears that the respondent here, who was the successful defendant appellant in the lower appellate Court, did not pay a sufficient amount of Court-fees on his memorandum of appeal in that Court. As far as that Court is concerned it must be assumed under the first paragraph of s. 12 of the Court Fees Act that the District Judge finally decided between the parties that the fee paid was sufficient. In this Court, however, it has been discovered that the defendant, respondent here, when appellant in the Court below did not pay a sufficient fee on his memorandum of appeal. The respondent here has been called on to pay the deficient duty, but has not done so. Mr. Hamilton for the appellant asks me to take action under the second clause of s. 12 and the second clause of s. 10 of the Court Fees Act and to dismiss the respondent defendant's appeal to the lower appellate Court. I am unable to see that I am authorized so to act under the second clause of s. 10. That clause provides, with reference to the valuation of the properties referred to in s. 7 paragraphs 5 and 6 of the Act, that when the Court-fees paid are insufficient under the circumstances laid down in the first clause of s. 10, the Court shall call on the plaintiff to pay the deficient Court-fees and shall stay the suit until the additional fee is paid. It further provides that if the additional fee be not paid the suit shall be dismissed. The second paragraph of s. 12 makes the procedure set forth in the second paragraph of s. 10 applicable to the case when a Court of appeal, reference or revision considers that the question decided under the first paragraph of s. 12 has been wrongly decided to the detriment of revenue. The question then arises in the present case what is the suit which is to be stayed until the additional fee is paid, and it is to be noted that the staying of the suit is the act which the Court has to perform before it can dismiss the suit. There is no suit before me except in the sense that all proceedings in a [364] suit up to decree are parts of the suit. What is before me is the appeal by the plaintiff against the decree of the lower appellate Court dismissing the suit. The appellant is undoubtedly no way in fault. He has paid up all the Court-fees due from him in the lower Courts and in this Court. Does then the second clause of s. 10 mean that because of the default of the respondent in the lower Court the appellant is to have his appeal in this Court stayed, and can it be held that the second clause of s. 12, read with paragraph 2 of s. 10, means that if the respondent wilfully persists in refusing to pay, the appellant, who is not in fault, is to be punished by having his appeal dismissed? I cannot believe that it was intended by the Legislature to work any such injustice. In my opinion the second clause of s. 10 read with the second clause s. 12 cannot be worked in a case like the present. If it were the appellant who was in fault and failed to pay the full Court-fee due from him in the lower Court, this Court certainly could stay the hearing of his appeal, and, if deficient fees were not paid, could dismiss his appeal, and no doubt would do so. But where the appellant is not in fault, it would be most unjust that the respondent by failing to pay the Court-fee due from him in the lower Court should have it in his power to prevent the appellant from having his appeal heard.

For these reasons I decline in this case to take action under the second clause of s. 10 and proceed to hear the appeal on the merits.

1898

APRIL 6.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

20 A. 362

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 72.

1898
APRIL 6.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL,
—

20 A. 362=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 72.

On the merits the learned counsel who appears for the appellant says he is not in a position to press the appeal. The appeal is therefore dismissed with costs. But I direct that the decree be not prepared or signed until the respondent pays the Court-fees found due from him on his memorandum of appeal in the lower appellate Court.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 365 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 73.

[365] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

DEBI DAS (Plaintiff) v. NIRPAT AND OTHERS (Defendants) *
[7th April, 1898.]

Parties to a suit—Suit for partnership debt—Representative of partner who dies pending the suit not a necessary party—Act No. IX of 1872 (Indian Contract, Act), s. 15.

In a suit to recover a debt due to a trading partnership in which it happens that a deceased person was a partner up to the time of his death, it is not necessary to join as a plaintiff any representative of the deceased partner. Gobind Prasad v. Chandar Sekhar (1); Ram Narain Nursing Doss v. Ram Chundaer Jankee Loll (2), and Motilal Becharadas v. Ghellubhai Hariram (3) referred to.

[F., 32 A. 639 (640) = 7 A.L.J. 759 = 6 Ind. Cas. 840; 10 P.R. 1906; R., 13 C.W.N. 509 = 9 C.L.J. 331 = 1 Ind. Cas. 254 (256); 14 Ind. Cas. 221.]

THIS was a suit brought by one Abhe Singh and his alleged adopted son Debi Singh as partners in a trading concern to recover a sum of money said to be due on settlement of accounts between the parties. During the pendency of the suit Abhe Singh died, and the suit was continued by Debi Singh for himself and as legal representative of Abhe Singh, the Court of first instance (Munsif of Jhansi) finding on an issue framed in the suit that Debi Singh was the adopted son of Abhe Singh. The Court of first instance decreed the claim in favour of Debi Das.

On appeal by the defendants, the lower appellate Court (District Judge of Jhansi) found that it was not proved that Debi Das was the adopted son of Abhe Singh. It further found that Debi Das as surviving partner in the business was not entitled to collect debts due to the firm without obtaining a certificate of succession under Act No. VII of 1889, and that it was then too late to remedy that defect. The lower appellate Court accordingly decreed the appeal and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

The respondents were not represented.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—This suit was brought by Abhe Singh and Debi Das to recover money due to them as partners [366] in a trading concern upon a partnership account. Before decree Abhe Singh died, and Debi Das, who claimed to be his adopted son, was entered upon the record as the representative of the deceased plaintiff. The suit was * Second Appeal, No. 112 of 1896, from a decree of F. W. Fox, Esq., District Judge of Jhansi, dated the 28th November 1895, reversing a decree of Maulvi Syed Muhammad Abbas Ali, Munsif of Jhansi, dated the 13th September 1895.

(1) 9 A. 486.

(2) 18 C. 96.

(3) 17 B. 6.

continued, and the Munsif gave the plaintiffs a decree. The defendants appealed, and the lower appellate Court dismissed the suit. The ground of such dismissal was that Debi Das was not an adopted son; was not a representative of Abhe; and was not entitled to recover Abhe's interest in the debt without production of a certificate under s. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act, No. VII of 1889. The plaintiff Debi Das appeals upon the ground that, as the surviving partner of the firm to which the debt was due, he by himself was entitled to maintain the suit without joining any person as representative of the deceased member of the firm, and therefore without producing any certificate. The second ground of appeal is not pressed. We consider ourselves concluded by the decision of this Court in the case of Gobind Prasad v. Chandar Sekhar (1). That decision, it is true, has been dissented from in the Calcutta High Court in the case of Ram Narain Nursing Doss v. Ram Chunder Jankee Loll (2). On the other hand, the decision of this Court has been followed and approved in Motilal Bechardass v. Ghellabhai Hariram (3). We are not aware that the case decided in this Court has been dissented from in this Court. The principle therein laid down is in accordance with the English law, and is not in our opinion in contravention of s. 45 of the Contract Act. It was quite unnecessary to bring Abhe's representative on the record. We do not consider that a decree such as may be passed in this case would be a decree against the debtor of a deceased person within the meaning of s. 4 of Act No. VII of 1889, but it would be a decree against the debtor of a partnership concern; for, in a suit to recover a debt due to a trading partnership in which it happens that a deceased person was a partner up to the time of his death, it is not, in our opinion, necessary to join as plaintiff any representative whatever of the [367] deceased partner. When the representative of Abhe desires to recover from the partnership concern such interest as Abhe possessed in the firm, if he has to do so through the medium of a Court, he will have to obtain a succession certificate before he is entitled to a decree. We set aside the decree of the Court below dismissing the suit, and, as the case was wrongly dismissed upon a preliminary point, we remand it to the lower appellate Court for trial upon the merits.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

20 A. 367 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 77.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox, Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

BENI RAI AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. RAM LAKHAN RAI AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs).^{*} [14th April, 1898.]

Appeal to Her Majesty in Council—Civil Procedure Code, s. 596—Decree affirming the decision of the Court immediately below—Decree dismissing an appeal to the High Court for default of prosecution.

Held that a decree of the High Court dismissing an appeal for want of prosecution—the appellants not having supplied their counsel with materials upon which to argue the appeal when it was called on for hearing—was a decree affirming the ^{*}Privy Council Appeal No. 19 of 1897.

(1) 9 A. 486.

(2) 18 C. 86.

(3) 17 B. 6.

1898
APRIL 7.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 365 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 73.

1898
APRIL 14.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

20 A. 367 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 77.

decision of the Court immediately below, within the meaning of s. 596 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

[R., 33 A. 154 (162) = 7 A.L.J. 1001 (1010) = 7 Ind. Cas. 926; 16 Ind. Cas. 486 = 23 M. L. J. 219 (220) = 12 M.L.T. 260 = (1912) M.W.N. 962.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the order of the Court.

Mr. A. E. Ryves and Munshi Ram Prasad, for the appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondents.

ORDER.

KNOX, Acting, C.J., and BANERJI, J.—This is a petition for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council. The value of the subject-matter of the suit is over Rs. 10,000, but there arise two questions which have to be determined before leave to appeal can be granted. The first question is, whether the decree now appealed from affirms or not the decision of the Court immediately below; secondly, whether any substantial questions of law are shown to be involved by the petition. As regards the first question, we find on referring to the judgment of this Court that it runs as follows:—

[368] "This appeal is not supported. It is therefore dismissed." The petition of appeal sets out that the appeal came on for hearing on the 26th of April 1897, and could not be supported because the papers for the translation and printing of which the appellant had applied were not ready. A reference to the record shows that the appellants did, on the 25th of December 1895, apply for the translation and printing of the papers which they considered necessary for their purpose in order to place the appeal before this Court. They, however, took no steps to deposit the money necessary for this purpose and their application consequently abated. They took no further interest in the matter until the 12th of February 1897, when they put in a second application for translation and printing of the papers they then considered necessary. Their application was granted conditionally upon the hearing of the appeal not being delayed in consequence of the laches they had shown in taking no steps for nearly two years in order to have the necessary papers translated and printed under the rules of this Court. The appeal came on for hearing on the 25th of April 1897. The appellants apparently did not through their counsel show any sufficient cause to the Judges before whom the appeal came on for hearing which would justify those Judges in granting an adjournment or in permitting them to refer to the record in the vernacular. In consequence of this the appeal was not supported, and a decree was passed dismissing the appeal and affirming the decision of the lower Court. It has been contended before us that a mere order of dismissal does not and cannot amount to an affirmation as intended by s. 596 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and in support of this contention we were referred to the precedent Asghar Reza v. Haidar Reza (1). It is obvious that that precedent does not afford us any assistance in determining the matter now in dispute. That case was one in which the learned Judges of the High Court at Calcutta had before them for determination several issues of fact. The Court from which the appeal had been preferred had [369] contented itself with determining two issues only, considering them sufficient for the disposal of the case, and had left other issues untried. The High Court found on the two issues which had been tried contrary to the findings of the Court below, but they proceeded to try further questions of fact and their decision on those questions of fact led them to dismiss the appeal. They thus came finally to the same conclusion in the suit as the Court of first instance, although they did not agree with the Judge who had tried the case on all his findings or in the reasons on which they were based. The learned Judge who gave leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council found further that there were substantial questions of law involved which entitled the petitioners to a certificate that the case was a fit one for appeal. As regards the case before us the result of the appeal to us is that the findings of the Court below and the reasons on which they are based stand affirmed. There was no further finding of any kind by this Court. Under these circumstances we are unable to accept the contention of the learned counsel for the petitioners, and we hold that the decree of this Court did affirm the decree of the Court immediately below. The result of holding otherwise would be that an appellant, who, with the object of saving himself the expense of having the necessary papers translated for this Court, neglected to support his appeal before us, might claim leave to appeal direct to Her Majesty in Council by refraining from obtaining any determination by this Court upon the pleas raised. The appellants in fact want leave to ask Her Majesty in Council to do that which this Court might have done, but which the appellants by their own laches put it out of the power of the Court to do. The next question which arises is whether any substantial questions of law are involved in the appeal. We have gone through the various pleas raised. The only pleas that raise any question of law are the first and second pleas, and those pleas do not and will not arise where the decision on the question of fact is the same as that of the Court below. These questions [370] of law do not, in our opinion, arise. Consequently we find ourselves unable to grant the leave asked for, and dismiss this application with costs.

Application dismissed.

20 A. 370 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 75.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox, Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

BANSI LAL AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. RAMJI LAL AND ANOTHER
(Defendants).^{*} [15th April, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 32—Order adding defendant—Means of questioning such order—Practice—Decree in previous suit defining rights of a party to a subsequent suit—Effect of such decree as against such party until set aside by proper procedure.

Where an order adding a defendant under s. 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure was not appealed against and no objection was taken thereto in the memorandum of appeal from the decree in the suit in which it was passed, an oral objection taken in appeal to such order was disallowed. Tilak Raj Singh v. Chakardhari Singh (1) referred to.

^{*} First Appeal, No. 54 of 1894, from a decree of Pandit Bansidhar, Subordinate Judge of Meerut, dated the 18th November 1896.

(1) 15 A. 119.

1898
APRIL 14.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 367 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 77.

1898
APRIL 15.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

20 A. 370=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 75.

Where there is a subsisting decree in a previous suit which as regards the subject-matter of a subsequent suit would take effect under s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it is not open to the party whose rights are affected by such decree to question in the subsequent suit the validity of such decree, though it might have been open to such party in a separate suit to get the decree set aside. Karamali Rahimbhoy v. Rahimbhoy Habibbhoj (1) referred to.

[R., 24 A. 242 (245); 27 C. 11 (17, 24)=3 C.W.N. 660; 7 Ind. Cas. 11 (14).]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court. Pandit Moti Lal and Pandit Baldeo Ram Dave, for the appellants. Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, Acting C.J., and BANERJI, J.—The property claimed in the suit out of which this appeal has arisen belonged originally to one Ishk Lal. He was the son of Jai Singh, who was one of five brothers, namely, Hardayal, Sawai, Ram Nath, Chunni Lal and Jai Singh. Hardayal's son was Daulat Ram, the father of the plaintiffs appellants. The respondent Ramji Lal is the [371] brother of Ishk Lal. It is asserted on the one hand and denied on the other that Ramji Lal was adopted by his uncle Sawai. Ishk Lal died in 1884 leaving him surviving his widow Shama Kuar, and his two daughters Jai Dai and Dhapo. His estate came into the possession of his widow Shama Kuar, and on her death in 1886 it was taken possession of by Ramji Lal, defendant, and Daulat Ram the father of the plaintiffs. In 1889 Jai Dai for herself and as the next friend of her minor sister Dhapo brought a suit against Ramji Lal and Daulat Ram for possession of the estate of Ishk Lal on the ground that they were entitled to it in preference to those persons. On the 12th of August 1889 the parties to that suit agreed to refer their dispute to arbitration, and the Court granted permission to Jai Dai to enter into the agreement of reference to arbitration on behalf of her minor sister Dhapo. On the 29th of June 1890 the arbitrators made their award, and in accordance with that award a decree was made on the 5th of July 1890, whereby a portion of the property claimed was decreed to the two daughters of Ishk Lal. It is admitted that in pursuance of that decree possession was obtained by the daughters in respect of the property decreed to them. The present suit is for a partition of the remainder of Ishk Lal's property, and was brought against Ramji Lal alone by the plaintiffs, the sons of Daulat Ram, who has died since the decree of 1890. Ramji Lal in his defence pleaded the jus tertii of Musammatt Dhapo, and set up a preferential title to the estate of Ishk Lal. Dhapo intervened and applied to be made a defendant under s. 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In spite of the objection of the plaintiffs her application was granted, and she was arrayed as a defendant to the suit. She urged in answer to the claim that she alone was entitled to the estate of Ishk Lal; that neither the plaintiffs nor anyone else had a right to that estate; that Jai Dai her sister had no right to that estate in preference to her; that the proceedings connected with the former suit and the reference to arbitration were fraudulent and were taken in collusion between Jai Dai and the father of the [372] plaintiffs and Ramji Lal, and that the decree in that suit was not binding on her. It was asserted by the plaintiffs that the decree was binding on Dhapo and that according to the custom prevailing among Saraogis, to which sect the parties to the suit belonged, a daughter could not inherit.

The lower Court has found in favour of Dhapo and dismissed the claim. The plaintiffs have preferred this appeal.

Mr. Moti Lal on behalf of the appellants asked our leave to urge the plea that Dhapo had been improperly made a defendant to the suit, her interest being adverse both to the plaintiffs and to the original defendant Ramji Lal. As no appeal had been preferred under s. 588 of the Code of Civil Procedure from the order adding Musammatt Dhapo as a defendant to the suit, and as no plea was taken in the memorandum of appeal questioning the propriety of that order, we, following the ruling of this Court in Tilak Raj Singh v. Chakurdhari Singh (1), refused to grant him the permission sought by him.

The main contention on behalf of the appellants is that the decree of 1890 is binding on Dhapo, and consequently it is no longer open to her to question the plaintiff's title as regards the property now claimed. There can be no doubt that if the decree of the 5th of July 1890 is binding on Dhapo the portion of the claim advanced on her behalf in the suit in which that decree was passed must, having regard to Explanation 3 of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, be deemed to have been dismissed, and it is no longer open to her to contend that she is entitled as against the plaintiffs to the property claimed in the former suit, but not decreed to her. If, however, she is in possession of that property, she may probably resist the claim on the ground that the plaintiffs are not entitled to recover the property without proving the own right to it. It is, however, not necessary to decide that question, as it has nowhere been suggested that she is in such possession. The plaintiffs stated in their plaint that they were in possession of the property in dispute jointly with Ramji Lal, [373] and although Ramji Lal in his defence pleaded the jus tertii of the daughters of Ishk Lal he did not assert that they were in possession of the property claimed. Dhapo in her written statement did not allege that she was in possession. That being so, if the decree in the former suit is binding on Dhapo, she cannot resist the claim of the plaintiffs. We have therefore to determine whether the decree of 1890 is binding on Dhapo. The lower Court has held that decree and the arbitration proceedings which preceded it not to be binding, on the ground that Dhapo being the unmarried daughter of Ishk Lal was entitled to his estate in preference to his married daughter Jai Dai, that Jai Dai had consequently an interest adverse to that of Dhapo and could not act as the next friend of Dhapo, and that all the proceedings connected with the suit brought by Jai Dai on behalf of Dhapo, including the arbitration proceedings, are null and void as against Dhapo. We may observe that the ruling in Kalavati v. Chedi Lal (2) on which the learned Subordinate Judge has relied has no bearing upon the question before us.

We are of opinion that so long as the decree of 1890 subsists it cannot be treated as a nullity. If it was obtained by fraud, or if for any other reason it is a decree which is prejudicial to the interests of Dhapo, she must get the decree set aside before she can avoid the operation of it. In this case the only ground on which the validity of the decree is impeached is that Jai Dai having an interest adverse to that of Dhapo could not, having regard to the provisions of s. 445 of the Code of Civil Procedure, act as the next friend of Dhapo. In the first place, we observe that she did not claim any specific share for herself; in the next

(1) 15 A. 119.

(2) 17 A. 531.

1898
APRIL 15,
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 370—
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 75.

1898
APRIL 15.

—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

—
20 A. 370 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 75.

place, she was the de facto guardian of Dhapo, no other guardian being in existence. Moreover, under s. 3 of Act No. XL of 1858, which was in force when the former suit was brought, no guardian of a minor could sue on behalf of the minor without obtaining a certificate of guardianship or the leave of the Court to sue for the minor. In the present instance [374] it must be presumed that leave was granted by the Court to Jai Dai to sue on behalf of the minor (Parmeshwar Das v. Beta (1).) The further fact that the Court gave leave to Jai Dai to enter into the agreement of reference to arbitration on behalf of Dhapo also shows that the Court recognised her as a fit person to act as the next friend of Dhapo, and this notwithstanding the fact that the defendants to that suit questioned in their written statement the competency of Jai Dai to act as the next friend of Dhapo. If, as alleged in this case on behalf of Dhapo, the former proceedings were brought about by the fraud of Jai Dai, her remedy was to get the decree made in that suit set aside in the manner pointed out in Karamali Rahimbhoy v. Rahimbhoy Habibbhoy (2). In our opinion, as the decree of 1890 has not been set aside and is still a subsisting decree, it is binding on Dhapo, and it is not open to her to set up her own title as against the plaintiffs. The Court below has in our opinion erred in holding that the plaintiffs are not entitled to maintain the suit as against Dhapo. As we have said above, had Dhapo been in possession of any portion of the property now claimed, she might have put the plaintiffs to proof of their title, although she might not set up against them a title in herself, but she has not alleged that she is in possession, nor has she established her possession.

It has not been determined what the rights of the plaintiffs are as against Ramji Lal. In fact the case as between him and the plaintiffs has not been tried at all. This must now be done.

We allow this appeal, and, setting aside the decree below, we remand the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure with directions to re-admit it under its original number in the register and to try it on the merits as against Ramji Lal. The plaintiffs will get their costs of this appeal. The costs hitherto incurred in the Court below will abide the event.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

20 A. 375 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 78.

[375] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox, Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

RAHAM ILAHI KHAN AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. GHASITA AND OTHERS (Defendants).^{*} [18th April, 1898.]

Pre-emption—Mortgage by conditional sale—Limitation—Act No. XV of 1877 (Indian Limitation Act), sch. II, art. 120—Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), ss. 86 and 87.

A plaintiff sued for pre-emption, his claim arising out of the foreclosure of a mortgage by conditional sale of a share in an undivided zamindari village.

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 867 of 1894, from a decree of Syed Muhammad Sirajuddin, Additional Subordinate Judge of Meerut, dated the 20th August, 1894, confirming a decree of Babu Mohan Lal Huku, Additional Munsif of Meerut, dated the 22nd August 1893.

(1) 9 A. 508.

(2) 13 B. 137.

Held (1) that the limitation applicable to the suit was that prescribed by art. 120 of sch. II of Act No. XV of 1877, and (2) that limitation began to run from the date when the mortgagee obtained an order absolute for foreclosure under s. 87 of Act No. IV of 1882. Batul Begam v. Mansur Ali Khan (1), Poresh Nath Mojumdar v. Ramjodu Mojumdar (2), and Anwarul Haq v. Jwala Prasad (3) referred to.

[R., 20 A. 446; 24 A. 479 (481); 27 A. 501 (505) = A.W.N. (1905) 70 = 2 A.L.J. 180.]

IN this case one Kamaruddin made a mortgage by way of conditional sale of a share in an undivided zamindari mahal in favour of one Sardar Khan on the 20th of September 1877. Sardar Khan brought a suit on this mortgage and obtained a decree for foreclosure under s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act on the 12th of May 1884. The time limited by that decree for the payment of the decretal amount being six months expired on the 12th of November 1884. Payment was not made, but the mortgagee took no steps to obtain an order absolute under s. 87 till the year 1890. That order was obtained on the 19th of June 1890. On the 17th of April 1893 the suit out of which this appeal has arisen was brought for pre-emption of the mortgaged property. The Court of first instance (Additional Munsif of Meerut) dismissed the suit as barred by limitation, holding that limitation commenced to run from the date of the expiry of the time limited in the foreclosure decree for the payment of the mortgage-debt, namely, the 13th of November 1884. The plaintiffs appealed. The lower appellate Court [376] (Subordinate Judge of Meerut) for similar reasons dismissed the appeal. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court.

Mr. H. C. Niblett, for the appellants.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, Acting C.J.—In the suit out of which this second appeal arises, a claim was made for pre-emption over a share in an undivided zamindari mahal. Both of the Courts below held that the right sued for had become barred by limitation, and the question which we have to consider is whether that claim was or was not so barred.

The facts, which are undisputed, are briefly as follows:—

One Kamaruddin made a mortgage by way of conditional sale on the 20th of September 1877, in favour of one Sardar Khan. Sardar Khan brought a suit and obtained a decree for foreclosure under s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act. The conditional decree granted to him is dated the 12th of May 1884, and it fixed a period of six months, as required by that section, for payment. That date expired on the 12th of November 1884. Payment was not made, but the mortgagee took no steps for obtaining an order absolute under s. 87 until the 19th of June 1890. The plaint in the present suit for pre-emption bears date the 17th of April 1893. The Courts below held that the right to pre-empt accrued from the 12th of November 1884, and they accordingly held that the suit was barred. In a recent Full Bench judgment of this Court (Batul Begam v. Mansur Ali Khan) (1) has been held, affirming a previous Full Bench, that a share in an undivided zamindari mahal is not susceptible of physical possession in the sense of art. 10 of sch. II of Act No. XV of 1877, and further that the period of limitation for pre-emption in such case is governed by art. 120, which provides a period of six years. A second question, however, remains to be decided,

(1) 20 A. 815.

(2) 16 O. 246.

(3) 20 A. 358.

1898
APRIL 18.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 375—
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 78.

and that is whether the date from which the right to pre-empt accrues runs from the conditional order made in the suit for foreclosure under [377] s. 86 or from the expiry of the six months of grace granted under the same section or again from the date of the order absolute passed under s. 87, of the same Act. In Second Appeal No. 1014 of 1896 decided by me on the 5th April 1898 (1), I held that the right to pre-empt accrued, not from the date fixed in the decree under s. 86 as the date on which the payment is to be made by the mortgagor, but from the date on which the mortgagee obtained the order absolute under s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. My reasons for the view I took are fully set out in that judgment, and I need say no more here than that I still adhere to the view I then took. The learned Advocate for the respondent argued that the date should be calculated from the time on which the mortgagor having failed to make payment within the time of grace would find any application made by him for further grace barred, namely, three years from the expiry of the period of grace. This point did not arise in Second Appeal No. 1014 of 1896. It has been considered by the High Court of Calcutta in the case of Poresh Nath Mujumdar v. Ramjodu Mojumdar (2). It was there held, and I agree with the view there taken, that the mortgagor could redeem at any time until the order absolute under s. 89 was made; in other words, that his right to redeem was not extinguished until such order was made. I am therefore of opinion that the view taken by the Court below was erroneous, and as that Court decided in error on a preliminary point I would set aside its decree and remand the suit to the Court of first instance under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

BANERJI, J.—I am of the same opinion. Two questions arise in this appeal. The first is as to the period of limitation applicable to a suit of this nature; the second is as to the date from which limitation should be computed. The first question is concluded by the recent ruling of the Full Bench to which the learned Chief Justice has referred. The property being a share in [378] an undivided zamindari mahal is not capable of physical possession; therefore art. 10 of the second schedule of the Limitation Act is not applicable. There being no other specific article which can govern the suit, the only article which can apply would be art. 120, which prescribes a limitation of six years.

As regards the second question, I also agree in holding that limitation should be computed from the date on which the order absolute for foreclosure was made under s. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act. So long as the right of the mortgagor to redeem has not become extinct the mortgaged property does not vest absolutely in the conditional vendee. Section 87 provides that if payment is not made within the time fixed in the decree passed under s. 86, the plaintiff mortgagee may apply for an order that the mortgagor should be debarred absolutely of his right to redeem, and it further provides that on the passing of such order the debt secured by the mortgage shall be discharged. These provisions clearly show that so long as an order is not passed under that section the mortgagor's right to redeem and the mortgage-debt do not come to an end. Consequently it is only on the passing of an order under s. 87 that the mortgagee, conditional vendee, becomes the absolute vendee of the mortgaged property. That being so, a right to claim pre-emption in respect of a sale which has thus become absolute can only arise on the date of the order absolute for foreclosure made under s. 87. The date from which limitation should be computed cannot be held to be the date on which the conditional vendee might have made his application for an order under s. 87, because, as I have said, until the conditional vendee obtains his order under s. 87 he continues to be the mortgagee, and it is only when he ceases to be the mortgagee and acquires the absolute right of the mortgagor that a claim for pre-emption can be preferred in respect of the transaction.

(1) 20 A. 358.

(2) 16 O. 246.

For these reasons I agree in holding that the plaintiff's claim was not barred, and that the Courts below have erred in [379] holding it to be so. I also agree in the order proposed by my learned colleague.

BY THE COURT.—The order of the Court is that the decrees of the Courts below are set aside, and the case is remanded to the Court of first instance with directions to re-admit it under its original number in the register and to proceed to determine the suit on its merits. The appellant will recover the costs of this appeal, and the costs hitherto incurred in the Courts below will abide the event.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

20 A. 379 (F.B.) = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 81.

FULL BENCH.

Before Mr. Justice Blair, Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

SHIAM BEHARI LAL AND ANOTHER (Defendants) v. RUP KISHORE
AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs).^{*} [20th April, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, ss. 312 and 320—Act No. VII of 1888, ss. 30 and 55—Execution of decree—Decree transferred to Collector for execution—Suit by auction-purchaser to confirm a sale which had been set aside by the Collector.

At a sale of ancestral property held by a Collector executing a decree transferred to him under s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure the plaintiff s. decree-holders, were the auction purchasers. On the application of the defendants, judgment-debtors, the sale was set aside by the Collector. Thereupon the plaintiffs, decree-holders, auction-purchasers, filed a suit for a declaration that the auction sale was a valid one and that the order of the Collector setting it aside was ineffectual. Held that such a suit was maintainable.

Shib Singh v. Mukat Singh (1) overruled. Ugar Nath Tiwari v. Bhonath Tiwari (2) and Diwan Singh v. Bharat Singh (3) referred to.

[F., 25 A. 355 (357); R., 5 N.L.R. 121 = 3 Ind. Cas. 572 (573).]

THE plaintiffs in this case obtained a decree against the defendants, and in execution thereof they obtained an order for the sale of the ancestral property of the defendants. In accordance [380] with the rules prescribed by Government in respect of the sale of ancestral property, the execution of the decree was transferred to the Collector under s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The property of the defendants was put up for sale on the 20th of September 1893 and was purchased by the plaintiffs with the leave of the Court. The defendants then applied to have the sale set aside on the ground of irregularity in the publication of the sale. The Collector, by his order of the 16th of November 1893, set the ^{*} Second Appeal, No. 1053 of 1895, from a decree of Lala Pyare Lal, Officiating Judge of Mainpuri, dated the 20th July 1895, confirming a decree of Maulvi Mazhar Hussain, Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri, dated the 25th September 1894.

(1) 18 A. 437.

(2) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 41.

(3) 3 A. 206.

1898
APRIL 20.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 379
(F.B.) =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 81.

sale aside. Thereupon the plaintiffs brought the present suit for a declaration that the auction sale was a valid one and that the order of the Court setting it aside was ineffectual. The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri) decreed the claim. The defendants appealed. The lower appellate Court (District Judge of Mainpuri) dismissed the appeal. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court, and were there permitted to take the plea which had not been taken in their memorandum of appeal, that no such suit as that brought by the plaintiffs would lie. This question was referred to a Bench of three Judges.

Mr. Roshan Lal and Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the appellants.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Pandit Baldeo Ram Dave, for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court (BLAIR, BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.) was delivered by BANERJI, J.

JUDGMENT.

The simple question referred to this Bench is whether the present suit is maintainable. The facts out of which the suit arose were these. The plaintiffs obtained a decree against the present defendants, and in execution thereof they obtained an order for the sale of the ancestral property of the defendants. In accordance with the rules prescribed by Government in respect of the sale of ancestral property, the execution of the decree was transferred to the Collector under s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The property of the defendants was put up for sale on the 20th of September 1893 and was purchased by the plaintiffs with the leave of the Court. The defendants then [381] applied to have the sale set aside on the ground of irregularity in the publication of the sale. The Collector, by his order of the 16th of November 1893, set the sale aside. Thereupon the present suit was brought by the plaintiffs for a declaration that the auction sale was a valid one and that the order of the Collector setting it aside was ineffectual. The Court of first instance decreed the claim, and the Court of first appeal affirmed the decree of the first Court. The defendants prefer this appeal and the learned counsel who appears for them obtained the leave of the divisional Court which referred the case to this Bench to argue the question whether the suit was maintainable. In support of the contention raised on behalf of the appellants is the ruling of this Court in Shib Singh v. Mukat Singh (1). On the other hand, the contrary opinion is supported by the ruling in Ugar Nath Tiwari v. Bhonath Tiwari (2). In consequence of these conflicting rulings the question whether a suit of this kind can be maintained has been referred to this Bench. The decision in the case last mentioned followed the decision of the majority of the Full Bench in the case of Diwan Singh v. Bharat Singh (3). That case was decided with reference to the provisions of s. 312 of Act No. X of 1877. Act No. XIV of 1882 has made no alteration in the wording of s. 312. There can be no doubt that the last paragraph of that section is not happily worded. An order under that section must be either an order confirming the sale or an order setting aside the sale. An order of the latter description cannot be sought to be set aside on the ground of irregularity, that is, of the existence of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale. The suit which is forbidden by the last paragraph of the section cannot therefore be a suit to set aside any order passed under the section, but must be a suit to set aside an order passed under the first paragraph of the section only. Consequently, as held by the majority of the Full Bench in the case referred to, there is no prohibition against the [382] institution of a suit to set aside an order refusing to confirm a sale unless by subsequent legislation an alteration has been made in the law in respect of the maintenance of such a suit. We must assume that when the Legislature re-enacted in Act No. XIV of 1882 the provisions of s. 312 of Act No. X of 1877 it did not intend to make any alteration in the law as it was interpreted by the majority of the Full Bench in the case referred to. The learned Judges who decided the case of Shib Singh v. Mukat Singh (1) were of the opinion that Act No. VII of 1888, by which s. 320 of Act No. XIV of 1882 was amended, took away from the Civil Courts the right to entertain a suit for the confirmation of a sale which had been set aside by the Collector in the exercise of the powers given to him under the rules framed by the Government in pursuance of the provisions of s. 320 as amended by Act No. VII of 1888. With this opinion we are unable to agree. By s. 30 of Act No. VII of 1888 the third, fourth and fifth paragraphs of s. 320 as they now exist were added. The third paragraph empowers the Government to frame rules conferring upon the Collector or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector the powers which the Court which transferred the decree to the Collector might exercise in execution of the decree, if the execution thereof had not been transferred to the Collector. Such rules have been framed by the Government. The penultimate paragraph of that section provides that the powers conferred on the Collector, or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector, or upon any appellate or revisional authority, by the rules so framed, cannot be exercised by the Court or by any Court exercising appellate or revisional authority in respect to the decrees or orders of that Court. The words "the Court" clearly refer to the Court alluded to in the previous portion of the section, namely, the Court to which application was made for the execution of the decree and which as such Court transmitted the decree to the Collector for execution. So that the penultimate paragraph of [383] s. 320 as amended by Act No. VII of 1888 does not take away the jurisdiction of any Court other than the Court referred to in it. If the execution of the decree had taken place in the Civil Court which transmitted it to the Collector, a suit of the nature of the present suit would, under the Full Bench ruling in Diwan Singh v. Bharat Singh (2), have been maintainable. The fact that the Collector exercises the powers which the Civil Court could have exercised but for the provisions of s. 320 and the rules framed under it cannot deprive the ordinary Civil Courts of the jurisdiction to entertain such a suit. For the above reasons our answer to the reference is that the suit is maintainable.

(1) 18 A. 437.

(2) 11 A. W. N. (1891) 41.

(3) 8 A. 206.

Both the parties consent that this appeal be decided by this Bench. As the only point which really arises in this appeal was the plea which has been disposed of by the above decision and the other pleas in the memorandum of appeal have been abandoned, the result is that this appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

1898
APRIL 20.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 379
(F.B.) =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 81.

(1) 18 A. 487.

(2) 3 A. 206.

1898

20 A. 383 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 82.

APRIL 21.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

APPEL-

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.

LATE

CIVIL.

GIRDHAR DAS AND OTHERS (Decree-holders) v. HAR SHANKAR PRASAD (Judgment-debtor).^{*} [21st April, 1898.]20 A. 383 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 82.Execution of decree — Limitation — Civil Procedure Code, s. 326 — Execution as to immoveable property of judgment-debtors stayed by reason of the property being in charge of the Collector.

The plaintiffs obtained in 1871 a decree for money against the defendant. In 1879, by an order under s. 326 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the immoveable property of the judgment-debtor was placed under the management of the Collector. Before this order was made, and during the period when the judgment-debtor's property was in charge of the Collector, various applications for execution were made by the decree-holders. Finally, in 1896, about [384] ten years after the last preceding application, the decree holders applied for execution of their decree shortly after the property had been released by the Collector. Held that as regards the immoveable property of the judgment-debtors, against which execution was sought, the application was not barred by limitation, inasmuch as the decree-holders had no remedy by execution against that property until the Collector's management had ceased.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Baldeo Ram Dave and Babu Baidiya Nath Das, for the appellants.

Munshi Ram Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—This is an appeal against an order dismissing an application for a certificate of non-satisfaction of a decree which prayed that the decree be sent to the Court of the Judge of Ghazipur for execution. The admitted facts are these. The decree was passed in 1874 and several applications for execution were made respecting it down to October 1879. In October 1879, by an order passed under s. 326 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Collector of Ghazipur was authorised to provide for the satisfaction of decrees due and outstanding against the judgment-debtor, one Babu Har Shankar Prasad. Under the provisions of s. 326 the Collector is armed with all the powers given by ss. 320 to 325-C, both inclusive, and all the provisions of those sections apply in such a case. The appellants here applied to the Collector to have satisfaction of their decree, but the request was refused, as will be seen from the case of Girdhar Das v. The Collector of Ghazipur (1). It is quite unnecessary here to discuss the reasons why the appellants' application for satisfaction of their decree was refused by the Collector. Suffice it to say that it was refused. The appellants appear to have made some subsequent applications in 1880 and 1886, the results of which we do not know. The present application was made in July 1896, that is, not long after the Collector had completed the duties imposed on him by ss. 322 to 326. It was urged in the [385] Court below that the application was time-barred, and the learned Subordinate Judge has affirmed that contention. In our opinion the decision appealed against is not correct. We have no doubt that under the last clause of the first paragraph of s. 325-A no Court could have issued any process of execution on the appellant's decree against any immoveable property in the district of Ghazipur belonging to the judgment-debtor as long as it was in the hands of the Collector. It may be that execution might have issued against the person or moveable property of the judgment-debtor, but with that we have no concern now. Turning now to the last paragraph of s. 325-A we find that, so long as the Collector is able to exercise any of the powers or duties imposed on him by ss. 320 to 325-C, which in this case was the period from October 1879 to March 1896, the period during which he exercised such powers shall be excluded from the period of limitation applicable to the execution of any decree affected by the provisions of s. 325-A in respect of any remedy of which the decree-holders have thereby, that is under this section, been temporarily deprived. Now we have no doubt that the decree in question here was affected by the provisions of s. 325-A, inasmuch as the last clause of the first paragraph of s. 325-A prevented a Civil Court in execution of a decree for money from issuing any process against the judgment-debtor's immoveable property in the hands of the Collector. The decree in this case is a decree for money. It follows therefore that the decree-holders were thereby, that is by the last clause of the first paragraph of s. 325-A, temporarily deprived of remedy against the immoveable property of their judgment-debtor in the district of Ghazipur. We think therefore that in respect of the property as to which they were temporarily deprived of their remedy, the decree-holders are now entitled to execution. But we desire to make it clear that the execution can be in respect only of the property referred to in the last clause of s. 325-A, that is to say, the property as to which their remedy for execution was [386] temporarily withheld. We allow this appeal. We set aside the decree of the lower Court with costs, and we direct that Court to issue a certificate of non-satisfaction if the decree has not been satisfied. The appellants will have their costs in this Court.

* First Appeal, No. 149 of 1897, from a decree of Babu Nilmadhub Rai, Subordinate Judge of Benares, dated the 27th March 1897.

(1) 16 A.W.N. (1896) 69.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 386 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 83.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

HAMID-UD-DIN (Judgment-debtor) v. KEDAR NATH (Decree-holder).^{*}
[22nd April, 1898.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 90—Application for decree over against non-hypothecated property—Balance legally recoverable—Limitation.

On an application under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, the time to be looked at in considering whether the balance sought to be recovered is legally recoverable from the mortgagor is the date of the institution of the suit and not the date of the making of the application under s. 90. Bageshri Dial v. Muhammad Nagui (1) referred to.

[R., 30 A. 388 = 5 A.L.J. 670 = A.W.N. (1903) 161 ; 33 C. 867 (874) = 4 C.L.J. 141 ; 3 A.L.J. 403 ; A.W.N. (1901) 193 ; 19 A.W.N. (1899) 72 ; 6 O.C. 30 (32).]

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 165 of 1896, from an order of Pandit Raj Nath Sahib, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 16th December 1895, reversing a decree of Babu Bhawani Chandar Chakravarti, Munsif of Sambhal, dated the 7th September 1895.

(1) 15 A. 331.

1898
APRIL 21.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 386 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 83.

1898
APRIL 22.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Mr. Amir-ud-din, for the appellant.

Mr. Abdul Majid, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

20 A. 386 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 83.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—This appeal arises out of an application for a decree under s. 90 of Act No. IV of 1882. The judgment-debtor is the appellant before us, and the grounds taken by him are two:—first, that the application was barred by limitation, and secondly, that the matter is res judicata in consequence of the decree passed in the original suit. The suit was one for sale upon a mortgage of the 16th of September 1889. The amount secured by the mortgage was payable on demand, and the mortgage-deed was a registered instrument. The suit for sale was brought on the 29th of January 1891. The plaintiff asked for a decree not only for sale of the mortgaged property, but also against the person and the other property of the mortgagor. The Court of first instance refused to make a decree against the person of the mortgagor and against the other property, and limited its decree to one for sale of the mortgaged property. That decree was affirmed by the Court of first appeal, which held that the claim for a decree against the mortgagor's person and other property was premature. The mortgagee caused the mortgaged property to be sold in execution of the decree obtained by him. The proceeds of the sale having proved insufficient to pay the amount due to him, he made the present application on the 3rd of August 1895 for a decree under s. 90 of Act No. IV of 1882. It is contended that since the Court in the original suit refused to make a decree against the person of the mortgagor and against non-hypothecated property, it is not open to the decree-holder now to ask for such a decree under s. 90. We are unable to accede to this contention. We agree with the observations contained in the judgment of this Court in Musaheb Zaman Khan v. Inayat Ullah (1). In that judgment it was observed:—“In our opinion s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure would not apply to an application under s. 90 for a decree, no matter whether the plaintiff had or had not claimed originally in his suit subsequent relief, or whether, if claimed, such subsequent relief, had been allowed or disallowed by the Court when making the decree under s. 88, the time for adjudicating on the claim for subsequent relief not arriving until the decree under s. 88 had been exhausted.” As regards the second plea, namely, that of limitation, we have to consider whether, under s. 90, the balance which must be legally recoverable should be a balance which might be legally recoverable on the date of the institution of the suit or on the date of the application for a decree under the section. We are clearly of opinion that the former is the date which must be looked to. If we were to hold otherwise, serious injustice might result. The debt might be a debt not barred by limitation and legally recoverable from the mortgagor personally on the date [388] of the institution of the suit, if the mortgagee chose to ask for a decree against his person only. If he sued for sale, the proceedings connected with the sale might be protracted, as they often are, for such a length of time that the mortgagee's personal remedy, if he were to claim such remedy after the sale, would be barred. This certainly could not have been contemplated by the Legislature. Our view is supported by the observations contained in the ruling already quoted, and also by the judgment of our brother Burkitt in Bageshri Dial v. Muhammad Naqi (1). For these reasons we are of opinion that if the balance would have been legally recoverable from the mortgagor otherwise than out of the mortgaged property at the date of the institution of the suit, the mortgagee would be entitled to a decree under s. 90. We have next to consider whether on the 29th of January 1891, when the suit of the decree-holder was brought, the balance now sought to be realized was legally recoverable personally from the mortgagor. The lower appellate Court has found that payments were made of interest as such on the 22nd of June 1884 and the 26th of February 1886. As the period of limitation for a suit personally against the debtor was six years, by reason of the mortgage-deed being registered, these payments save the operation of limitation under s. 20 of the Indian Limitation Act, as the first payment was made within six years of the date of the bond, that being the date on which limitation began to run, and the suit was brought within six years of the date of the second payment. Moreover, the lower appellate Court has found that letters acknowledging liability were written by the debtor on the 13th of September 1885 and the 17th of June 1888; from the dates of those letters also the suit was, with reference to s. 19 of the Limitation Act, within time. For the above reasons we hold that the balance now claimed was legally recoverable, and the lower appellate Court has rightly overruled the objection of the judgment-debtor.

(1) 14 A. 513.

We dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 389 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 84.

[389] REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Dillon.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. CHITTAR AND ANOTHER.* [25th April, 1898.]

Act No. XLV of 1860 (Indian Penal Code), s. 215—Agreeing or consenting to take illegal gratification—Nature of agreement or consent.

In order to constitute the offence punishable under s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code, it is necessary that the person who is willing to take and the person who is willing to give the illegal gratification, must agree not only as to the object for which the gratification is to be given, but also as to the shape or form the gratification is to take.

[R., 1 Cr.L.J. 1116 = 2 L.B.R. 310]

THIS was an application for revision of an order passed by a Deputy Magistrate of the Muzaffarnagar district convicting the petitioners Chittar and Nisar of an offence punishable under s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentencing them each to eighteen months' rigorous imprisonment. The order in question was confirmed on appeal by the Sessions Judge of Meerut on the 14th of March 1898.

It appears that a bullock belonging to one Boli was stolen on the night of the 2nd of January 1898. Boli, who was a resident of the village Bhahisa, took with him certain of the residents of that village and

* Criminal Revision, No. 154 of 1898.

(1) 15 A. 831.

1898
APRIL 22.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 386 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 83.

1898
APRIL 25.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
20 A. 389 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 84.

proceeded to the adjoining village of Harya Khera, of which village Chittar was the headman and Nisar the lambardar. There a panchayat was called at which Chittar and Nisar were both present. At that meeting the petitioners demanded thirty rupees as a reward for returning the bullock. Boli declined to pay this sum, but offered fifteen rupees, which offer was refused by the petitioners, and the negotiation therefore fell through. A few days afterwards another interview took place between the parties, when the demand and offer above indicated were renewed, and with a similar result.

It was argued on these facts that there had been neither an agreement nor consent to take a gratification within the meaning [390] of s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code, nor an attempt to commit the offence defined by that section.

Mr. W. Wallach, for the applicant.

The Government Pleader (Munshi Ram Prasad), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

DILLON, J.—This is an application for revision of an order passed by Pandit Prem Nath, Deputy Magistrate of Muzaffarnagar, convicting the petitioners of an offence under s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentencing them to eighteen months' rigorous imprisonment each, which order was confirmed upon appeal by the Sessions Judge of Saharanpur on the 14th of March 1898.

The facts upon which the conviction was had are as follows:—A bullock belonging to Boli, the complainant in this case, was stolen on the night of the 2nd of January of this year. Boli, who was a resident of Bhahisa, took with him certain of the residents of that village and proceeded to the adjoining village of Harya Khera, of which the petitioner Chittar is the headman and the petitioner Nisar the lambardar. There a panchayat was called, at which the two accused were present. What happened at that meeting of the villagers is deposed to by the witnesses for the prosecution in this case. It is in evidence, and has been found as a fact by both the lower Courts, that the petitioners demanded thirty rupees as a reward for returning the bullock. The complainant declined to pay this sum, but offered fifteen rupees, which offer was refused by the petitioners, and the negotiation therefore fell through. A few days afterwards another interview took place between the parties, when the demand and offer above indicated were renewed, and with a similar result.

It is upon this statement of facts that the question arises whether the petitioners have committed an offence under s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code, or whether they are guilty of an attempt to commit such offence.

The provisions of the section are as follows:—"Whoever takes, or agrees or consents to take, any gratification under [391] pretence or on account of helping any person to recover any moveable property of which he shall have been deprived by any offence punishable under this Code, shall, unless he uses all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended and convicted of the offence, be punished with imprisonment of either description. * * * *"

In the first place, I will consider the question whether the petitioners have committed the offence punishable under this section. Did the petitioners take, or agree or consent to take, any gratification? I think not. To my mind the words "takes, or agrees or consents to take," as used in this section imply that the person taking the gratification and the person giving it have agreed, not only as to the object for which the gratification is to be given, but also as to the shape or form the gratification is to take. Of course, if a person has actually taken a gratification from another, it must be assumed that he agreed to take, and the other to give it in that particular form or shape; but where the gratification has not actually passed and there is a disagreement as to the form or shape that the gratification is to take, the idea of agreement or consent is negatived. In this view, the petitioners neither took nor agreed nor consented to take any gratification, and did not therefore bring themselves within the purview of s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code. It remains to consider whether they are guilty of an attempt to commit the offence mentioned in s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code. In my opinion, an attempt to take a gratification within the meaning of s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code necessarily includes the idea of a concurrence of wills between the giver and taker; with this much superadded thereto, that some act has been done preliminary to the act of taking. In other words, an attempt is a stage in the commission of the offence which is intermediate between the agreement or consent and the actual taking.

Holding, as I do, this view of the law, it follows that in my opinion the petitioners have committed neither the offence made [392] punishable by s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code nor that made punishable by s. 215 read with s. 511 of the Indian Penal Code; and it only remains to add that, acquitting them of the charge on which they have been convicted, I reverse their convictions under s. 215 of the Indian Penal Code and the sentences passed on them thereunder, and as the petitioners are on bail, I direct that their bail bonds be cancelled.

20 A. 392 = 18 A W.N. (1898) 88.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Aikman.

NAND KISHORE LAL (Defendant) v. SURAJ PRASAD (Plaintiff).^{*}
[28th April, 1898.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), ss. 122 and 123—Gift—Registration—Registration of deed of gift of immoveable property after the death of the donor.

A gift of immoveable property duly made by means of a registered deed is not invalid merely because registration of the deed of gift may have taken place after the death of the donor. Hardei v. Ram Lal (1) referred to.

[F., 32 B. 441 = 10 Bom. L.R. 536; Appr., 33 C. 584 = 4 C.L.J. 340 = 10 C.W.N. 717; R., 9 A.L.J. 300 (303) = 14 Ind. Cas. 61 (62).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgments of the Bench.

Mr. Abdul Raoof and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENTS.

BLAIR, J.—The suit out of which this second appeal arises was a suit in which the heir-at-law of Gaya Prasad claimed possession of property ^{*} Second Appeal No. 218 of 1896, from a decree of V. A. Smith, Esq., District Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 4th February 1896, reversing a decree of Pandit Rai Indar Narain, Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 12th November 1895.

(1) 11 A. 319.

1898
APRIL 25.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
20 A. 389 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 84.

1898
APRIL 28.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 392=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 88.

late of Gaya Prasad. The defendant set up a deed executed by Gaya Prasad and alleged to be duly registered, which purported to be a deed of gift transferring to the defendant the property in question. The Court of first instance dismissed the plaintiff's claim, holding the deed of gift to be a valid transfer to the defendant of the property in question. The Court of first appeal reversed the decision of the Court of first instance upon [393] the finding that no good and valid deed of gift had ever been executed by Gaya Prasad and "completed by the donor, who died before it could be registered." That finding disposes of the appeal. The learned Judge did not enter upon the other questions raised in it. The defendant appeals to this Court upon the contention that under the circumstances of the case the deed in question is a good gift in law. The other grounds of appeal were not argued by the appellant's advocate, such arguments in his opinion being unnecessary at this stage. The provisions of the Transfer of Property Act in relation to deeds of gifts are to be found in ss. 122 and 123. S. 122 defines gift, such definition covering all gifts whether of moveable or immoveable property. S. 123 in its first clause deals with instruments by which transfer by way of gift may be made of immoveable property. There is a condition for the validity of every gift laid down in s. 122 that there must be an acceptance by the donee during the lifetime of the donor and while he is still capable of giving. It might have well been provided by the Legislature, had it so intended, that such acceptance could not be effectively given until after the deed of gift had been registered. I find no such provision in that section, and am not inclined to impose restrictions not expressly enacted by law. S. 47 of the Registration Act provides that a registered deed shall operate from the time from which it would have commenced to operate if no registration thereof were required or made, and not from the time of its registration. In this case beyond doubt registration was effected post mortem, and we have the authority of the Full Bench case of Hardei v. Ram Lal (1) that such registration is not open to dispute. The question whether a good and valid acceptance of a gift may be made, in the case of immoveable property, before registration, is not expressly decided in that case, but the effect of the decision apparently was to uphold the deed of gift in the case where the acceptance had been effected previous to registration. The result is that I would set aside the decree of the learned [394] Judge and remand the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure for disposal upon the merits. I would also grant the appellant costs of this appeal.

AIKMAN, J.—I also am of opinion that this appeal must be allowed, and I concur in the order proposed. The plaintiff's suit was to recover possession of the disputed property. This suit was resisted by the defendant on the strength of a deed of gift executed in his favour by Gaya Prasad, the last owner of the property. The Court of first instance found in favour of this deed of gift and dismissed the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge. The first ground set forth in the memorandum of appeal to the lower Court is as follows:—"It is admitted by the lower Court that the deed of gift in dispute was not registered during the life-time of the donor, therefore its registration after the death of the donor is not sufficient to transfer the property." This plea was given effect to by the learned Judge. He says:—"As a matter of fact, there was no deed of gift completed by the donor, who died before it could be registered. The document was subsequently registered by the donor's widow, and respondent contends that this registration completed the gift. It did nothing of the sort. The registration may have been all right under s. 35 of the Registration Act, and the document as being registered is fully admissible in evidence. But registration will not make a gift. The donee cannot accept until the donor has divested himself of his title. The donor can only divest himself of his title by a registered deed, and when the donor in this case died, there was no registered deed in existence." The learned District Judge has by the above decision held that s. 123 of the Transfer of Property Act means that in order to be valid a deed of gift of immoveable property must be registered during the life-time of the donor. In my opinion there is no ground for so holding. The word "registered" is defined in s. 3 of the Transfer of Property Act, and there cannot be any doubt that the deed in question is a registered deed within the meaning of the definition. Section 4 of the same Act also provides that s. 123 [395] shall be read as supplemental to the Indian Registration Act of 1877. There can be no doubt then with reference to these sections that the deed of gift is a "registered instrument." The Legislature might, had it seen fit, have enacted that for the purposes of making a gift of immoveable property, the transfer must be effected by an instrument signed by or on behalf of the donor, attested by at least two witnesses, and registered in the life-time of the donor. But that is not what has been enacted. For the above reasons I am of opinion that the view taken by the District Judge is erroneous.

BY THE COURT.—The Order of the Court is that the appeal is allowed, the decree of the lower appellate Court is set aside, and the case remanded under the provisions of s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure for decision of the other grounds raised in the memorandum of appeal to the lower Court. The appellant will receive his costs of this appeal.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

20 A. 395 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 89.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Aikman.

MUHAMMAD SAFDAR HUSEN (Defendant) v. PURAN CHAND
AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs).^{*} [4th May, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 25—Transfer—Application to High Court after rejection of a similar application by the District Judge—Application disallowed.

Where an application to a District Judge to transfer a suit pending in the Court of the Subordinate Judge to his own file had been granted, the High Court declined to entertain an application for transfer of the same suit from the Court of the District Judge. Farid Ahmad v. Dulari Bibi (1) referred to.

[Expl., 11 C.L.J. 218 (219) = 5 Ind. Cas. 771.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the order of the Court.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Mr. W. K. Porter, for the applicant.
Pandit Moti Lal, for the opposite parties.

^{*} Miscellaneous Application, No. 94 of 1898.

(1) 6 A. 233.

1898

ORDER.

MAY 4.

MISCEL-LANEOUS
CIVIL.20 A. 395 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 89.

AIKMAN, J.—This is an application asking this Court to transfer a civil suit now pending in the Court of the District [396] Judge of Cawnpore to the Court of some native Subordinate Judge. The application is made by the defendant in the suit. A rule was obtained calling upon the plaintiff to show cause why the transfer asked for should not be made. The parties have appeared to-day. I have heard the arguments of counsel on each side and considered the affidavits and counter-affidavits filed by the plaintiffs and the defendant. In my opinion the rule must be discharged. It appears that the suit was instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore on the 27th of March 1897. Owing to the pressure of case work in that Court, the date fixed for the trial of the case was the 2nd of January 1899. On the ground that some of the witnesses who were to be examined were advanced in years, the plaintiffs moved the District Judge to call up the case to his own file in order that it might be taken up at an early date. The District Judge granted this application, and fixed the 30th of March 1898, as the date upon which the case was to be taken up. Before it came on hearing the rule referred to above was obtained. The learned advocate for the plaintiffs in showing cause argued on the strength of the ruling in Farid Ahmad v. Dulari Bibi (1), that this Court ought not to grant the application for transfer, as to do so would be to review an order passed by the District Judge under s. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which in the case cited it was held this Court was incompetent to do. I am of opinion there is force in this contention. I am further of opinion that on the merits, and with reference to the counter-affidavit filed by the plaintiffs, sufficient cause has not been shown for removing the suit from the Court of the District Judge. If the parties think that the District Judge is not sufficiently acquainted with the character in which the disputed signatures are written, it will be open to them to call the evidence of experts. For the above reasons I discharge the rule with costs. Under rule 213 of the Rules of Court of the 18th of January 1898, I fix the advocate's fee at Rs. 64.

Rule discharged.

20 A. 397 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 93

[397] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.

PIRBHU NARAIN SINGH (Decree-holder) v. RUP SINGH
(Judgment-debtor).^{*} [4th May, 1898.]

Execution of decree—Duties of executing Court—Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 88—Decree for sale on a mortgage wrongly allowing interest after date fixed for payment.

Where a decree for sale under the Transfer of Property Act as framed is ambiguous, the Court executing it must put its own construction on it, and if possible will construe it as a decree properly framed according to law; but where ^{*} First Appeal, No. 216 of 1897, from an order of Maulvi Mubammad Mazhar Husain Khan, Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri, dated the 26th June 1897.

(1) 6 A. 233.

there is no ambiguity in the decree, the executing Court is bound to execute it according to its terms, whether the decree be right or wrong. Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (1) and Badshah Begam v. Hardai (2) referred to.

[R., 21 A. 361 (F.B.) ; 17 C.P.L.R. 164 (166).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Babu Parbati Charan Chatterji, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.:—This is an appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri passed in execution of a decree which Maharaja Purbhu Narain Singh had obtained against Raja Rup Singh. The suit in which the decree was passed was a suit upon a mortgage for recovery of a sum of money secured by the mortgage by sale of the property mortgaged. The decree under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act was passed on the 27th of May 1895 and the order absolute under s. 89 of the same Act on the 6th of March 1896. The decree was then sent for execution to the Collector, as the property ordered to be sold was ancestral property. During the course of those proceedings, the judgment-debtor applied to the Subordinate Judge, objecting to the decree being executed for the full amount stated in the order absolute. The point he took was that the decree under s. 88 did not allow interest on the mortgage debt after the 27th of November 1895. The Subordinate Judge, disregarding the order absolute which had been passed on the 6th of March 1896, allowed the objection, and, by order [398] dated the 27th of June 1897, directed that all interest subsequent to the 27th of November 1895 should be disallowed, and ordered the execution clerk to "prepare a correct account" of the money due on the mortgage; that is to say, the Subordinate Judge practically directed the preparation of a new order absolute, notwithstanding that no appeal had been preferred against the order absolute prepared on the 6th of March 1896. In our opinion the latter order absolute is now final and conclusive in the case. It is contended by the respondent's vakil that his client was not properly served with notice of the application on which that order was made, and that he did not come to know of it until notice was served on him under s. 248 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Whether that statement be true or not is immaterial here. If the respondent was unaware of the proceedings taken to have that decree prepared, he might perhaps have applied under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have that order absolute set aside, or he might have asked for a review of judgment, or he might have appealed against it to a higher tribunal. He adopted neither of these courses. That order absolute, as we have said before, is now final and conclusive, and this Court sitting as an execution Court cannot enter into the question as to whether that order absolute, which is the decree in execution before us, was or was not properly prepared. All that this Court as an execution Court can do is to see that that decree is executed as it stands. There can be no doubt that the order absolute does give the decree-holder interest after the 27th of November 1895. On this finding it is almost unnecessary for us to enter into the question as to whether the decree under s. 88 passed on the 27th of May 1895 did or did not give interest after 1898

MAY 4.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

20 A. 397 =

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 93.

(1) 19 A. 174.

(2) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 17.

1898
MAY 4.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 397 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 93.

the 27th of November 1895. On that point, however, we have no doubt. That decree declared that on the date first mentioned Rs. 47,410-4 will be payable to the plaintiff. Of that sum Rs. 40,000 was the principal sum secured by the mortgage, Rs. 5,412 was for interest up to the date of suit as mentioned in the plaint, and the remainder, Rs. 1,998-4 were [399] for costs of the suit. This sum of forty-seven thousand four hundred and odd rupees did not include any interest after the date of the institution of the suit. The decree then goes on to provide for interest between the institution of the suit and the 27th of November 1895, by directing the judgment-debtor to pay Rs. 47,410-4-0 with interest during the pendency of the suit on the 27th of November 1895. It then went on to direct that the defendant should pay future interest at one per cent. per mensem. It does not in so many words say that that interest shall run up to the date of payment, but we have no hesitation in finding that such was the meaning and intention of the decree. Therefore, in our opinion the order absolute passed on the 6th of March 1896 was right in allowing interest subsequent to the 27th of November 1895. It was contended that the Court hearing the suit had no power to award interest after the 27th of November 1895, and in support of that proposition the case of Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (1) was cited. In our opinion that case does not apply here, as explained by one of us in the case of Badshah Begam v. Musammam Hardai (2). If there were any ambiguity in the decree under s. 88 and the execution Court had to construe that ambiguous decree, the execution Court would no doubt be right in assuming that the decree was one strictly within the terms of the law and that it refused post diem interest. Such, however, is not the case here. We are of opinion that the decree under s. 88 clearly and unambiguously allowed interest subsequent to the 27th of November 1895. For the above reasons we are of opinion that the order of the Subordinate Judge must be reversed. We therefore allow this appeal, and, setting aside the order of the Subordinate Judge, we direct that execution shall proceed as heretofore on the order absolute of March 1896, by which interest was allowed after the 27th of November 1895. The appellant will have his costs in this Court.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 400 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 94.

[400] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.

BANDEU PRASAD (Opposite party) v. DHIRAJI KUAR
(Petitioner).^{*} [6th May, 1898.]

Act No VIII of 1890 (Guardian and Wards Act), s. 34—Joint Hindu family—Guardian and minor—Court not competent to appoint a guardian to the property of a minor who is a member of a joint Hindu family.

It is not competent to a Court to appoint a guardian to the property of a minor, when such minor is a member of a joint Hindu family and has no other property

^{*} First Appeal, from Order No. 6 of 1898, from an order of H. D. Griffin, Esq., District Judge of Azamgarh, dated the 20th December 1897.

(1) 19 A. 174.

(2) 18 A. W. N. (1898) 17.

than his share in the joint family estate. Jhabbu Singh v. Ganga Bishen (1) and Gurja v. Moher Singh (2) referred to.

[R., 17 Ind. Cas. 473 (474) = 23 M.L.J. 706 (708) = 12 M.L.T. 585.]

IN this case the District Judge of Azamgarh had appointed one Bandhu Prasad as guardian of the property of a minor relative, Shimbhu Nath. Bandhu Prasad and Shimbhu Nath were members of a joint Hindu family. The mother of Shimbhu Nath applied to the Judge's Court stating that Bandhu Prasad had been dealing with the minor's property adversely to the interests of the minor, and praying that the Court would take steps for the protection of the minor. On this petition the Court after hearing the parties ordered the guardian to find security in Rs. 30,000 under s. 34 of Act No. VIII of 1890, and to pay into Court a sum of Rs. 2,904-7-1 which had come into his hands by sale of some of the minor's property. From this order Bandhu Prasad appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellant.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—The order of the District Judge in this case cannot be supported. When in the application to be appointed guardian it was stated by the intending guardian that he and the intended ward were members of a joint and undivided Hindu family, and that the ward had no property other than his interest in the joint property, it was not competent to the Court to appoint a guardian of the property of the minor, and the application as far as it affected the property should have been rejected. This rule has been laid down in the case of Jhabbu Singh v. Ganga Bishen (1). See also Gurja v. Moher Singh (2) and also certain cases of the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts cited in Jhabbu Singh v. Ganga Bishen. We set aside the order passed relating to the grant of a certificate of guardianship of the property of the minor Shimbhu Nath, and we cancel the certificate in that respect. If the certificate purports to constitute the appellant guardian of the person of the minor we refrain from interfering as to that matter. We allow this appeal.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 401 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 90.

[401] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox, Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

IMDAD HASAN KHAN (Defendant) v. BADRI PRASAD AND ANOTHER
(Plaintiffs).^{*} [6th May, 1898.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 72—Mortgagee compelled to pay Government revenue which should have been paid by the mortgagor—Remedies of the mortgagee.

Where a mortgagee has been compelled to pay Government revenue which should have been paid by the mortgagor, the mortgagee may either add the amount which he has so been made to pay to the amount of the mortgage debt under s. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, or he may sue the mortgagor

^{*} First Appeal, No. 46 of 1896, from a decree of Pandit Raj Nath, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 7th November 1895.

(1) 17 A. 529.

(2) 16 A.W.N. (1896) 30.

1898
MAY 6.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 401 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 90.

separately to recover the amount so paid. If, however, he has sued separately and obtained a decree against his mortgagor, he cannot then add the amount due to the mortgage debt; his two remedies are not concurrent.

[R., 18 Ind. Cas. 80 ; 6 O.C. 26 (27) ; 17 P.W.R. 1908 ; D., 11 M.L.J. 186.]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court. Mr. Abdul Majid, Mr. Roshan Lal and Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellant.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, AG. C. J., and BANERJI, J.—This was a suit for redemption of a mortgage made on the 29th of November, 1871, by one Makhan Singh in favour of Imdad Hasan, defendant, the appellant before us. The mortgage was usufructuary [402] and was redeemable in the month of Chait. The mortgagee, instead of taking actual possession of the mortgaged property, granted a lease of it to the mortgagor on the 20th of December 1871. The rent reserved by the lease was equivalent to the interest payable on the mortgage, being Rs. 371-0-0 calculated at the rate As. 11 per cent. per mensem. Both the deeds were registered on the same date, namely, the 10th of January, 1872. On the 29th of July, 1876, Imdad Hasan, the mortgagee, sub-mortgaged the property to Chaudhri Jagan Singh and Chaudhri Man Singh, and on the 3rd of August, 1876, he executed an agreement in favour of the aforesaid persons undertaking to pay Rs. 540 per annum as interest. Man Singh died, leaving Anup Singh defendant as his heir. Under a private partition between Jagan Singh and Anup Singh the sub-mortgage was allotted to the share of Anup Singh, so that Jagan Singh has no longer any interest in the mortgaged property. In 1878 Makhan Singh sold twelve biswas out of the twenty biswas mortgaged by him to one Irfan Ali. Out of the amount of consideration for the sale-deed executed in favour of Irfan Ali the amount of the mortgage referred to above was left in his hands for payment to Imdad Hasan the mortgagee, but no payment was made by him. Mohan Lal, the father of the present plaintiffs, held several simple mortgages over the same property from Makhan Singh, all of dates subsequent to that of the mortgage of the 29th of November 1871. He obtained a decree upon his mortgages in 1883 against Makhan Singh and Irfan Ali, and in execution thereof he caused the property now in suit to be sold by auction and purchased it himself in 1886 and 1887.

It is by virtue of these purchases that the plaintiffs have brought the present suit for redemption of the mortgage of 1871. By the terms of the lease granted to Makhan Singh by Imdad Hasan the former was to pay the revenue payable to Government. Default having been made in the payment of revenue, Imdad Hasan paid the same, and brought a suit against [403] Makhan Singh and Irfan Ali and obtained a decree on the 24th of December, 1885, for recovery of the amount so paid by sale of the mortgaged village. In execution of that decree he caused a four biswa share to be sold in 1889 and purchased it himself. Subsequently he obtained other decrees against Makhan Singh for arrears of revenue and sought to bring the mortgaged property to sale. Mohan Lal, the father of the plaintiffs, preferred objections to the sale, and those objections prevailed. Thereupon Imdad Hasan brought a suit for possession against Makhan Singh, Irfan Ali and Mohan Lal and obtained a decree for possession on the 11th of December, 1893. In 1894 the plaintiffs brought a suit for redemption of the mortgage of 1871, but that suit was dismissed on the ground that tender of the mortgage money had not been made in accordance with the terms of the mortgage in the month of Chait. The plaintiffs then deposited in Court Rs. 4,500-0-0 the principal amount of the mortgage, and brought the present suit for redemption against Imdad Hasan, the principal mortgagee, and Anup Singh, the sub mortgagee from Imdad Hasan.

The suit was defended on two grounds: first, that the four biswa share which Imdad Hasan had purchased at auction had absolutely passed to him, and that the plaintiffs had no right to claim redemption of that share, and, secondly, that a sum of Rs. 23,340-0-0 was due upon the mortgage, and unless payment of that sum was made the plaintiffs could not redeem. It was alleged that, in addition to the principal amount of the mortgage, Rs. 10,897-3-5 were due on account of revenue payable for the mortgaged village, which the mortgagor had not paid, and which the mortgagee had paid for him, and for which he had obtained decrees against the mortgagor; that a further sum of Rs. 7,942-13-0 was due on account of arrears of interest payable on the mortgage for the years 1289 to 1295 Fasli, the measure of the interest being the amount of profits payable under the lease granted to the mortgagor; and that these [404] two sums together with interest, amounted to the Rs. 23,340 referred to above.

The Court below has decreed the plaintiff's claim. It was of opinion that the Government revenue had all along been paid by Makhan Singh, the mortgagor, and that the mortgagee was not entitled to any amount on account of revenue. As for the profits, it held that there was no charge on the mortgaged property for the profits, and therefore it was not incumbent on the plaintiffs, in order to redeem the mortgage, to pay the arrears of profits that might be due to the mortgagee in his capacity of lessor.

The defendant mortgagee has preferred this appeal, and two questions have been raised on his behalf. First, whether the plaintiffs are entitled to claim redemption of the four biswa share purchased by Imdad Hasan, that is to say, what is the effect of the purchase of that share by Imdad Hasan, and, secondly, whether the mortgagee is entitled as such to the revenue paid and to unpaid profits.

As regards the first point we are of opinion that the contention of the appellant must fail. The principal ground upon which it is urged that it is no longer open to the plaintiffs to claim redemption of the four biswa share is, that in the suit brought by Imdad Hasan in 1893 he claimed proprietary possession of the four biswa share and obtained a decree. It appears, however, from the judgment of the Court in that suit (appellant's second book, page 1) that the question of proprietary right in regard to the four biswas was not determined in that suit. On the contrary, as we read the judgment, the Court abstained from deciding that question. It simply held that Imdad Hasan being the mortgagee of the whole property was entitled to the possession of it, and that it was immaterial whether he had acquired any other rights in regard to any portion of that property. In this view the plaintiffs are not precluded from raising the question whether they are entitled to redeem the four biswa share purchased by Imdad Hasan. It is true that the decree in execution of which that share was sold was a decree which directed the sale of the whole of the mortgaged [405] property, but at the time when that suit was brought the mortgaged property had passed to Mohan Lal, the father of the plaintiffs, by virtue of the auction sales held in 1886 and 1887 at which he purchased the property. He was therefore a necessary party to Imdad Hasan's suit, and, as he was not

1898

MAY 6.

—
APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

—
20 A. 401=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 90.

1898
MAY 6.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 401=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 90.

impleaded in that suit, his right of redemption has not become extinct. Further, the mortgages in satisfaction of which Mohan Lal purchased the property were of dates prior to that of the charge created in favour of Imdad Hasan by the decree obtained by him in 1893, in execution whereof he caused that four biswa share to be sold. On this ground also the plaintiffs have priority over Imdad Hasan, and they are in our opinion entitled to sue for the redemption of the four biswa share referred to above. For these reasons we repel the first contention raised on behalf of the appellant.

The second contention of the appellant relates, as we have said above, to (1) the amount of revenue alleged to have been paid by the mortgagee for the mortgagor, and (2) the amount of profits payable under the lease taken by the mortgagor and not paid by him. Whilst it is urged on the one hand that the mortgage-deed and the lease constitute one mortgage transaction; that the relation between the parties as regards both the instruments is that of mortgagor and mortgagee; that the mortgagee is entitled under s. 72 of Act No. IV of 1882 to add the amount of the revenue paid by him to the principal amount of the mortgage; that the amount of profits payable under the lease is in reality the amount of interest payable under the mortgage, and that redemption cannot be effected without payment of the amounts referred to above; it is contended on the other hand that the lease is a separate transaction by itself; that the rights and obligations arising under it are rights and obligations which exist between a lessee and his lessor, and that the amount which might be due to the mortgagee in this character of lessor cannot be taken into account in the present suit. The determination of the question raised on behalf of the appellant therefore turns upon the construction to be placed on the mortgage-deed and the lease. In [406] considering the nature of the transaction entered into by the parties under those documents what we have to look to is the intention of the parties, whether both the documents were intended to be parts of one and the same transaction or whether one was meant to have no connection with the other. After giving the two documents our best consideration we have come to the conclusion that they form one and the same transaction, namely, a usufructuary mortgage, the condition of that mortgage being the conditions contained in both the deeds. Our reason for arriving at that conclusion is that one of the two deeds cannot be considered apart from the other. In the mortgage-deed reference is made to the lease, and the latter deed refers to the former. In the mortgage-deed mention is made of the payment of interest, but the amount or rate of interest or the mode of payment is not distinctly specified or provided for. All that it says is that the mortgagee has been put into possession in this way that the mortgagor has agreed to pay him lease money under a lease "by fixing the profits at the rate of 11 annas per cent. per mensem," and that at the time of redemption no reduction of interest would be asked for. The lease, however, provides for these matters in detail. It recites first the fact of the mortgage, and then states that the amount of the mortgage, Rs. 4,500, would be paid by four instalments, each payment being endorsed on the deed. Such a statement seems to be out of place in a deed which is a lease pure and simple. The deed next provides that after deduction from the principal of the amounts paid, "profits will be reduced in proportion to the reduction in the principal." It then goes on to say that the total amount payable, calculated at the rate of eleven annas per cent. per mensem, is Rs. 371, which is to be paid to the "mortgagee" (not lessor) "year by year, harvest by harvest, instalment by instalment, within each year," and in "case of default in payment of the profits within the year, at the expiry of an instalment, interest at the rate of one rupee per cent per mensem will be charged."

If the transaction had been one of a lease independent of the mortgage, the rent reserved by the lease would not have been [407] calculated with reference to the amount of the mortgage, and it would not have been made liable to reduction proportionately to the reductions that might take place in that amount. It may, therefore, be reasonably inferred that the lease was only a mode adopted for the payment of interest on the mortgage money. Another circumstance which in our opinion indicates the true nature of the transaction is that the lease is terminable with the mortgage and cannot be surrendered so long as the mortgage subsists. Both the documents were completed on the same day and were presented for registration on the same date, viz., the 10th of January, 1872. The lease, it is true, is of a date subsequent to the date of the mortgage-deed, but the fact that reference is made to the lease in the mortgage-deed shows that the whole matter was arranged and agreed upon at the same time, and the registration of both the documents on the same date shows that they were intended to take effect from the same date. These circumstances to our minds clearly indicate that the mortgage and the lease form one transaction, namely, that of a usufructuary mortgage, the lease providing the manner in which the usufruct was to be taken in lieu of interest. The relation between the parties is therefore that of mortgagor and mortgagee, and any rights and liabilities arising under the lease must be considered as arising out of that relation.

In this view the arrears of lease money due to the mortgagee must be deemed to be arrears of interest. As under the terms of the mortgage the mortgagee is entitled to remain in possession until the principal amount and interest have been realised, he has the right to continue in possession so long as the interest payable to him is in arrear, and the plaintiffs are not entitled to redeem without payment of the arrears. The lease money, qua lease money, was undoubtedly not a charge on the mortgaged property; but, qua interest it is a charge on the property, and the mortgagee is entitled to hold the property as security, not only for his principal mortgage money, but also for interest. We are of opinion that the plaintiffs must pay to the mortgagee the [408] arrears of interest due to him in addition to the principal, and that the Court below has erred in holding the contrary.

The amount of arrears due has in our opinion been calculated upon a wrong basis. The mortgagee-appellant has claimed as arrears Rs. 540 a year, that being the amount which he agreed to pay to his sub-mortgagees. As there was no privity between the mortgagor and the sub-mortgagees, there is none between the latter and the plaintiffs who stand in the shoes of the mortgagor, Makhan Singh. The plaintiffs are therefore liable only to pay the amount which Makhan Singh agreed to pay under the instrument of the 20th of December 1871, namely, Rs. 371 per annum, and, as default was made in the payment of that amount, they are liable to pay interest on the amount in arrear at the rate of one rupee per cent per mensem. It is not denied that the amounts payable for the years mentioned in the statement appended to the written statement of Imdad Hasan (p. 11 of the Paper-book) have not been paid. We hold that the mortgagee Imdad Hasan is entitled to arrears of interest at the rate of Rs. 371 per annum and not at the rate claimed.

1898
MAY 6.

—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

—
20 A. 401 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 90.

1898
MAY 6.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 401=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 90.

As regards the amount of Government revenue alleged to have been paid, the obligation to pay the revenue was, under the terms of the contract embodied in the instrument of the 20th of December 1871, on the mortgagor. If the mortgagor did not pay that amount and the mortgagee had to pay it in order to protect the mortgaged property, he was competent under s. 72 of Act No. IV of 1882 to add the money so paid by him to the principal money. But he was also entitled to sue the mortgagor on his covenant for the amount paid for the mortgagor. He elected to pursue the latter remedy, and what he claims now is the amount of the decrees obtained by him on various dates. We are of opinion that the mortgagee having preferred to seek one remedy is no longer entitled to the remedy given to him by s. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The debt has become merged in the decrees, and is only payable under the decrees. We are unable to agree with the contention of the learned advocate for the [409] appellant that a mortgagee may at the time of redemption exercise the right given to him by s. 72, although he has already sought and obtained another remedy in respect of the same matter, and we have not been referred to any authority which supports this contention. The ruling of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Hewanchal Singh v. Jawahir Singh (1) cited by Mr. Moti Lal, does not, in our opinion, help him. The judgment of their Lordships is very brief, but it seems from the facts of the case that the tender made in that case was held not to be a sufficient tender within the terms of the mortgage-deed, inasmuch as the interest for the second year had not been paid at the close of that year. In our judgment the mortgagee is not entitled to concurrent remedies. Any other conclusion may lead to anomalous results and cause serious injury to the mortgagor. As has happened in this case, the mortgagee may have assigned to strangers the decrees obtained by him against the mortgagors. There would be nothing to preclude the assignees from executing the decrees transferred to them, and, if the mortgagee may add to the principal money the amounts for which he has obtained his decrees, the mortgagors may have to pay the same amount twice over. In our opinion the claim for the revenue alleged to have been paid by the mortgagee and for which he has obtained decrees cannot be sustained, and it is not stated that any other amount is due for which he has not obtained a decree.

The result is that in our judgment the plaintiffs are entitled to obtain a decree for redemption upon payment, not only of the principal mortgage money, but also of arrears of interest for the period claimed by the appellants calculated at the rate of Rs. 371 per annum, together with interest thereon at the rate of one per cent. per mensem from the date of non-payment to the date of the institution of the suit. We vary the decree below to the extent indicated above, and we order the parties to pay and receive costs in this Court and in the Court below in proportion to their failure and success. We fix the 1st of September, 1898, as the date on or [410] before which the amount decreed by us should be paid, and we direct that the said amount be paid into Court. We make the order last mentioned because we deem it unnecessary to determine in this suit which of the two sets of defendants is entitled to the mortgage money. The amount decreed by us should be calculated and entered in the decree of this Court.

Decree modified.

20 A. 410 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 95

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.*UMDA BIBI AND OTHERS (Opposite Parties) v. NAIMA BIBI
(Petitioner).^{*} [10th May, 1898.]Suit in forma pauperis—Review of judgment—Court-fee—Act No. VII of 1870 (Court Fees Act), sch. I, cl. (5)—Civil Procedure Code, s. 410.Held that when an application for review is presented in a suit in forma pauperis, that application, like the plaint in the suit, is not liable to any Court fee.1898
MAY 10.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.20 A. 410 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 95.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, for the appellants.

Mr. Amir-ud-din, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—This is an appeal against an order of the Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur admitting a review of judgment. The plaintiff, respondent here, had sued to recover certain property and had got permission to sue in forma pauperis. Some time afterwards a petition was presented purporting to be on behalf of the plaintiff, and alleging that she and the defendants had compromised the suit on certain terms, and asking that a decree should be drawn up in the terms of the compromise. The Court ordered a decree to be drawn up as prayed. Within three months the plaintiff applied to the Court, substantially, though not formally, for a review of its judgment and of the decree passed on the compromise. In this application the plaintiff alleged that she had been cheated by her own legal adviser in collusion with the defendants; that the compromise as drawn up [411] was not that to which she had agreed, and that she knew nothing of the compromise as presented to the Court. The usual proceedings having been taken, this application for review was admitted, and from the order admitting it the present appeal has been brought. The first contention, which has been most strenuously and ably argued by Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, was that under cl. 5, sch. I of the Court Fees Act the applicant ought to have paid on her application for review of judgment half the Court-fee which would have been leviable on the plaint and that the Court below was wrong in admitting the application until that fee had been paid. As a matter of fact the only fee paid on the application was an eight anna Court-fee. Having heard Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba at great length on this point we are of opinion that the answer to his contention is to be found in s. 410 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That section is one of the sections in the chapter treating of "Suits by paupers." Its provisions are that as soon as an application to sue in forma pauperis has been granted "the application shall be numbered and registered and shall be deemed to be the plaint in the suit, and the suit shall proceed in all other respects as a suit instituted under Chapter V." It then goes to make an exception in favour of a pauper plaintiff by providing that "the plaintiff shall not be liable to any Court-fee (other than fees payable for service of process) in respect of any petition, appointment of a pleader or ^{*} First Appeal, from Order No. 22 of 1898, from an order of Maulvi Syed Jafar Husain Khan, Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 31st January 1898.

1898
MAY 10.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 410 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 95.

other proceeding connected with the suit." Now the word "suit" undoubtedly means the suit instituted on permission to sue as a pauper being given. That suit is then to proceed as an ordinary suit under the Act. One of the incidents of such a suit is that a party aggrieved by a decree or order in that suit may under certain circumstances present an application for review. The presentation of such an application is in our opinion a "proceeding connected with the suit," such as is contemplated by the final words of s. 410. We think then that when an application for review is presented in the course of the proceedings in a suit in forma pauperis, that application, like the plaint in the [412] suit, is not liable to any Court-fee. To hold otherwise might, in our opinion, be productive of great injustice and hardship. For instance, in the present case the pauper plaintiff in order to get her application for a review of judgment admitted would have to pay something, like Rs. 2,500 in Court fees, while her plaint is not liable to any Court fee. The second matter which was argued for the appellants in this case was that the order admitting the application for review was in contravention of the provisions of s. 626 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The only provision of s. 626 on which the learned vakil relied was the second, and as to that it is sufficient to say that he has failed to show anything which would have brought the case within that provision. For the above reasons we dismiss this appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 412 (P.C.) = 2 C.W.N. 550 = 25 I.A. 146 = 7 Sar. P.C.J. 380.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT :

Lords Watson, Hobhouse and Davey, and Sir R. Couch.
[On appeal from the District Court of Farrukhabad.]

SAADATMAND KHAN (Appellant) v. PHUL KUAR (Respondent).
[20th April and 3rd May, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 287—Misrepresentation of value in the proclamation of intended judicial sale—Substantial injury within s. 311.

The value of property of which the sale has been ordered in execution of a decree, when stated in the proclamation of the intended sale, is a material fact within sub-s. (e) of s. 287 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

An under-statement of the value of the property having been made in such a proclamation, which was calculated to mislead bidders, and to prevent them from offering adequate prices, or from bidding at all, and the sale having resulted in a price altogether inadequate.—Held, that such misstatement was a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale, although there might be no rule requiring publication of the value in that proclamation; and that the special remedy, provided in s. 311, was applicable, as substantial injury had resulted.

[F., 30 C. 1; 23 M. 568; 6 C.W.N. 836; 13 C.L.J. 192 = 9 Ind. Cas. 698 (700); 14 C.L.J. 346 = 16 C.W.N. 704 (709) = 11 Ind. Cas. 438; 16 C.L.J. 98 = 16 Ind. Cas. 974 (975); Rel., 14 C.L.J. 541 (548) = 13 Ind. Cas. 337 (341); 15 C.W.N. 577 (578) = 10 Ind. Cas. 475 (476); R., 32 C. 543 (549) = 9 C.W.N. 487; 13 C.L.J. 312 (316) = 6 Ind. Cas. 135; 14 C.L.J. 35 = 16 C.W.N. 124 (126) = 10 Ind. Cas. 371 (372); 6 C.W.N. 48 (56); 8 C.W.N. 257 (262); 6 O.C. 61 (65, 66); 11 P.L.R. 1907 = 132 P.R. 1906; D., 26 C. 324; 31 C. 922 = 8 C.W.N. 264; 1 Ind. Cas. 246.]

APPEAL from an order (30th January 1892) of the District Judge of Farrukhabad reversing an order (13th July 1891) of the Munsif of Kaimganj.

[413] The appellant was the auction-purchaser of property sold on the 20th April 1891 in execution of a decree, dated the 8th April 1890, held by one Chunni Lal against Musammatt Phul Kuar, the present respondent, in whose hands the property, which was land, had been attached; she being the heiress, and representative in estate, of her husband, deceased in 1888.

Her petition, dated the 16th May 1891, was rejected by the Munsif, but the District Judge, Mr. R. S. Aikman, reversed that order, and set aside the sale under s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground that the proclamation of intended sale, issued under s. 287, had so much misrepresented the actual value of the property that substantial injury to the petitioner had resulted. The District Judge's order was not appealable to the High Court, under s. 588 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The petition alleged irregularity in the auction sale, whereby property worth Rs. 10,000 was sold for Rs. 670; that ancestral land had been sold as not ancestral; that notices had not been properly placed and that the petitioner had no knowledge of the execution proceedings. Chunni Lal, the decree-holder, was named as objector and served, but did not appear. The other objector, Saadatmand Khan, the present appellant, denied the alleged irregularities, and the statements in the petition generally.

Among the Munsif's reasons for disallowing the petition, he was of opinion that, although the Rs. 800 stated in the sale proclamation as the value of the property was incorrectly stated, and the real value was much greater, still it was not by law obligatory that any entry of value should have been made at all. The fact of a wrong value having been mentioned in the schedule was not, in his judgment, a material irregularity upon which the sale should be set aside.

The District Judge's finding was as follows:—

"This is an appeal under the provisions of s. 588, clause (16), Civil Procedure Code, against an order of the [414] Munsif of Kaimganj refusing to set aside a sale of immoveable property.

"It is proved and admitted that an estate belonging to the appellant, a wealthy par-da-nashin lady, was sold in execution of a decree for Rs. 652-3-9; that the value of the estate is not less than Rs. 8,000 or Rs. 9,000, and that notwithstanding this, and the fact it has no incumbrances on it, it was sold by auction to a mukhtar practising in the Collector's Court for Rs. 670, or less than one-twelfth of its value.

"The first ground of the appeal is that all the proceedings were taken behind the back of the appellant, the judgment-debtor. The decree-holder, at whose instance the property was sold, does not appear to defend. It is argued on behalf of the auction-purchaser that the mere fact of a decree having been passed is sufficient notice to her. I cannot assent to this contention. Rule V, paragraph 9, of the Civil Rules and Orders, if properly carried out, secures that due notice of an impending sale shall be given to the judgment-debtor. In this case due notice was not given; all that was done was to affix a notice to the wall of the house of the judgment-debtor's deceased husband." After adverting to the evidence that the petitioner was not there at the time, and intimating that the Court below ought not to have accepted the imperfect mode of service reported by the peon, the District Judge continued:—

"It is pointed out, in the next place, that the decree-holder in his affidavit put down the value of the property at Rs. 800, i.e., about one-tenth of the real value, and that this was the value notified in the sale-proclamation. This, I must hold, was a gross misrepresentation on the

1898

MAY 3.

—

PRIVY

COUNCIL.

20 A. 412

(P.C.) = 2

C.W.N. 550-

25 I.A. 146-

7 Sar. P.C.

380.

1898
MAY 3.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
20 A. 412
(P.C.)=2
C.W.N. 550=
25 I.A. 146=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
380.

"part of the decree-holder. The last clause of s. 245 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that in the case of a decree for money, the 'value of the property attached shall, as nearly as may be correspond with the amount for which the decree has been made.' I have found that Subordinate Courts appear to be under the [415] impression that the inquiry prescribed by Rule VI, page 9. Civil Rules and Orders, should be confined to finding out whether the property proposed to be sold is ancestral or not. But this is a mistake. The inquiry should be for the purpose of ascertaining the particulars specified in s. 287 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Amongst the heads which, according to s. 287, should be specified in the sale-proclamation 'as fairly and accurately as possible' is 'every other thing which the Court considers material for the purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property.' Had the inquiry held by the Munsif under Rule VI been worthy of the name, I think he could not fail to have been struck by the very peculiar circumstance that whilst the annual land revenue of the property was put down at Rs. 543-10-6, its estimated value was entered as only Rs. 800. The utter absence of proportion between the amount of Government revenue and the estimated value entered in the sale-proclamation would of itself be enough to deter intending purchasers, and induce them to think that there was something wrong with the title." On this, the sale was set aside.

On an application to the District Judge for a certificate under s. 598 of the Code of Civil Procedure he referred to the judgment of the Full Bench of the High Court in Azim-ul-din v. Baldeo (1), and decided that the above order was final within s. 595.

Mr. R. C. Saunders, for the appellant, argued that the grounds on which the District Judge had reversed the order of the first Court were insufficient. Saadatmand Khan was a purchaser, for all that appeared, in good faith, and for value, who had been no party to any misrepresentation. He was in no way responsible for what was stated in the decree-holder's affidavit as to the value of the property, that having been the cause of the subsequent official statement, which was entered [416] in the column of particulars as to the nature and value of the property in the schedule attached to the sale-proclamation. Whatever irregularity there might have been in the understatement of value, there was no direct evidence that, in consequence of that error in the statement, the property was sold for an inadequate price. Accordingly, there was no sufficient evidence of the "substantial injury" of which s. 311 required proof as occasioned by the irregularity. The sale, therefore, should not, under the circumstances, have been set aside.

Mr. H. Cowell, for the respondent, was not called upon.

On the 3rd May their Lordships' judgment was delivered by LORD HOBHOUSE.

JUDGMENT.

The respondent is the proprietor of an estate in the mauza of Jira Rahimpur in Farrukhabad. In April 1890 one Pati Ram obtained a decree for the sum of Rs. 565-9 against her and another as heirs of a recently deceased owner who was Pati Ram's debtor. This decree was transferred to Chunni Lal. On the 10th December in the same year Chunni Lal applied for the attachment and sale of the property. It was put up for sale on the 20th April 1891, and was bought by the appellant for the sum of Rs. 670. The property is valued at eight or nine thousand rupees.

(1) 3 A. 554.

In May 1891, within the time allowed by law, the appellant filed a petition in the Court of the Munsif of Kaimganj for the purpose of setting aside the sale under s. 311 of the Code. The Munsif held that, notwithstanding the inadequacy of price, there had been no irregularity within that section which justified him in setting the sale aside, and accordingly he dismissed the petition. On appeal the District Judge took a contrary view and decreed that the sale should be set aside. That is the decree appealed from.

The respondent alleged several irregularities in the execution proceedings, as to the existence or the effect of which the two Courts took opposite views. Their Lordships do not [417] think it necessary to mention more than one ground for impeaching the sale. It is indeed something more than the kind of irregularity which is commonly alleged, for it is a mis-statement of the value of the property which is so glaring in amount that it can hardly have been made in good faith, and which, however it came to be made, was calculated to mislead possible bidders, and to prevent them from offering adequate prices, or from bidding at all.

Section 287 of the Code orders that the Court shall cause a proclamation of the intended sale to be made. The proclamation is to specify "as fairly and accurately as possible" several enumerated particulars; and, finally, "every other thing which the Court considers it material for the purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property."

The proclamation in this case appears to have followed an affidavit of Chunni Lal, the decree-holder, in which he stated that the property is valued at about Rs. 800. It states, among other things, that the sale is for the recovery of Rs. 652-3-9 and interest, and that the particulars specified in the schedule are filled in to the best of the knowledge of the Court. The schedule contains several columns. One shows that the jama of the property is Rs. 543-10. Another is headed, according to the English translation,— "Other particulars, whatever ascertained regarding the nature and value of the property," and it contains the figures Rs. 800. This means that the value of the property to sell was estimated by the Court at Rs. 800.

The Munsif considered that this misrepresentation of value was not a material irregularity for which a sale could be set aside. His reason was, that no rule required that the value of the property should be mentioned in the proclamation; and that as the entry was uncalled for and not legally obligatory, to give a wrong value is no reason for setting aside a sale.

[418] This is a very mistaken view. It is true, as before observed, that the mis-statement is something more grave than an ordinary irregularity of procedure, but the fact that it is so, and that it was made gratuitously by the decree-holder and the Court, does not prevent it from being "a material irregularity in publishing or conducting" the sale, such as to bring the case within the special remedy provided by s. 311. Whatever material fact is stated in the proclamation (and the value of the property is a very material fact) must be considered as one of those things "which the Court considers material for the purchaser to know," and it is enacted in terms (though express enactment is hardly necessary for such an object), that those things shall be stated as fairly and accurately as possible. It

1898
MAY 3.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

20 A. 412
(P.C.) = 2
C.W.N. 550 =
25 I.A. 146 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
380.

1898
MAY 3.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
20 A. 412
(P.C.) = 2
C.W.N. 550 =
25 I.A. 146 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
380.

must have been possible to state the value of this property with very much greater approach to fairness and accuracy than was done in the proclamation. The learned District Judge holds that there was a gross misrepresentation on the part of the decree-holder, and he intimates his opinion that the Court ought to have seen from the amount of the jama that the value could not be as stated. Certainly it seems that there must have been blameable carelessness on the part of whatever officer was responsible for the terms of the proclamation.

The learned District Judge points out two circumstances calculated to enhance the amount of injury done to the debtor by such a mis-statement. One is, that s. 245 of the Code orders that the value of the property attached "shall, as nearly as may be, correspond with the amount for which the decree has been made;" so that an intending purchaser would readily accept the assurance of the Court that an estate attached for Rs. 565 was worth no more than Rs. 800. Another is, that the disproportion between the jama and the total value was calculated to excite suspicion of something wrong with the title, and so to deter biddings. Their Lordships have to express entire agreement with the learned District [419] Judge, and they humbly advise Her Majesty to dismiss the appeal. The appellant must pay the costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitor for the appellant: Mr. H. Percy Becher.

Solicitors for the respondent: Messrs. Ranken, Ford, Ford and Chester.

20 A. 419 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 94.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.

NARAIN DAS AND ANOTHER (Defendants) v. RAM SARAN DAS
(Plaintiff).^{*} [10th May, 1898.]

Pre-emption--Wajib-ul-arz--Co-sharers in the Khalisa Mahal distinguished from owners of separate plots of muafi lands in the mahal.

The co-sharers in a mahal and the owners of separate plots of muafi land included in the area of the mahal have as a rule no connection with one another, and it by no means follows that the custom adopted by or existing among the members of the khalisa co-parcenary body would be applicable to the owners of the muafi plots. Strict evidence is always necessary to prove that the same custom is applicable to each. Kalyan Mal v. Madan Mohan (1) referred to.

[F., 22 A.W.N. (1902) 69; A.W.N. (1904) 118; 6 Ind. Cts. 167 (168); R., A.W.N. (1907) 173 = 4 A.L.J. 665; D., 3 O.C. 110 (114).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellants.

Munshi Ram Prasad and Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—This is an appeal in a suit for pre-emption. The suit was brought by a share-holder in one of several ^{*} First Appeal, No. 15 of 1898, from an order of H. G. Pearse, Esq., District Judge of Meerut, dated the 4th February 1898.

resumed muafi plots situate in mauza Haper to pre-empt a sale of a portion of the same plot. The suit was resisted on the ground that no custom of pre-emption has been established in respect of the muafi plots. That view was accepted by the Court of first instance, which dismissed [420] the suit. The District Judge, however, on appeal held that the custom was established, and remanded the suit under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Hence the present appeal. In addition to the large co-parcenary body of the village divided among themselves into five patts, there are several plots or scraps of confiscated muafi lands, that is, lands which formerly were held revenue-free, but in modern times have been resumed and the plots included for revenue purposes in the mahal within whose area they are situated. The arrangement usual in such cases is that the revenue of the resumed muafi is paid through the lambardar of the khalisa mahal within which it is situated, but the co-sharers of the mahal and the owners of the muafi plots, whether they be called co-sharers or not, have as a rule no connection whatever with one another, and it by no means follows that the custom adopted by or existing among the members of the khalisa co-parcenary body would be applicable to the owners of the muafi plots. Strict evidence is always necessary to prove that the same custom is applicable to each. Here it is contended that the custom as to pre-emption set forth in the wajib-ul-arz of the khalisa mahal applies to the muafi plots. In that matter we are unable to agree with the decision of the Court below. We are unable to see anywhere in the wajib-ul-arz any provision which renders its rule as to pre-emption applicable to the muafi. Some arguments were founded on the second clause of the wajib-ul-arz in which the owners of the muafi and khalisa were spoken of as "co-sharers." That argument is unsound. The clause in question simply provides in a business-like way for the object intended by it, namely, the arrangement of the manner in which the Government revenue was to be paid by the co-sharers of the village and by the maufidars. If it had been intended that the custom or the contract of pre-emption should apply to maufidars, nothing could have been easier than to add a few words to the wajib-ul-arz. Nothing of the kind has been done. We are left to [421] formulate a custom by implication from various unconnected clauses of the wajib-ul-arz. We cannot find any provision in the wajib-ul-arz for the existence of the custom of pre-emption in the muafi lands. The case of Kalyan Mal v. Madan Mohan (1) was referred to in argument. Strictly speaking that case is the converse of the case before us. It was a case in which a co-sharer in the khalisa mahal sought to pre-empt land in the muafi, and it was held that the wajib-ul-arz of the khalisa mahal did not effect the muafi. We allow this appeal. We set aside the decision of the District Judge with costs; we dismiss the plaintiff's appeal to the District Judge, and we restore the decree of the Court of first instance.

Appeal decreed.

1898
MAY 10.

APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

20 A. 419-
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 94.

(1) 17 A. 447.

20 A. 421=18 A.W.N. (1898) 98.

1898
MAY 11.APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Aikman.ABDUL RASHID (Plaintiff) v. GAPPO LAL (Defendant).^{}
[11th May, 1898.]20 A. 421=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 98.Civil Procedure Code, s. 276—Alienation of attached property—Alienation valid so long as it does not interfere with any claim enforceable under a subsisting attachment.

The alienation which s. 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure is intended to prevent is an alienation which, if permitted, would defeat claims legally enforceable under the decree in execution of which the property alienated has been attached. Where a private alienation of attached property is made under such circumstances that it in no way interferes with the rights secured by his decree to the attaching decree-holder, s. 276 is no bar to such alienation. Narain Das v. Sheoambar Ahir (1) and Anand Loll Doss v. Jullodhur Shaw (2) referred to.

THE plaintiff in the suit out of which this appeal arises held a mortgage, dated the 21st of March 1889, over a 7 anna share out of the mortgagor's aggregate interest of 10 annas 8 pies in a certain village. The defendant held a mortgage of an earlier date on a 4 anna share out of the same 10 annas 8 [422] pies. The defendant obtained a decree on his mortgage on the 12th of May 1885, for sale of the 4 anna share mortgaged to him. On the 22nd of April he caused to be attached under this decree, not merely the 4 anna share mortgaged to him but the whole 10 anna 8 pie share of the mortgagor. After this attachment, but before any effective means were taken to execute the decree, the plaintiff's mortgage was executed. On the 6th of May 1892, the plaintiff applied to the Court executing the defendant's decree to notify the incumbrance created by the plaintiff's mortgage; such notification was ordered, and with such notification the whole of the mortgagor's interest, 10 annas and 8 pies, was sold in execution of the defendant's decree and bought by the defendant himself. The plaintiff then sued to enforce his mortgage of the 21st of March 1889 in respect of the portion of the mortgagor's interest not covered by the defendant's mortgage. The defendant objected that the effect of s. 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure was to make the plaintiff's mortgage null and void.

The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur) found that, inasmuch as the money borrowed on the plaintiff's mortgage had been used to pay off a third mortgage prior to that held by the defendant, the plaintiff was entitled to use that mortgage as a shield, and it accordingly decreed the plaintiff's claim in part.

The defendant appealed. The lower appellate Court (District Judge of Gorakhpur) held that it had not been proved that the money borrowed on the mortgage to the plaintiff had in fact been applied to the satisfaction of a third prior mortgage as alleged, and, reversing the decree of the Court of first instance, dismissed the plaintiff's suit. The plaintiff thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the appellant.

Munshi Ram Prasad, for the respondent.

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 219 of 1896, from a decree of V. A. Smith, Esq., District Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 19th December 1895, reversing a decree of Maulvi Ahmad Ali Khan, Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 26th June 1895.

(1) 17 A.W.N. (1897) 37.

(2) 14 M.I.A. 543.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR, J.—This second appeal arises out of a suit for sale based on a mortgage, dated the 21st of March 1889. The [423] mortgagor was possessed of a 10 anna 8 pie share of the mortgaged property. The plaintiff's mortgage was for a 7 anna share out of what was the mortgagor's aggregate interest. An earlier mortgage had been effected upon a 4 anna share of this whole property, and the prior mortgagee, one Gappo Lal, defendant in this suit and respondent here, got his decree for sale on his mortgage on the 12th of May 1885. The decree was in terms limited to the 4 anna share. On the 22nd of April 1886, an attachment under this decree was effected, not of the 4 anna share which formed the subject of the decree, but of the 10 anna 8 pie share, which is the entire holding of the mortgagor. After this attachment and before any effective means were taken to execute the decree, the plaintiff's mortgage was executed. That was the present mortgage on the 7 anna share, so that the interest affected by the two mortgages was a greater interest than the mortgagor possessed. The present plaintiff has disposed of all difficulty on that score, by asking for sale only of what remains of the mortgagor's interest over and above the 4 anna share mortgaged to Gappo Lal. On the 6th of May 1892, the plaintiff, appellant here, applied to the Court executing Gappo Lal's decree to notify the incumbrance created by the mortgage of the 21st of March 1889; and such notification was ordered, and with such notification the whole of the mortgagor's interest, 10 annas and 8 pies, was sold in execution of Gappo Lal's decree, to Gappo Lal himself. The plaintiff now claims to enforce the mortgage of the 21st of March 1889. He is met by the contention that s. 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure makes his mortgage null and void. That section was originally framed so as to make a mortgage effected upon attached property absolutely void. But in the Act now in force are appended the material words which seem to us unquestionably words of limitation. They are:—"shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment." We are entirely unable to see that any claim could be enforceable under the attachment which was not a legal claim. This matter [424] has been before one member of this Bench, and it has been adjudicated upon in the case of Narain Das v. Sheoambar Ahir (1). That the interpretation put upon those words is the correct interpretation, this Bench has no doubt whatever. The object of the section thus guarded and limited, was to secure that no private alienation subsequent to attachment should take effect to obstruct the legal claim of the decree-holder in whose interest and at whose instance the attachment had been made. The plaintiff at the hearing in the Court of first instance put forward a further contention which upon a finding of fact has failed. He contended that his mortgage of 1889 was effected to pay off incumbrances prior in date to that of the defendant in this suit. He failed to establish that such prior incumbrances were in fact paid off by his mortgage. He has therefore to depend solely upon the construction to be put on s. 276. In our opinion the mortgage of 1889 in no way stands in the way of the execution of Gappo Lal's decree to the extent of his legal claim. Indeed, the possession of Gappo Lal seems to us one which upon no ground of equity could be maintained. He bought subject to a notification of lien, and we cannot doubt that the existence of that lien limited the price he paid for the property. He now proposes to retain what he purchased as 1898

MAY 11.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 421 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 98.

(1) 17 A. W. N. (1897) 37.

1898
MAY 11.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 421=
18 A.W.N.
1898) 98.

an incumbered property, and at the price of an incumbered property, as property wholly and entirely unincumbered.

I would allow this appeal, setting aside the decree of the lower appellate Court with costs, and restore the decree of the Court of first instance, and would give the appellant his costs of this appeal.

AIKMAN, J.—I am of the same opinion, and concur in the order proposed. Even when the law stood as it did when Act No. VIII of 1859 was in force, in which Act the section which corresponds to s. 276 of the present Code of Civil Procedure, did not contain the concluding words now to be [425] found in the section "as against all claims enforceable under the attachment," it was held—vide Anund Loll Doss v. Jullodhur Shaw (1)—that the object was to make the sale null and void, so far as it might be necessary to secure the execution of the decree. In my opinion the words "enforceable under the attachment," in s. 276, must be read as meaning legally enforceable under the attachment; and to see what was legally enforceable under the attachment we must have recourse to the decree. So long as the decree-holder gets what was decreed to him he has got no ground for complaint. No private alienation made during the continuance of the attachment can be allowed to defeat the decree-holder's right, but if those rights are not affected by the alienation there is in my view no bar to any private alienation.

The respondent Gapoo Lal had by his decree an indefeasible right to have a 4 anna share of his mortgagor's property sold in execution of his decree, but he had no right to restrain his judgment-debtor from alienating any property, other than that referred to in the decree, so long as the alienation did not prejudice any rights which had been decreed to him.

For these reasons I am of opinion that the appeal must be allowed.

BY THE COURT.—The order of the Court is, that the appeal is allowed, the decree of the lower Court set aside with costs, and the order of the Court of first instance restored. The appellant will have his costs of this appeal.

The time for payment of the mortgage money is extended to the 11th of November 1898.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 426 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 102.

[426] REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Dillon.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. TIRBENI SAHAI.* [11th May, 1898.]

Criminal Procedure Code, s. 342—Evidence—Accused persons under trial separately for a substantive offence and for abetment of that offence competent witnesses on each other's behalf.

Prisoner A was tried for an offence under s. 403 of the Indian Penal Code and was convicted, but was sent to a Magistrate of higher powers than the convicting Magistrate to be sentenced. Whilst his case was pending before the second Magistrate, prisoner B, being on his trial separately for abetment of the offence for which A had been tried, applied for A to be summoned as a witness on his behalf. B's application was refused. Held, that s. 342 of the Code of Criminal

* Criminal Revision No. 216 of 1898.

(1) 14 M. I. A. 543 (549).

Procedure was no bar under the circumstances to A's giving evidence for B, and that B's application ought to have been granted.

[R., 33 C. 1353 = 4 Cr. L.J. 145 = 10 C.W.N. 962.]

1898
MAY 11.

REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.

20 A. 426 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 102.

ONE Ram Narain picked up a currency note for Rs. 100, which had been dropped by a person on his way from the Currency Office, and in the presence, and, as was found by the Court, with the assistance of one Tirbeni Sahai, got the note cashed and appropriated the proceeds. Ram Narain was tried for an offence punishable under s. 403 of the Indian Penal Code and convicted, but the trying Magistrate having only third class powers, sent the case, under the provisions of s. 349 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, to the Cantonment Magistrate. While Ram Narain's case was pending before the Cantonment Magistrate Tirbeni Sahai was put upon his trial before the same Magistrate who tried Ram Narain for an offence punishable under s. 403 read with s. 109 of the Indian Penal Code. In the course of his trial he applied to have Ram Narain summoned as a witness on his behalf. The Magistrate, however, declined to summon Ram Narain, being of opinion that he was debarred from so doing by s. 342 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Tirbeni Sahai was convicted and sentenced. He applied in revision to the High Court—his appeal to the Sessions Judge having been dismissed [427] on the main ground that the Magistrate was wrong in refusing his application to summon Ram Narain as a witness.

Mr. Roshan Lal, for the applicant.

The Government Pleader (Munshi Ram Prasad), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

DILLON, J.—This is an application for revision of an order passed by the Cantonment Magistrate of Allahabad, convicting the petitioner of an offence under s. 403 read with s. 109 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentencing him to three months' rigorous imprisonment. The conviction and sentence were affirmed by the Sessions Judge on appeal. Amongst other points taken on behalf of the petitioner, there is one which refers to the procedure of the Magistrate in refusing to summon and examine as a witness on behalf of the petitioner one Ram Narain, who had been convicted of the substantive offence under s. 403 of the Indian Penal Code by a third class Magistrate of Allahabad, but whose case had been referred by the said Magistrate for a severer sentence under s. 349 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Ram Narain's case was pending before the Cantonment Magistrate under s. 349 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, at the time the application to summon him as a witness was made, and therefore, it cannot be said that his trial was concluded. At the same time he had not been jointly indicted with the petitioner, nor was the offence of which he had been convicted the same offence as that with which the petitioner was charged. Under these circumstances I do not think that the prohibition contained in the last clause of s. 342 of the Code of Criminal Procedure applies. On a careful perusal of that section it will be apparent that the examination of the accused person for which that section provides, is an examination touching the matter on which he is being tried, and the inference is therefore obvious that the prohibition contained in the last clause of s. 342 applies to the examination referred to in that section, and does not apply to an examination in another case in which the person who is being examined is not himself an accused person. [428] If the Magistrate's view were correct, it would follow that no man 1898

MAY 11.

—

REVI-SIONAL

CRIMINAL.

20 A. 426 =

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 102.

while he stood charged with a criminal offence could possibly be examined as a witness in any criminal trial whatever. I do not think that the Legislature intended this. In this view of the case I hold that the petitioner was entitled to have Ram Narain summoned and examined as a witness, and that he has been prejudiced by the Magistrate's refusal to summon and examine the said Ram Narain. Under these circumstances, I set aside the conviction and sentence had before the Cantonment Magistrate of Allahabad, and direct that the petitioner's case be restored to his file, and that he take it up at that stage when he called on the accused for his defence, and that then with reference to the above remarks he proceed according to law.

20 A. 428 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 96.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.

ONKAR SINGH AND ANOTHER (Judgment-debtor) v. MOHAN
KUAR (Decree-holder).^{*} [12th May, 1898.]

Execution of decree—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 320, 322-A—Decree transferred for execution to Collector—Collector not authorized to hear objections to execution of decree so transferred.

Held that where a decree for money has been transferred for execution to the Collector under the provisions of s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Collector is not authorized under s. 322-A to hear any objection by the parties interested in the property advertised for sale to the sale of that property, nor is it any part of the Collector's duty to decide whether the property has or has not been properly attached.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellants.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—This is a case of an execution of a decree for money. The original judgment-debtor died since the decree, and his sons have been brought on the record as his [429] representatives. During the course of the execution proceedings the sons, on the 29th of May, 1897, raised an objection to the execution to the effect inter alia, that the property had not been properly attached during the lifetime of their father, the original judgment-debtor. A date was fixed for hearing that objection, but neither the representatives of the judgment-debtor nor the execution creditor appeared. No steps whatever were taken to hear and decide the objections, and they were struck off. Shortly afterwards, the property being ancestral, the case was transferred to the Collector for execution under the rules framed in pursuance of s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The execution application was struck off the file of the Subordinate Judge on the 9th of July, 1897. On the 20th of the same month the representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor again raised the same objection before the Subordinate Judge to the execution of the decree. On these objections the Subordinate Judge recorded an order to the effect that the case had been transferred for execution to the Collector, and that the Collector would issue a notice under s. 322-A and that thereupon any person who had any objection to take in respect of the property advertised for sale could take that objection. Now in making this order the Subordinate Judge was wrong throughout, and it is so admitted by the learned advocate who appears for the decree-holder respondent. The Collector under s. 322-A is not authorized to hear any objection, by parties interested in the property advertised for sale, to the sale of that property. When a money decree is transferred to the Collector for execution by sale of certain property, that property is usually attached before the decree is sent to the Collector, and the Collector may then, under s. 322-A, call on all persons holding money claims against the judgment-debtor to come in and prove their claims, so as to enable the Collector to make arrangements to avoid if possible the sale of the attached property. It is no part of the Collector's duty under s. 322-A to decide whether the property has or has not been properly attached. That is the duty of the Court to which the application for execution is made and [430] which transmits the decree to the Collector. But the learned advocate for the decree-holder attempted to support the order of the Subordinate Judge on another ground referring to the proceedings taken on the objection of the 29th of May, 1897. His contention was that the representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor having taken their objection and having failed to prosecute it could not be further heard on the same ground. In our opinion this contention is not sound and is disposed of under the ruling in the case of Dhonkal Singh v. Phakkar Singh (1), in which it was distinctly laid down that where an application for execution has been simply struck off without any order adverse to the right on the merits, that application might be renewed again and again till judicially decided adversely to the applicant. The same principle applies to an objection raised by a judgment-debtor to the execution of the decree. We do not think that the fact that between the application of the 29th of May, 1897, and the 20th of July, 1897, execution was transferred to the Collector is in any way material here. We allow this appeal. We set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge, and we direct him now to take up and judicially determine the objections taken by the representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor on the 20th of July, 1897. The appellants are entitled to their costs.

^{*} First Appeal No. 265 of 1897, from an order of Syed Muhammad Siraj-ud-din, Subordinate Judge of Agra, dated the 28th August 1897.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 430 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 100.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.

PHUL CHAND (Decree-holder) v. SHANKAR SARUP AND OTHERS
(Judgment-debtors).^{*} [13th May, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 583—Restitution of benefit obtained under a decree subsequently reversed on appeal—Interest allowable on amount so recovered.

Where, in consequence of a decree having been reversed on appeal, the decree-holder is entitled to recover under s. 583 of the Code of Civil Procedure, any sum ^{*} First Appeal No. 1 of 1898, from an order of Pandit Rai Indar Narain, Subordinate Judge of Meerut, dated the 25th September 1897.

(1) 15 A. 84.

1898
MAY 12.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 428 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 96.

1898

MAY 13.

—
APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

which before such decree was reversed he had been obliged [431] to pay in execution of that decree, such decree-holder is entitled also to receive interest on the amount so recoverable. Rodger v. The Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris (1), Jaswant Singh v. Dip Singh (2), Ram Sahai v. The Bank of Bengal (3), Bhagwan Singh v. Ummatul Hasmain (4), Ayyavayyar v. Shastram Ayyar (5) and Hatti Prasad v. Chattarpal Dubey (6) referred to. Mewa Kuar v. Banarsi Prasad (7) dissented from.

[Appr., 21 A. 1.]

20 A. 430=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 100.

IN this case the respondents brought a suit against the appellant and obtained a decree from the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Meerut. The appellant appealed from this decree to the High Court, but before his appeal was decided the respondents took out execution of their decree and realized the whole amount thereof. Subsequently the respondents' decree was set aside by the High Court, the suit being dismissed. The appellant then applied to the Court of the Subordinate Judge for a refund of the amount realized by the respondents under their decree which had been set aside by the High Court, together with interest upon the amount so realized. The Subordinate Judge allowed the application except so far as related to the claim for interest. Against this disallowance of interest the applicant appealed to the High Court.

Mr. Abdul Raoof, for the appellant.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Babu Durga Charan Banerji, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—In this case it appears that on suit by the plaintiffs respondents against the appellant a decree was given against the latter for payment of a sum of money. The defendant paid that money into Court, and it was drawn from the Court by the plaintiffs. Subsequently on appeal to this Court the decree in favour of the plaintiffs was reversed and their suit was dismissed.

The present proceeding is an application by the successful defendant appellant under s. 583 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for restitution to him, with interest, of the sum [432] paid by him into Court under the decree, and drawn out by the plaintiff's respondents.

The only question to be decided is whether the applicant is entitled to interest on his money during the time it was in the hands of the plaintiff's respondents. On that point there have been some conflicting rulings in this Court. We would refer to the cases of Jaswant Singh v. Dip Singh (2), Ram Sahai v. The Bank of Bengal (3), Bhagwan Singh v. Ummatul Hasmain (4), Mewa Kuar v. Banarsi Prasad (7) Hatti Prasad v. Chattarpal Dubey (6), and there is also the case of Ayyavayyar v. Shastram Ayyar (5). In our opinion, however, the case before us is concluded by the authority of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Rodger v. The Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris (1). We especially refer to the observations of Lord Cairns made therein, which are set forth and explained at length in Jaswant Singh v. Dip Singh (2). It appears to us that the view of their Lordships in that case cannot have been brought to the notice of the Benches of this Court which held that interest could not be awarded under s. 583. In all the other cases there is a distinct mention of that case, and it is cited as the authority for awarding interest.

(1) L.R. 3 C.P. 465.

(4) 18 A. 262.

(7) 17 A.W.N. (1897) 76.

(2) 7 A. 432.

(5) 9 M. 506.

(3) 8 A. 262.

(6) 8 A.W.N. (1888) 287.

Following the authority of their Lordships in that case, we allow this appeal. We set aside the order of the lower Court, and we direct that interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum be allowed on the sum which has been ordered to be restored to the appellant here. The appellant is entitled to his costs in this Court.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 433 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 97.

[433] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.

IMTIAZ-UN-NISSA (Applicant) v. ANWAR-UL-LAH (Opposite Party).
[16th May, 1898.]

Act No. VIII of 1890 (Guardian and Wards Act), s. 47—Appeal—Order refusing to direct the removal of a guardian.

Where an applicant for a certificate of guardianship applied for a twofold relief, namely, that the existing guardian might be removed and that she herself might be appointed guardian, and her application was dismissed, it was held that no appeal would lie from the order of dismissal, such order being an order refusing to direct the removal of a guardian. Mohima Chunder Biswas v. Tarini Sunker Ghose (1), Pakhwanti Dai v. Indra Narain Singh (2) and In re Bai Harkha (3) referred to.

[F., 14 Ind. Cas. 56 = 195 P.W.R. 1912.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Mr. Amiruddin, for the appellant.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—In this case a preliminary objection to the hearing of this appeal is raised by Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba for the respondent. His objection is that though under s. 47 of the Guardian and Wards Act, No. VIII of 1890, an appeal is given by cl. (8) of that section against an order directing the removal of a guardian, no appeal is given against an order refusing to direct the removal of a guardian.

To understand this case certain facts and dates must be set out. On the 10th of April 1897, a certificate of guardianship of the person and property of the minors was granted to the respondent Muhammad Anwarullah. On the 26th of April 1897, the appellant Musammat Imtiazunnissa, mother of the minors, applied to the Court, asking that she might be appointed guardian of their persons and property, and by a further application dated the 23rd June 1897, she alleged that she had no knowledge of the appointment on the 10th of April of Anwarullah, and prayed that his appointment as guardian, made on the 10th of April, might be cancelled, and she herself be appointed as guardian. The District Court in its proceedings on this application removed [434] Anwarullah, (it is said, with his consent) from the office of guardian of the persons of the minors and appointed Musammat Imtiazunnissa in his place, but refused to discharge or remove Anwarullah from the office of guardian of the property. That is the order which is now in appeal before us.

* First appeal No. 19 of 1898, from an order of F.E. Taylor, Esqr., Additional Judge of Moradabad, dated the 27th November 1897.

(1) 19 C. 487.

(2) 23 C. 201.

(3) 20 B. 667.

1898
MAY 16.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 433 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 97.

It was ingeniously argued by the learned counsel for the appellant, that the appeal was one under cl. (a) of s. 47, and that by it, the refusal to appoint Musammat Imtiazunnissa as guardian was called in question. That argument, however, is in our opinion, unsound. Before an order could be passed appointing Musammat Imtiazunnissa guardian of the property of the minors it would have been necessary to remove Anwarullah from that office. The appeal must be considered to be one against the Judge's order refusing to remove Anwarullah from the office of guardian of the property of the minors. Against such an order, we are of opinion, no appeal lies. In this opinion we are supported by the case of Mohima Chunder Biswas v. Tarini Sunker Ghose (1) where it is distinctly laid down that no appeal lies against an order of the District Judge refusing to remove a guardian. To the same effect is the case of Pakhwanti Dai v. Indra Narain Singh (2). That case is very much on all fours with this case, inasmuch as in it the District Judge cancelled that portion of the certificate of guardianship appointing the respondent guardian of the persons of the minors. And lastly there is the case of In re Bai Harkha (3) which was also a case in which, after the appointment of a guardian of the property, the mother of the minors sought to have the appointment cancelled. The District Judge refused to interfere with the appointment, and the High Court held that no appeal lay from the order of refusal. Following the above cases, with all of which we are in full accordance, we hold that in this case no appeal lies to this Court. We therefore reject the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 435 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 101.

[435] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.

LACHMIN KUAR AND ANOTHER (Judgment-debtors) v. DEBI PRASAD (Decree-holder).^{*} [17th May, 1898].

Hindu Law—Joint Hindu family—Joint family or self-acquired property—General education acquired at the expense of the joint family funds.

Held, that the mere fact that a member of a joint Hindu family had acquired a certain general education of a not very advanced character at the expense of the joint family funds would not have the result of making all the subsequent earnings of that member joint family property, but they would remain his self-acquired property. Pauliem Valoo Chetty v. Pauliem Soorayah Chetty (4) and Krishnaji Mahadev v. Moro Mahadev (5) referred to and followed.

[R., 32 A. 305 (313) = 7 A.L.J. 216 (224) = 5 Ind. Cas. 400; 13 C.P.L.R. 115 (117); 22 A.W.N. (1902), 20; 8 Ind. Cas. 930 (934) = 4 S.L.R. 161.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Munshi Ram Prasad and Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellants.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondents.

^{*} First Appeal No. 252 of 1897 from an order of Rai Kisben Lal, Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore, dated the 29th September 1897.

(1) 19 C. 487.

(4) 1 M. 252.

(2) 23 C. 201.

(5) 15 B. 32.

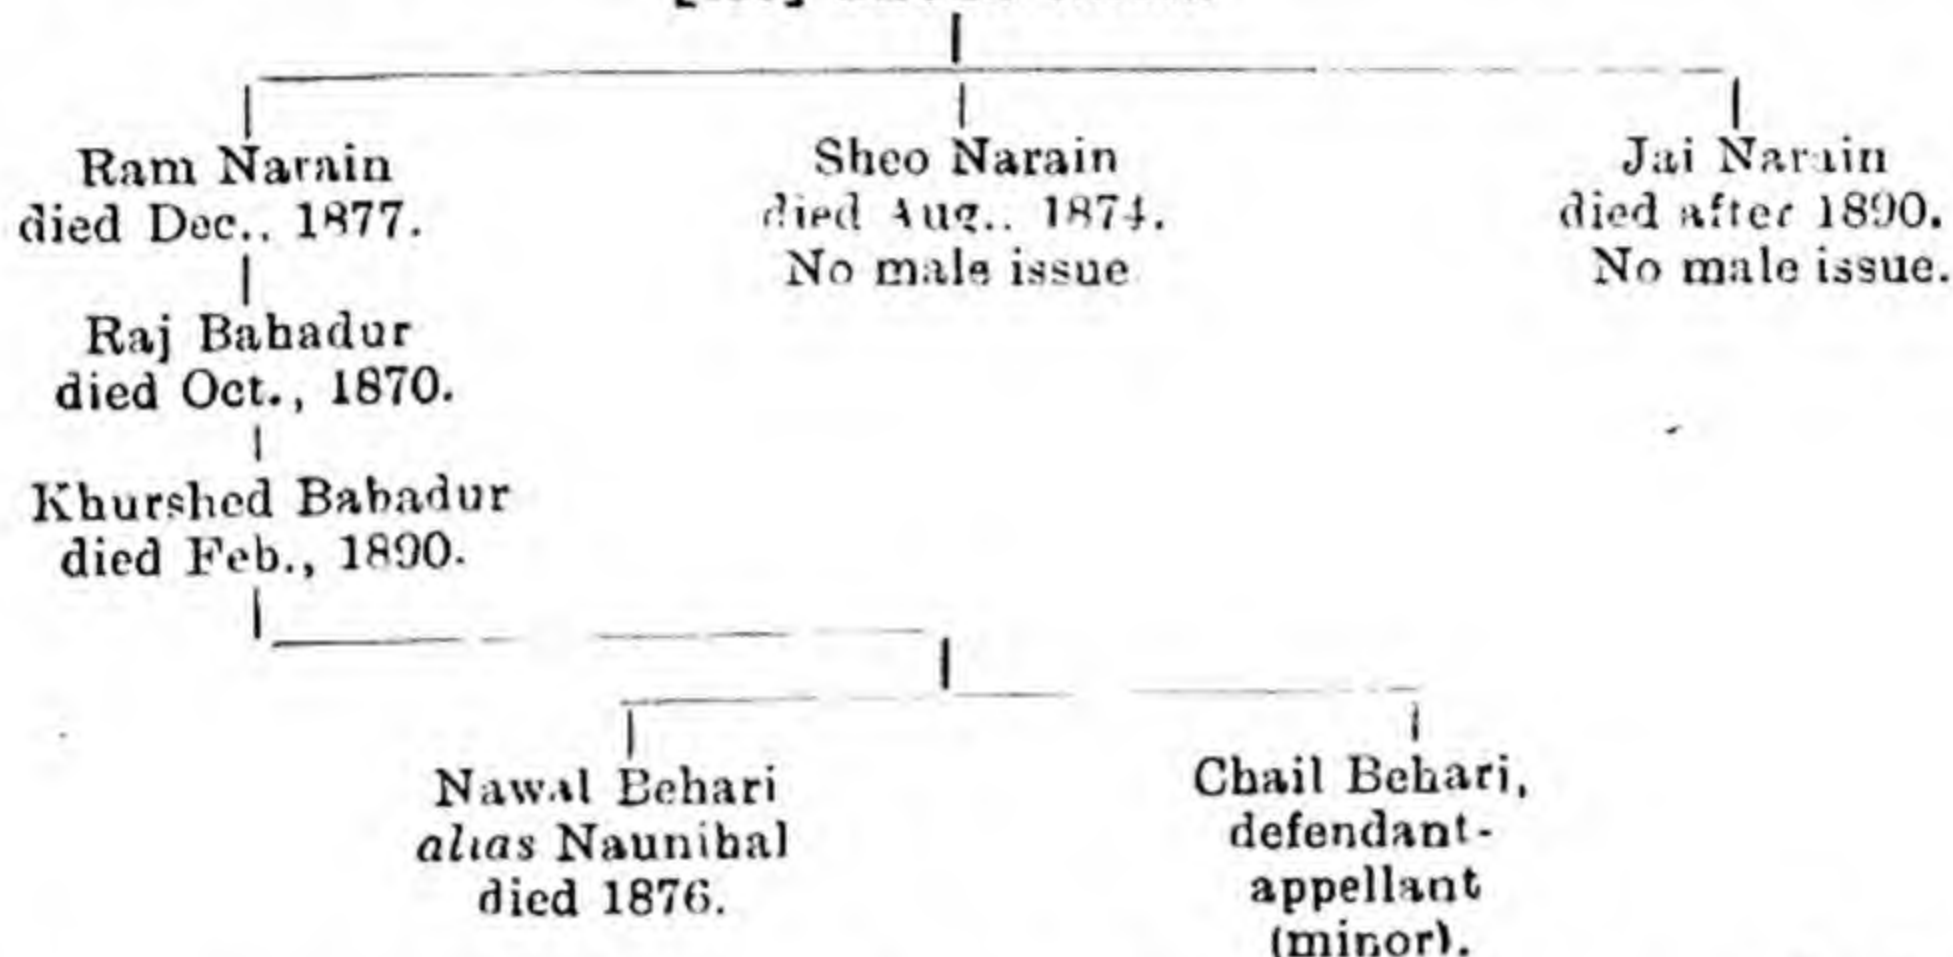

(3) 20 B. 667.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON. JJ.—This is an appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore, by which it was decided that certain moveable property was liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree obtained by the respondent against the representatives of one Khurshed Bahadur, deceased. In a previous case in this Court it was decided that the decree could not be executed against any ancestral joint property of the family. The question now to be decided is, does the property sought to be sold come within that description, or is it to be treated as having been the self-acquired property of the debtor Khurshed Bahadur.

The following genealogical table shows the members of the family:—

[436] BHOLA NATH.

The property in dispute consists of a house in Cawnpore and of two villages. Admittedly that property stood recorded in the name of Sheo Narain, the second of Bhola Nath's sons. On his death it was transferred to the name of Nawal Behari, then an infant. There is some dispute as to how that transfer was made. The respondent, through his witness Jiwan Ram, set up a nuncupative will alleged to have been made by Sheo Narain. We do not believe the allegation as to the will. We do not believe that any will was formally made, even in the loose form of a nuncupative will. We believe that the evidence of Jiwan Ram has been constructed to fit and account for the fact that after Sheo Narain's death, the property in dispute was recorded in Nawal Behari's name. The latter was a great grand-nephew of Sheo Narain. During his father's life-time he had no claim whatever to succeed to Sheo Narain's estate. But we are quite prepared to believe that Sheo Narain and his brother Ram Narain (who survived him for more than three years) did arrange that the property should be transferred to Nawal Behari. Both the brothers must have been anxious to save the property from getting into the hands of Khurshed Bahadur, who had taken to a licentious, immoral and debauched course of life, as mentioned in the judgment of this Court in F. A. No. 56 of 1893, decided on the 29th January 1896. The minor boy Nawal Behari [437] unfortunately did not long survive his great-granduncle Sheo Narain, and predeceased his great grandfather Ram Narain. On the boy's death his father Khurshed Bahadur inherited the property in dispute.

The question we have to decide is—What was the nature of that property in the hands of Sheo Narain? For the appellants it is contended that the property was a portion of the joint undivided property of a joint

1898

MAY 17.

—

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

20 A. 435=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 101.

1898
MAY 17.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 435 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 101.

Hindu family, possessed as such of this and of other property. On the other hand, the contention for the respondent—a contention which has been affirmed by the lower Court—is that the property in dispute was the self-acquired property of Sheo Narain.

As to the early history of the family there is little, if any, room for doubt. Their ancestral house is at Belhaur, in the Cawnpore district, and that house is at present the joint and undivided property of Bhola Nath's descendants in the male line. It is perfectly clear that there has been no partition of the ancestral house. The three brothers went out into the world and obtained employment in the Commissariat Department, and in course of time each acquired considerable wealth. They are not shown to have had any assistance from the joint family funds excepting their support in early years and the usual rudimentary education. It is not shown that any money was raised on the ancestral house to start any of them in life. They did not work jointly, each being separately employed, and no one of them is shown to have had any concern with the savings and accumulations of either of the other two brothers, though no doubt funds may have been remitted by one or other to the others for investment. Such being the case, we have no doubt that the property in dispute was, when in the hands of Sheo Narain, his self-acquired property over which he had full powers of disposal. It was argued for the appellant that because Sheo Narain was educated when a boy at the family expense, all his subsequent earnings and accumulations remained joint family property. This contention is described by their Lordships of the Privy Council in [438] Pauliem Valoo Chetty v. Pauliem Sooryah Chetty (1), as being a 'somewhat startling proposition of law,' and their Lordships expressed their disapproval of some cases in the Madras High Court which went that far. All the cases on the point have been very fully considered and discussed by the Bombay High Court in the case of Krishnaji Mahadev v. Moro Mahadev (2), in which it was held with respect to a person in much the same position as Sheo Narain that as he had received only a rudimentary education from the joint family funds his earnings were self-acquired, as also was any property purchased with those earnings. The fruits of an ordinary elementary education could not, it was held, be regarded as the "gains of science" acquired at the expense of ancestral wealth.

Having fully considered the rule laid down in the cases cited above, we find ourselves entirely in accordance with it. Following that rule, we hold in the present case that the property in dispute was the self-acquired property of Sheo Narain. It follows, therefore, that both in the hands of Nawal and of Khurshed it was self-acquired property and liable as such to be seized in satisfaction of the respondent's decree. We dismiss this appeal with costs to be paid out of the proceeds of the property in dispute.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 1 M. 252.

(2) 15 B. 32.

20 A. 438 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 103.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt.

1898
MAY 19.APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.BANSIDHAR (Plaintiff) v. DIP SINGH AND OTHERS (Defendants).^{*}
[19th May, 1898.]*Lambardar and co sharer—Powers of lambardar to deal with co-parcenary lands—Lease of such lands for ten years at an inadequate rent.*20 A. 438 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 103.Held, that a lambardar has no general power to grant any lease of co-parcenary land beyond such as the circumstances of the particular year or the particular season may require Jagan Nath v. Hardyal (1) followed.

[R., 29 A. 20 = 3 A.L.J. 639 = A.W.N. (1906) 257; 29 A. 554 = 4 A.L.J. 538 = A.W.N. (1907) 165; D., 3 A.L.J. 655 = A.W.N. (1906) 277.]

IN this case the plaintiff was owner of almost the whole of two mahals known as Bangar and Khadar in mauza Chitaura [439] Mohiud-dinpur. The small residue was owned by the defendants, one of whom, Puran Singh, was the lambardar. Owing to disagreements between the plaintiff and the lambardar the plaintiff applied for partition of his shares in these mahals. Puran Singh filed objections, which were disallowed in respect of mahal Bangar, but allowed in the case of mahal Khadar. Subsequently Puran Singh executed a lease for 10 years of the munj grass produce of both mahals at an annual rent of Rs. 12. After the partition proceedings had been concluded, all but the actual putting of the parties into possession of the shares allotted to them, the plaintiff filed his suit for cancellation of the lease given by Puran Singh. The Court of first instance (Additional Munsif of Meerut) dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed. The Lower Appellate Court (Additional Subordinate Judge of Meerut) dismissed the appeal. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Pandit Moti Lal, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—In this case it appears that one Puran Singh, the lambardar of a village which was under partition, and to the partition of which his objections had been disallowed on the 8th of August, 1894, granted on the 24th of December of the same year, a lease, for a period of no less than ten years, of more than 400 bighas of land producing valuable munj grass, at the utterly inadequate rent of Rs. 12 per annum. The Subordinate Judge says, and perhaps with truth, that no fraud was proved; but in my opinion we have only to look at the lease itself to see that it was given by a disappointed litigant, whose power as lambardar was soon about to cease, with the intention of damnifying his successful opponent in the partition proceedings. For that reason alone I would direct the lease to be set aside; but, further, there is distinct authority in this case, in the case of Jagan Nath v. Hardyal (1), in which it was distinctly ruled that a lambardar has no general power to grant any lease of co-parcenary land beyond such as the circumstances of the particular year or [440] particular season may require. That no doubt was a case of a perpetual lease, but the reasons for the decision apply with equal strength to the ten years' lease in the present case. I fully concur in * Second Appeal, No. 344 of 1897, from a decree of Babu Prag Das, Additional Subordinate Judge of Meerut, dated the 26th February 1897, confirming a decree of Thakur Udit Narayan Sinha, Additional Munsif of Meerut, dated the 23rd December 1895.

(1) 17 A.W.N. (1897) 207.

1898
MAY 19.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 438 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 103.

the rule of law laid down in the case just cited, and, following the principle contained in it, I set aside the decrees of the two lower Courts, and, allowing this appeal, I give a decree in favour of the plaintiff appellant. I cancel the lease dated the 24th of December, 1894, so far as it concerns an area of 144 bighas 7 biswas and 13 biswansis pukhta out of mahal Bangar of Chitaura Mohiuddinpur, and I direct that possession of that area be given to the plaintiff appellant by the dis-possession of the defendant lessee. The plaintiff appellant will have his costs in this Court.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 440 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 108.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Aikman.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NIHAL CHAND.* [26th May, 1898.]

Act No. I of 1879 (Indian Stamp Act), s. 61—Stamp—Promissory note—Person receiving an under-stamped promissory note not liable under s. 61.

Under s. 61 of Act No. I of 1879 the "person accepting" a promissory note not duly stamped is the person who executes such note as acceptor, not a person who merely receives the note. The mere receiver of an unstamped or insufficiently stamped promissory note is not as such liable to any penalty under this section either as principal or abettor. Queen v. Gulam Husain Saheb (1) The Queen v. Nadi Chand Poddar (2), Empress v. Janki (3), and Empress v. Gopal Das (4) referred to.

[R., U.B.R. (1904), 2nd Qr., Stamp, p. 1.]

THIS was a reference made by the Sessions Judge of Saharanpur under s. 438 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The facts of the case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

JUDGMENT.

AIKMAN, J.—This is a case reported for the orders of this Court by the learned Sessions Judge of Saharanpur. It appears [441] that two men, Makunda and Chanda, were indebted to one Nihal Chand. In payment of their debt they gave him a promissory note which was not duly stamped. Nihal Chand, it appears, sued in a Civil Court on the promissory note, and there the breach of the stamp law was discovered. The matter having been brought to the notice of the Collector, the prosecution of the makers of the note, as well as of Nihal Chand, was directed. This prosecution resulted in all three being convicted of the offence punishable under s. 61 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1879. The Magistrate sentenced Nihal Chand to a fine of Rs. 35, or in default to 15 days' rigorous imprisonment.

As the offence of which Nihal Chand was convicted is an offence punishable with fine only, the imprisonment in default ought to have been simple—see ss. 67 and 34 of the Indian Penal Code. This mistake the Magistrate himself subsequently discovered.

The learned Sessions Judge has submitted the case to this Court with a recommendation that the conviction of Nihal Chand should be set aside as illegal. In my opinion the learned Sessions Judge is right. The material part of the section under which Nihal Chand has been convicted runs as follows:—"Any person drawing, making, issuing, endorsing or transferring or signing, otherwise than as a witness, or presenting for acceptance or payment, or accepting, paying or receiving payment of, or in any manner negotiating any bill of exchange, cheque or promissory note without the same being duly stamped . . . shall for every such offence be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees." The Magistrate has apparently looked on the word "accepting" here as equivalent to "receiving." But, as was held in Queen v. Gulam Hussain Saheb (1) "the term 'accepting' in s. 61 of the Stamp Act does not mean 'receiving,' but 'executing as an acceptor.'" In the case The Queen v. Nadi Chand Poddar (2) JACKSON, J., observed:—"If an instrument called a [442] promissory note or other document of that kind, and as such liable to the duty imposed by the Act, is not duly stamped, it appears to me that the person subject to penalty is the person who makes it, and not the person in whose favour it is made." That was a prosecution under s. 29 of the Stamp Act then in force, namely, Act No. XVIII of 1869, which does not differ materially from s. 61 of the present Act. It was there held that the person in whose favour a document not duly stamped is made, incurs the risk of being debarred from producing it in evidence, but does not render himself liable to penalties under the fourth chapter of the Act. It has been contended that in such cases a person who receives a document not duly stamped abets the commission of an offence under s. 61; but, as was remarked in the case Empress v. Janki (3), "it is not abetment of the execution of an unstamped document to receive it, any more than acceptance of stolen property is abetment of theft." This case was followed in this Court in Empress v. Gopal Das (4). I think the view taken by the learned Sessions Judge is right. I quash the conviction of Nihal Chand for an offence under s. 61 of Act No. I of 1879 and the sentence of fine imposed thereunder, and direct that the fine, or such portion of it as may have been paid, be refunded.

* Criminal Revision, No. 227 of 1898.

(1) 7 M. 71. (2) 24 W.R. Cr. 1. (3) 7 B. 82. (4) 3 A.W.N. (1883) 145.

1898
MAY 26.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
20 A. 440=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 108.

20 A. 442=18 A.W.N. (1898) 110.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair.

FATEH CHAND AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. MANSAB RAI (Defendant).^{*}
[6th June, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 53—Verification of plaint—Plaint verified when in an incomplete state—Amendment of plaint.

The substantial portion of a plaint, consisting of the statement of the claim of the plaintiffs and the prayer, was written upon two sheets of plain paper and verified by the plaintiffs. Subsequently to the affixing of the plaintiffs' [443] signatures a front sheet, consisting of a piece of stamped paper with the name of the Court and the names and addresses of the parties, was added, and the plaint thus composed filed in Court.

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 376 of 1897, from a decree of Rai Shankar Lal, Subordinate Judge of Saharanpur, dated the 3rd March 1897, reversing a decree of Munshi Shiva Sahai, Munsif of Kairana, dated the 26th February 1896.

(1) 7 M. 71.
(3) 7 B. 82.

(2) 24 W.R. Cr. 1.
(4) 3 A. W. N. (1883), 145.

1898

JUNE 6.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

20 A. 442=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 110.

Held, that the verification was defective; but that the suit ought not to have been dismissed. The plaintiffs ought to have been allowed an opportunity of amending the plaint by making a proper verification.

[R., 15 Ind. Cas. 583 (584).]

THE material facts of this case, as stated in the judgment of the Lower Appellate Court, are as follows:—

"The plaint purports to have been verified by the plaintiff Fateh Chand at Kairana on the 16th July 1895, by the plaintiff Ranjit Singh at Gadhi Husenour on the 13th July, and by Musammat Shibbi, next friend of Somat Prasad, minor plaintiff, on the 11th July at Saharanpur. It was presented to the Court of the Munsif of Kairana on the 17th July 1895. It purports also to bear the signatures at another place, but it is not expressed when these signatures were affixed. The plaint consists of three leaves, and the signatures and verifications are contained on the last leaf, and the plaintiffs' signatures are wanting on the first two leaves, though rule 424, clause (5), of the rules of the 4th April 1894, framed by the High Court, required the plaintiffs' signatures on each leaf. The first leaf is the stamp paper used to denote the Court-fee. It was purchased at the Kairana tahsil on the 17th July 1895. The stamp paper contains the name of the Court and the names, description and place of abode of the parties. It should also have contained a substantial portion of the statement of the claim, according to the said rules, but it does not."

The Subordinate Judge found:—"It is evident that the particulars stated on the first leaf, namely, the stamp paper, were not verified by the plaintiffs. I find that neither the verification nor the signatures of the plaintiffs apply to what is written on the first leaf, which was not in existence when they were apparently affixed. Musammat Shibbi deposed that she affixed her mark on three papers, which may mean in two places on the plaint and on the vakalatnama, dated the 7th July 1895. There is nothing to show that the plaintiffs' signatures [444] were affixed on the 17th July 1895, or on dates different from those of the verifications. The verification had been affixed before the 17th July 1895."

On these findings the Lower Appellate Court came to the conclusion, with reference to the case of Katesar Nath v. Aggrayan (1), that the plaint was void ab initio and incapable of amendment, and dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. The plaintiffs thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellants.

Maulvi Abdul Majid, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR, J.—The facts of this case fall within the ruling in two unreported cases of this Court. The one is the case F. A. No. 269 of 1893, (Ganga Sahai v. Muhammad Ali Jan Khan),* [445] decided

20 A. 444 N.

* The judgment in this case was as follows:—

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—The suit out of which this appeal has arisen has been dismissed by the Subordinate Judge on the ground that the plaint filed on behalf of the plaintiffs was not properly signed and verified. What took place was this:—The plaint was drawn up on two sheets of plain paper, and it was signed and verified at the foot by the plaintiffs as required by s. 51 of the Code of Civil Procedure; this was done by the plaintiffs at Bulandshahr. They sent the plaint to a pleader at Meerut for the purpose of its being filed in the Court there. The pleader instead of attaching to the plaint the stamp paper requisite for the Court fees payable on the plaint, as he should have done, took out the first sheet and transcribed the contents of it on the stamp paper. This was certainly a reprehensible proceeding on the part of the plead-on the 9th of December 1895, and the other is F. A. No. 149 of 1895 (Munshi Fakir Chand v. Mahesh Dass),* decided on the 1st of April 1897. No reported cases have been cited to me which are at all on all fours with the matter at issue in the present appeal. I see no reason to differ from the conclusions of the Judges who decided those two unreported appeals, and I accordingly make the same order which they did. I set aside the decree below and remand the case to the lower Court with the direction that it should re-admit the suit under its original number in the register and return the plaint to the plaintiffs for amendment according to law. This order is made under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The Court of first instance will then proceed to decide the case on the merits.

(i) 14 A. W. N. (1894) 95.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

1898
JUNE 6.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 442 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 110.

er; he should have known that the plaint to be filed in Court was the document which the plaintiffs had signed and verified, and not a document which consisted partly of matter which had been signed and verified, and partly of matter which had been written after signature and verification. The plaint in this case as filed was therefore defective, but we are of opinion that the Subordinate Judge should have returned it to the plaintiffs for amending it by signing and verifying it as it stood; he ought not to have dismissed the suit. It was the duty of the Court to return the plaint before settlement of issues, and the mere fact that issues were settled could not deprive the plaintiffs of the opportunity which they might otherwise have had and ought to have had of curing the defect which existed in the plaint.

We set aside the decree below and remand the case to the lower Court with the direction that it should re-admit the suit under its original number in the register and return the plaint to the plaintiffs for amending it by signing and verifying it according to law.

The parties will bear their own costs of this appeal.

[N.B.—This note case has been followed in 15 Ind. Cas. 583 (584).—ED.]

20 A. 445 N.

* The judgment in this case was as follows:—

HANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—The suit out of which this appeal has arisen has been dismissed by the lower Court on the ground that the plaint was not properly verified. The verification has been held to be defective for two reasons. First, that after the whole of the plaint as it was filed in Court had been prepared the plaintiff did not verify it, but what was done was this:—The plaint was written out on four sheets of foolscap paper, and at the end was signed and verified by the plaintiff; but the pleader who filed the plaint, instead of attaching to it the stamps required for the claim, took out the first two sheets and caused their contents to be copied on the stamp papers. The second ground on which the Subordinate Judge considered the plaint to be defective is that, although the plaintiff verified the whole of the statements contained in the plaint as true to his knowledge, it appeared as to some matters that he had no personal knowledge. As regards this second ground, the conclusion of the Subordinate Judge is erroneous. The plaint on the face of it was properly verified in accordance with the provisions of the law, and for the purposes of ascertaining whether the verification was a good verification in form, the fact whether it was true was wholly immaterial. As to the first ground, as we held in First Appeal No. 269 of 1893, which was a case on all fours with the present, the Subordinate Judge should not have dismissed the suit, but should have returned the plaint to the plaintiff in order that it might be properly verified.

We allow this appeal, and, setting aside the decree below, remand the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, with directions to re-admit it under its original number on the register and dispose of it on the merits, after causing the plaint to be amended by being properly verified. Costs will abide the event.

[N.B.—This note-case has been followed in 15 Ind. Cas. 583 (584).—ED.]

1898

JUNE 8.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

20 A. 446 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 112.

20 A. 446 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 112.

[446] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

NIHALI (Applicant) v. MITTAR SEN AND OTHERS (Opposite Parties).^{*}
[8th June, 1898.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), ss. 86 and 87—Mortgage—Redemption—Redemption possible at any time prior to the passing of the order absolute under s. 87.

A mortgagor who has obtained a decree for redemption of his mortgage can pay in the redemption money and obtain redemption at any time until an order absolute under s. 87 is made against him. Poresh Nath Mojumdar v. Ramjodu Mojumdar (1) and Raham Ilahi Khan v. Gh sita (2) referred to.

[F., 25 A. 231 (233); R., 24 A. 479 (481); 7 A.L.J. 953 (956) = 7 Ind. Cas. 50; 8 Ind. Cas. 592; 2 N.L.R. 137 (141, 143); U.B.R. (1897-1901). Vol. II, 582 (584).]

THIS appeal arose out of an application by the defendant, judgment-debtor, in a suit for foreclosure of a mortgage, in execution of the decree against him. The plaintiffs obtained their decree for foreclosure on the 21st of August 1894. By that decree the judgment-debtor was ordered to pay the mortgage money within three months from the date of the decree, otherwise the mortgage would be foreclosed. The judgment-debtor did not pay in the money, but appealed to the High Court. This appeal was dismissed, and the order of the lower Court affirmed on the 13th of August 1897. On the 6th of November 1897, the judgment-debtor paid the sum then due into Court with notice to the decree-holder, who refused to receive it on the grounds that the judgment-debtor's right to redeem was forfeited by his failure to comply with the order to pay within three months from the 21st of August 1894, which order was not affected by the decree of the High Court; and further, that the decree-holders had in virtue of their decree obtained possession of the property. The Court executing the decree allowed the decree-holders' contention and dismissed the application of the judgment-debtor. The judgment-debtor thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Babu Durga Charan Banerji, for the appellant.

Mr. S. S. Singh, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—We concur with the judgment and the reasons for that judgment given by the Calcutta Court in the case of Poresh Nath Mojumdar v. Ramjodu Mojumdar [447] (1) which has been acted upon by a Bench of this Court in the case of Raham Ilahi Khan v. Ghasita (2). In this case a decree was made under s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act, but had not been brought to maturity by an order absolute under s. 87. The money to be paid for redemption of the mortgage was tendered and deposited in Court. In our opinion, if the sum tendered were sufficient, it ought to have been accepted and an order given for redemption. That must now be done. We allow the appeal. The appellant will have his costs.

Appeal decreed.

^{*} First Appeal, No. 73 of 1898, from an order of J. J. McLean, Esq., District Judge of Shahjahanpur, dated the 10th January 1898.

(1) 16 C. 246.

(2) 20 A. 375.

20 A. 447 (P.C.)=2 C.W.N. 545=25 I.A. 137=7 Sar. P.C.J. 353.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT :

Lords Watson, Hobhouse, Morris and Davey and Sir R. Couch.
[On appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces, Allahabad.]

1898
 MAY 14.
 —
 PRIVY COUNCIL.
 —
 20 A. 447
 (P.C.)=2
 C.W.N. 545=
 25 I.A. 137=
 7 Sar. P.C.J.
 353.

HAKIM MUHAMMAD IKRAM-UD-DIN (Defendant-Appellant) v. NAJIBAN
 (Plaintiff-Respondent). [21st April and 14th May, 1898.]

Sale of villages by a wife to her husband.

The purchase money had not been paid on what purported to be a deed of sale of villages by a Muhammadan wife to her husband for a price which, however, the deed acknowledged to have been paid. After her death two of her relations, disputing the due execution of the sale, deed, sued the husband, who had obtained possession, claiming, in the alternative, either that they should obtain their shares in the property of the deceased, or, if the sale of the villages should be maintained, that they should receive their proportion of the price as due to the estate left by her.

The two Courts below concurred in finding that the wife, a parda-nashin was capable of managing her own affairs, and that she had not received the price.

The first Court inferred from the state of things that the wife had in a manner made a gift of the villages to the husband. The High Court reversed that judgment, and decided that, with regard to the probability of influence on the part of the husband, the absence of any independent advice for the wife and other circumstances, the transaction was without effect.

[448] The Judicial Committee found that there had not been a case of undue influence exercised either made by the plaintiff or raised by the issues; they found no evidence that the price stated was inadequate, or the sale an improvident one, or that the husband had been released from having to pay the price. From the findings on the evidence the presumption was that the wife intended to pass the property for some purpose, and that, the suggestion of a gift being excluded, the deed operated as a sale according to what it purported to be.

They did not throw any doubt on the sound doctrine, laid down in numerous cases, as to the obligations upon persons taking benefits from parda-nashin ladies.

To the one surviving plaintiff was awarded a moiety of the price payable by the husband, who himself inherited the balance.

[R., 34 A. 455 (P.C.)=39 I.A. 156=14 Bom. L.R. 1055=16 C.L.J. 613 (614)=16 C.W.N. 889=23 M.L.J. 210=12 M.L.T. 361=1912. M.W.N. 976=15 O.C. 271=16 Ind. Cas. 197 2 A.L.J. 436 (441).]

CONSOLIDATED appeals, one by special leave, from two decrees (7th January 1891) of the High Court, in the same suit, modifying a decree (23rd January 1889) of the Subordinate Judge of Bareilly.

This suit was brought on the 7th February 1888 by Najiban and her sister, Zahur Begam. The latter died in 1888, and Najiban was entered on the record as her heir and representative before the judgment in the Court of first instance. The defendant, now appellant, was the husband of Imami Begam, sister of the two plaintiffs, who survived her and on her death claimed to share in the estate that she left.

This appeal related to twenty shares in each of two mauzas, one Jabida Chapri and the other Pachtaur, in the Bareilly district, the yearly jama of the one being Rs. 1,000, and of the other Rs. 200. They were the subject of a registered deed of sale dated the 9th November 1887, by which Imami Begam purported to have sold them to her husband, having transferred possession to him for Rs. 30,000 then paid as the deed said. He obtained dakhil kharij. As to the title of the plaintiffs to sue, there

1898
MAY 14.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
20 A. 447
(P.C.)=2
C.W.N. 545=
25 I.A. 137=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
353.

were concurrent findings of fact in the Courts below, and it was not now disputed that the wife, Imami Begam, and the plaintiffs, were three daughters of the same mother, Waziran, deceased. There was no appeal preferred from the decision of the High Court that they were not her legitimate daughters—facts which, according to the High Court, entitled the two plaintiffs to one [449] moiety between them as their combined shares in the late Imami Begam's estate, the other moiety going to the surviving husband. There were also concurrent findings below that the payment of the consideration acknowledged in the deed of the 9th November 1887 had not taken place.

The principal question on these appeals was whether the parda-nashin wife had executed that deed with full comprehension of its effect, and free volition on her part that the transaction should be carried out, with the result of the transfer of her property to her husband.

The facts are stated in their Lordships' judgment.

The Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the effect of the sale deed, without the payment of the consideration having been made, was virtually that there was a voluntary transfer or gift of the property by the wife to the husband, which was valid, according to the Muhammadan Law. This in the Judge's view had deprived the plaintiff Najiban of all right to the villages, or to any part of the consideration for which they were ostensibly alienated; he therefore dismissed the suit. Both parties appealed to the High Court from the decision of the first Court, the plaintiff Najiban contesting the validity of the transaction of the 9th November 1887, and the defendant objecting to her claiming as a sharer in the estate inherited from her alleged sisters. The question as to the proportionate share which the daughters of one mother would take, under the circumstances, was decided by the High Court as above stated, with the result that their decision on that point was not disputed at the present hearing. On Najiban's appeal the decision of the Bench (SIR JOHN EDGE, C.J., and KNOX, J.) was given in one judgment, which dealt with both questions. They reversed the finding of the lower Court that there had been a gift to Ikram-ud-din.

After referring to the written statement of the latter and the evidence, the judgment of the Chief Justice concluded as follows:—

[450] "Under these circumstances the view I take is that, if Mus-sammat Imami Begam really understood what the transaction was, it was not the transaction which was evidenced by the sale deed, i.e., a transaction of sale; it was not the transaction which the defendant in his pleadings and in his evidence put before the Court. Although this lady could not fairly be described as a drunkard, she undoubtedly had impaired her health by drink. She was a person very liable to be influenced by her newly-married husband, who was many years her junior; and although she might have desired to confer a benefit upon him, either by making a free gift of those villages to him, or by transferring them to him for an inadequate consideration, still I think we ought not to give Ikram-ud-din a decree in respect of these villages unless, having regard to the circumstances, we are satisfied that this old lady had independent advice, and thoroughly understood what she was doing on that occasion. It has not been shown to us that this lady had any independent advice; and under these circumstances, and having regard to the doubt and mystery in which Ikram-ud-din himself has involved the transaction of the 9th November 1887, I think we should hold that Ikram-ud-din has not made out a title other than

1898
MAY 14.

PRIVY

COUNCIL.

20 A. 447

(P.C.)=2

C.W.N. 545=

25 I.A. 137=

7 Sar. P.C.J.

353.

"his title as heir of his wife Imami Begam to these villages, or any part of them. As the surviving husband of Imami Begam he is entitled to one-half of these villages; Najiban in her own right, and as heiress of her sister, is entitled to the other moiety."

Mr. H. H. Cozens-Hardy, Q. C., and Mr. H. Cowell, for the appellant, argued that the two villages were not part of the divisible estate left by the wife, but had been effectively transferred to the husband, who was exclusively entitled thereby to the property. Effect should be given to the facts found, in concurrence by the Courts below, that Imami had executed the sale deed with knowledge of its effect, she being a capable woman who understood the transaction. The inference from these facts, with that of the transfer of possession was that Imami intended [451] to convey the property; proof of payment of the price was not essential in order to establish the sale. The general requirement that a parda-nashin lady parting with her property should have the advice of some independent person, was not disputed; but here it was contended that the principle had no application, for the sufficient reason that the evidence showed that Imami was in this instance fully competent to manage her own affairs. That the wife was desirous of favouring her husband would not of itself be any proof of the husband having influenced her unduly; of the latter there was no evidence. Reference was made to Nedby v. Nedby (1); Ranee Khujcoroonissa v. Mt. Roushun Jehan (2); Kamarunnissa Bibi v. Husaini Bibi (3); Rujabai v. Ismail Ahmed (4); Mahomed Buksh Khan v. Hosseini Bibi (5).

Mr. J. D. Mayne, and Mr. G. E. A. Ross, for the respondent, argued that the judgment of the High Court was right. That the transaction could not be supported as a gift was clear, for if the wife was intelligent enough to understand what took place on the 9th November 1887, she must have understood it to be a sale to her husband for value and no gift. As a sale, moreover, the husband relied upon the transaction. That it should now be held a gift would contravene the general principle expressed in Eshenchunder Singh v. Shamachurn Bhuttoo (6). A different case would be made from that which was then put forward if the transaction could be held to be a gift. The High Court was also right in declining to give effect to the sale deed when the circumstances under which the husband sought to have it maintained were all before them. There was direct concealment in the matter of the non-payment of the money. A fiduciary relation subsisted between the parties to the deed at the time, the husband having on the 3rd of the same month accepted his wife's general power as her agent over her property. [452] The wife's ill-health, her secluded state, the entire absence of independent advice, or means for her getting it, were rightly considered, and had had the right degree of weight given to them by the High Court. Thus the claim in respect of the villages had been rightly allowed, and the judgment should be upheld. In reference to transactions entered into by a parda-nashin were cited.—Geresh Chunder Lahoree v. Mussumat Bhuggobutty Debia (7); Tacoordeen Tewarry v. Nawab Syed Ali Hossein Khan (8); Sudisht Lal v. Mussumat Sheobarat Koer (9); Mahomed Buksh Khan v. Hosseini Bibi (10).

(1) (1852) 5 De Gex and Smale, Chy. R. 377.

(3) 9 A. 266.

(5) 15 I.A. 81 = 15 C. 684.

(7) 13 M.I.A. 419 (431).

(9) 8 I. A. 89 (43) = 7 C. 245.

(2) 3 I. A. 291 (307) = 2 C. 184.

(4) 7 B. H. C. R. 27.

(6) 11 M. I. A. 7 (24).

(8) 1 I.A. 192 (208).

(10) 15 I. A. 81 = 15 C. 684.

1898

MAY 14.

Mr. H. H. Cozens-Hardy, Q.C., replied. Afterwards, on May 14th, their Lordships' judgment was delivered by LORD DAVEY.

PRIVY

JUDGMENT.

COUNCIL.

20 A. 447

(P.C.)=2

C.W.N. 548=

25 I.A. 137=

7 Sar. P.C.J.

353.

In October 1887 the present appellant was married to Mussamat Imami Begam; she was then about sixty years of age, and the appellant was some sixteen years younger. Mussamat Imami Begam had been twice previously married, and from one of her former husbands she had inherited a considerable fortune, and at the date of her marriage to the appellant was a woman of large wealth. On the other hand, the appellant appears to have been a person of very small means.

Mussamat Imami Begam executed a power-of-attorney, dated the 3rd November 1887, in favour of the appellant, by which she empowered him to collect her rents and grant receipts, and exercise other large powers over her property.

A few days afterwards Mussamat Imami Begam executed a sale deed, dated the 9th November 1887, by which she declared that she had sold two villages to the appellant for Rs. 30,000; and having received the sale consideration in full from the aforesaid vendee, had put him in proprietary possession of the property sold, like herself. Jamna Prasad, the Special Sub Registrar, in his report stated that he had attended at the house of Mus-[453]amat Imami Begam on the 11th November 1887; and that the Mussamat heard word by word the contents of the sale deed, and admitted from behind a screen the execution and completion thereof, and admitted that she had already received gold mohurs worth Rs. 20,000 and the Sub-Registrar further reported that the appellant, the vendee, paid in his presence ten bags containing Rs. 10,000 to the Mussamat, the vendor. Fifteen days afterwards she executed a power-of-attorney, dated the 24th November 1887, for the purpose of obtaining mutation of names, the execution of which was also verified by a commissioner.

Mussamat Imami Begam died in the month of January 1888, and shortly afterwards the present respondent and her sister, since deceased, alleging themselves to be the lawful sisters and co-heiresses of the Mussamat, commenced this suit against the appellant. By their plaint the plaintiffs denied the marriage between the Mussamat and the appellant, and alleged that he had taken exclusive possession of, and appropriated without any title, the bulk of her moveable and immoveable property. As to the sale deed they alleged that the Mussamat had no knowledge of that deed, nor was it read out to her, nor could she have understood it, as she was under the influence of liquor, and that in short the sale deed being spurious, forged, and without consideration was void. The prayer of the plaint was for possession of the villages (including the two in question) and other property as detailed; and that should the defendant prove the sale of the two villages to be genuine, the sale consideration thereof, instead of possession, should be awarded to the plaintiffs against the defendant, along with the moveable property, and for possession of the Mussamat's moveable property, or payment of its value. The appellant by his statement of defence denied the title of the plaintiffs, and relied on the sale deed.

The Subordinate Judge found that the respondent and her co-plaintiff were the legal heirs of Mussamat Imami Begam, and, that a marriage had taken place between the appellant and the Mussamat. The first finding was varied by the High Court, [454] who found that, although the respondent and her co-plaintiff were daughters of the same mother as the Mussamat, they were illegitimate. The result of this was that the plaintiffs became entitled to one moiety only and the defendant (the appellant) to the other moiety of the property. These findings as varied by the High Court are not now in dispute.

The 4th and 5th issues relating to the sale deed were as follows:—

“4. Did Mussamat Imami Begam execute the sale deed, dated 9th November 1887, conveying certain villages to the defendant, and did she do so while she was in a sound state of mind, or when she was not in her senses, but in a state of intoxication, without understanding what she was doing; that is to say, whether the contents of the said documents were understood by her, or she was not capable of understanding them?”

“5. What is the actual value of the property sold? Was Rs. 30,000 a fiction, or the actual amount of the sale consideration? Was the sum of Rs. 10,000 alleged to have been paid in presence of the Sub-Registrar and the commissioner actually paid, or was the transfer without consideration?”

It is unnecessary to discuss at any length the evidence given on those issues, because the two Courts are in substantial agreement as to the effect of it, although they are not agreed as to the legal result or consequence. Both Courts were satisfied that the Mussamat was not intoxicated at the time of verification of the sale deed, and that she was a woman capable of managing her affairs, and that she did in fact manage them, and that she undoubtedly executed by her own hand the sale deed and power-of-attorney for the purpose of mutation of names being effected; and as to the consideration for the sale that, although the Mussamat acknowledged receipt of Rs. 20,000, it was not in fact paid, and that the bags purporting to contain rupees were produced before the Sub-Registrar, but there was no actual evidence of their contents, or where the rupees (if rupees there were) came from, or afterwards went to, and in short that no part of the [455] consideration was proved to have been paid by the appellant to the Mussamat.

On these findings of facts (in which their Lordships entirely agree) the Subordinate Judge held that the presumption was that out of affection the Mussamat gave the property to the appellant as a matter of favour, and through some policy called that gift a sale, and that, instead of a deed of gift, she executed a deed of sale in order to sustain the honour and respectability of the appellant, who belonged to an old respectable family of the town, to screen him from any exposure. The learned Judges in the High Court dissented from this view, and their Lordships agree with them. There is no evidence of any intention to make a gift, and there is no suggestion in the pleadings that the villages had been given to the appellant or that his wife intended to remit to him, or release him from payment of, any part of the purchase-money. The acknowledgment of the previous receipt of Rs. 20,000 would no doubt enable the vendor to transmit the property to a second purchaser, as between whom and the vendor the latter would not be entitled to deny the payment of that portion of the purchase money; but as between the vendor and vendee it had not the effect of discharging him.

But while their Lordships so far agree with the High Court, they do not altogether agree on the result, though probably the difference is more one of form than substance. The High Court seems to have thought that in the circumstances there was a presumption of undue influence on the part of the appellant, and that he ought to have shown that the old

1898

MAY 14.

—
PRIVY

COUNCIL.

20 A. 447

(P.C.) = 2

C.W.N. 545 =

25 I.A. 137 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

353.

1898 lady had independent advice, and thoroughly understood what she was
 MAY 14. doing, and accordingly the Court set aside the transaction altogether.
 — Their Lordships doubt whether this was right, or altogether consistent PRIVY with the previous findings by the Court. There is no case of undue in-COUNCIL. fluence made by the plaintiffs in their plaint, or raised in the issues on — which the case was tried : and there is no evidence that Rs. 30,000 was an 20 A. 447 inadequate price, or that [456] the sale was an improvident one if the (P.C.) = 2 price had been paid. From the findings on the evidence their Lordships
 C.W.N. 545 = think it must be presumed that the Mussamat intended to pass the 25 I.A. 137 = property for some purpose ; and, as the suggestion of a gift is excluded,
 7 Sar. P.C.J the deed must operate (if at all) according to what it purports to be, viz, a 353. sale. In coming to this conclusion in the case before them their Lordships do not intend to throw the slightest doubt on the sound doctrine laid down in numerous cases as to the obligations of persons taking benefits from a parda-nashin lady.

Their Lordships therefore will humbly advise Her Majesty that relief be given to the surviving plaintiff (the present respondent) in accordance with the fourth paragraph of the prayer of the plaint, and for that purpose the decree of the High Court be varied by inserting after the words "specified below" the words "except the two villages Jabida Chapri, with the garden and houses, and Pachtaur, in the pargana of Nawabganj, but including the sum of Rs. 15,000, being one moiety of the sum of Rs. 30,000, the price of the said two villages, payable by the defendant" and after the words "date of possession" the words "and together with interest on the said sum of Rs. 15,000 from the 9th November 1887 up to date of payment" at the rate usually allowed by the Court, and instead of the words "the amount whereof shall be" the words "the respective amounts of such mesne profits and interest to be," and that in all other respects the said decree ought to be affirmed and the appeal dismissed.

As the appellant came before their Lordships to claim the property as a gift without any payment, and never in the course of the proceedings offered to pay or give credit for the price as part of Mussamat Imami Begam's estate, their Lordships will not advise Her Majesty to make any alteration in the disposal of the costs by the High Court, and for the same reason, and because the respondent has substantially succeeded, they do not think that the variation made by them in the decree should relieve the [457] appellant from the payment of the costs of these appeals, which the appellant must therefore pay.

Appeal allowed, decree varied.

Solicitors for the appellant: Messrs. Ranken, Ford, Ford and Chester.
 Solicitors for the respondent: Messrs. Pyke and Parrott.

20 A. 457 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 112.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

ABBASI BEGAM (Plaintiff) v. AFZAL HUSEN AND ANOTHER
(Defendants).* [19th June, 1896.]1896†
JUNE 9.APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.20 A. 457 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 112.Muhammadan law—Pre-emption—Talab-i ishtishhad—Reference to talab-i-mawasibat necessary.

A pre-emptor claiming pre-emption under the Muhammadan law is bound at the time when he makes his talab-i-ishtishhad to state distinctly that he has already made talab-i-mawasibat. Rajjub Ali Chopedar v. Chunai Churn Bhadra (1) followed.

[F., 20 A. 499.]

IN this case the appellant, a Muhammadan lady, was plaintiff in a suit for pre-emption, in respect of a share in certain zamindari and house property. The Court of first instance (Munsif of Hawali, Bareilly) decreed the claim. The defendant vendee appealed. The lower appellate Court, (District Judge of Bareilly) decreed the appeal and dismissed the suit. The District Judge found that, while the plaintiff had, on hearing of the sale which gave rise to her claim for pre-emption, at once declared that she was the shafi, thereby making the talab-i-mawasibat properly according to Muhammadan law, she had, in making the talab-i-ishtishhad, which was made through an agent, omitted to refer to the fact of the talab-i-mawasibat having been made. The learned Judge accordingly held, that the strict formalities required by the Muhammadan law had not been complied with, and, as [458] stated above, dismissed the plaintiff's suit. The plaintiff thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Mr. Amir-ud-din, for the appellant.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—This is a second appeal of a plaintiff in a pre-emption suit. The lady who is the pre-emptor and appellant here has been defeated by a finding of the lower appellate Court that she has not fully satisfied the requirements of the Muhammadan law in making the talab-i-ishtishhad. The facts are, as found by the lower appellate Court, that the lady was inside her house when she received intelligence of the transaction which gave rise to her pre-emptive right. She at once declared that she was the shafi. That is beyond doubt a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the law as to the immediate demand.† She thereupon instructed an agent to communicate to the vendee, who was outside the house, her intention of exercising her right. The learned Judge says that certain persons appear to have accompanied the agent as witnesses. It is admitted that when the second demand was made to the vendee no words were used referring to the prior demand which had been

* Second Appeal No. 381 of 1896 from a decree of E.J. Kitts, Esq., District Judge of Bareilly, dated the 18th February 1896, reversing a decree of Munshi Girraj Kishore Datt, Munsif of Hawali, Bareilly, dated the 4th December 1895.

† [N.B.—The date of the judgment as given in 18 A.W.N. (1898) 112 is 1898, June 9. This seems to be the correct date.—ED.]

‡ See Ali Muhammad Khan v. Muhammad Said Husain (18 A. 309)—ED.

(1) 17 C. 543.

1896
JUNE 9.

—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 457 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 112.

made inside the house. This is found by the Judge to be an insufficient compliance with the law. We think that he was right for the reasons set forth in the judgment of the Full Bench of the Calcutta Court in the case of Rujjub Ali Chopedar v. Chundi Churn Bhadra (1). The decision of that Court is one in which we concur. We are informed that this ruling has been followed in other cases in this Court.*

We dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 459 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 117.

[459] APPELLATE CRIMINAL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. PRAG DAT AND OTHERS.†
[13th June, 1898.]

Criminal Procedure Code (1882), s. 417—Appeal by Government from an acquittal on the same footing as an appeal from a conviction—Act No. XLV of 1860, ss. 96 et seq—Right of private defence.

When a body of men are determined to vindicate their rights or supposed rights by unlawful force and when they engage in a fight with men who, on the other hand, are equally determined to vindicate by unlawful force their rights or supposed rights, no question of self-defence arises.

In the Code of Criminal Procedure there is no apparent distinction between the right of appeal against an acquittal and a right of appeal against a conviction. Empress v. Gayadin (2), and Queen-Empress v. Gobardhan (3) referred to.

[F., 24 A. 143 (145); R., 21 A. 122 (124); 24 A.W.N. (1904) 113; 35 O. 363 = 7 C.L.J. 359 (364) = 12 C.W.N. 384 = 3 M.L.T. 385 = 7 Cr. L.J. 256; 97 P.L.R. 1904; 7 P.R. 1904 (Cr.) = 1 Cr. L.J. 1022 = 2 L.B.R. 303; U.B.R. 1905, 2nd Qr., Penal Code, p. 21; D., 10 O.C. 196 (199).]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court. The Officiating Government Advocate (Mr. A. E. Ryves), with whom Messrs. C. Dillon and B. E. O'Connor, for the Crown.

Mr. W. Wallach and Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KERSHAW, C.J., and KNOX, J.—This is an appeal presented by the Government Advocate from an original order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Court of Farrukhabad. That Court had before it six Chaube Brahmans, all relatives, and a Gadaraya, the servant of the Brahmans, charged with offences under ss. 148 and 302 of the Indian Penal Code, committed at Madhonagar on the 23rd of July 1897.

There can be no room for doubt that the case is one of conflict between the Thakurs and Chaube Brahmans of Madhonagar. They are at dispute over a strip of waste land. The Chaubes assert that the land appertains to a grove which is admitted to belong to them. The Thakurs, on the other hand, maintain that the disputed land is part of their cultivation, which as a fact does adjoin it.

* See Akbar Husain v. Abdul Jahl (16 A. 383)—ED.

† Criminal Appeal No. 323 of 1898.

(1) 17 C. 543.

(2) 4 A. 148.

(3) 9 A. 528.

[460] On the 23rd of July the dispute between the parties resulted in a fight, and in this fight one Ajudhia, a servant of the Thakurs, was shot dead. Laltu, the Gadaraya, is charged with having fired the gun. The prosecution says that he fired in pursuance of the common object of the Brahmans, who were attempting by show of force to enforce their alleged rights over this strip of land. Hence the charge laid under the sections above quoted against all the seven respondents. Both the Thakurs and the Brahmans have been arrested on account of this disturbance.

As usual, in cases of this kind the police have found it difficult to secure independent testimony of what did take place. Those of the villagers who were present and looking on, would probably by sympathy and bias, be so attached to one or other of the disputing parties that it would be hopeless to get disinterested and reliable evidence from them. Three witnesses have been found, a barber and a weaver of Bhawan Sarai, and a carpenter of Akramabad, both of them villages within a mile's distance from Madhonagar. It is not suggested by the defence that any one of these three is suspected of bias or partisanship. It is upon their evidence that the Sessions Court acquitted the Brahmans, and it is upon their evidence that the Government Advocate asks us to convict the Brahmans.

We have examined this evidence most minutely, and have been assisted in doing so by careful criticisms on the part of the Government Advocate and the learned counsel who appears for the accused. Undoubtedly these statements differ in points of detail, but they all agree on the following facts:—That the Thakur party consisted of from thirty to fifty men, and that one of that party had a gun and the rest were armed with lathis; that on the other side were arrayed the seven accused; one of them, Laltu, carried a gun; the others had nothing in their hands except that, according to Chedda and Buddha, they carried sticks. All agree in saying that the Thakurs gave orders for the demolition of a thaonla, or mud wall, probably three feet high, round a neem tree; that upon this the Chaubes interfered and begged that the matter be referred [461] to Court. Words ensued, then blows, and almost immediately Laltu fired at Ajudhia on the Thakur's side and shot him dead on the spot. Upon this all are said to have run away. The defence put forward on behalf of two of the accused is an alibi. The others say that they went to the assistance of Ganga Bakhsh; that they were beaten; that they had no weapons of any kind, and beat no one. Ganga Bakhsh says he was on the spot gathering flowers; found the Thakurs intent upon demolishing the thaonla; remonstrated, and was beaten and became unconscious. Laltu says he carried no gun on that day.

The contention of Mr. Wallach, who appeared for the defence, is that upon the evidence of these very three witnesses, it is established that the Chaubes were on the spot for a lawful purpose; that they continued throughout a lawful assembly, that Laltu did not come on the spot with them, but after them and quite independently. Laltu had been out shooting birds, and his act, even according to the witnesses for the Crown, was an independent act done in the lawful exercise of the right of private defence. He accordingly contends that none of the accused was guilty of any offence, and that the order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Court of Farrukhabad was the right and proper order. He further contended, on the authority of Queen-Empress v. Gayadin (1)

1898
JUNE 13.
—
APPEL-
LATE CRIMINAL.
—
20 A. 459=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 117.

(1) 4 A. 148.

1898
JUNE 13.
—
APPEL-LATE CRIMINAL
—
20 A. 459 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 117.

and Queen-Empress v. Chotu (1) that this Court has held that the extraordinary powers conferred by s. 417 of the Criminal Procedure Code, should be most sparingly enforced, and in respect of pure decisions of fact, only in those cases where, through the incompetence, stupidity or perversity of a subordinate tribunal, such unreasonable or distorted conclusions have been drawn from the evidence as to produce a positive miscarriage of justice. In the present case, the judgment cannot be said to be open to any of these criticisms, and is therefore not a judgment to be interfered with.

Upon turning to the judgment we find that the reasons given by the learned Sessions Judge for acquitting the accused are that [462] they were a lawful assembly; that Laltu fired and was justified in firing, and he had reason to apprehend that the Brahmans might otherwise be killed, and that therefore there was no riot committed; and it has not been shown that Ajudhia was shot in pursuance of any common object of the assembly of Chaubes, or that the shooting was contemplated by the Chaubes as likely.

The contention that Laltu did not form part of the assembly of Chaubes, but came up independently, is based by Mr. Wallach upon a few words which occur in the cross-examination of the witness Buddha. They are to this effect:—

"I saw Prag Dat and Becha Lal (both of them Chaubes) when they came up. Laltu came afterwards. He came from shooting somewhere from the direction of the grove south." The other two witnesses say simply that they saw the Chaubes opposed to the Thakurs, and among the Chaubes was Laltu, Gadariya. Even Buddha places Laltu among the Chaubes from the very commencement of the fight. Laltu was a servant of the Chaubes, and we are satisfied, without any question of doubt, on the evidence of all three witnesses compared together, that Laltu was there in concert and full understanding with the Chaube party. His prompt appearance on the spot, and the precision and readiness with which he, only a servant, acted in concert with his masters, satisfies us that all seven were acting with a common understanding and common intent, and that intent was to prevent the demolition of the thaonla, if possible without violence, if necessary by resort to violence, and to extreme violence. We cannot leave out of consideration that the dispute was practically over the removal of a mud wall which could have at any moment been reconstructed at a nominal cost, and the demolition of which would not dissipate all possibilities of recovery of possession, if recourse had been had to Courts of law. If a body of men go down to meet another body of men evidently intent upon picking a quarrel over a piece of mud wall, go down armed with a loaded gun and use that gun within a short interval of their arrival, it is for them to rebut the inference which at once [463] arises that their intention was by means of criminal force, or show of criminal force, to enforce their rights or supposed rights. We cannot agree with the view taken by the learned Judge, that the Chaubes were in this case entitled to defend their possession prima facie by force. The use of force in defence of property by private individuals is a matter defined by law. The presence of Laltu with his gun, unexplained as it is by any evidence for the defence, proves that the Chaubes were prepared to defend this mud thaonla even to the voluntarily causing of death; and the burden lay heavily upon them of proving that they acted under reasonable apprehension that death or serious hurt would be the consequence if the right of private defence were not exercised. The harm intended was so slight that persons of ordinary sense and temper would have, and should have, refrained from taking the law into their own hands.

(1) 9 A. 52.

As regard Laltu, the defence is more explicitly and directly a defence that he acted in exercise of the right of private defence. The law in India is that when a person is accused of an offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Indian Penal Code is upon the accused, and it is directed by the Statutes that the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances. The learned Sessions Judge has entirely overlooked this provision of the law. He has not presumed the absence of circumstances bringing the case within the general exceptions which permit the plea of the right of private defence being raised. The fact that forty or fifty persons began the attack, and that after the attack began, Laltu fired a shot which struck Ajudhia, is not enough to show that Laltu was justified in firing. Laltu had to prove that he had reason to apprehend that the Brahmans might be killed. He gave no evidence of this, or of facts from which we could hold it proved. In criminal appeal No. 280 of 1897, Queen-Empress v. Rupa decided on the 27th of March, 1897. Sir John Edge held that when a body of men are determined to vindicate their rights, or supposed rights, by unlawful force, and when they engage in a fight with men who, on the other [464] hand, are equally determined to vindicate by unlawful force their rights or supposed rights, no question of self-defence arises. Neither side is trying to protect itself, but each side is trying to get the better of the other. This appears to us to be a true and sound exposition of the law. The learned Judge, in taking the view he did, has erred both in matter of fact and matter of law, and his order must, in the interests of justice, be set aside. With reference to the contention based upon Queen-Empress v. Gayadin (1), it must not be forgotten that the learned Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Straight, in Queen-Empress v. Gobardhan (2) did not consider that they were departing from and doing violence to the principles laid down in Queen-Empress v. Gayadin, and did set aside an order of acquittal where they were satisfied that the Sessions Judge had overlooked important circumstances. Indeed it is not easy to see any distinction in the Criminal Procedure Code between the right of appeal against an acquittal and a right of appeal against a conviction. In both cases the appellant has to satisfy us that there does exist some good and strong ground apparent upon the record for interfering with the deliberate determination by a Judge who has had all the evidence before him and has arrived at the determination with that great advantage in his favour.

We are satisfied upon the evidence that all the seven accused did go down to the field with the intention of enforcing their rights, or supposed rights, by show of criminal force, and, if need arose, by use of criminal force, and that they thus were members of an unlawful assembly; further that force was used by Laltu in prosecution of the common object of such assembly. All the accused are therefore guilty of the offence of rioting. In prosecution of the common object of the assembly, Laltu caused the death of Ajudhia by shooting him, and with the knowledge that what he did was so imminently dangerous that it must in all

1898
JUNE 13.
—
APPEL-
LATE CRIMINAL.
—
20 A. 459 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 117.

(1) 4 A. 148.

(2) 9. A. 528.

1898
JUNE 13.
 —
APPEL-LATE
CRIMINAL

probability cause his death. We find Prag Dat, Beche Lal, Ganga Bakhsh, Jamna Prasad, Chote Lal, Din Dial and Laltu guilty [465] of the offence of murder committed in the course of rioting, and by virtue of s. 149, read with s. 302 of the Indian Penal Code, we direct that Prag Dat, Beche Lal, Ganga Bakhsh, Jamna Prasad, Chote Lal, Din Dial and Laltu suffer each and all of them transportation for life.

20 A. 459 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 117.

20 A. 465 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 131.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

UMRAO BIBI (Defendant) v. JAN ALI SHAH (Plaintiff).^{*}
 [14th June, 1898.]

Suit for cancellation of a deed—Muhammadian law—Plea that the deed was inoperative according to the personal law of the parties.

Held, in the case of a deed of gift between Muhammadians, that it was no ground for cancellation of the deed that, possession of the property, the subject of the deed, not having been made over to the donee, the deed might be, according to the Muhammadian law, inoperative.

[R., 3 O.C. 231 (234).]

THIS was a suit for cancellation of a deed of gift dated the 4th of January 1895, executed by the plaintiff in favour of the defendant, his niece, and assigning to the latter a one anna share in a certain village. The plaintiff alleged, that he had really intended to convey the share in dispute to his own daughter, but, that the defendant's husband had fraudulently caused the deed to be executed in favour of the defendant. The plaintiff further pleaded that possession of the property, the subject of the deed had not been made over, and that the deed was therefore void according to the Muhammadian law.

The Court of first instance (Munsif of Bansi) found against the plaintiff on the allegation of fraud, but, finding that possession had not been delivered under the deed, held that the gift, being not complete, was liable to be revoked, and accordingly decreed the plaintiff's claim.

The defendant appealed, and the lower appellate Court (District Judge of Gorakhpur) dismissed the appeal, affirming the decree of the Munsif. The defendant thereupon appealed to the High Court.

[466] Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Babu Satya Chundar Mukerji, for the appellant.

Mr. Amiruddin, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR, J.—The plaintiff's suit was for cancellation of a deed of gift. It was based on the allegation that the execution of the deed had been obtained by fraud. There was an allegation in the plaint, apparently intended to support the plaintiff's statement that he never made such a deed, to the effect that he had never given up to the defendant possession of the property the subject of the deed of gift. The allegation of fraud has been found not to have been proved, and the plaintiff relies upon the ground that a deed of gift, made without possession being given of the subject of that deed, is void in law. The plaintiff is in this dilemma. If the deed is a nullity for lack of giving over of possession, it is a document from which the plaintiff can entertain no reasonable apprehension of injury. If, on the other hand, possession was non-essential to its validity, then it would be a good deed of gift. In either the one or the other case it is not a document which a Court can be properly called upon to cancel. I would allow the appeal and dismiss the plaintiff's suit with costs.

^{*} Second Appeal No. 416 of 1896, from a decree of V. A. Smith, Esq., District Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 5th March 1896, confirming a decree of Babu Keshab Deb, Munsif of Bansi, dated the 15th November 1895.

BURKITT, J.—I am also of the same opinion, and am of opinion that the appeal must be allowed and the suit dismissed.

The plaintiff came into Court alleging an act of fraud against the defendant, in that he (the plaintiff) had been fraudulently made to execute a deed of gift in favour of the defendant, who was his niece, he at the time believing that it was in favour of his own daughter. Further on, in his plaint he alleged that no transfer of possession had taken place, apparently adducing that matter in corroboration of the allegation of fraud. In the first Court the plaintiff failed to prove the allegation of fraud, and as to possession, it was found that no transfer had taken place. The Munsif thereupon records:—"I find that defendant did not take possession of the gifted property, and hence the gift not being complete is liable to be revoked. Hence I give a decree for the plaintiff for [467] cancellation of the deed." Now as to those words, it is to be remarked that the plaintiff nowhere asserted any revocation of the deed of gift; so the Munsif set up for the plaintiff a case he had not made and a case totally inconsistent with the plaintiff's case; and though the Munsif says:—"Hence I give a decree," he has not referred to any authority justifying such action. The defendant being defeated in the first Court, appealed to the District Judge, and of course based her appeal on the question decided against her by the Munsif, i.e., the question of transfer of possession. On that issue the Judge in appeal concurred with the Court below, and affirmed the decree cancelling the deed. The ground on which the deed has been cancelled has been explained to us to-day by the learned counsel for the respondent to be because it violated the rule of Muhammadan law, which requires that transfer of possession shall accompany a gift of immoveable property. It may be that the deed of gift is open to that objection; it may be that it is a deed not worth the paper it is written on; it may be that no action could successfully be taken on it in any Court, and that it is perfectly ineffectual for the purpose it purports to effect; I do not decide any of those points. But, assuming that the deed is open to all those objections, assuming it is waste paper, I am of opinion that that is no reason why a Court of Justice should be called on solemnly to cancel that which had no existence in law. Had the plaintiff made out the allegation of fraud, the case would have been different. Proof of that allegation would have been ample reason for cancelling the deed, but that allegation having failed, I see no reason why the document should be set aside simply because it may turn out to be one which has not complied with the provisions of the Muhammadan law.

[By the Court:—The order of the Court is, we allow the appeal, set aside the decrees of the two lower Courts, and dismiss the suit of the plaintiff with costs in all courts.]

Appeal decreed.

N.B.—The portion in rectangular brackets forms part and parcel of the judgment. The same has been omitted in I.L.R. ED.

1898
JUNE 14.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

20 A. 468—
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 131.

1896

JUNE 15.

APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 468=18 A.W.N. (1898) 113.

[468] APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.*TOTA RAM AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. LALA (Plaintiff).*
[15th June, 1896.]20 A. 468=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 113.Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 135—Actionable claim—Sale of mortgagor's interest in mortgaged property.

The sale by a mortgagor of his interest in the property mortgaged is not the sale of an actionable claim within the meaning of s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

THIS was a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage. One Lala, the uncle of Diwan Singh, defendant, executed a usufructuary mortgage of certain property for Rs. 600 in favour of Man Singh, and put the mortgagee in possession. Man Singh sold his rights in the mortgaged property to Diwan Singh and four others, defendants, and gave the vendees possession. Lala, the mortgagor, died and was succeeded by Diwan Singh, his nephew. Diwan Singh sold his interest as a mortgagor to the plaintiff Lala. Lala, plaintiff, brought a suit for redemption, and paid the mortgage money (Rs. 600) into Court. The defendants, other than Diwan Singh, who, not impleaded at first, was added by the Court to the array of defendants, pleaded that out of a nominal sale consideration of Rs. 1,000 only Rs. 50 had in fact been paid, and they claimed the benefit of s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act, alleging that they were entitled to defeat the plaintiff's suit on payment of the actual price paid (stated by them to be Rs. 50) and the expenses of the sale. They pleaded also a right to take the property mortgaged as pre-emptors; that there was another mortgage on the property which the plaintiff was also bound to redeem, and that the sale in favour of the plaintiff was executed without consideration.

The Court of first instance (Munsif of Khurja) gave the plaintiff a decree for redemption and possession as prayed. The defendants appealed. The Additional District Judge confirmed the decree of the Munsif and dismissed the appeal. From that decree the defendants appeal to the High Court.

[469] Pandit Sundar Lal (for whom Babu Jivan Chandar Mukerji), for the appellants.

Munshi Ram Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—This appeal, one ground only, the third, being urged upon us, is based on the contention that the purchase of the mortgagor's interest in land subject to mortgage is a purchase of an actionable claim within the meaning of s. 135 of the Transfer of Property Act. We are not prepared to accede to so novel a contention for which no authority is produced. In our opinion, what was effected by the purchase was the transfer of the land itself subject to the mortgage.

*Second Appeal No. 445 of 1896, from a decree of T. C. Piggot, Esq., Additional District Judge of Aligarh dated the 13th March 1896, confirming a decree of Pandit Soti Raghubans Lal, Munsif of Khurja, dated the 20th November, 1895.

[N.B.—The date of the judgment as given in 18 A.W.N. (1898) 113 is June 15, 1898. This seem to be the correct date. ED.]

It seems to us a totally different thing from, and bears in our mind no analogy whatever to, the purchase of a mortgagee's interest in a mortgage after the mortgage has become due and payable. We dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 469 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 114.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

YUSUF ALI KHAN AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. HIRA AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [16th June, 1898.]

Landholder and tenant—Act No. XII of 1881 (N.W.P. Rent Act), s. 93 (b)—Suit to eject a tenant—Act inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was let—Sub-lease to a theatrical company.

An agricultural tenant, at a time when there were no crops growing on his holding, let part of it temporarily to a theatrical company for the purpose of their holding performances thereon. Held, that this was not an act sufficient to cause a forfeiture of the tenancy within the meaning of s. 93, clause (b) of Act No. XII of 1881.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Kunwar Parmanand, for the appellants.

The respondents were not represented.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—This was a suit brought under clause (b) of s. 93 of the Rent Act (No. XII of 1881) to eject an occupancy [470] tenant from his holding on the ground that he had committed an act detrimental to the land in his occupation and inconsistent with the purposes for which it was let. The act complained of was that in the month of October, when, according to the learned Judge of the lower appellate Court, there were no crops on the land, and none could have been grown, the defendants had let the land to a theatrical company for erecting a temporary pavilion for the purpose of their theatre. Both the Courts below have dismissed the suit, and I think rightly. The act was not detrimental to the land or inconsistent with the purpose for which it was let, within the meaning of clause (b). The tenant, having at a time when the land could not be sown with crops, let it to a theatrical company for the purpose of a theatre for a short period only, did not do an act detrimental to the land, and although, technically speaking, they did an act inconsistent with the purpose for which it was let, namely, cultivation, it does not seem to me that the Legislature contemplated that a tenancy would be liable to forfeiture, if the tenant did an act of this kind for a temporary purpose only, at a time when the land in the tenant's holding could not be cultivated. It is evident from the provisions of s. 149, as the learned Judge has pointed out, that the Legislature intended to give a tenant a locus penitentiæ and an opportunity to repair the damage done by him. In this case at the time when the Court of first instance made its decree, the land had been ^{*} Second Appeal No. 473 of 1897, from a decree of C. Rustomji, Esq., District Judge of Moradabad, dated the 25th March 1897, confirming a decree of A.W. McNair, Esq., Assistant Collector of Moradabad, dated the 13th November, 1897.

1896
JUNE 15.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 468 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 113.

1898
JUNE 16.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—

20 A. 469 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 114.

restored to its former condition and crops had been grown on it. The Courts below have, in my judgment, rightly held that the defendant's act did not entail the forfeiture of their occupancy holding. I dismiss the appeal, but without costs, as the respondents are not represented.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 471 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 116.

[471] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair.

DALIP RAI (Defendant) v. DEOKI RAI (Plaintiff).^{*}
DALIP RAI (Defendant) v. SUKHDEO RAI (Plaintiff).^{*}
DALIP RAI (Defendant) v. JOKHU RAI AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs).^{*}
[22nd June, 1898.]

Act No. XII of 1881 (N. W. P. Rent Act), s. 95 (n)—Landholder and tenant—Effect on tenant's rights of his neglecting to apply under s. 95.

A tenant of certain muafi land was dispossessed by his zamindars, as he alleged wrongfully. The dispossessed tenant did not avail himself of the remedy provided by s. 95, clause (n) of Act No. XII of 1881; but sometime after the expiry of the period of limitation for an application under that section, he dispossessed the zamindars, who had meanwhile taken the land in suit into their own cultivation. The zamindars thereupon sued in the Civil Court for the ejectment of the former tenant as a trespasser. Held, that the defendant could not set up in answer to this suit his status as tenant which he had lost by not availing himself within limitation of the means provided by s. 95, clause (n) of Act No. XII of 1881, to contest his own ejectment.

THESE were three connected appeals arising out of the following facts:—The plaintiffs, with others, were purchasers of a village, in which was comprised certain resumed muafi land, which had formerly been an assignment, or jagir, for the support of chaukidars. Before the assignment of the village to the plaintiffs and their co-sharers, this land appears to have been settled with the defendant. The purchasers subsequently partitioned the village, and the plots of land in suit, forming a portion of the above-mentioned resumed muafi, fell to the shares of the respective plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs came into Court, denying that the defendant had ever been a tenant of the land in question, and alleging that they had each and all been forcibly ejected by the defendant; and they sued for recovery of possession of their respective plots by ejectment of the defendant.

The defendant pleaded inter alia that he was a tenant, and that the suits were not cognizable by a Civil Court. The Court [472] of first instance (Munsif of Ghazipur) gave effect to this plea and dismissed the plaintiffs' suits.

The plaintiffs appealed. The lower appellate Court (Additional Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur) found that the defendant had been a tenant up to sometime in 1892, when he had been wrongfully dispossessed by the plaintiffs; but that, inasmuch as he had not availed himself of the remedy provided by law in clause (n) of s. 95 of Act No. XII of 1881, within the period limited by s. 96 of that Act, he had lost his title as well as his remedy. The Court accordingly decreed the plaintiffs' claim.

^{*} Second Appeals Nos. 430, 431 and 432 of 1897, from decrees of Maulvi Muhammad Ismail Khan, Additional Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur, dated the 26th April, 1897, reversing decrees of Munshi Achal Behari, Munsif of Ghazipur, dated the 20th February, 1897.

The defendant thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Munshi Haribans Sahai, for the appellant.

Mr. Abdul Majid, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR, J.—It is needless to recapitulate the admitted facts of this case. The plaintiff acquired title from a person who had resumed the land theretofore assigned for the support of chaukidars. Originally this plaintiff and the plaintiffs in the two connected cases held equal shares in the plot in question. They and the other co-sharers subsequently partitioned the land, and each became possessed in severalty of his own plot. The plaintiffs sue for possession each of his own plot on the allegation that the defendants are mere trespassers. The defendant alleges in his defence that he was, at the time of the dispossession alleged against him by the plaintiffs, the tenant of the plot in suit. Numerous collateral and subsidiary issues were raised, with which it seems unnecessary to deal in deciding these second appeals. The suits of the plaintiffs were dismissed in the Court of first instance on the finding that the defendant was a tenant. The plaintiffs appealed, and in the lower appellate Court, it was found that the defendant had been a tenant up to some time in 1892, when he was wrongfully dispossessed by the present plaintiffs; but that inasmuch as he had not availed himself of the remedy provided by law in clause (n) of s. 95 of Act No. XII of 1881, within the period limited by s. 96 of that Act, [473] he had lost his title as well as his remedy. It seems to me that that judgment is sound. S. 95 of Act No. XII of 1881 provides that the Revenue Courts only shall have jurisdiction to deal with the subjects and matters of the nature for which applications are prescribed as the proper remedy in that section. The section does not provide merely that no plaintiff may bring a suit on a subject or matter in relation to which one of such applications might be made, but that the Civil Court shall not "take cognizance of any dispute or matter" upon which an application of such a nature might have been made. The defendant here is setting up an existing tenancy in himself, which, if it did exist, would entitle him to recover possession and to continue in possession, up to and at the time when he himself forcibly dispossessed the plaintiffs. In other words, it is contended that he might lie by and neglect to take the steps provided by law within the time limited by law to recover the possession from which he had been wrongfully ousted and might by his own laches oust the jurisdiction of the Revenue Court and set up the jurisdiction of the Civil Court in relation to a matter which, if the subject of contention, could have been brought only in the Revenue Court within a period of six months. That would be the result of allowing him to set up in a Civil Court his title as a tenant in answer to a charge of trespass after the expiration of that period. It seems to me that, apart from the wording of s. 95 of the Rent Act, it was intended that the landlord should not be liable for an indefinite time to the dispossession, perhaps, of some tenants whom he had been induced to let in as tenants, and who perhaps might have incurred heavy expenses, in the belief that the excluded tenant had by declining to avail himself of the remedy provided by law manifested his intention of abandoning his tenancy. That disposes of the one question in this appeal. There is a secondary one, namely, that of res judicata, into which I decline to allow the appellant to enter. It

1898
JUNE 22.

APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

20 A. 471—
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 116.

1898
JUNE 22.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

20 A. 471=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 116.

was expressly stated by the Judge in the lower appellate Court that that point and another or others were not pressed on him. It seems to me that it [474] is not open to a litigant to practically abandon a portion of his contention in one Court and then at his convenience to resuscitate it in another. The effect is that these appeals will be dismissed with costs.

Appeals dismissed.

20 A. 474=18 A.W.N. (1898) 132.

REVISIONAL CIVIL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

CHATARBUI DAS (Defendant) v. GANESH RAM (Plaintiff).^{*}
[27th June, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 516—Award—Decree passed on award filed in Court without notice of its filing being sent to the parties—Revision.

Held, that it was a good ground for revision of a decree based upon an award filed in Court that no notice of the filing of the award was given by the Court to the parties as required by s. 516 of the Code of Civil Procedure, even though the applicant in revision might have received information alunde that the award had been filed. Rangasami v. Muttusami (1) followed.

[F., U.B.R. (1897-1901), Vol. II, 24; R., 17 Ind. Cas. 430 (431)=15 O.C. 294.]

THE plaintiff and defendant in this case having agreed to refer the matters in dispute between them to arbitration, the plaintiff applied to the Court to have the agreement of reference filed in Court. A summons was issued to the defendant, but he did not put in a defence. The case was proceeded with ex parte, and the agreement of reference was filed in Court, and ultimately, on the 17th February 1898, the award based on the said agreement was filed within the time limited by the Court. The defendant on the 3rd of March 1898, filed a vakalatnamah authorizing his pleader to object to the award, and on the 18th March objections were filed. The material objection of the defendant was that no notice of the filing of the award had been given to him by the Court as required by s. 516 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The Court (Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri) held that under the circumstances of the case such notice was not necessary, as the defendant in fact knew that the award [475] had been filed. The Court further held that the defendant's objections were barred by limitation under art. 158 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act, and accordingly disallowed the objections and ordered that a decree should be prepared in accordance with the award. Against this order the defendant applied in revision to the High Court.

Mr. W. Wallach and Babu Badri Das, for the appellant.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Pandit Baldeo Ram, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

KERSHAW, C. J. and BURKITT, J.—This is an application calling on this Court to exercise its revisional powers in respect of a decree passed on the 28th of March 1898, by the Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri on an award submitted by arbitrators appointed by the parties. The first ground taken in the petition of revision, and the only ground argued before us, is that the learned Subordinate Judge acted with material irregularity, in the exercise of his jurisdiction, in that he passed the decree on the award without first having sent to the parties the notice required by s. 516 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It is admitted that notice was not sent; but it was contended, and it is probably true, that the applicant did know that the award had been filed. That matter, however, we regard as immaterial; it was the duty of the Court to send notice. The applicant, in our opinion, might have remained inactive in the case, and was not bound to take any steps in it until he received notice from the Court. This case is on all fours with the case of Rangasami v. Muttusami (1). In that case it was observed that the Court of the Munsif which passed the decree was bound to give the petitioners notice of the filing of the award, which it failed to do, and that the omission to do so was a material irregularity. The High Court further went on to hold that the Munsif should not have proceeded to pass a decree in conformity with the award without first hearing the petitioner's objections. In these observations we fully concur, and adopting the form of [476] the decree used by the Madras Court, we allow this application. We set aside the decree of the Subordinate Judge. We direct him to restore the suit to the file, and after considering the objections which we understand have been filed by the applicant, to pass such orders as appear to be just. The applicant will have his cos's of this application.

* Civil Revision No. 24 of 1898.

(1) 11 M. 144.

1898
JUNE 27.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CIVIL.
—
20 A. 474 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 132.

20 A. 476 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 121.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Aikman.

RANJIT (Plaintiff) v. RADHA RANI AND ANOTHER (Defendants) *
[27th June, 1898.]

Act No. XV of 1856 (Re-marriage of Hindu Widows), s. 2—Hindu Law—Hindu widow—Rights of widow in deceased husband's property—Widows whose re-marriage is valid independently of the Statute.

Held, that a Hindu widow belonging to the Kurmi caste, in which the re-marriage of widows was permitted, by custom of the caste, independently of Act No. XV of 1856, was not, by reason of her re-marriage, deprived of her right to remain in possession of her deceased husband's estate during her lifetime, and that a suit brought during her lifetime by the reversioners to the estate of her husband to obtain immediate possession of such estate could not succeed. Har Saran Das v. Nandi (2), and Dharam Das v. Nand Lal Singh (3) followed.

[Diss., 8 C.L.J. 542; F., 29 A. 122 = 3 A.L.J. 729 = A.W.N. (1906) 299; R., 31 A. 161 = 6 A.L.J. 107 = 1 Ind. Cas. 761 (762); A.W.N. (1908) 149; 38 C. 862 (871) = 13 C.L.J. 558 = 15 C.W.N. 579 (583) = 10 Ind. Cas. 69 (73); 15 C.P.L.R. 89 (91); 17 Ind. Cas. 133 (135) = 8 N. L. R. 128 (131)]

IN this case the plaintiff claimed certain immoveable property which had been owned in his lifetime by one Ganga Prasad, a somewhat remote collateral. Ganga Prasad had died in 1893, leaving him surviving his step-mother Radha Rani, who was actually in possession of the property, and a widow, Sugna. Sugna had married again after the death of Ganga

* Second Appeal, No. 546 of 1896, from a decree of F. W. Fox, Esq., District Judge of Jhansi, dated the 20th April 1896, confirming a decree of Mr. Az'zul Rahman, Subordinate Judge of Jhansi, dated the 4th March 1896.

(1) 11 M. 144.

(2) 11 A. 330.

(3) 9 A.W.N. (1889) 78.

1898
JUNE 27.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 476 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 121.

Prasad. The parties were Kurmis, amongst whom the re-marriage of widows is permitted. The plaintiff, however, alleged that the defendant Sugna had by her re-marriage lost all right to her deceased husband's property, and that, inasmuch as Radha Rani, being the step-mother of the last owner, could not be his heir, he (the plaintiff) was entitled to the property.

[477] The Court of first instance dismissed the plaintiff's suit, holding that Sugna was the real heir to the property claimed. The plaintiff appealed, and his appeal was likewise dismissed on a similar finding. The plaintiff thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Babu Ratan Chand, for the appellant.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is the suit of a plaintiff, who alleges that, failing the right of a Hindu widow of the Kurmi caste who has re-married to the property of her first husband, he is the heir. He impleads the person in actual possession of the property, who is the mother-in-law of the widow, the widow herself and her second husband. The question raised is one as to which there is a clear and absolute difference of opinion between the decisions of this Court and those of the Courts at Bombay and Calcutta, though there is indeed one case which has arisen in the Bombay High Court which has been decided to the same effect as the rulings laid down by this Court. The Allahabad decisions are in the cases of Har Saran Das v. Nandi (1) and Dhram Das v. Nand Lal Singh (2). Several unreported cases have all been decided in this Court in the same way. We see no reason to doubt the soundness of those decisions, which form, as far as we know, a consistent cursus curiæ in this Court. Another point was raised by the appellant to the effect that in the provisions of the wajib-ul arz a custom was alleged to exist to the effect that a widow among the Kurmi caste who re-marries loses thereby the right to her husband's property. It is found as a fact upon evidence by the Judge of the lower appellate Court that no such custom is proved. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 478 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 128.

[478] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Aikman.

JIWAT DUBE (Decree-holder) v. KALI CHARAN RAM AND OTHERS
(Judgment-debtors).^{*} [28th June, 1898.]

Execution of decree—Application for execution giving wrong date of decree—Amendment allowed after limitation—Amendment relating back to former applications.

J. obtained a decree on two mortgage bonds on the 25th November 1885. That decree was set aside, but another decree was passed in his favour on the 21st of September 1896. The decree-holder made several applications to execute the decree, but in each described the decree as of the 25th November ^{*} Second Appeal No. 577 of 1896, from a decree of Pandit Bansi Dhar, Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 29th April 1896, reversing a decree of Babu Dayanath, Munsif of Gorakhpur, dated the 7th May 1895.

(1) 11 A. 330.

(2) 9 A.W.N. (1889) 78.

1885. On the third application the judgment-debtor objected that the application was time-barred. The application was allowed to be amended, but the amendment took place after the expiry of limitation. Held that the amendment would relate back to the preceding applications, and execution of the decree was not time-barred. Ajudhia Ram v. Muhammad Munir (1) followed.

[R., 37 A. 899 (406) = 11 C.L.J. 285 = 5 Ind. Cas. 532; 2 A.L.J. 367 (369); 12 C.L.J. 192 = 14 C.W.N. 971 = 7 Ind. Cas. 19 (21); 14 C.W.N. 481 (485) = 5 Ind. Cas. 579 (580).]

IN this case Shambhu Prasad Dube and others obtained a decree against Ishar Dat and others on the 25th of November 1885. This was an ex parte decree, and was set aside on application by the judgment-debtors under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The decree-holders, however, obtained another decree in the same suit on the 21st of September 1886. Three applications for execution were filed, namely, on the 21st of January 1889, on the 14th of November 1891, and on the 14th of November 1894; but in each application the decree sought to be executed was described as the decree of the 25th of November 1885. Upon the third application—but apparently not before—the judgment-debtors took objection that the decree sought to be executed, namely, the decree of the 25th of November 1885 was time-barred. The representative of the original decree-holders applied for leave to amend his application, and the amendment prayed for was made on the 23rd of March 1895. The application for execution was allowed, subject to the applicant's filing a certificate of succession within one month. From this order the judgment-debtors appealed, and the lower appellate Court [479] (Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur) allowed the appeal and dismissed the application for execution. The decree-holder thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Munshi Jwala Prasad, for the appellant.

Mr. H. C. Niblett, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is the appeal of a decree-holder. The sole point urged upon us is one of limitation. It has been found that the application before the Court below was an application not made within three years of a previous legal application. The facts are these. An ex parte decree was obtained by the present decree-holder on the 25th November 1885. That decree was subsequently set aside. Another decree, however, was made in favour of the decree-holder on the 21st September 1886. That was then his only extant decree, the only one therefore capable of execution, and, we cannot doubt, the one he wished to execute. He made his first application on the 21st January 1889, within the three years' period, but, we are informed by Mr. Niblett, specified in his application the date November 25th, 1885, as being the date of the decree sought to be executed. Assuming that application to be a good one in point of law, the second application made on the 14th November 1891 would have been in point of time a good application. We are told, however, that the second application repeated the mistake as to the date of the decree. The third application was made on the 14th of November 1894, just therefore within time, were there no other objection. That application also described the decree as of the 25th of November 1885. The mistake in regard to the date of the decree passes through all these applications. Upon the third application the judgment-debtor took objection, that the decree sought to 1898

JUNE 28.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 478 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 128.

1898
JUNE 28.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 478=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 128.

be executed, to wit, the decree of the 25th of November 1885 was time-barred. The decree-holder applied for amendment by substituting the correct date of the only extant decree held by him against the judgment-debtor. The amendment was allowed after the lapse of the three years. Mr. Jwala Prasad invites us to say that the lower appellate Court was wrong in ruling that the [480] decree in relation to which the application was made was no longer capable of execution. He suggests that there never could have been any doubt as to the intention of the appellant, and it appears there could never have been any doubt in the minds of the judgment-debtors, as to the decree which was intended to be executed. He suggests, therefore, that the amendment was properly and rightly made and relates back to the date of the original informal application. In support of his contention he cites the judgment of this Court in Ajudhia Ram v. Muhammad Munir (1). It is there ruled that an application having once been admitted the date of a subsequent amendment would not by reason of such amendment become the date of the application. We approve of that ruling, and therefore hold that the third application was within time. Until the date of present application we are not aware of any objection taken by the judgment-debtors to the previous applications upon the ground of the erroneous date being specified as the date of the decree.

We therefore allow this appeal, and set aside the order of the lower appellate Court upon the preliminary point, but without costs, as it has arisen through the mistake of the decree-holder. We remand the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the decision of the remaining issues contained in the memorandum of appeal to the lower appellate Court.

*Appeal dismissed * and cause remanded.*

20 A. 480 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 129.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Aikman.

SADA SHANKAR AND ANOTHER (Defendants) v. BRIJ MOHAN DAS
(Plaintiff).† [29th June, 1898]

Act No. IX of 1887 (Provincial Small Cause Courts' Act), s. 23—Civil Procedure Code, s. 586—Suit of the nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes.

A suit is none the less a suit cognizable by a Court of Small Causes because that Court may have exercised the discretion conferred on it by s. 23 of [481] the Provincial Small Cause Courts' Act, and returned the plaint to be presented to a Court having jurisdiction to determine a question of title raised therein. Kali Krishna Tagore v. Izzat-an-nissa Khatun (2) followed.

IN this case the plaintiff Brij Mohan Das sued one Gopal Das in the Court of Small Causes at Benares for the rent of part of a house. He alleged in his plaint that he had purchased the said house from one Kanhaiya Lal, who himself had taken it as heir to one Musammam Dhani Bai, that he had let a portion of the said house to the defendant on the 7th June 1889, but that the defendant had not paid him any portion of

* In part.—ED.

† Second Appeal, No. 576 of 1896, from a decree of Babu Nil Madhub Rai, Subordinate Judge of Benares, dated the 2nd May 1896, confirming a decree of Maulvi Mubarak Husain, Munsif of Benares, dated the 19th September 1895.

(1) 13 A. W. N. (1893) 112.

(2) 24 C. 557.

the stipulated rent. The plaintiff accordingly claimed rent and interest for three years previous to the date of suit, amounting in all to Rs. 117-4. The defendant pleaded that the house belonged, not to the plaintiff, but to Sada Shankar and Rabi Shankar, to whom the rent claimed had been paid, and that the plaintiff had no concern whatever with the house in question. Rabi Shankar and Sada Shankar were accordingly made defendants to the suit. Subsequently the plaint was returned to the plaintiff to be presented in the proper Court. The plaint was accordingly presented in the Court of the Munsif, who heard the suit and decreed the plaintiff's claim. The defendant Sada Shankar appealed to the Subordinate Judge, who dismissed the appeal. Sada Shankar and Rabi Shankar thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Munshi Gokul Prasad, for the appellants.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and AIKMAN, JJ.—Mr. Ghulam Mujtaba's preliminary objection to the hearing of this appeal must prevail. A cause is none the less a cause cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, because that Court exercised the discretion conferred on it by s. 23 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts' Act No. IX of 1887, and returned the plaint to be presented to a Court having jurisdiction to determine the title. We concur with the judgment of the Calcutta Court in Kali Krishna Tagore v. Izzat-an-nissa Khatun (1). The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 482 (F.B.) = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 123.

[482] FULL BENCH.

Before Mr. Justice Blair, Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

BEHARI LAL AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. MUHAMMAD
MUTTAKI (Plaintiff).^{*} [30th June, 1898.]

Act No. XV of 1877 (Indian Limitation Act), sch. ii, arts. 134, 144—Trust—Mortgage—Limitation—Suit by trustee to set aside mortgages of trust property made by his predecessor in office

A sajjada nashin in possession of certain waqf property during the years 1864 to 1869 executed various mortgages of portions of the waqf property, professing to do so in his capacity of sajjada nashin. The mortgagor died in February 1891, and on the 6th of April 1891, was succeeded by his son as sajjada nashin. On the 25th of November 1893, the son brought a suit to recover possession of the mortgaged property, of which the mortgagees were in possession, on the ground that the mortgages were in violation of the trust and therefore invalid.

Held by the Court that the suit was barred by limitation.

Per BLAIR, J.—Whether or not art. 134 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, applies to the case is immaterial, if art. 134 does not apply.

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 927 of 1895, from a decree of Maulvi Muhammad Anwar Husain Khan, Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 6th August 1895, reversing a decree, of Munshi Bakhtawar Lal, Munsif of Farrukhabad, dated the 26th September 1894.

[N.B.—In 18 A.W.N. (1898) 123 this case is cited as Second Appeal No. 927 of 1897.—ED.]

(1) 24 O. 557.

1898
JUNE 30.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 482
(F.B.)=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 123.

the suit would be barred by art. 144 of the same schedule, limitation commencing to run against the trustee from the dates of the mortgagees obtaining possession under their respective mortgages. Nilmony Singh v. Jagabandhu Roy (1), Yesu Ramji Kalnath v. Balkrishna Lakshman (2), Bejoy Chunder Banerjee v. Kally Prosonno Mookerjee (3), and Madhava v. Narayana (4) referred to.

Per BANERJI, J.—The suit is barred by art. 134 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, which is as much applicable to a suit against a mortgagee for value from a trustee as to a suit against a person to whom the trustee has sold trust property for value. Gobind Nath Roy Bahadoor v. Ranee Luchmee Koomaree (5), Yesu Ramji Kalnath v. Balkrishna Lakshman (2), Maluji v. Fakir Chand (6), and Nilmony Singh v. Jagabandhu Roy (1) referred to.

Per AIKMAN, J.—The term "purchased" as used in art. 134 of the second schedule cannot be taken as including "mortgaged," but art. 144 would apply and be a bar to the suit.

[F., 2 C.L.J. 546 (549); Rel., 27 B. 363 (369)=4 Bom. L.R. 743; R., 29 A. 471 (479)=4 A.L.J. 375=A.W.N. (1907) 133; 27 B. 500 (511)=5 Bom. L.R. 303; 34 B. 329 335=12 Bom. L.R. 208=5 Ind. Cas. 965; 24 M. 471 483 (F.B.); 18 Ind. Cas. 319 320; 8 O.C. 233 239; 9 P.R. 1904; 30 P.R. 1908=35 P.W.R. 1908=102 P.L.R. 1908; 123 P.W.R. 1908 (F.B.)=127 P.R. 1908.]

THE facts of the case sufficiently appear from the judgments.

Munshi Haribans Sahai, for the appellants.

Mr. Amir-ud-din, for the respondent.

JUDGMENTS.

[483] BLAIR, J.—The suit out of which this second appeal arises was brought by the plaintiff respondent as sajjada nashin of a certain shrine to recover possession of certain land, the property of a shrine, by dispossession of the defendants and invalidation of the mortgages made to them by the plaintiff's predecessor in office, one Bande Ali. The plaintiff also prayed for mesne profits and costs. The plaintiff in his plaint alleged the cause of action to have arisen on February 26th, 1891, the date of the death of his father, the previous sajjada nashin, and upon the 6th of April 1891, the date of the plaintiff's accession to that office. The only substantial point in the statement of defence which is now at issue is the plea that the suit is barred by limitation. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit applying art. 134 of the second schedule of the Limitation Act. The lower appellate Court decided that art. 134 did not apply, that the defendants' possession as mortgagees was not adverse so long as their mortgagor was alive, and that consequently the suit of the plaintiff was not barred by adverse possession. It is found that the property is waqf and inalienable. It is not disputed that the mortgagees took possession of several plots at the dates of the mortgages in which they were respectively hypothecated. The mortgages were seven in number and were made on the following dates:—

1. The 18th of August, 1864.
2. The 14th of August, 1865.
3. The 29th of October, 1866.
4. The 7th of October, 1867.
5. The 17th of November, 1867.
6. The 14th of August, 1869.
7. The 19th of September, 1869.

The contentions of the parties were most ably put before us by Mr. Haribans Sahai for the appellants and by Mr. Amir-ud-din for the

(1) 23 C. 536.
(4) 9 M. 244.

(2) 15 B. 583.
(5) 11 W.R.C.R. 36.

(3) 4 C. 327.
(6) 22 B. 225.

respondent. For the appellants it was contended that the case fell within the provisions either of art. 134 or of art. 144 of the Indian Limitation Act, and that under either of them the suit was time-barred. The words of those articles are respectively [484] as follows:—Article 134. "A suit to recover possession of immoveable property conveyed or bequeathed in trust or mortgaged, and afterwards purchased from the trustee or mortgagee for a valuable consideration; period, 12 years; time from which period begins to run, the date of the purchase." Article 144. "A suit for possession of immoveable property or any interest therein not hereby otherwise specially provided for; period, 12 years; time from which period begins to run, when the possession of the defendant becomes adverse to the plaintiff." Now it appears to me clear that the mortgages impeached fall within the comprehensive exception provided in s. 10 of Act No. XV of 1877. The mortgagees are certainly "assigns for valuable consideration," and as such are entitled to the protection of such article of limitation as may be applicable to their case. It was part of Mr. Haribans Sahai's contention that the word "purchased" in art. 134, even if not co-extensive in its subject-matter with the alienations included in the assignments excepted by s. 10 of the Limitation Act, was used in that section in the technical sense of the word "purchase" which in English Law would include both a mortgage and a lease. In support of that proposition he cited the case of Nilmony Singh v. Jagabandhu Roy (1). The passage on which he relied is to be found on page 544. The opinion therein expressed is no doubt favourable to the contention of Mr. Haribans Sahai, but does not amount to a ruling. The case of Yesu Ramji Kalnath v. Balkrishna Lakshman (2), clearly lays down that the word "purchased" in art. 134 is used in the technical English sense and includes "mortgaged." Sir Charles Sargent, the Chief Justice, in delivering the judgment of the Court, refers to the case of Radanath Doss v. Gisborne & Co., to be found in (3), at page 15, in which the Privy Council, discussing s. 5 of Act XIV of 1859, say "purchaser means purchaser according to the proper meaning of the word," and puts upon that interpretation a construction limited by the peculiar circumstances of the case [485] before their Lordships. It is, however, in the view I take of the limitation applicable to the present suit, unnecessary for me to consider what the Privy Council intended to convey by the expressions above cited. If art. 134 applies, cadit quæstio, the period of limitation has long run out. If, however, art. 134 does not apply, we have then, in order to apply art. 144 as a bar to the plaintiff's suit, to find the time from which adverse possession commences. For that purpose it becomes necessary to consider the meaning of the word "assigns" in s. 10 of the Limitation Act. It is a word of the widest significance in respect to the nature of the transfers to which it relates. It does not in its accepted meaning import any restriction upon the quantum of interest transferred. The assignment of a lease or a mortgage would apparently lie within its purview, just as much as an out and out sale of immoveable property. In order to narrow its meaning it would be necessary to show that interests of a more limited kind would be outside the scope and policy of the enactment. No reason for such a restriction is apparent, and indeed it seems to me that the provisions of the Act would be practically nullified by attempting to draw any such distinction. To include in the section out and out sales and exclude leases or mortgages for enormous periods

1898
JUNE 30.—
FULL BENCH.—
20 A. 482
(F.B.)=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 123.

(1) 23 O. 536.

(2) 15 B. 588.

(3) 14 M. I.A. 1.

1898
JUNE 30.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 482
(F.B.)=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 123.

would reduce the operation of the section to a sheer futility. But if transfers for a period, however long, are held to be covered by the section, it seems impossible to draw a quantitative line, and to place transfers for some more limited period outside of it.

Whatever interpretation is put upon the word "purchase" in s. 134, this much is plain, that the effecting of such "purchase" creates ipso facto an actionable wrong, and confers upon every cestui que trust whose interests are affected an immediate right of action, which, in the case of "purchases" for value would subsist unimpaired for twelve years. It seems difficult to frame any plausible contention that under the provisions of that article no right of action would accrue during the incumbency of the alienating trustee, but would come into being only on the termination [486] of his trusteeship and would subsist for twelve years from such termination. That would place the alienator of an unauthorized trustee in a position differing materially for the worse from that of a squatter, who, without a shred of right or title, chose to take possession of a neighbour's land. The latter would acquire an unimpeachable title in twelve years, while the other would continue liable to extrusion for the period of the trustee's tenure of office plus the term of twelve years. The omission in s. 10 of Act No. XV of 1877, and also in art. 134 of the second schedule to the same Act of the words "in good faith," which found place in the corresponding provisions of Act No. IX of 1871, indicates clearly the intention of the Legislature to do away with any distinction among those who without right or title assume ownership of the property of others. Mutatis mutandis the same observations apply to art. 144. In that case also the construction contended for by the respondent's counsel would extend for an indefinite time the period of limitation. It appears to me that the suit contemplated by s. 10 of the Limitation Act is a suit by a cestui que trust to set aside an illegal alienation by his trustee, and by art. 134 the time from which limitation would begin to run is fixed as the date of the purchase. Under that article it is manifestly immaterial whether the trustee continued in his office or not. At the moment of sale the cause of action arose. It would hardly be consistent that under the comprehensive article applicable to all cases not specially provided for, i.e., art. 144, the period at which adverse possession would commence should be deferred till the trustee had ceased to hold office. Apart from authority it seems impossible as a matter of principle to hold that the possession derived from a trustee who had no right to authorize such possession, would be otherwise than adverse to the cestui que trust from the moment of its commencement. As far as the cestui que trust is concerned it would be wholly immaterial whether the intruder's possession was unauthorized by any human being whomsoever, or authorized only by a person who [487] had no right to give such authority. The case of Bejoy Chunder Banerjee v. Kally Prosonno Mookerjee (1), is in point, and in my opinion was rightly decided. To the same effect is the case of Madhava v. Narayana (2). The right of the present plaintiff to sue is a right not personal to himself, except in so far as he has an interest in common with other beneficiaries, but vests in him as the representative of the cestui que trustent, and it is in that capacity only that he now sues. The possession which he seeks to determine is a possession adverse to his cestui que trustent. I would hold therefore that limitation begins to run from the dates of the respective mortgages with possession, the latest of which was executed in 1869, and that the suit is therefore barred by the twelve years' rule.

(1) 4 C. 327.

(2) 9 M. 244.

BANERJI, J.—The only question which we have to determine in this appeal is whether, as contended by the defendants-appellants, the claim is barred by limitation.

The suit is by a sajjada nashin, or the superior of a shrine, to recover possession of property found to belong to the shrine which the plaintiff's predecessor in office mortgaged to the predecessor in title of the defendants, who are now in possession as usufructuary mortgagees. The mortgages were made between the years 1864 and 1869. The mortgagor, the last sajjada nashin, died on the 26th of February 1891. The plaintiff was appointed on the 6th of April of that year. The suit was instituted on the 25th of November 1893. It is contended on behalf of the plaintiff that limitation began to run from the date of his appointment to the office of sajjada nashin, or, at the earliest, from the date of the death of his predecessor, and not from the dates of the mortgages. On the other hand, it is urged that the dates of the mortgages should be held to be the dates from which the operation of limitation commenced.

Mr. Amiruddin, the learned counsel for the respondent, has relied in support of his contention on the ruling of their [488] Lordships of the Privy Council in Jewun Dass Sahoo v. Shah Kubeer-ood-deen (1) which was followed in Piran v. Abdool Karim (2). The Lords of the Privy Council held that it was the duty of the Government under the law then in force to protect endowments, that the plaintiff in that case was the procurator of Government, and that his right to sue accrued on his being appointed mutawalli or manager.

I am of opinion, that since the passing of Act No. XX of 1863, the manager of a religious endowment cannot be held to be a procurator of Government, and a suit by him for the protection of endowed property cannot be regarded as a suit on behalf of Government. Act No. XX of 1863, as its preamble recites, relieved the Government "from the duties imposed on them by Regulation XIX of 1810, so far as those duties embracethe appropriation of endowments made for the maintenance of religious establishments.....or involve any connection with the management of such religious establishments." A suit by the manager of an endowment brought after the passing of that Act would, in my opinion, be governed by the ordinary rule of limitation applicable to all plaintiffs other than the Government, and the ruling of their Lordships of the Privy Council referred to above cannot affect such a suit. This view is supported by the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Shaikh Laul Mahomed v. Lalla Brij Kishore (3).

We have next to consider what rule of limitation will apply to the present case. The learned vakil for the appellants urges that the suit is governed by art. 134 of the second schedule of the Indian Limitation Act; that, if that article is not applicable, art. 144 would apply, and that the defendants' possession must be held to be adverse from the dates of the mortgages made in their favour.

It must be taken upon the findings of the lower appellate Court that Bande Ali, the mortgagor, was the trustee of the [489] property of the shrine, and that he was in possession as manager and trustee.

(1) 2 M.I.A. 390.

(2) 19 C. 203 (218).

(3) 17 W.R.C.R. 430.

1898
JUNE 30.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 482
(F.B.) =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 123.

By s. 10 of Act No. XV of 1877 no suit against a trustee for trust property can be barred by lapse of time, but the section excludes from its operation suits against assigns from the trustee for valuable consideration. There is no question that a mortgagee is an assign, and it is not disputed that in this case the mortgagee took the mortgages from Bande Ali for valuable consideration. S. 10 therefore cannot be of any avail to the plaintiffs, and we must seek in the schedule the article which will govern the case. If article 134 is applicable, the claim is undoubtedly beyond time, the suit having been brought long after the lapse of twelve years from the dates of the mortgages under which the defendants are in possession. The suit referred to in the article is a suit "to recover possession of immoveable property conveyed or bequeathed in trust or mortgaged, and afterwards purchased from the trustee or mortgagee for a valuable consideration. Now the question is—Is a mortgagee from a trustee for valuable consideration a purchaser for valuable consideration? There can be no doubt that if we were to answer the question with reference to what an English lawyer would understand by a purchaser for valuable consideration, we must answer it in the affirmative, a mortgagee being a purchaser pro tanto (see Watson's Compendium of Equity, Volume II, page 1184). Was the expression used by the Indian Legislature also in the same sense in art. 134? The intention of the Legislature may be gathered from the history of the legislation on the subject. S. 2 of Act No. XIV of 1859 provided that a suit against a trustee or his representative for possession of trust property would not be barred by any length of time. S. 5 of the Act excluded from the operation of that section a bona fide purchaser for value from a trustee. It was held by the Calcutta High Court, with reference to that section, in Govind Nath Roy Bahadoor v. Ranee Luchmee Koomaree (1), that a mortgagee is a purchaser within the meaning of the section. In Act No. IX of 1871, which took the place of [490] Act No. XIV of 1859, it was enacted in s. 10, which was substituted for s. 2 of the former Act, that the rule that no limitation should operate against a trustee or his representative would not apply to a purchaser in good faith for value from a trustee. In Act No. XV of 1877 this protection was granted to all "assigns for valuable consideration" and the words "in good faith" were omitted. S. 5 of Act No. XIV of 1859, in so far as it related to purchasers from trustees, was in substance re-enacted in art. 134 of sch ii of Act No. IX of 1871, and art. 134 of the present Act is also to the same effect, with this exception that it does not require that the purchaser should be a purchaser in good faith. It seems to me that when in Act No. IX of 1871, the Legislature protected from the provisions of s. 10, purchasers from trustees, it provided a limitation for suits against such purchasers in art. 134. When the same protection was extended to all assigns for value in Act No. XV of 1877 and the Legislature did not provide any specific article to govern suits against such assigns other than art. 134, it must be presumed that it intended that article to apply to suits against all assigns for value and used the words "purchased for valuable consideration" in that article in the sense in which those words are ordinarily understood by lawyers, so as to include mortgages and leases. If art. 134 does not apply to such cases, the only other article applicable would be art. 144. But there appears to be no reason why the Legislature should have provided one rule of limitation in the case of a suit against a person to whom trust property is sold for value and another in the case of a mortgagee or other assign for value from a trustee. The principle applicable to both these classes of assigns and the policy upon which they were excluded from the operations of s. 10 are apparently the same. I am accordingly of opinion that art. 134 is as much applicable to a suit against a mortgagee for value from a trustee as to a suit against a person to whom the trustee has sold trust property for value. This view is supported by the ruling of the Bombay High Court (Sarjent, C. J., and Candy, J.) [491] in Yesu Ramji Kalnath v. Balkrishna Lakshman (1), which was followed by Farran, C. J., and Fulton, J., in Maluji v. Fakir Chand (2), and by the opinion expressed by the Calcutta High Court in Nilmony Singh v. Jagabandhu Roy (3), and we have not been referred to any case which ruled to the contrary. For the above reasons I hold that art. 134 applies in this case, and that the claim is barred by limitation.

(1) 11 W.R. 36.

As I am of opinion that art. 134 specially provides for a case like the present, art. 144, which governs suits for possession of immoveable property not specially provided for, is not applicable. Had that article, however, been in my opinion applicable, I should have had considerable hesitation in holding that in this case the possession of the mortgagees defendants became adverse to the beneficiaries from the date of the mortgage. Had the mortgage been made by the trustee in repudiation of the trust, and had he ignored the right of the beneficiaries and mortgaged the property as his own, the possession of the mortgagees might be regarded as adverse to the beneficiaries from the date of the mortgage, but where, as in this case, the mortgage was made by the trustee in his capacity as such and for alleged purposes of the trust, I doubt very much that the possession of the mortgagee could be held to be adverse to the beneficiary until after the death or removal of the trustee. Holding, however, the view that I do in this case it is not necessary to decide this question.

I would allow the appeal and dismiss the suit with costs.

AIKMAN, J.—I concur with my learned colleagues in thinking that this appeal must be allowed. Shortly stated, the following are the facts of the case:—There is in the Farrukhabad district a Muhammadan shrine called the Durgah of Hazrat Makhdum, for the support of which a grant of land was made in the time of the Muhammadan Emperors. Upwards of thirty years ago Bande Ali, the then curator of the shrine, mortgaged with possession a portion of this endowed property to the predecessor [492] in title of the defendants appellants. On the 26th February 1891 Bande Ali died, and, on the 6th of April following, his son, Muhammad Muttaki, the plaintiff-respondent, was appointed curator in his father's stead.

On the 25th of November, 1893 the plaintiff brought the suit out of which this appeal arises, not to redeem the mortgaged property, but to recover possession of it on the ground that the mortgages granted by Bande Ali were in violation of the trust and therefore invalid.

The Court of first instance dismissed the suit as barred by limitation. The lower appellate Court held that the suit was within time, and gave the plaintiff a decree. The defendants came her eins econd appeal.

(1) 15 B. 588.

(2) 22 B. 225.

(3) 23 C. 536.

1898
JUNE 30.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 482
(F.B.)=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 123.

The sole question we have to decide is whether the plaintiff's suit for possession is or is not beyond time.

S. 10 of the Limitation Act provides that no suit for the purpose of following trust property in the hands of a trustee or a trustee's legal representatives or assigns (not being assigns for valuable consideration) shall be barred by any length of time. It is clear from this that an assign from a trustee for valuable consideration acquires a good title by prescription. A mortgagee is an assign for valuable consideration. The defendants are therefore entitled to plead limitation, and the only point for consideration is which article of the second schedule of the Limitation Act applies.

In a somewhat similar case it was held by the Calcutta High Court that either art. 134 or art. 144 applied. If the words "purchased from" in art. 134 can be held to be equivalent to "mortgaged by," that article would exactly cover the present case. It has been held both by the Bombay and Calcutta High Courts that the word "purchased" here is used in its technical English sense, and is wide enough to cover the case of a mortgage. But we find this word used elsewhere in the same schedule, e. g., art. 138, and the context shows that there it cannot be used in the wide signification which has been attributed to it in art. 134.

[493] I prefer to look upon the case as falling under art. 144, and to hold that the mortgagees have acquired by prescription as against the beneficiaries a right pro tanto adverse so as to entitle them to retain possession of the property until they are redeemed. The ruling relied on by the learned counsel for the respondent, Piran v. Abdool Karim (1), is in his favour, but it appears to me that the learned Judge who decided that case has overlooked the fact that the ratio decidendi of the Privy Council decision in Jewan Dass Sahoo v. Shah Kabeer-ood-deen (2), has disappeared with the enactment of Act No. XX of 1863.

For the above reasons I concur in the decree proposed.

BY THE COURT.—The order of the Court is that the appeal is decreed with cost. The decree of the lower appellate Court is set aside with costs, and that of the Court of first instance restored.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 493 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 121.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

MUL CHAND AND OTHERS (Decree-holders) v. RAM RATAN
AND ANOTHER (Judgment-debtors.)*
[30th June, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 544—Decree proceeding upon ground common to several defendants—Decree upset in appeal but restored on appeal by one only of the defendants—Execution for costs by other defendants—Appeal—Decree to be executed where there has been an appeal.

A suit brought against several defendants was dismissed with costs. The plaintiffs appealed, and the case was remanded to the Court of first instance under * Second Appeal No. 551 of 1897, from a decree of W. F. Wells Esq., District Judge of Agra, dated the 22nd April 1897, reversing an order of Maulvi Siraj-ud-din Ahmad, Subordinate Judge of Agra, dated the 23rd January 1897.

(1) 19 C. 203.

(2) 2 M.I.A. 390.

s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. One of the defendants appealed against the order of remand to the High Court, which set aside the order of remand and restored the decree of the first Court.

Held, that, the decree of the first Court being restored in its entirety, the defendants who had not appealed were entitled to take out execution of that decree for the costs awarded to them by it, notwithstanding that they were not [494] parties to the decree of the High Court. Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v. Muhammad Yar Khan (1), distinguished; Shohrat Singh v. Bridgman (2), referred to.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the appellants.

Babu Satish Chandra Banerji, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—This appeal arises out of an application for execution and raises a question not free from difficulty. The facts are these. The respondents brought a suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Agra against several defendants, among whom were the present appellants. The suit was dismissed by the Court, and the present appellants were awarded their costs. The plaintiffs to the suit, now respondents, preferred an appeal to the District Judge. The appeal was allowed, the decree of the Court of first instance was set aside, and the case was remanded to that Court under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The present appellants did not appeal from the order of remand, but another defendant, Puran Chand, preferred an appeal to this Court, with the result that his appeal was allowed, the order of the District Judge was set aside, and the decree of the Court of first instance was restored with costs. The present appellants thereupon applied for execution for the recovery of the costs awarded to them by the Court of first instance. To this application the respondents, original plaintiffs, took objections. The Court of first instance disallowed the objection and granted execution. The lower appellate Court has set aside that order and has dismissed the application for execution. The present appellants question the propriety of this order of the lower appellate Court.

It is contended on behalf of the appellants that as the decree of this Court restored that of the Court of first instance, and as the Courts below had proceeded upon a ground common to all the defendants, the decree of this Court inured to the benefit of all [495] the defendants, including the present appellants, under s. 544 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and entitled them to recover the costs which the Court of first instance had awarded to them. On the other hand, it is urged on behalf of the respondents that the decree in the cause which was capable of execution was the decree of the High Court, and as that decree did not in terms award the costs of the first Court to the present appellants the latter were not entitled to take out execution for those costs. This is the view which the learned Judge of the lower appellate Court has adopted, and in support of it he has relied upon the ruling of this Court in Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v. Muhammad Yar Khan (1). All that was held in that case, so far as it has any bearing upon the present question, is that the decree of an appellate Court supersedes the decree of the first Court even where the decree merely affirms the original decree. One of the reasons for this conclusion was stated in the judgment of Edge, C.J., to be that it

1898
JUNE 30.

APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 493 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 121.

(1) 11 A. 267.

(2) 4 A. 376.

1898
JUNE 30.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 493=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 121.

was clear from s. 579 of the Code of Civil Procedure that "in any case the decree executed, not for the costs of the appeal but for the costs of the suit, is the decree of the appellate Court, and of that Court only." In that case the Court was dealing with a decree of an appellate Court in an appeal to which all the parties to the suit were parties. In this respect it was unlike the decree now under consideration. As I understand s. 579 of the Code of Civil Procedure, when it provides that the decree of the appellate Court should state by what parties and in what proportion the costs incurred in the appeal and the costs in the suit are to be paid, it refers to the parties who are parties to the appeal and not to parties who were not arrayed either as appellants or as respondents in the appeal, but who, under s. 544 of the Code of Civil Procedure, might take the benefit of the decree. This ruling therefore does not afford any help in the decision of the question now before us. It is true that the decree which a party should execute is, as held by the Full Bench in Shohrat Singh v. Bridgman (1) the final decree obtained by him [496] in appeal. But in this case, as the appellants were not parties to the appeal to this Court and no decree was formally made by this Court in their favour, they were not bound to take out execution of the decree of this Court. In fact, not being parties to that decree they were not competent to apply for its execution, and even if they did apply for its execution, they could not recover anything under it, as it did not award them in terms the costs of the first Court. The learned Judge of the lower appellate Court is of opinion that the appellants should apply for an amendment of the decree of the High Court and get their costs embodied in it. As they were no parties to that decree, and as they are not the representatives of any of the parties to that decree, they are not entitled under s. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure to apply for its amendment. This is not the case of a decree formally granted to the appellants by an appellate Court. In my opinion it is in the case of such a decree only that the decree of the appellate Court is the decree to be executed. In this case the lower appellate Court having proceeded upon a ground common to all the defendants, the High Court was competent, under s. 544 of the Code of Civil Procedure read with s. 587, to reverse the decree of the lower appellate Court in favour of all the defendants upon the appeal of any one of them. That section does not direct that in such a case the appellate Court should pass a decree in favour of the persons who are not before it in appeal, but the effect of that section is to make a decree passed in favour of one only of the defendants or plaintiffs under the circumstances mentioned in it operate in favour of all the plaintiffs or defendants, as the case may be. When, therefore, a decree is made under that section upon the appeal of one only of the defendants, and that decree restores the decree of the Court of first instance it inures to the benefit of all the defendants, although some of them were not parties to the appeal. Upon a decree of this description being passed the defendants other than those who preferred the appeal become entitled to take the benefit of the decree to this extent only that they acquire the right to enforce [497] the decree of the Court of first instance which has been restored by the decree of the appellate Court. In this view the present appellants were competent to apply for execution of the decree of the Court of first instance which was restored by the decree of this Court. The decree of this Court had, in my opinion, the effect of wiping away the order of remand of the lower appellate Court and relegating the parties back to the position in which they were before the order of remand was made. The lower appellate Court therefore erred in disallowing the application of the appellants for execution. I allow the appeal, and, setting aside the decree and order of the lower appellate Court with costs, restore that of the Court of first instance. The appellants will get the costs of this appeal.

Appeal decreed.

1898
JUNE 30.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 493 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 121.

20 A. 497 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 138.

REVISIONAL CIVIL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

THE N.W.P. CLUB THROUGH G.B. GOYDER, HONORARY SECRETARY
(Defendant) v. SADULLAH (Plaintiff).* [27th June, 1898.]

Club—Contract—Liability of the Secretary of a Club in respect of a contract entered into for the benefit of the members of the Club.

Held that the Secretary of a Club could not, unless he specially accepted a personal liability, be sued personally on a contract entered into on behalf of the members of the Club by his predecessor in office; nor could the members of a Club collectively be sued through their secretary as their representative.

[R., 21 A. 346.]

IN this case one Sadullah, who, on instructions from a previous secretary, had done certain work for the North-Western Provinces Club, sued the then secretary of the club for payment for labour and materials. The Court of Small Causes gave the plaintiff a decree. The defendant thereupon applied to the High Court in revision, not contesting the amount of the decree, which had been satisfied, but on the ground that the suit would not lie against the secretary in respect of a contract for the benefit of the members of the club at large, the club being an unregistered and unincorporated society.

Mr. W. Wallach, for the applicant.

ORDER.

KERSHAW, C.J., and BURKITT, J. — In this case an action was brought by Sadullah, the present respondent, against the [498] N.W.P. Club, through Mr. G.B. Goyder, the secretary of the said club, for work done by the plaintiff to the order of some one who at that time was occupying the position of the secretary of the said club. The plaintiff has been paid a sum which has satisfied his demand, but the defendant has made this application in revision on the ground that there was no liability on him as disclosed by the plaint, and indeed it would be highly undesirable that the secretary of a social club or one individual member of it should have an action brought against him of this kind, making him personally liable for the goods which were not delivered to him personally, but were delivered to, and became the property of, the social body of which he was the secretary. We take it the law with regard to this matter is accurately laid down in the case cited in 3 Times Law Reports at page 248, which lays down that an individual member of a club or a member of the committee of management who

* Civil Revision No. 25 of 1898.

1898
JUNE 27.

REVI-SIONAL
CIVIL.

20 A. 497 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 138.

has not in any way pledged his personal credit, is not liable for goods ordered for, and supplied to the club, i.e., as meaning an abstract entity unknown to the law.

It has been found as a fact by the learned Judge below in this present case that at the time the order was given Mr. Goyder was not secretary of the club, and as a fact this very order was given not by him but by a prior secretary of the club.

Therefore it stands to reason that Mr. Goyder did not pledge his personal credit, and he took no part at all in the transaction. Now the action may be said by those who brought it to be an alternative action, first, against the N. W. P. Club, secondly, against Mr. Goyder, secretary of the club. We have dealt with the question as to whether Mr. Goyder is or is not personally liable. The question remains as to whether the action can rightly be said to have been brought against the N.W.P. Club, that is, what the case mentioned above calls a abstract entity unknown to the law. To hold that an action lay against it and to give judgment in such action would be to hold that an action lay against a great number of individuals who had not been cited in the action, who had no opportunity of appearing, but who [499] should have been so cited, and who should have had such opportunity given to them to appear and contest the action. On that ground the action should have been dismissed against the club.

We think that there is another ground upon which the action against the club should be dismissed, and that is, that as alleged in the plaint the contract was entered into by the club through its secretary. It is clearly shown as a fact that at the time the contract was entered into, Mr. Goyder was not secretary at all. Our order is :—We allow this application, set aside the decree of the Court below, and we dismiss the plaintiff's suit.

Application allowed.

20 A. 499 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 132.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Aikman.

ABID HUSEN (Defendant) v. BASHIR AHMAD (Plaintiff).*

[1st July, 1898.]

Pre-emption—Muhammadan law—Talab-i-ishtishhad—Reference necessary to the previous talab-i-mawasibat.

When in asserting a claim for pre-emption the making of the talab-i-ishtishhad is required, it is absolutely necessary that at the time of making this demand reference should be made to the fact of the talab-i-mawasibat having been previously made, and this necessity is not removed by the fact that the witnesses to both demands are the same. Rujjub Ali Chopedar v. Chundi Churn Bhadra (1), Akbar Husain v. Abdul Jalil (2), and Abbasi Begam v. Atzal Husen (3), followed; Nundo Pershad Thakur v. Gopal Thakur (4), dissented from.

[R., 27 A. 160 = A.W.N. (1904) 201 = 1 A.L.J. 569.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

* Second Appeal No. 566 of 1897 from a decree of Pandit Raj Nath, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated 1st June 1897, reversing a decree of Babu Nihala Chandra, Munsif of Amroha, dated the 2nd December 1896.

(1) 17 C. 549.

(2) 16 A. 383.

(3) 20 A. 457.

(4) 10 C. 1008.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the appellant.

Mr. Amiruddin, for the respondent.

1898

JULY 1.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

20 A. 499 =

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 132.

JUDGMENT.

AIKMAN, J.—This is an appeal by the defendant vendee in a suit for pre-emption which was based on the Muhammadan law. [500] The Court of first instance found that the plaintiff pre-emptor had failed to prove that he had performed the necessary ceremony talab-i-mawasibat or making immediate assertion of his rights as soon as he heard of the sale. That Court further found that the plaintiff when making the talab-i-ishtishhad, or demand with invocation of witnesses did not say that he had made the immediate demand. On these grounds the plaintiff's suit was dismissed. The plaintiff appealed. The learned Subordinate Judge found that the plaintiff had proved that he had made an immediate demand. This demand was not made in the presence either of the seller or of the purchaser or on the premises, and therefore the demand with invocation of witnesses was necessary. The learned Subordinate Judge found that, as the same witnesses were present at the time when the immediate demand was made and at the time when the talab-i-ishtishhad was made, it was unnecessary for the pre-emptor to repeat the immediate demand. He therefore reversed the decision of the Munsif and gave the plaintiff a decree. I may point out that, as there were various other pleas raised by the defendant vendee, it was improper for the lower appellate Court to decree the plaintiff's suit merely on the ground that the defendant's plea as to non-fulfilment of the necessary requirements of Muhammadan law had failed. The defendant comes here in second appeal.

In my opinion the appeal must succeed. In the case of Nundo Pershad Thakur v. Gopal Thakur (1), it was held by GARTH, C.J., and BEVERLEY, J., that when a person seeking pre-emption had performed the talab-i-mawasibat in the presence of witnesses and as soon as possible on the same day in the presence of the same witnesses demanded his right from the vendor and purchaser, it was unnecessary that he should again state when making his demand that he had declared his right as soon as he heard of the sale, that is, that it was unnecessary for him to make any reference to his immediate demand. The present case is on all fours with that case. But that case was dissented from and overruled by a Full Bench of the Calcutta Court in Rujjub Ali Chopedar v. Chundi Churn [501] Bhadra (2), which latter case has been followed by this Court in Akbar Husain v. Abdul Jalil (3), and in a recent case Abbasi Begam v. Afzal Husen (4). That these latter rulings are correct is, in my opinion, clear from the definition of talab-i-ishtishhad given on p. 489 of Baillie's Digest of Muhammadan Law (2nd edition). "By talab-i-ishtishhad," says that learned author, "is meant a person calling upon witnesses to attest his talab-i-mawasibat or immediate demand." It appears to me impossible to invoke witnesses to attest the fact that an immediate demand has been made without making some reference to that immediate demand.

The learned counsel for the respondent argues that the talab-i-ishtishhad is merely a rule of evidence according to the Muhammadan law and is no longer of any validity. Be that as it may, I am bound to follow the decisions of this Court to which I have referred.

(1) 10 C. 1008.

(2) 17 C. 543.

(3) 16 A. 383.

(4) 20 A. 457.

1898
JULY 1.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 499=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 132.

For the above reasons I allow this appeal, and, setting aside the decree of the lower appellate Court with costs, restore that of the Court of first instance. The appellant will have his costs of this appeal.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 501 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 141.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Aikman.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JASODA NAND. [5th July, 1898.]

Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 133, 135 and 136—Act No. XLV of 1860 (Indian Penal Code), s. 188—Power of Magistrate to order repair of a house not adjoining a public road.

Section 133 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not empower a Magistrate to order the owner of a house standing apart from any public road in its own compound to repair such house. By "persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood," injury to whom the power to pass orders under s. 133 is intended to prevent, are meant, not the persons who in the exercise of their private rights may use a building supposed to be in a dangerous [502] condition, but unascertained members of public whose ordinary avocations may take them to the neighbourhood of such building. Queen-Empress v. Narayana (1) and Queen-Empress v. Bishambar Lal (2) distinguished.

THIS was a reference made by the Sessions Judge of Allahabad under s. 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and arising out of the following circumstances. One Jasoda Nand was the owner of a house in Allahabad, No. 15, Cawnpore Road. This house stood in a compound of its own at some little distance from the public road, and was inhabited by several families, and the servants' houses in the compound were also inhabited by a number of persons. An order was made by a Magistrate under s. 133 of the Code of Criminal Procedure requiring Jasoda Nand to make certain repairs to the said house. The order was served on Jasoda Nand, but he did not take either of the courses open to him under s. 135 of the Code. He did not perform the act directed by the Magistrate, nor did he either appear to show cause against the same, or apply to the Magistrate by whom it was made to appoint a jury to try the propriety of the order. An order absolute was made under s. 136 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and, as Jasoda Nand still did not comply with the order, he was put upon his trial under s. 188 of the Indian Penal Code and fined Rs. 50. The case was brought to the attention of the Sessions Judge who, being of opinion that the conviction could not be maintained, referred the case to the High Court.

Mr. Sorabji, in support of the reference.

The Officiating Government Advocate (Mr. A. E. Ryves), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and AIKMAN, JJ.—Jasoda Nand has been convicted of an offence made punishable under s. 188 of the Indian Penal Code. That section is couched in the following words:—"Whoever, knowing that by an order promulgated by a public servant lawfully empowered to promulgate such order, he is directed to abstain from a certain act or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management, [503] disobeys such direction, shall, if such disobedience causes or tends to cause obstruction, annoyance or injury, or risk of obstruction, annoyance or injury to any person lawfully employed, be punished" under the latter portion of the section. Jasoda Nand is the occupant of the house No. 15, Cawnpore Road. The house, it appears, stands in its own compound some little distance from the public road and is inhabited by a number of families, and the servants' houses in the compound are also inhabited by a number of persons. An order was made under s. 133 of Act No. X of 1882, upon information, by a Magistrate, called in that section a conditional order, requiring Jasoda Nand to effect certain repairs in the house No. 15, Cawnpore Road. The order was served upon Jasoda Nand, and he did not adopt either of the courses admissible under s. 135 of the Act. He did not perform the act directed by the Magistrate: he did not appear in accordance with the order to show cause against the same, or to apply to the Magistrate by whom it was made to appoint a jury to try the propriety of the order. An order absolute was made under s. 136. Jasoda Nand was then put upon his trial for the offence specified in s. 188 of the Indian Penal Code and fined Rs. 50. The case was brought to the attention of the Sessions Judge of Allahabad, who, being of opinion that the conviction could not be maintained, reported the case to this Court.

* Criminal Reference No. 311 of 1898.

(1) 12 M. 475.

(2) 13 A. 577.

Mr. Ryves, the Government Advocate, has appeared to support the conviction, and Mr. Sorabji to dispute its propriety. Mr. Ryves in his first contention submitted to the Court that it cannot go behind the order absolute made under s. 136 of Act No. X of 1882. In support of his contention he has cited to us the case of Queen-Empress v. Narayana (1) and the case of Queen-Empress v. Bishambar Lal (2). In the case reported in the Madras High Court the subject of the order was an open tank or well. The well or tank was in a public street, and the safety of the public required that it should be fenced. The subject-matter of that order then fell well within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, and within [504] the powers conferred upon him by s. 133 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the succeeding sections. The ground upon which the conviction was impeached in that case was not that the order made was one of such a nature that the Magistrate was not empowered by the section of the Criminal Procedure Code to make it: the only ground of contention was that the person upon whom the order was served was not the person who was responsible for the existing state of things, or who ought to have been made the subject of such order. The Court held, that the person convicted could not go behind that order: it held so having expressly noted that the order was one well within the power of the Magistrate who made it. That finding appears to us not inconsistent with the provisions of s. 136 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The case cited in 13 Allahabad is in substance identical with the Madras case. There is no doubt that the order was an order made in respect of one of the invasions of the public right set forth in s. 133. The contention was that such order was made against the wrong person. Following the ruling reported in 12 Madras, it was held that it was not competent for the person convicted to question the order made against him.

We cannot, however, acquiesce in the expressions, needlessly large for the decision of the case then before the Court which find place in the 1898

JULY 5.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
20 A. 501 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 141.

(1) 12 M. 475.

(2) 13 A. 577.

1898 judgment. It appears to us, applying to s. 188 of the Indian Penal Code
 JULY 5. that strict construction applicable to penal provisions, that it is essential — in order to justify a conviction to show that the order has been promulgat-REVI- ed by a public servant lawfully empowered to promulgate such order.
 SIONAL Now in this case and from that point of view we have to consider whether CRIMINAL. the public servant making the order in question was lawfully empowered — to promulgate that order. Chapter X of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 20 A. 501 = in which appear the provisions relating to such orders, is headed "Public
 18 A.W.N Nuisances," and it enumerates certain forms of invasions of public (1898) 141. rights which would be regarded by the law of England [505] as falling under the definition of commune nocumentum. It provides, first, for the removal of any unlawful obstruction from any way, river or channel which may be lawfully used by the public; secondly, for the prohibition of any trade or of the keeping of any goods or merchandise by reason of their being injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community; thirdly, for the prevention of the construction of any building or the disposal of any substance as likely to occasion conflagration or explosion. The fourth clause is the one under which the order in question purports to have been made. It deals with the case in which "any building is in such condition that it is likely to fall and thereby cause injury to persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood or passing by," in consequence of which its removal, repair or support is necessary. The last case provided for is where any tank, well or excavation adjacent to any such way or public place should be fenced in such a manner as to prevent danger arising to the public. It appears manifest to us that, apart from the heading, which may possibly form no part of the enactment, the scope of this section is plainly limited to injuries arising or likely to arise to members of the general unascertained mass of the public. The persons who under the clause require protection are "persons living or carrying on business in the neighbourhood, or passing by." It appears to us that it would be straining the meaning of the words to hold that the clause applies to persons living actually in the alleged dangerous building or in the servants' houses in the compound belonging to it. It seems also to us, that it would be an unnatural use of the words "passing by" to include in it persons going to or from the house or about it for their private business or pleasure, or in the exercise of their private and not of their public rights. In our opinion the words used are not sufficiently comprehensive to include the case of the person who has been convicted, or to justify or make legal the order of the Magistrate in relation to the building in Jasoda's occupation. It may well be, as the [506] Magistrate in his explanation argues, that s. 44 would have justified some such order as the order made in this case; but the scope of that section is different from, and far larger than, that of s. 133.

We hold then that the order made in this case by the Magistrate was not an order which the Magistrate was lawfully empowered to promulgate within the meaning of s. 188. We therefore set aside this conviction and order the fine, if paid to be refunded.

20 A. 506 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 139.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

HAR PRASAD AND ANOTHER (Opposite Parties) v. SHEO RAM AND ANOTHER (Applicants).^{*} [7th July, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 244—Execution of decree—Mortgage—Attempt to obtain redemption of a usufructuary mortgage by means of an application in execution.

1898
JULY 7.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 506 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 139.

Certain mortgagees held a mortgage which, in its inception was a simple mortgage, but which was to become a usufructuary mortgage upon non payment of the mortgage debt by a certain date. The mortgage debt was not paid within the time limited. The mortgagees sued on the covenant in their bond and obtained a decree for possession, declaring them entitled to remain in possession until the mortgage debt was satisfied from the usufruct. Some time after the mortgagees had got possession under this decree, the mortgagors applied, ostensibly under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for recovery of possession of the mortgaged property and for payment of a large sum of money, which they alleged the mortgagees had collected as profits in excess of what was due under the mortgage.

Held, that such an application would not lie. If the allegations of the mortgagors were true, their proper remedy was by suit for redemption and not by application in the execution department. Rauji Shivram v. Kaluram (1). Ram Chandra Ballal v. Baba Esgonda (2), and Narsinha Manohar v. Bhagvantrav (3) referred to.

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court.
[507] Babu Durga Charan Banerji, for the appellants.
Babu Satya Chandar Mukerji, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J. (BLAIR, J., concurring).—This is an appeal against an order of the District Judge of Jhansi, passed under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, directing that possession of certain mortgaged property be restored by the appellants mortgagees to the applicants in execution (the mortgagors), and also directing that the appellants pay to their mortgagors a sum of Rs. 4,575, being the surplus received by the appellants as mortgagees over and above the amount due on their mortgage.

The preliminary history of this case is, that in February 1892, Sheo Ram and others, respondents to this appeal, mortgaged certain immoveable property to Har Prasad and others, appellants here. The mortgage was a simple one; but there was a stipulation that if the money due on it were not paid by a certain date the mortgagees would be entitled to be put into possession of the property. The money was not paid. The mortgagees thereupon instituted a suit for possession of the property and obtained a decree in their favour in June 1893, directing them to be put in possession of the property, to hold possession until the amount due on the bond with interest had been satisfied from the usufruct. The mortgagees took out execution of that decree and obtained possession under it in August 1893. Nothing more was done in the matter of executing the decree till March 1897.

In that month the mortgagors, the judgment-debtors under the decree, made an application (which they described as being an application under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure) to the District Judge. In that ^{*} First Appeal, No. 52 of 1898, from an order of F. W. Fox, Esq., District Judge of Jhansi, dated the 24th December 1897.

(1) 12 B.H.C.R. 160.

(2) 12 B.H.C.R. 163.

(3) 14 B. 327.

1898
JULY 7.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 506 =
18 A.W N.
(1898) 139.

application they recited the passing of the decree mentioned above, and the possession over the mortgaged property obtained by the mortgagees in execution thereof. They then set forth that the amount due under the decree had been much more than satisfied by the usufruct of the property while in the possession of the mortgagees, and they asked the Court to direct the property to be restored to them, and to compel the mortgagees to refund to them some Rs. 12,876 which, they [508] alleged, the mortgagees had received over and above the amount due on their decree.

In reply to this petition the present appellants naturally raised the plea that the matter of the petition was one which could not be decided in execution proceedings on an application under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The learned District Judge framed an issue for trial on that plea, but somehow failed to come to any finding on it. Had he considered the question, he probably would have been spared the trouble of making the "examination of long and complicated accounts" mentioned in his order of July 2nd, 1897. He, however, left the preliminary question undecided, and having examined the accounts, he passed an order that possession should be restored to the applicants, and that the appellants here should pay them a large sum of money.

Hence this appeal, in which it is contended that the matter dealt with by the lower Court was not a question which could be entertained under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It was argued for the appellants that the proper course for the applicants was to have instituted a regular suit for redemption of the mortgage, and that they were not entitled to obtain a redemption decree under the disguise of an application in execution under s. 244 of the Code. The appellants urged that the execution of the decree obtained by them for the possession of the mortgaged property was fully completed when, on their application for execution of that decree, they were placed in possession under it in August 1893, and that thenceforth the position occupied by them and the applicants respondents was that of mortgagees in possession and mortgagors, and not merely that of decree-holders and judgment-debtors amenable to the jurisdiction given by s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The applicants indeed must, we think, be held to have admitted some of the propositions stated above, for in their application under s. 244 they state in the first paragraph that the decree obtained by the applicants was a decree for possession as mortgagees, entitling them to remain in [509] possession till the amount due to them on the mortgage had been paid off by the usufruct.

For the respondents it was contended that the case comes under cl. (c) of s. 244, because the Court which passed the decree specified in its decree the amount due on the mortgage and gave the mortgagees a decree for possession until that amount was repaid. The argument is that an execution Court is empowered under that clause to take accounts and ascertain whether the amount decreed had or had not been paid off. In that contention we are unable to concur. We are of opinion that the limitation as to the period of enjoyment was inserted in the decree to indicate the title by which the mortgagees retained possession, and for no other purpose, and we are unhesitatingly of opinion that all proceedings relating to the execution of the decree came to an end, and that the decree was fully executed when the appellants were put in possession (as mortgagees) of the property by virtue of the decree. Nothing more remained to be done under it, the decree having been fully satisfied. We fail to see how the matter of this application to the learned Judge can be said to be a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. That decree had been fully executed and satisfied; nor can the word "discharge" be applicable to such a case as this in which the decree has been executed and satisfied. In the opinion expressed above we are supported by several decisions of the High Court of Bombay. The first of those cases to which we would allude is that of Ravji Shivram v. Kaluram (1), a decision of a Full Bench of that Court. That case is conversely on all fours with the present case. On a suit by a mortgagee, the mortgage money being unpaid, he obtained a decree for possession of the mortgaged property "for the amount claimed," which, the High Court observed, was "the ordinary decree to put an unpaid mortgagee in possession, which he might retain till he was paid in full." Subsequently the mortgagor instituted a suit for redemption. In reply to the claim it was contended for the [510] mortgagee that the mortgagor was seeking a wrong remedy, and that his "only proper mode of recovering possession is by an application in the possession suit for further execution of the decree" in that suit.

This case is then, it will be observed, exactly the converse of the present case. It was held by the Full Bench, overruling the mortgagee's contention, that when the mortgagee was put in possession of the mortgaged premises, the decree for possession was fully executed, the suit in which that decree was made being really nothing more than a suit in the nature of an ejectment, by an unpaid mortgagee, of the mortgagor from the mortgaged premises, and the Court went on to say that a "proceeding for redemption of those premises is not a question" relating to the discharge or satisfaction of the decree, nor "a question relating to the execution of the decree, which we hold to have been fully executed when the heir of the mortgagee was put into possession under the decree."

The Full Bench accordingly held that the proper mode for the mortgagor to redeem the lands and recover possession was not by an application to the Court which passed the decree for further execution thereof by taking the account, etc.

This case (decided in 1873) was, no doubt, one under the old Codes of 1859 and 1861. We cannot, however, see any material difference (as far as the question here is concerned) between the corresponding sections of the present and of the former Code. The ruling just cited was followed and approved of in Ram Chandra Ballal v. Baba Esgonda (2) and in Narsinha Manohar v. Bhagvantrav (3), the latter of which cases was decided long after the present Code of Civil Procedure had come into force.

Concurring to the fullest extent in the rule laid down in those cases, we are of opinion that the application made by the respondents to the District Judge was one which could not be entertained under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that it should have been rejected.

[511] There is another aspect of this case which should be referred to. It might be most disastrous (as noted in the case of Ravji Shivram v. Kaluram cited above) to persons in the position of the respondents, if it were to be held that their proper course to obtain redemption of the mortgaged property in cases like the present was by presenting an application for further execution of the decree for possession, which had been

1898
JULY 7.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 506 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 139.

(1) 12 B.H.C.R. 160.

(2) 12 B.H.C.R. 163.

(3) 14 B. 327.

1898
JULY 7.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 506 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 139.

passed against them. In that case their application would come under the rules governing proceedings in execution of a decree. One of those rules is that contained in art. 179 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act of 1877, which limits the time for applying for execution of a decree to three years from certain dates, one of which is the date on which the last application has been made to the proper Court for execution, or to take some step-in-aid of execution on the decree. Now, in the present case no application of any kind was made in the matter of the execution of this decree from the time when the applicants made the application for execution on which they were into possession in August 1873, up to March 1897, a period of much more than three years. Therefore, if the application was properly presented as an application for further execution, it was clearly time-barred when presented and could not be entertained.

We would add that the respondents did not ask to be allowed to have their application converted into a plaint in a redemption of mortgage suit on payment of the court-fees payable on a plaint in such a suit.

For the above reasons we allow this appeal, set aside the order of the lower Court and direct that the respondents' application be dismissed with costs in both Courts.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 512 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 133.

[512] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

CHATTAR MAL (Decree-holder) v. THAKURI AND ANOTHER
(Judgment-debtor).^{*} [7th July, 1898.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 90—Mortgage—Personal covenant to pay—Application to sell non hypothecated property—"Balance legally recoverable"—Cause of action—Limitation.

A mortgage bond securing a debt payable on demand provided that for the payment of the amount of mortgage-debt the immoveable property mentioned in it should be held as collateral security and that "in case of this hypothecated property being insufficient for the satisfaction of the entire amount of the bond the creditors would be at liberty to realize the amount remaining due from the obligors personally and from their other property." Held, that no separate cause of action for the personal remedy accrued after the mortgaged property was found on sale to be insufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt, but that the cause of action for both remedies was one and the same and accrued when the covenant to pay was broken. Hence, the suit for sale of the mortgaged property having been brought more than ten years after the date of the mortgage, the balance due upon the mortgage was not legally recoverable otherwise than out of the property sold and an application for a decree under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act was not maintainable: Musaheb Zaman Khan v. Inayat-ul-lah (1), in re McHenry: McDermott v. Boyd (2) and Miller v. Runga Nath Moulick (3) referred to.

[R., 33 C. 867 (873) = 4 C.L.J. 141; 15 C.P.L.R. 29 (31); 6 O.C. 30 (32); 4 L.B.R. 89 (93) = 14 Bur. L.R. 161.]

IN this case the appellant held a mortgage over certain property of the respondents under a bond dated the 24th of October 1880. The amount secured by the bond was Rs. 300 payable with interest on demand.

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 503 of 1896, from a decree of L. G. Evans, Esq., District Judge of Aligarh, dated the 14th May 1896, confirming an order of Babu Bipin Bihari Mukerji, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 27th November 1895.

(1) 14 A. 513.

(2) (1894) L.R. 3 Ch. 290.

(3) 12 C. 389.

The bond provided that for payment of the amount the immoveable property mentioned in it should be held as collateral security, and that "in case of this hypothecated property being insufficient for the satisfaction of the entire amount of the bond, the creditors would be at liberty to realize the amount remaining due from the obligors personally and from their other property." On the 22nd of June 1891, the mortgagee brought a suit for sale upon his bond. He obtained a decree under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act on the 6th of August 1891. Under that decree the mortgaged property was brought to sale on the 23rd of [513] June 1893. The proceeds of the sale being insufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt, which by that time had reached the sum of Rs. 3,239, the mortgagee decree-holder applied on the 2nd of February 1895 for a decree under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Aligarh) held that the decree-holder's application for a decree under s. 90 was time-barred, and dismissed it. The decree-holder appealed, and his appeal was dismissed upon the same ground by the Lower Appellate Court (District Judge of Aligarh). The decree-holder thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Babu Durga Charan Banerji, for the appellant.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KERSHAW, C.J., and BANERJI, J.—This is an appeal from the decree and order of the Court below refusing to grant to the appellant a decree under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act. The appellant held a mortgage over certain property belonging to the respondents under a bond, dated the 24th of October 1880. The amount secured by the bond was Rs. 300 payable with interest on demand. The bond provided that for the payment of the amount the immoveable property mentioned in it should be held as collateral security, and that "in case of this hypothecated property being insufficient for the satisfaction of the entire amount of the bond the creditors would be at liberty to realize the amount remaining due from the obligors personally and from their other property." On the 22nd of June 1891, the mortgagee brought a suit for sale upon that bond. He obtained a decree under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act on the 6th of August 1891. Under s. 89 of that Act he obtained an order for the sale of the mortgaged property, and on the 23rd of June 1893, the said property was sold. The proceeds of the sale not being sufficient for the discharge of the mortgage-debt, which had swelled to the large sum of Rs. 3,239, the present application was made on the 2nd of February 1895, for a decree under s. 90. That section empowers a Court to grant to a [514] mortgagee a decree for the recovery of the balance due to him after the sale of the mortgaged property from the mortgagor and his other property, provided that the balance is legally recoverable otherwise than out of the mortgaged property. The Courts below have held that on the date on which the plaintiff brought his suit upon his mortgage, his claim for a personal decree against the mortgagor was time-barred, and therefore the balance of the amount of the mortgage was not legally recoverable on the date of the application for a decree under s. 90. The correctness of this decision has been challenged in this appeal. It is urged that under the terms of the bond in this case the mortgagee was not entitled to realize the balance personally from his debtors until after the hypothecated property had been sold, and as his application for a

1898
JULY 7.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 512=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 133.

1898
JULY 7.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 512=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 133.

decree under s. 90 was made within three years from the date of the sale of the mortgaged property, it ought to have been granted.

The question we have to determine is whether, on the date of the application for a decree under s. 90, the balance of the amount due on the mortgage was legally recoverable from the debtors otherwise than out of the mortgaged property. If, under the terms of the bond, the mortgaged property was the only security for the debt and the mortgagors did not incur any personal liability, the balance is not recoverable otherwise than out of the mortgaged property. But if there is nothing in the mortgage bond to the contrary, the presumption will be that the mortgagor has undertaken a personal liability to pay the mortgage-debt. In the latter case if a claim for a personal decree against the mortgagor would have been time-barred on the date of the mortgagee's suit, the balance would not be legally recoverable otherwise than out of the mortgaged property, within the meaning of s. 90. This was held in Musaheb Zaman Khan v. Inayat-ul-lah (1). The decision of this appeal, therefore, turns upon the question whether, if the appellant mortgagee had on the date of the institution of his suit asked for a personal remedy [515] against the mortgagors, his claim for that remedy would have been barred by limitation.

In this case the mortgagors in distinct terms undertook a personal liability to pay the mortgage-debt. The bond gives the mortgagee two remedies for a breach of the conditions thereof, namely, first, a right to proceed against the immoveable property hypothecated in the bond; and, secondly, in the event of the proceeds of the sale of that property proving insufficient, a right to proceed against the debtors personally. The debt, however, is one and the same, and the personal liability of the debtors co-exists with the liability of the property. It is upon the occurrence of a breach in the conditions of the bond that the cause of action of the mortgagee for the remedies given to him under the bond arose. It was a single cause of action, and upon the accrual of it the mortgagee became entitled to seek all his remedies. The covenant in the bond that the mortgagors would be personally liable for the balance which might remain due after the sale of the mortgaged property did not give the mortgagee a right to bring a separate suit for a decree personally against the mortgagors after the sale of the property. The truth is, as observed by HERSCHELL, L. C., in in re McHenry: McDermott v. Boyd (2), "the right of the creditor in law would have been precisely the same as if those words had not been inserted." His Lordship added:—"I cannot say that that right of realization gave a separate and independent cause of action, so that the statutory period did not begin to run until that date." The ruling in that case is, in our opinion, conclusive of the question. A similar view was held by the Calcutta High Court in Miller v. Runga Nath Moulick (3). In this case the appellant's cause of action arose when his debtors made default in payment of the debt. He was bound to come into Court within the period of limitation prescribed for his suit computed from the date of the accrual of his cause of action. The limitation for the claim for sale being sixty years, his suit for sale was within time, but the period of limitation for a suit upon the [516] personal covenant being six years only, a claim upon that covenant would have been time-barred on the date on which the suit was brought, more than six years having elapsed on that date from the date of the

(1) 14 A. 513.

(2) (1894) L.R. 3 Ch. 290.

(3) 12 C. 389.

accrual of the cause of action. That being so, the Courts below have, in our opinion, rightly held that the amount which the appellant seeks to recover by a decree under s. 90 is not legally recoverable from the mortgagors within the meaning of that section, and this appeal must fail. We dismiss it with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 516 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 134.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

PULANDAR SINGH (Plaintiff) v. JWALA SINGH AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [8th July, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 13, expl. II—Res judicata—Matter which might have been a ground of defence in a former suit.

A defendant in a suit for the recovery of possession of immoveable property pleaded only a right to the proprietary possession of the property in suit in himself. This defence failed, and a decree was given in favour of the plaintiff. Subsequently, the plaintiff sold a portion of the property so decreed to them, and the quondam defendant brought a suit for pre-emption. Held, that the suit must fail, inasmuch as the plaintiff's claim was one which he might have made when defendant in the former suit as an alternative to his defence of title. Srimul Rajah Mooltoo Vijaya, &c. v. Katama Natchiar (1), Kameswar Pershad v. Raj Kumari Ruttan Koer (2), and Baldeo Sahai v. Bateshar Singh (3) referred to.

[Overruled, 26 A. 61 (F.B.) ; Not F., 1 A.L.J. 426 ; R., 65 P.L.R. 1908 = 55 P.R. 1907 = 96 P.W.R. (1907).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the appellant.

Maulvi Ghulam Muftaba, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KERSHAW, C. J., and BANERJI, J.—The suit out of which this appeal has arisen was one for pre-emption brought by the present appellant in respect of a sale made by one Musammat Subta on the 11th of May, 1894. The suit has been dismissed as barred by the [517] rule of res judicata. It is contended before us that this ruling of the Courts below is erroneous. We are unable to accede to this contention.

The facts out of which the plea of res judicata arose were these:—The share now sold is a part of a 5-biswa share which belonged to the father of Musammat Subta. After the death of both her parents she sold the share now in question to the vendees respondents. The whole property, however, consisting of 5-biswas, was in the possession of the present appellant. The vendees and Musammat Subta therefore brought a suit for possession against the present appellant. That suit was resisted on the sole ground that the present appellant was the owner of the property. The Court decided against him and made a decree in favour of the then plaintiffs. The Courts below have held that the present plaintiff ought to have ^{*} Second Appeal No. 522 of 1896, from a decree of W. F. W. Wells, Esq., District Judge of Shahjahanpur, dated the 16th April 1896, confirming a decree of Rai Banwari Lal, Subordinate Judge of Shahjahanpur, dated the 7th December 1895.

(1) 11 M. I.A. 50.

(2) 20 C. 79.

(3) 1 A. 75.

1898
JULY 7.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 512 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 133.

1898
JULY 8.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 516=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 134.

put forward his right of pre-emption in respect of the property now in suit as an answer to the claim of the vendees in the former suit, and that as he did not do so the present claim is barred by the rule of res judicata, having regard to explanation II of s. 13 of Act No. XIV of 1882.

It has been urged before us that the present plaintiff might no doubt have defeated the claim of the then plaintiffs by setting up his right of pre-emption, but he was not bound to do so, and therefore this is not a case to which explanation II of s. 13 applies. In our opinion, this contention is untenable. The present plaintiff being in possession of the property, it was his duty to resist the claim of those who sought to oust him upon all possible grounds. In Srimut Rajah Moottoo Vijaya Raganadha Bodha Gooroo Swamy Periya Odaya Taver v. Katama Natchiar, Zemindar of Shivagunga (1) it was observed by the Privy Council (at p. 73), that "when a plaintiff claims an estate, and the defendant, being in possession, resists that claim, he is bound to resist it upon all the grounds that it is possible for him, according to his knowledge, then to bring forward. The present appellant might have insisted on the validity of the alleged will, but instead of doing so [518] when his suit came on to be heard and decided in the Court of final appeal, he in effect disclaimed all title under the instrument as a will, and insisted that it must be regarded by the Court as not being testamentary. There would be an end to all security in the administration of justice if the course now taken by the appellant of setting up the will were allowed." These observations apply with full force to the present case. It is true that if the present plaintiff had raised in the former suit, the defence that he had a right of pre-emption, that defence would have been only in the alternative, but such a defence is one which a party who resists a claim ought to bring forward for the purpose of defeating the claim. In the case of Kameswar Pershad v. Raj Kamari Ruttan Koer (2), their Lordships of the Privy Council explained what the word "ought" in explanation II of s. 13 means. In that case, their Lordships said:—"Where matters are so dissimilar that their union might lead to confusion, the construction of the word 'ought' might become important." It is urged that the defence on the ground of pre-emption, if raised, would have been so dissimilar to the other defence, namely, on the ground of proprietary title, that confusion would have arisen, and consequently according to their Lordships of the Privy Council, the defence on the ground of pre-emption ought not to have been raised in the former suit. In our opinion, however, the two defences would only have been alternative ways of seeking to defeat the claim of the plaintiff. This view is supported by the ruling of this Court in Imam Khan v. Ayub Khan (3). We are therefore of opinion that as the present plaintiff did not in the former suit set up his right of pre-emption in answer to the claim advanced in that suit, he is precluded by the provisions of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure from maintaining the present suit. The ruling of this Court in Baldeo Sahai v. Bateshar Singh (4) is directly in point. For the above reasons, we hold that the Courts below were right. We dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 11 M.L.A. 50.

(2) 20 C. 79.

(3) 19 A. 517.

(4) 1 A. 75.

20 A. 519=18 A.W.N. (1898) 135.

[519] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Aikman.

JAI KISHEN AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. RAM LAL (Defendant)*
[9th July, 1898.]

1898

JULY 9.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

20 A. 519=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 135.

Act No. XV of 1877 (Indian Limitation Act), sch. ii, art. 32—Suit for removal of trees from tenant's holding—Limitation—Jurisdiction—Civil and Revenue Courts Act No. XII of 1881 (N.W.P. Rent Act), s. 93.

Held, that a suit by zamindars for the removal of trees planted by a tenant on his cultivatory holding was governed by the limitation prescribed in art. 32 of sch. ii of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877. Gangadhar v. Zahurriya (1), and Musharof Ali v. Istikhar Husain (2) referred to.

Held, also that such a suit was not cognizable by a Civil Court. Deodat Tiwari v. Gopi Misr (3).

[R., 23 A. 486 (490); 6 A.L.J. 914 (917)=12 Ind.Cas. 108.]

THE plaintiffs came into Court alleging that the defendant being their tenant of certain fields, which were leased to him for agricultural purposes, had, without obtaining their permission, planted trees on the said fields, instead of using them for the purpose for which they were let, and the plaintiffs prayed for the removal of the trees.

In the first Court the defendants raised several issues, but the case was decided upon one only, namely, whether the predecessor in title of the plaintiffs had given permission to the defendant to plant the trees in question. Finding this issue against the defendant the Court (Munsif of Agra) gave a decree in favour of the plaintiffs.

On appeal by the defendant the Lower Appellate Court (Small Cause Court Judge of Agra acting as Subordinate Judge) decreed the appeal and dismissed the plaintiffs' suit on the finding that it was barred by limitation under art. 32 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877; the trees in dispute having, according to the evidence of Jai Kishen, one of the plaintiffs, been planted more than two years before suit.

The plaintiffs thereupon appealed to the High Court.

[520] Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the appellants.

The respondent was not represented.

JUDGMENT.

AIKMAN, J.—The plaintiffs, who are appellants here, brought a suit for the removal of certain trees which had been planted by the defendant on the land which he held from the plaintiffs for cultivation. The suit was brought upwards of two years after the trees were planted. The Lower Appellate Court has dismissed the suit as barred by limitation, applying art. 32 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877. In appeal, it is contended that the suit is governed by art. 144 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act. That article has clearly no application to this suit, which is not a suit for possession. In the case of Gangadhar v. Zahurriya (1), art. 32 was held to be applicable to * Second Appeal, No. 593 of 1897, from a decree of Syed Akbar Husain, Subordinate Judge of Agra, dated the 28th April 1897, reversing a decree of Babu Hari Mohan Banerji, Munsif of Agra, dated the 1st January 1897.

(1) 8 A. 446.

(2) 10 A. 634.

(3) 2 A.W.N. (1892) 102.

1898
JULY 9.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL,
—
20 A. 519=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 135.

a suit like the present. That was a ruling of TYRRELL and MAHMOOD, J.J., and that ruling was concurred in by STRAIGHT, J., in Musharaf Ali v. Iftkhar Husain (1). The appeal therefore cannot be sustained. I may add that, in my opinion, the cognizance of the suit by the Civil Court was barred by the provisions of s. 93 of Act No. XII of 1881, and in this opinion, I am fortified by the decision in Deodat Tiwari v. Gopi Misr (2). I dismiss this appeal, but without costs, as the respondent is not represented.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 520=18 A.W.N. (1898) 136.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

KALIANI (Defendant) v. DASSU PANDE AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs).
[15th July, 1898.]

Jurisdiction—Civil and Revenue Courts—Suit in ejectment against a trespasser—Res judicata—Entries in revenue records.

Although a Civil Court cannot give a decree declaring or deciding the status of an agricultural tenant, yet where a plaintiff, having no remedy in the Revenue Courts, sues, on the allegation that he is a tenant entitled to possession, to eject a trespasser, it is competent to a Civil Court to grant a decree for possession on the ground that the plaintiff is a tenant, the class of his tenancy being left to the Revenue Courts to determine.

[521] Held also, that an entry in a revenue record which is based solely on the fact of possession cannot operate as res judicata on a question of title subsequently raised in a Civil suit. Ajudhia Rai v. Parmeshar Rai (3), and Dukhna Kunwar v. Unkar Pande (4), referred to.

[R., 23 A. 360 (362, 363); 23 A. 481 (483, 484).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Mr. Abdul Raoof, for the appellant.

Mr. J. Simeon, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KERSHAW, C.J., and BANERJI, J.—This is an appeal from an order of remand under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This is one of those cases in which the question of the conflict of the jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts arises. The plaintiffs, who are respondents here, brought their suit for a declaration that they were occupancy tenants of the land in suit and for recovery of possession of that land. They alleged that the defendant had no right to it and that she was a trespasser. It appears that the name of the defendant was entered in the revenue papers as the tenant of this land. The plaintiffs made an application for amendment of that entry on the ground that they were entitled to the holding. That application was dismissed by the Revenue Court, and thereupon the present suit was brought. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that it was one cognizable by a Court of Revenue, and it relied for that opinion on the ruling of the Full Bench in

* First Appeal from Order No. 46 of 1898, from an order of H.D. Griffin, Esq., District Judge of Azamgarh, dated the 4th April 1898.

(1) 10 A. 694.

(3) 18 A. 340.

(2) 2 A.W.N. (1882) 102.

(4) 19 A. 452.

Ajudhia Rai v. Parmeshar Rai (1). The plaintiffs appealed to the District Judge. He held that in so far as the plaintiffs sought to obtain a declaration that they were the occupancy tenants of the land in suit, the suit was not cognizable by a Civil Court and that the claim had been rightly dismissed; but as regards the claim for possession, he held, relying on the ruling of this Court in Dukhna Kunwar v. Unkar Pandē (2), that it was cognizable by the Civil Court. He accordingly made an order under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure remanding the case to the Court of first instance for trial on the merits.

[522] In our judgment this case is almost on all fours with the ruling on which the learned Judge of the Court below has relied and we fail to see in what respect this case may be distinguished from the one in which that ruling was passed. As observed in that case, the plaintiffs could not obtain any relief by resorting to the Court of Revenue. By asking that Court to determine the class of their tenancy under s. 10 of Act No. XII of 1881 and obtaining a decision under clause (a) of s. 95 of that Act, they could not recover possession of the holding. As they did not allege that the zamindar had dispossessed them, and as the defendant did not claim to have been put into possession by the zamindar, they could not make an application under clause (n) of that section. They are thus clearly without remedy, unless that remedy could be given them by a Civil Court. In the ruling to which we have referred it was held that, although the Civil Court could not grant a decree declaring or deciding the status of an agricultural tenant, the only Court in which a person claiming to be such a tenant could sue to recover possession from an alleged trespasser was the Civil Court. With that opinion we fully agree. This case was not one in which it was necessary that the question of the status of the plaintiffs' tenancy qua status had to be determined; if the plaintiffs were tenants of any description and if the defendant was a trespasser, the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed. In this respect this case does not fall within the purview of the Full Bench ruling in Ajudhia Rai v. Parmeshar Rai (1), and we think that the conclusion at which the learned Judge of the Court below has arrived is a right conclusion.

It was further contended before us on behalf of the appellant that, by reason of the order of the Revenue Court refusing to amend the entry in the revenue papers, the matter had become res judicata. We are unable to accede to this contention. The order of the Revenue Court was made under s. 102 of Act No. XIX of 1873. That section provides that in disputed cases the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector shall make [523] such inquiry as may be necessary to ascertain the truth and cause the record to be amended accordingly. This section in our judgment does not confer upon the Collector of the District or Assistant Collector any greater powers than what a Settlement Officer would have under s. 64 of that Act. By s. 63 the Settlement Officer is to specify in the record of rights all particulars relating to tenants of every description. By s. 64 all entries in the record made under s. 63 shall be founded on the basis of actual possession, and all disputes regarding such entries shall be investigated and decided on that basis. The inquiry referred to in s. 102 is, in our opinion, the inquiry which in the case of disputes a Settlement Officer is competent to make under s. 64 on the basis of actual possession. That section further provides that persons not in possession, but claiming a right to be so, shall be referred to the proper Court. The

(1) 18 A. 840.

(2) 19 A. 452.

1898
JULY 15.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 520 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 136.

1898
JULY 15.

APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 520 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 136.

proper Court mentioned in the section evidently must be, as observed in Dukhna Kunwar v. Unkar Pande (1), a Court other than the Court of the Settlement Officer, and where the Revenue Court would not have jurisdiction to afford relief it must be the Civil Court. An adjudication on the basis of possession, which an adjudication under s. 102 must necessarily be, cannot, in our opinion, operate as res judicata on a question of title. In our judgment this appeal is untenable. We dismiss it with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 523 (F.B.) = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 157.

FULL BENCH.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Blair, Mr. Justice Banerji, Mr. Justice Burkitt, and Mr. Justice Aikman.

MAQBUL FATIMA (Judgment-debtor) v. LALTA PRASAD
AND ANOTHER (Decree-holders).^{*} [20th July, 1898.]

Execution of decree—Construction of decree—Act No. IV of 1892 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 88—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 219, 206—Costs—Decree apparently awarding costs twice.

A decree drawn up under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, was properly framed in accordance with the requirements of that section, but, [524] in addition to the prescribed contents of such a decree, contained a clause to the following effect:—"It is further ordered, that the defendant aforesaid do pay to the plaintiffs aforesaid the sum of Rs. 876-8, the amount of costs incurred by them in this Court."

Held, that this latter clause was merely a formal compliance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, and was not intended to be a direction for the recovery of costs personally from the judgment-debtor. Chiranji v. Moti Ram (2) on this point over-ruled.

[F., 35 C. 431 = 8 C.L.J. 152 = 12 C.W.N. 964; R., 30 M. 464 = 17 M.L.J. 317 = 2 M.L.T. 359; 13 C.W.N. 742 = 4 Ind. Cas. 545; 16 C.W.N. 731 = 15 Ind. Cas. 23 (24); 8 Ind. Cas. 32 (33); 19 Ind. Cas. 384 (385); 11 O.C. 377.]

IN this case the respondents decree-holders had obtained a decree under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, on the 27th August 1894, which decree was confirmed by the High Court on appeal on the 22nd of April 1897. The decree thus confirmed was, as to the main portion of it, drawn up in strict accordance with the terms of s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act; but, in addition to the matters provided for by that section, contained a further order to the effect that "defendant aforesaid do pay to the plaintiffs aforesaid the sum of Rs. 876-8-0, the amount of costs incurred by them in this Court." The decree-holders caused the mortgaged property to be sold by auction, and, the proceeds of the sale being insufficient for the realization of the whole of the decretal amount they subsequently applied for a decree under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, that application was dismissed. The decree-holder subsequently applied for execution of their decree as to costs by realization of the costs awarded to them from the person of the judgment-debtor. The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Bareilly) disallowed the judgment-debtor's objections and made an order granting execution for ^{*} First Appeal No. 251 of 1897, from an order of Baou Madho Das, Subordinate Judge of Bareilly, dated the 7th August 1897.

(1) 19 A. 452.

(2) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 83.

the costs of both Courts against the judgment-debtor personally. Against this order the judgment-debtor appealed to the High Court.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba for the appellant. The decree-holders' claim to recover their costs from the judgment-debtor personally is concluded by the order of the Subordinate Judge on their application for a decree under s. 90 of Transfer of Property Act. The decree-holders in that application [525] asked for a personal decree as to costs and it was refused them; they cannot therefore now get a personal decree for costs.

Further the award of Rs. 876-8-0 as costs by the decree of the High Court, which is now the only decree in the suit, was made "as awarded in the decree of the lower appellate Court," that is to say, the costs were made a portion of the mortgage money as required by s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act.

The decree, moreover, as drawn up is ambiguous, and, that being so, it must be construed, if possible, as a decree in accordance with law. As the judgment directs a decree to be drawn up in accordance with the terms of s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act the decree must be construed as a good decree under that section and as awarding costs in the matter prescribed thereby, namely, payable out of the mortgaged property and not by the judgment-debtor personally.

Mr. D. N. Banerji (with whom Mr. W. K. Porter) for the respondents. The sole question is whether the Court executing the decree can go behind it. The language of this decree is plain, and whether rightly or wrongly the decree has awarded costs separately. There is nothing in the law to show that the Court cannot award costs separately, i.e., without including them in the mortgage money, and in any case the Court has done so. The judgment-debtor never appealed from the decree of the first Court on the point of costs, and the High Court has now no power to prevent execution of that decree according to its terms which are not ambiguous.

JUDGMENT.

The judgment of the majority of the Court (KERSHAW, C. J., BLAIR, BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.) was delivered by BANERJI, J.:—

This appeal arises out of an application for the execution of a decree presented in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bareilly by the respondents decree-holders. They brought a suit for sale on a mortgage, and a decree was made in their favour under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act on the 27th of August 1894. An appeal was preferred from that decree to this Court, which was dismissed on the 22nd of [526] April 1897. The decree-holders caused the mortgaged property to be sold by auction, and the proceeds of the sale being insufficient for the realization of the whole of the decretal amount, they subsequently applied for a decree under s. 90 of the above-mentioned Act. That application was dismissed. Their present application, which has given rise to this appeal, was one for the realization of the costs awarded to them by the decree of the Court of first instance and of the appellate Court from the person of the judgment-debtor. As regards the costs of the appellate Court, there is no controversy in this appeal. As for the costs of the Court of first instance, it is contended on behalf of the judgment-debtor appellant that, under the terms of the decree passed in favour of the respondents, they are not entitled to realize the costs of that Court otherwise than out of the mortgaged property. The Court below has overruled that objection, and it has been repeated in the appeal before us. No doubt a Court executing a decree is bound to give effect to the decree as it finds it. We have therefore to see

1898
JULY 20.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 523
(F.B.)=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 157.

1898
JULY 20.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 523
(F.B.) =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 157.

whether in this case the decree awards to the decree-holders the costs of the suit against the defendant personally. The decree, as we have said above, is one under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act. Under the terms of that section, read with s. 86, the decree should order, that an account be taken of what would be due to the mortgagee for principal and interest on the mortgage and for his costs of suit, if any, awarded to him, on the date to be fixed in the decree, and in the event of failure of payment of such amount of principal, interest and costs, that the mortgaged property should be sold. A decree drawn strictly in accordance with the provisions of s. 88 cannot direct the costs of the suit to be recovered otherwise than out of the mortgaged property. The first portion of the decree in this case was in strict compliance with the requirements of s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act. It declared that on the 27th of February 1895, Rs. 11,866-8 was to be payable to the plaintiffs, viz., Rs. 10,990 on account of principal and interest, and Rs. 876-8 on account of costs. The decree, however, [527] contains a further direction in the following terms:—"It is further ordered that the defendant aforesaid do pay to the plaintiffs aforesaid the sum of Rs. 876-8, the amount of costs incurred by them in this Court." It is contended that the second direction in the decree to which we have referred is independent of the order contained in the first portion of the decree as to the inclusion of costs in the amount on failure to pay which the mortgaged property could be sold, and it is urged that under this last clause the mortgagees plaintiffs are entitled to recover the costs over again from the defendants personally. We are unable to accede to this contention. We do not think that we should be justified in construing this decree in a manner which would make it an inequitable decree, which the decree in this case must be if, as is contended, it directs the same amount of costs to be paid twice over. In our opinion there is no ambiguity in the decree, and the second provision in it as to payment of costs is only a repetition of what is already contained in the first portion of the decree about the realization of costs out of the mortgaged property. Section 219 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that the judgment shall direct by whom the costs of each party are to be paid, and by s. 206 it is directed that the decree shall state the amount of costs incurred in the suit, and by what parties and in what proportions such costs are to be paid. In our opinion the clause in the decree relied on by the decree-holders is only a formal compliance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. It was never intended to be a direction for the recovery of costs personally from the debtor. In this view we are unable to agree with the observations contained in the judgment of this Court in Chiranji v. Moti Ram (1). Even if there were any ambiguity in the decree, it would be the duty of the Court to construe the decree by the light of the judgment. The judgment in this case does not in the slightest degree indicate that the Court intended to award costs against the defendant personally. The claim in the plaint was only for a decree for the [528] sale of the mortgaged property, and the judgment directed that a decree should be prepared according to s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act. In our opinion the judgment, so far from indicating, negatives an intention to make the defendant personally liable for the amount of the costs. We may observe that the decree of the appellate Court does not in any way affect the question before us, as it provides that the costs of the Court of first instance should be paid in the manner awarded in the decretal order of the said Court. We are in full accord with the opinion expressed by our brother Burkitt in his judgment in First Appeal No. 54 of 1894, decided on the 10th of August 1894, which dealt with a decree couched in similar terms. For the above reasons we are of opinion that the decree-holders are not entitled to realize the costs awarded by the decree of the Court of first instance from the judgment-debtor personally, and we hold that this appeal must prevail.

(1) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 33.

BURKITT, J.—This case was referred to a Full Bench at my request, because, being one of the Judges responsible for the judgment in the case of Chiranji v. Moti Ram (1) I felt dissatisfied as to the correctness of the rule therein laid down. I now desire to say that I fully concur in the judgment which has just been delivered. On consideration I am of opinion that in that case we were wrong in holding that the lower appellate Court took a portion of the main decree of the Court of first instance out of its proper position, and in a way constituted it a subsidiary decree for costs capable of execution against the persons of the mortgagors. I think we were wrong on that point, and that all that was intended to be done was to fill up as a matter of routine certain columns in the printed form of decree, and not in any way to modify the meaning or effect of the actual decree.

BY THE COURT.—The order of the Court is, that this appeal be allowed, and that the order of the Court below be varied to this extent that the application of the decree-holders for the [529] recovery of the costs of the Court of first instance is dismissed. The appellant will get her costs of this appeal.

Appeal decreed.

20 A. 529 = 18 A.W.N. (1898), 152.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Aikman.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BRIJ NARAIN MAN.* [22nd July, 1898.]

Criminal Procedure Code, s. 339—Pardon—Tender of pardon by Magistrate inquiring into a Criminal case—Pardon withdrawn after some of the witnesses for the prosecution had been examined—Effect of withdrawal of pardon at that stage.

A Magistrate inquiring into a charge of dacoity tendered a pardon to one of the accused persons. The pardon was accepted, and the person to whom it was tendered was examined as a witness for the prosecution. Subsequently, and after certain other witnesses for the prosecution had been examined, the Magistrate, being of opinion that the person to whom pardon had been tendered had not made a full disclosure of the facts of the case, withdrew the pardon, put the person to whom it had been tendered back in the dock, and ultimately committed him along with the other accused to the Court of Session. Held, that the commitment of the person whose pardon had been withdrawn must be quashed, inasmuch as he had had no opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses for the prosecution who were examined before his pardon was withdrawn: but that it was not necessary that, if a fresh commitment could be made in time, his trial before the Court of Sessions should be postponed until the trial of his co-accused had been completed. Queen-Empress v. Sudra (2) and Queen-Empress v. Mulua (3) referred to.

* Criminal Revision No. 345 of 1898.

(1) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 38.

(2) 14 A. 336.

(3) 14 A. 502.

1898
JULY 20.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
20 A. 528
(F.B.) =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 157.

1898 [F., 29 A. 24=3 A.L.J. 615=A.W.N. (1906) 258; R., 24 M. 321 (324); 5 A.L.J. 691=
 JULY 22. A.W.N. (1908) 259=8 Cr.L.J. 445 (446); 3 Ind. Cas. 922=10 Cr.L.J. 418=5 N.
 L.R. 134 (135); U.B.R. (1907) 4th Qr., Cr. P.C., p. 7 (8)=14 Bur. L.R. 306=7
 Cr. L.J. 245.]
 REVI-
 SIONAL
 CRIMINAL. THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the order of the Court.
 Mr. S. S. Singh and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, for the 20 A. 529= applicant.
 18 A.W.N The Officiating Government Advocate (Mr. A. E. Ryves), for the (1898) 152. Crown.

ORDER.

KERSHAW, C. J., and AIKMAN, J.—This is an application asking this Court to quash a commitment. The applicant Brij Narain Man was implicated in a dacoity: a pardon was tendered [530] to him by the Magistrate under the provisions of s. 337 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and by him accepted. He was in the course of the inquiry examined as a witness. The Magistrate came to the conclusion that Brij Narain Man was wilfully concealing material circumstances relating to the case, in particular, that he designedly in his statement omitted mention of his father and of his brother, who, according to the evidence, were also implicated in the crime. The Magistrate accordingly withdrew the offer of pardon, and, treating Brij Narain Man as an accused person, in the result committed him along with the other accused persons to the Court of Session for trial under s. 395 of the Indian Penal Code. The learned counsel who has appeared in support of the application puts forward two grounds as grounds which would justify us in quashing the commitment of his client. One of these is, that the withdrawal of the tender of pardon by the committing Magistrate is improper. This was explained to us as meaning that there was nothing to show that the statement made by Brij Narain Man when examined as a witness was other than a true and full disclosure of the circumstances within his knowledge relating to the offence and the persons concerned in the committal of the offence. The question whether or not the applicant made a full and true disclosure of all he knew regarding the dacoity is clearly a question of fact. Now, according to s. 215 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, a commitment once made by a competent Magistrate can be quashed by this Court only, and only on a point of law. This ground therefore would not justify us in interfering with the commitment. The other ground urged is, that it was illegal for the Magistrate to take the applicant from the witness-box and commit him for trial along with the other accused. Reliance is placed on the decision of this Court in Queen Empress v. Sudra (1), and the case of Queen-Empress v. Mulua (2). The latter case was a case in which during the course of a trial a Sessions Judge, being of [531] opinion that an accused person to whom a tender of pardon had been made, and who had accepted that pardon and had given evidence at the trial, was giving false evidence, forthwith put him as an accused person into the dock and proceeded at once with his trial. The former case was one on all fours with this, i.e., it was one in which the approver's pardon was withdrawn by the committing Magistrate and he was committed to the Sessions. We are of opinion that upon the second ground the commitment must be quashed, and for this reason. An order committing a person to take his trial at the Court of Session is an order which is passed to his prejudice, and the evidence upon which such an order is made must be the evidence of witnesses whom the accused person has had an opportunity of cross-examining. If he has not had that opportunity, it cannot but be said that he has been prejudiced. Now the order withdrawing the pardon of the applicant and directing that he should be treated as an accused person was made after some, at least, of the evidence in the inquiry preliminary to commitment had been taken, and as regards this evidence it is admitted that the applicant had no opportunity of cross-examining. For this reason we quash the commitment of Brij Narain Man Tewari to the Court of Sessions on the charge under s. 395 of Indian Penal Code, leaving the Magistrate to take such further proceeding against the applicant as he may deem necessary and as may be warranted by law. The learned counsel for the applicant has asked us to lay down that in the event of his client being after a fresh inquiry committed to the Court of Session and this commitment being made before the trial of the other accused has come on, he shall not be tried along with them. It is no doubt true that in the case Queen-Empress v. Sudra (1), the learned Judge who decided the case remarked as follows:— "It is, in my opinion, the intention of law that a person to whom a tender of pardon has been made in connection with the offence should not be tried for an alleged breach of the conditions upon which the pardon [532] was tendered until the original case has been fully heard and determined." We fully agree with the law as laid down in Queen-Empress v. Mulua (2) namely, that the trial of an approver whose pardon is withdrawn at the trial should not be merely a continuation of the trial at which he gave false evidence, but a trial, so far as he is concerned, de novo. We are unable to follow the learned Judge who decided the case Queen-Empress v. Sudra in the opinion expressed in the passage quoted above. We are unable to find anything in the Code of Criminal Procedure which would render it necessary that an approver whose pardon has been withdrawn by the Magistrate and who has been committed by the Magistrate in time to stand his trial along with the other accused in the case should be tried separately from them. We assume that the commitment referred to is not open to objection on the ground of any illegality such as exists in this case. The joint trial under such circumstances could not, in our opinion, prejudice the approver in any way; nor could it prejudice the accused who are jointly tried with him. We allow this application and quash the commitment of Brij Narain Man Tewari.

(1) 14 A. 336.

(2) 14 A. 502.

1898
JULY 22.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
20 A. 529 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 152.

(1) 14 A. 336.

(2) 14 A. 502.

1898
JULY 22.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 532 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 148.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt.

20 A. 532 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 148.

RADHA KISHEN AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs) v. FATEH ALI RAM
AND OTHERS (Defendants).^{*} [22nd July, 1898.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 59—Act No. I of 1872 (Indian Evidence Act), s. 68—Attesting witness—Scribe of a deed.

Held, that a deed may be legally proved by the evidence of the scribe thereof who has signed his name, but not explicitly as an attesting witness, on the margin, and has been present when the deed was executed. Muhammad Ali v. Jafar Khan (1), followed.

[Diss., 1 Ind. Cas. 179 = 5 N.L.R. 3; 16 Ind. Cas. 797; R., 34 A. 615 (616) = 16 Ind. Cas. 392 (393) = 10 A.L.J. 217; 33 B. 44 (48) = 1 Ind. Cas. 464 = 10 Bom. L.R. 943 (947); 5 C.W.N. 454; 19 Ind. Cas. 451; 24 M.L.J. 534 (536) = 13 M.L.T. 463 (465) = (1913, M.W.N. 400 = 19 Ind. Cas. 599 (590).]

[533] THE plaintiffs in this case sued to recover a debt secured by a bond dated the 26th of February 1889. The defendants put the plaintiff to proof of his bond and the plaintiff called numerous witnesses, but none of the marginal witnesses to the bond, and it was not shown that the evidence of the marginal witnesses was not procurable. Amongst those called by the plaintiff was the scribe of the bond. The Court of first instance (Munsif of Ghazipur) held with reference to ss. 68 and 69 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, that the bond sued on had not been legally proved, but gave the plaintiff a money decree against one of the defendants who admitted the claim.

The plaintiffs appealed, but the lower appellate Court (Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur) dismissed the appeal concurring with the finding of the Munsif that the bond sued on had not been proved.

The plaintiffs thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Mr. Abdul Raoof, for the appellants.

Munshi Kalindi Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—It seems to me that this case is exactly on all fours with the case of Muhammad Ali v. Jafar Khan (1). It is true that none of the witnesses was called, but the plaintiff did call the scribe of the deed, who, though not an attesting witness, had affixed his name on the deed and who swore that the deed had been in his presence executed by the parties to it. The lower appellate Court finds that the evidence of the scribe is not sufficient to prove the bond. By that phrase it is clear that the learned Subordinate Judge means that, as the scribe was not an attesting witness, his evidence is not legally sufficient to prove the bond. The Subordinate Judge does not say that he disbelieves the scribe. If he had said so there would have been an end of the matter. I take it that the finding of the two lower Courts is that the plaintiff was bound to call one attesting witness at least, that he failed to do so, and that the evidence of the witness, that is to say, of the scribe, whom he did call, ^{*} Second Appeal, No. 858 of 1897, from a decree of Maulvi Muhammad Ismail Khan, Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur, dated the 9th April 1897 confirming a decree of Munshi Achal Behari, Munsif of Ghazipur, dated the 6th January 1897.

(1) 17 A.W.N. (1897) 146.

was not in law sufficient to prove the bond. On [534] the authority of the case cited above I am of opinion that that decision is wrong, and that if the Munsif and the Subordinate Judge believed the evidence of the scribe to be true, they were quite at liberty on that evidence alone to find that the bond had been executed. This case has been decided on the preliminary point that the evidence of the scribe was legally insufficient to prove the bond. I set aside the decree of the lower Court and remand the case to the Court of first instance with instructions that, if the evidence of the scribe be in its opinion credible, that Court is at liberty on that evidence to find the bond proved. Costs of this appeal will follow the result.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

20 A. 534 = 19 A.W.N. (1898) 142.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Aikman.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BEHARI LAL.* [23rd July, 1898.]

Act No. I of 1892 (Local (N.-W.P. and Oudh Lodging House Act), s. 5, sub.s. 2—
Lodging house—House of "pragwal" used for accommodation of pilgrims.

Held, that a "pragwal" who, according to custom, affords accommodation to his clients when they come to Allahabad for religious purposes, is bound, under the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Lodging House Act, 1892, to take out a license in respect of such houses as he may use for the accommodation of his clients.

IN this case one Behari Lal, a pragwal living in Kydganj, a mohalla of the city of Allahabad, was charged before a Magistrate of the third class of the Allahabad district with keeping without a license three lodging houses in respect of which licenses were necessary. It was found that, besides the house in which he himself lived, which was also used at times for similar purposes, Behari Lal kept two other houses which were used by him to accommodate the pilgrims who came from time to time to Allahabad and there availed themselves of Behari Lal's professional services. The case for the prosecution was that these houses were habitually used for the accommodation [535] of pilgrims, and that, although no direct consideration was received for their use from the pilgrims, some indirect consideration was received in the shape of presents, which on their departure the pilgrims customarily made to their priest. For the defence it was contended that the houses were not habitually used as lodging houses, but only on certain occasions when the occurrence of religious festivals brought pilgrims to Allahabad, and it was also argued that the presents given by the pilgrims were the same whether they received any accommodation or not, and that the reciprocal functions of priest and client were hereditary and the client was not at liberty to change his priest, so that no part of the presents made by the clients could be regarded as consideration for the accommodation afforded to them by the priest.

The third class Magistrate convicted Behari Lal under s. 5 (2) of the N.-W. P. and Oudh Lodging House Act and fined him Rs. 50.

* Criminal Revision No. 401 of 1898.

1898
JULY 22.

—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 532 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 148.

1898 He appealed to the District Magistrate, and the appeal was transferred by JULY 23. order of the High Court to the Sessions Judge. On this appeal the — Sessions Judge found both that the houses in question were used more or REVI- less at all times throughout the year for the accommodation of pilgrims, SIONAL and also that some indirect consideration was received by Behari Lal in CRIMINAL. return for the accommodation so afforded. The Judge accordingly dismiss— ed the appeal.

20 A. 534= Behari Lal thereupon applied to the High Court for revision of the 18 A.W.N. order of the Magistrate and of the Sessions Judge.

(1898) 142. Mr. W. Wallach, for the applicant.

The Officiating Government Advocate (Mr. A. E. Ryves), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

KERSHAW, C. J., and AIKMAN, J.—This is an application for revision of an appellate order of the Sessions Judge of Allahabad confirming a conviction of the applicant under s. 5, sub-section 2, of Act No. I of 1892 of the Local Legislature (The North-Western Provinces and Oudh Lodging House Act), and a sentence of fine imposed thereunder. The applicant relied on the contention that the houses in respect of which he had been [536] convicted did not, for two reasons, come within the definition of lodging house in s. 1, sub-section 3, of the Act above-mentioned. In the first place, it was argued that the houses were not ordinarily used for the purpose of affording temporary accommodation to persons, and, secondly, that, if they were so used, the applicant did not receive any compensation, direct or indirect for such use. The first contention of the applicant is negatived by the finding of fact of the Judge, who says:—
 “I think there is no doubt that pilgrims are lodged in these houses of the appellant at all times and seasons of the year, and that the houses are used ordinarily as lodging houses.” The Court accepts that finding of fact. We find that there was evidence amply sufficient to support it, and we are therefore not justified in interfering where the question is one of fact, and where the fact has been found in a sense hostile to the applicant by the tribunal from which he has appealed. The second point under this sub-section 3 made by the applicant's counsel is that the applicant's houses do not come within the definition in that sub-section, inasmuch as the applicant did not receive any consideration, direct or indirect, for their user. The Magistrate has found that the persons who at various times of the year received temporary accommodation at the houses of the applicant did indirectly pay the applicant for such accommodation. Presents were received by him on the departure of the persons accommodated at his houses. We are of opinion that a portion of the value of those presents is to be ascribed to the accommodation which was given and received. The applicant derived his income from such presents. It was necessary that accommodation of some sort should be provided in order to enable him to keep his clients and so to receive in future such presents as they might give him. Under these circumstances we think that he was indirectly paid for the accommodation which he gave to those clients, and therefore that his houses come within the definition in the sub-section mentioned, and that he was rightly convicted. We therefore dismiss this application.

20 A. 537 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 159.

[537] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

1898
JULY 28.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

RUP SINGH (Judgment-debtor) v. PIRBHU NARAIN SINGH (Decree-holder).^{*}
[28th July, 1898.]

20 A. 537 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 159.

Hindu law—Mitakshara—Impartible raj—Impartible raj not necessarily inalienable.

If amongst Hindus governed by the law of the Mitakshara, a raj happens to be impartible and governed by the rule of primogeniture, it does not therefore follow that it is inalienable. The condition of inalienability depends upon special custom, or, in some cases, upon the special tenure of the raj and must be clearly proved. Rani Sartaj Kuari v. Rani Deoraj Kuari (1), referred to.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Parbati Charan Chatterji, for the appellant.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

KERSHAW, C. J., and KNOX, J.—The parties to these proceedings are Maharaja Pirbhu Narain Singh Sahib Bahadur, Kashi Nares, who is decree-holder, and Raja Rup Singh, known and styled as the Raja of Bhare, who is judgment-debtor. On the 29th of November 1891, Raja Rup Singh transferred by way of mortgage his rights and interests in certain property to the Maharaja of Benares. Upon that mortgage-deed the Maharaja of Benares instituted a suit and obtained a decree for sale. An order absolute for sale was also given subsequently. In process of time the decree-holder applied for attachment of the property with a view to its being brought to sale. No objection was raised by the judgment-debtor, and on the 19th of November 1894, an order issued for sale, and proceedings were transferred to the Collector of Mainpuri in accordance with s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Upon the case reaching the Collector, steps appear to have been taken to bring the property under the management of the Court of Wards, and under its management the property [538] appears to have remained up to the 8th of May 1897, when the Courts of Wards withdrew from management. On the 27th of March 1897, the decree-holder again applied for execution of his decree. Notice was issued to the judgment-debtor under s. 248 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the 19th of April 1897, fixed for hearing any objection that might be raised. The judgment-debtor raised no objection and the case went again to the Collector on the 27th of July 1897. Eventually the 20th of December 1897, was fixed for sale. On the 8th of December for the first time the judgment-debtor appears to have roused himself, or to have been roused into taking action. He on that date, after final orders for holding the sale of the property had issued, came forward, and for the first time asked the Court to consider whether the property which it was about to sell could or could not be sold in execution of the decree. The Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri considered that the objections taken were entitled to no weight and disallowed them. From that order the ^{*} First Appeal, No. 13 of 1898, from an order of Maulvi Muhammad Mazhar Husain, Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri, dated the 14th December 1897.

(1) 15 I.A. 51.

1898
JULY 28.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—

present appeal is brought, and it is again urged upon us that the property ordered to be sold is property which cannot be sold because, first, it forms part of an impartible raj, which by Hindu law and custom is inalienable; secondly, because the son and heir of the Raja of Bhare should, under the terms of s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882, have been made party to the proceedings.

20 A. 537 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 159.

It is admitted that the property forms part of an impartible raj. The learned vakil for the appellant strove to maintain that an impartible raj was also inalienable. He appears to have either overlooked or to have misunderstood the decision given by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Rani Sartaj Kuari v. Rani Deoraj Kuari (1). In that case it is laid down that in a raj the eldest son, where the Mitakshara law prevails and there is a custom of primogeniture, does not become a co-sharer with his father in the estate. If the estate be inalienable, the inalienability of it depends upon custom which must be proved, or it may be that in some cases it depends upon the nature of the tenure. Indeed, in [539] this case it does not lie in the mouth of the appellant to maintain at this stage this contention, seeing that when he offered the property for mortgage, he put forward that it was capable of alienation, that he made no resistance to the decree which was passed against it, and that he never, untill the 8th of December 1897, attempted to put forward the objection at all; even then he put it forward as being a question based upon the general principles of Hindu law.

The principle laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case above-mentioned cuts away the ground on which the second contention is based. The Court below was quite right in dismissing both the objections taken as frivolous. They were, in our opinion, frivolous and intended to delay execution. At any rate there is ample ground for suspecting that there was such intent. We cannot believe for a moment that if they were valid objections, the appellant would not have urged them long ago, and taken care to have them fortified by evidence of custom or as to the nature of the tenure. We dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

20 A. 539 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 145.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

SHEORAJ SINGH (Plaintiff) v. AMIN-UD-DIN KHAN (Defendant).
[28th July, 1898.]

Execution of decree—Application for execution by beneficial holder of decree—Application dismissed—Suit for declaration of applicant's right to execute the decree—Civil Procedure Code, s. 232.

Held, that where an application under s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure by a person alleging himself to be beneficially entitled under a decree to execute such decree has been rejected, it is still competent to the applicant (no appeal lying from the order under s. 232 rejecting his application) to bring a separate suit for a declaration that he is the person entitled to execute the decree. Ram

* Second Appeal No. 123 of 1896 from a decree of L.G. Evans, Esq., District Judge of Aligarh, dated the 30th November 1895, reversing a decree of Babu Bipin Behari Mukerji, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 20th June 1895.

(1) 15 I.A. 51.

Bakhsh v. Panna Lal (1) and Halodhar Shaha v. Harogobind Das Koiburto (2), referred to.

[R., 3 O.C. 32 (34) ; 5 N.L.R. 134 (135) = 3 Ind. Cas. 922 ; D., 28 A. 613 = 3 A.L.J. 428 = A.W.N. (1906) 183 ; 4 Ind. Cas. 160 = 12 O.C. 308.]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court.

[540] Babu Durga Charan Banerji, for the appellant.

Mr. D. N. Banerji, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—This appeal has arisen in a suit brought by the present appellant for a declaration that he is beneficially interested in a certain decree, and that he is entitled to take out execution of that decree. The facts are these :—Haji Mansur Khan, father of the defendant-respondent, and one Kadirdad Khan owned an indigo factory and other property. After Kadirdad Khan's death his legal representative sold his half share of the property under a sale-deed, dated the 23rd of August 1887, executed in favour of Asharfi Lal, who was a servant of the appellant's father, Raja Shankar Singh. It is said that Raja Shankar Singh was beneficially interested in the sale-deed, and that Asharfi Lal was a benamidar for him. This allegation has not been traversed in this suit and has been found to be true. It appears that the mother of the defendant-respondent brought a suit for pre-emption in respect of one of the villages included in the sale-deed referred to above, and in that suit impleaded Asharfi Lal and Raja Shankar Singh as defendants. Raja Shankar Singh disclaimed all interest in the property. The suit, however, was dismissed on other grounds. Subsequently a suit was brought in the name of Asharfi Lal against the respondent to recover damages for certain obstructions caused by him to the indigo factory comprised in the sale-deed. A decree was passed in his favour for Rs. 2,250 by the Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, which was affirmed by this Court on the 28th of June 1883. Raja Shankar Singh died in 1891. On the 11th of June 1894, Asharfi Lal executed a document in favour of the appellant, in which he declared that he was merely benamidar for Raja Shankar Singh. To this document we shall have to refer later on. On the 13th of August 1894, Sheoraj Singh applied for execution of the decree referred to above under s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That application was dismissed on the 18th of September 1894, and thereupon the present suit was instituted. The allegation of the plaintiff was, as we have said above, that he was beneficially [541] interested in the sale-deed and in the decree, and that he was entitled to apply for execution of the decree. The Court of first instance decreed his claim, but the lower appellate Court dismissed it. Hence this appeal.

The lower appellate Court has held, first, that the plaintiff is estopped from setting up a title to the sale-deed and the decree ; secondly, that he is not the assignee of the decree, and that on this point the order refusing his application under s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure is conclusive ; and thirdly, that it would be against public policy, after Raja Shankar Singh's repudiation of the sale-deed, to grant the declaration sought for in this suit.

We are unable to agree with the learned Judge in regard to any of the grounds relied on by him. The plea of estoppel was never raised by the defendant in his written statement, and the learned Judge has spelt

1898

JULY 28.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

20 A. 539 =

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 145.

1898
JULY 28.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
20 A. 539=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 143.

out for him a case which he never set up. In his written statement the defendant distinctly stated that the plaintiff's father Raja Shankar Singh was the real owner of the property conveyed by the sale-deed of the 23rd of August 1887. He did not assert that by reason of the disclaimer made by Shankar Singh in the suit for pre-emption he was deceived or was induced to alter his position in any way. The learned Judge says, that in consequence of the statement made by Shankar Singh in the suit for pre-emption the defendant did not advance, in a suit for partition instituted by Asharfi Lal, the defence which he might have raised, and on this ground he holds that the plaintiff is now estopped from claiming an interest in the decree in question. This, however, was not an allegation made by the defendant. As we have said above, he nowhere stated in the pleadings that he was led by any representations of the plaintiff or his father into believing the existence of a state of things which did not in reality exist. As a matter of fact, the defendant has admitted that he was aware that Raja Shankar Singh was the actual purchaser under the sale-deed of the 23rd of August 1887. Any representation made by the Raja therefore could [542] not have induced the defendant to alter his position to his own prejudice.

The next ground of the learned Judge's judgment is in our opinion equally untenable. As the plaintiff was not recognised by the Court as a person who, under s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was entitled to execute the decree and his application under that section was refused, he could not appeal from the order of refusal. The propriety of that order was therefore liable to be contested in a suit, and s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not bar such a suit. This was held by this Court in Ram Bakhsh v. Panna Lal (1), and by the Calcutta High Court in Halodhar Shaha v. Harogobind Das Koiburto (2). The order relied upon by the learned Judge does not preclude the plaintiff from maintaining the present suit.

As regards the third ground of the learned Judge's judgment, we are unable to agree with it. A benami transaction is not illegal, and according to the rulings of the Lords of the Privy Council effect should be given to such transactions. The mere fact that the father of the present plaintiff made an untrue statement in a Court of justice in a previous litigation should not preclude the plaintiff from proving the real nature of the transaction on which he relies.

It has been contended before us that the plaintiff should be deemed to be a decree-holder within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that as such decree-holder he is entitled to apply for execution of the decree in question. In our opinion a decree-holder within the meaning of s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be the person whose name is on the record of the suit and in whose favour the decree is passed, and the only other person who is included in the definition of decree-holder is the person to whom the decree is transferred. The beneficial owner of a decree cannot, in our judgment, be regarded as a decree-holder within the meaning of the Code. We are, however, of opinion that the plaintiff may be treated as the transferee of the [543] decree obtained by Asharfi Lal. The deed executed by Asharfi Lal on the 11th of June 1894. has the effect of transferring to the plaintiff all decrees obtained by him for damages or costs in relation to the property acquired under the sale-deed of the 23rd of August 1887. As the decree now in question is a decree of such a character it was in our opinion transferred to the plaintiff by the instrument of the 11th of June 1894, and the plaintiff as such transferee was entitled to apply for execution of the decree under s. 232 of the Code of Civil Procedure. As such transferee he has still the right to apply for execution of that decree, provided, of course, the execution is not otherwise barred by law.

(1) 7 A. 457.

(2) 12 C. 105.

The learned counsel for the respondent contended that we should not make a declaratory decree in this case, inasmuch as such a decree would be infructuous, as any application for execution which the plaintiff may now make would be barred by the operation of limitation. It is true that a Court in the exercise of the discretion which it possesses in the matter of passing a declaratory decree should refuse to exercise that discretion where the declaratory decree would be fruitless, but we are informed that in this case certain applications for execution were made which might have the effect of saving the operation of limitation. It would be premature for us to express any opinion as to whether or not execution of the decree is time-barred, and we are not satisfied that this is so clear a case that we should be justified in holding that any decree which we may make in favour of the plaintiff will be of no value to him. For the above reasons we allow this appeal with costs, and, setting aside the decree of the lower appellate Court with costs, restore that of the Court of first instance.

Appeal decreed.

1898
JULY 28.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

20 A. 539 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 145.

Title

Author

Accession No.

Call No.

Borrower's
No.

Issue
Date

Borrower's
No.

Issue
Date

I.L.R., 21 ALLAHABAD.

21 A. 1=18 A.W.N. (1898), 153.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

HARDAT (Decree-holder) v. IZZAT-UN-NISSA (Judgment-debtor).^{*}
[3rd August, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 583—Restoration of benefit obtained under a decree which has been subsequently reversed in appeal—Interest—Mesne profits.

Held, that a person who is entitled under s. 583 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the restoration of a benefit of which he has been deprived by reason of a decree which has been subsequently reversed in appeal is entitled, if the thing to be restored is money, to interest for the time during which he has been deprived of the use of it, or, if the thing to be restored is land, to mesne profits for the time during which he has been kept out of possession. Phul Chand v. Shankar Sarup (1) approved.

[R., 6 A.L.J. 715 (717)=3 Ind. Cas. 534.]

IN this case Musammat Izzat-un-nissa Begam sued one Dwarka Das for the purpose of having a lease which had been granted to him set aside. She obtained a decree in the Court of the Subordinate Judge on the 8th of March 1895. That decree cancelled the lease and directed Dwarka Das to give up possession of the land and to pay to Izzat-un-nissa the sum of Rs. 1,134-11-6 on account of mesne profits, and also other sums asked for. On appeal to the High Court that decree was set aside and Izzat-un-nissa's suit was dismissed with costs. Meanwhile however, Izzat-un-nissa had executed the decree of the Subordinate Judge and had obtained possession, and she had realized also the amount of her mesne profits and her costs. Dwarka Das assigned the decree [2] of the High Court in his favour to Hardat, and Hardat applied under s. 583 of the Code of Civil Procedure, asking in the first place for restitution of the amount which Izzat-un-nissa had realized in execution of her decree as mesne profits and costs, with interest thereon, and, secondly, for mesne profits from the date when his assignor was ejected in execution of Izzat-un-nissa's decree up to the date of the expiration of the lease.

The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Bareilly) allowed the claim for the mesne profits and costs realized by Izzat-un-nissa, but disallowed the claim for interest and for future mesne profits.

The applicant thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Mr. D. N. Banerji, for the appellant.

The respondent was not represented.

JUDGMENT.

KERSHAW, C.J., and BURKITT, J.—This is an appeal against an order made by the Subordinate Judge of Bareilly on an application made to him under s. 583 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

^{*} First Appeal No. 136 of 1898 from an order of Babu Madho Das, Subordinate Judge of Bareilly, dated the 19th March 1898.

(1) 20 A. 430.

1898
AUG. 3.

APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 1=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 153.

1898
AUG. 3.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 1=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 153.

The only facts which need be cited are that the respondent, Musammat Izzat-un-nissa Begam, sued the appellant's assignor for the purpose of having a lease which had been granted to the latter set aside. She obtained a decree on the 8th March 1895. That decree cancelled the lease and directed appellant's assignor to give up possession of the land and pay to Musammat Izzat-un-nissa Begam the sum of Rs. 1,134-11-6 on account of mesne profits, and also other sums asked for. On appeal to the High Court the decree in that case was set aside, and Musammat Izzat-un-nissa Begam's suit was dismissed with costs.

But meanwhile Musammat Izzat-un-nissa Begam had executed her decree obtained in the lower Court; she had obtained possession, and she had realised the amount of her mesne profits and her costs. The present applicant asks for the restitution of these amounts with interest. The Subordinate Judge has ordered the mesne profits and costs to be refunded, but has refused interest. That is the first matter raised in appeal.

[3] It is contended that the order of the Subordinate Judge refusing interest is wrong, and we have been referred to the recent case of Phul Chand v. Shankar Sarup (1). In that case, on the strength of the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council, it was held that in a case like the present, interest should be allowed. In our opinion that decision, to which one of us was a party, is correct and should be followed. We therefore set aside that part of the judgment of the Subordinate Judge which refused interest, and we direct him in execution to allow interest at 6 per cent. on all amounts which the appellant is entitled to recover from the opposite party.

The other matter asked for is, that appellant should be allowed mesne profits from the date when he was ejected under the execution of Musammat Izzat-un-nissa Begam's decree up to the date of the expiration of his lease, that is, up to the 6th of July 1897. It is a matter of regret to us that no counsel has appeared to argue this case before us, but we think that the principle underlying the ruling of their Lordships mentioned above is that we must put the appellant in the same position that he would have occupied if the plaintiff's decree had never been passed. Had that decree never been executed this appellant would have held possession of the leased property up to the date on which the lease expired, and would as lessee have been entitled to the rents and profits and the other advantages of possession as lessee. We think that we ought now to put him in that position, and we therefore direct that the Subordinate Judge on this application under s. 583, allow to the appellant the mesne profits which he would have received between the date when he was ejected in execution of the decree and the 6th of July 1897, the date on which the lease expired. Interest will be allowed on the mesne profits at 6 per cent.

We also give appellant the costs of this appeal.

Decree modified.

21 A. 4=18 A.W.N. (1898) 167.

[4] APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Banerji.*JAFAR HUSAIN (Defendant) v. RANJIT SINGH (Plaintiff).*

[3rd August, 1898.]

1898

AUG. 3.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

21 A. 4=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 167.

Mortgage—Construction of document—Mortgage of a mixed character partly simple and partly usufructuary—Decree for sale—Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 58.

In construing a mortgage-deed, the terms of which are of a doubtful character, the intention of the parties, as deducible from their conduct at the time of execution and other contemporaneous documents executed between them, is to be looked to.

Mortgage-deeds of a mixed character and other than those expressly defined in s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, must be construed as far as possible in accordance with the covenants contained in them. Where a deed is partly of the nature of a usufructuary mortgage and partly of the nature of a simple mortgage the mortgagee is entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale under the conditions set out in the deed. Shunker Lall v. Poorrun Mull (1), Phul Kuar v. Murlidhar (2), Jugal Kishore v. Ram Sahai (3), Umrao Begam v. Vali-ullah (4), Ramayya v. Guruva (5) and Sivakami Ammal v. Gopala Savundram Ayyan (6) referred to.

[F., 6 N.L.R. 20=5 Ind. Cas. 701 (704); App., 30 A. 162=5 A.L.J. 130=A.W.N. (1908) 70; R., 34 B. 128 (133)=11 Bom. L. R. 1315=4 Ind. Cas. 595; 26 M. 662 (667); 9 A.L.J. 332=14 Bom. L.R. 280=15 C.L.J. 411 (414)=16 C.W.N. 505 (509)=11 M.L.T. 265=(1912) M.W.N. 367; 10 Bom. L.R. 615; D., 28 A. 157=A.W.N. (1905) 226.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of KNOX, J.

Mr. Karamat Husen and Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellant.

Messrs. D. N. Banerji and B. E. O'Connor and Babu Satish Chandar Banerji, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, J.—Syed Jafar Husen executed a deed on the 12th of January 1888, whereby he transferred his interests in certain immoveable property for the term of seven years to one Chaudhri Ranjit Singh for the purpose of securing the payment of one lakh of rupees advanced by Chaudhri Ranjit Singh to him.

The main dispute in this appeal turns upon the precise nature of the transaction between the parties.

The first plea in appeal is to the effect that the learned Subordinate Judge has misinterpreted the mortgage-deed in suit. The appellant contends that the transaction is a pure usufructuary mortgage.

[5] On the same day on which Syed Jafar Husen executed the mortgage-deed, three other documents were executed between the same parties. All the four deeds were registered on one and the same day, namely, the 21st January 1888. It will be necessary to examine carefully the wording of the mortgage-deed, and if its terms are not sufficiently clear and admit of more than one interpretation, it will be necessary further to ascertain in what manner the terms of the deed were under-

* First Appeal, No. 227 of 1896, from a decree of Pandit Rajnath Sahib, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 8th June 1896.

(1) N.W.P. H.C.R. (1867) 150=2 Agra 150.

(2) 2 A. 527.

(8) 6 A.W.N. (1886) 212.

(4) 8 A.W.N. (1888) 171.

(5) 14 M. 232.

(6) 17 M. 181.

1898
AUG. 3.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 4=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 167.

stood and acted upon by the parties subsequent to their entering upon the contract, for, as was pointed out in Shunker Lall v. Poorrun Mull (1), the real intention of the parties to a deed may fairly be gathered from their conduct and from the effect given to the deed before the commencement of the dispute out of which the suit has arisen. It is hardly necessary to remind ourselves that where the terms of an instrument are doubtful, what we have to look at is the substance and not the mere form. The mortgage-deed will be found sufficiently well translated for the purposes of this appeal at page 1 of the respondent's printed book. After reciting that the shares in certain villages had been mortgaged by Syed Jafar Husen to Chaudhri Ranjit Singh, and that the mortgage money had been left with the mortgagee for the payment of debts due to certain creditors of the mortgagor, it states:—(1) that the mortgagor has put the mortgagee in possession of all the aforesaid villages; (2) that he authorises the mortgagee to appropriate the profits of the mortgaged shares in the villages in lieu of interest of the mortgage money during the term of the mortgage; (3) that he is entitled to redeem the mortgage after the expiration of seven years; (4) that the mortgagee is entitled to demand repayment of the mortgage money after the expiration of the term; (5) that if any difficulties or obstructions are placed in the way of the mortgagee, or any disputes or prior liens are found to exist, the mortgagee is at liberty to recover the mortgage money, together with costs, damages and interest, from the mortgagor and other properties of the mortgagor in the said [6] villages "according to the condition of a separate deed of agreement executed to-day;" (6) that until the full payment of the mortgage money, the mortgaged property shall in every way remain liable for damages, interest and deficiency of profits. This deed was executed after the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, came into force. The definition of a usufructuary mortgage according to that Act is to be found at clause (d) of s. 58. Putting the terms above recited alongside of the definition, it is evident that the deed contains more than is provided for in clause (d). The portions of it where the mortgagor binds himself personally to pay the mortgage money in the event of disputes, &c., find no place in, and are directly contrary to the nature and essence of a transaction which is a pure usufructuary mortgage. So also is the clause which provides that the mortgaged property shall remain liable for damages, interest and deficiency of profits. It is also evident from the reference made to "the separate deed of agreement executed to-day" that the parties intended this latter document to be read with and interpreted by a document to be found at page 8 of the respondent's printed book. This document is termed a security bond. It recites that Syed Jafar Husen has given in mortgage to Chaudhri Ranjit Singh certain shares in certain villages—the shares and the villages in both deeds correspond exactly; that Syed Jafar Husen has taken a lease of the said shares in the said villages upon certain terms to be found in a qabuliyat executed the same day; that the lease runs from January 1888 up to January 1895, or until redemption of the mortgage; in other words, that as regards time it is coterminous with the mortgage. The deed then proceeds to state that for the satisfaction of the mortgagee in regard to payment of the lease money the mortgagor pledges and hypothecates in this security bond his equity of redemption over the mortgaged property and shares to which he was entitled in the mortgaged villages. It is this last portion of his deed which is cited in the mortgage deed and which under certain circumstances is to govern the parties to the mortgage-deed. If the two documents are read together, it is [7] evident that they deviate still further from the definition of a usufructuary mortgage as set out in clause (d) of s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. It will be observed that the two other deeds, namely, the lease and qabuliyat have practically been called in aid of the mortgage transaction. One of those two documents will be found at page 5 of the respondent's printed book. The terms of this document also refer to the mortgage-deed, and they show that the intention of the parties was to enter into a transaction covered by the four deeds. In our opinion the four deeds must be read together before it can be fairly understood what the intentions of the contracting parties were. Indeed the learned counsel on both sides are at one upon the point that the deeds were intended to be and must be read together. The learned counsel for the appellant argued from them all that the intention of the parties was not to charge the property mentioned in the mortgage-deed with the principal amount or any portion of it. He drew our attention to the fact that there is no mention made in any of the deeds as to how the principal sum advanced was to be recovered after the expiry of the seven years, and also that the property charged, should any difficulty or dispute, &c., arise within the seven years, was property other than that covered by the mortgage-deed. He referred particularly to the words in the end of the mortgage-deed, wherein the mortgaged property is made liable for everything except the principal money. It was for these reasons that he contended that the deed was a pure usufructuary deed, and nothing more. The transaction between the parties stood, as he said, upon precisely the same footing as what is known in England as a Welsh mortgage, and he travelled into what is laid down in Ashburner's Treatise on Mortgages (see specially p. 168.) He also referred us to the following cases:—Teulon v. Curtis (1), Rankin v. Potter (2) and Cooper v. Cooper (3). It is needless, however, to refer to English cases and English treatises, for we have the question in dispute [8] before us, in our opinion, sufficiently covered by the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and by the general principles which have been uniformly followed by this Court for a long series of years. In 1879 a Full Bench of this Court, in Phul Kuar v. Murlidhar (4), in considering a deed which provided inter alia that if the mortgagor failed to pay the mortgage amount within the period of two years the mortgagee would be at liberty to recover the mortgage amount in any way he pleased, held, in spite of provisions in the same deed which recited that the mortgagee had been put in possession of the property mortgaged, and that the mortgagors intended to pay the mortgage money in a period of two years and get the property redeemed, that the transaction was in reality a simple mortgage-deed. In 1885 in the case of Jugal Kishore v. Ram Sahai (5), Straight, Officiating C.J., and Mahmood, J., agreed in holding that an instrument, the terms of which were far more in accord with the terms of the deed before us, was a combination of a simple mortgage and a usufructuary mortgage; that the shops were mortgaged as security for the debt; and that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain a suit to bring the property to sale. In 1888 in Umrao Begam v. Vali-ullah (6) Brodhurst and Mahmood, JJ.,

(1) N.W.P. H.C.R. (1867) 150 = 2 Agra 150.

1898

AUG. 3.

—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 4=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 167.

(1) Young's Reports, p. 610.

(2) House of Lords' Reports for 1873, p. 128.

(3) House of Lords' Reports for 1875, p. 55.

(4) 2 A. 527.

(5) 6 A.W.N. (1886) 212.

(6) 8 A. W. N. (1888) 171.

1898
AUG. 3.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 4=

18 A.W.N.
(1899) 167.

had a deed which they considered covered both the case of a usufructuary mortgage and of a hypothecation charge. From these and other cases which were cited to us, it is abundantly evident that this Court has always looked to the intention of the parties in construing a mortgage-deed, the terms of which were of a doubtful character; also that it has constantly recognized the fact that the covenants in mortgage-deeds of a mixed character and other than those expressly defined in s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, may be given effect to in accord, as far as possible, with the covenants contained in them, and that where a deed is partly of the nature of a usufructuary mortgage and partly of the nature of simple mortgage, the mortgagee is entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale under the conditions set out in the [9] deed. Looking at the mortgage-deed and the security bond and reading them together, we are satisfied that they were intended to form one and the same transaction, that the intention of the parties was that the person and property, both that expressly contained in the mortgage-deed and the further property set out in the security bond, were to be within the power and control of the mortgagee to bring to sale, if there was any default on the part of the mortgagor in the payment of the lease money.

Another question arose, namely, how far the mortgagee could in the present suit claim to include arrears of lease money for the years 1893 to 1896, for which he had instituted suits and obtained decrees prior to the institution of the present suit. Upon this point the learned advocate for the appellant admitted that the case Altof Ali Khan v. Lalla Prasad (1), was against him, and we think it is. No other questions were argued before us. The result is that the appeal is dismissed with costs. We extend the time for payment of the mortgage money to the 31st of January 1899. The costs of the plaintiff will be included in the amount, upon non-payment of which the mortgaged property will be sold.

BANERJI, J.—I, too, have arrived at the same conclusion as my learned colleague. If the mortgage in this case is a purely usufructuary mortgage as defined in clause (d) of s. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, the plaintiff is not entitled, having regard to the provisions of s. 67 clause (a) of that Act, to institute a suit for sale, and the present suit must be dismissed. The principal question which we have to determine in this appeal, therefore, is whether, as contended by the appellant, the mortgage made in favour of the plaintiff is a purely usufructuary mortgage, or, as urged on behalf of the plaintiff and held by the Court below, it is a mortgage which partakes of the nature both of a simple mortgage and of a usufructuary mortgage, and is a combination of both those kinds of mortgage.

[10] I am of opinion that the mortgage in this case is of the latter description. The mortgage-deed is not artistically drawn. We must, therefore, look to all its provisions as a whole, to the other instruments which were executed at the same time and admittedly form parts of the same transaction, and to the surrounding circumstances, in order to gather the intention of the contracting parties. The document begins with the recital that the property mentioned in it was mortgaged and pledged. The vernacular words are "rehn" and "girau," both of which mean mortgage or pledge. It was argued that the words should be understood in the sense in which they are used in Muhammadan law, namely, to denote a usufructuary mortgage. I am unable to agree with this contention. The words were evidently used in the mortgage-deed in the sense in which they are used in common parlance in the Hindustani language. As ordinarily understood in that language they are generic terms denoting a mortgage, whatever the nature of that mortgage may be. They apply as much to a simple mortgage as to a usufructuary mortgage. The use of those words does not, in my opinion, help the appellant. On the contrary, the fact that the deed begins by saying that the executant had "mortgaged and pledged all the aforesaid shares" for a lakh of rupees "for a term of seven years," coupled with the other recitals in the deed, raises the inference that the intention was to provide for the realization of the amount of the loan from the property itself and not from its usufruct only. The mortgage deed next provides for the payment of the mortgage money after seven years, and it contains a covenant to the effect that the mortgagee "will have the power to take back the mortgage money after the expiry of the term of seven years." This is a personal covenant to pay the mortgage money after the expiry of seven years—a covenant inconsistent with a usufructuary mortgage pure and simple. In a pure usufructuary mortgage as defined in clause (d), s. 58 of Act No. IV of 1882, the mortgage takes possession of the mortgaged property and is authorised to retain such possession until payment [11] of the mortgage money, and to receive the rents and profits, and appropriate them in lieu of interest only, or of the principal only, or partly of principal and partly of interest. The Mortgagee, so long as he remains in possession, has no right under the mortgage to claim the mortgage money, and the mortgagor undertakes no personal liability. But where the mortgage deed authorises the mortgagee to recover the mortgage money after a specified period or on demand, the transaction ceases to be a pure usufructuary mortgage of the kind contemplated by the Transfer of Property Act. It was held by the Madras High Court in Ramayya v. Guruva (1) that a mortgage which otherwise answers the definition of a usufructuary mortgage as contained in clause (d) s. 58 of Act No. IV of 1882, is not a usufructuary mortgage within the meaning of that Act if there is a covenant in it to pay the mortgage debt, and in the case of such a mortgage the mortgagee has a right to sue for sale. A Full Bench of that Court affirmed the same view in Sivakami Ammal v. Gopala Savundram Ayyan (2). With these rulings I fully agree. This case is almost on all fours with the decision of this Court in Jugal Kishore v. Ram Sahai (3) in which a mortgage of the same description as the one in suit was held to be a combination of a simple and usufructuary mortgage. It is contended in this case that the mortgage-deed does not in terms provide for the recovery of the mortgage-money by sale of the mortgaged property; but, as I have said above, the deed not being artistically drawn, we must gather the intention of the parties from all the provisions taken as a whole, and from all the surrounding circumstances. In my opinion, there is much force in the argument of the learned counsel for the respondent, that, all the four deeds executed on the same date being parts of the same transaction, the intention must be presumed to be the same in all of them, although the language employed in each deed to convey that intention may not [12] be the same. There can be no doubt that under the other deeds executed on the same date as the mortgage-deed the mortgaged-property and the other property mentioned in those deeds were rendered liable for 1898

AUG. 3.

—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 4=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 107.

(1) 14 M. 232.

(2) 17 M. 131.

(3) 6 A. W. N. (1886) 212.

1898
AUG. 3.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 4 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 167.

interest. It is also clear from the last clause of the mortgage-deed that "until the full payment of the mortgage-money" the mortgaged property was to remain liable for "damages, interest and deficiency of profits." It is unreasonable to infer that the intention was that, although the mortgagee would have the right upon the expiration of seven years to recover the mortgage-money in cash, and although he would be competent to realise "damages, interest and deficiency of profits" by sale of the mortgaged property, he would not be competent to touch that property, except to hold it for the realisation of interest only out of the usufruct, and that he would not have the right to cause that property to be sold for the realisation of the principal.

For these reasons, I agree with my learned colleague in thinking that the Court below has rightly conceived the nature of the mortgage in this case, and that this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 12 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 149.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

SAHIB ALI AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. SUBHAN ALI
AND OTHERS (Defendants).^{*} [3rd August, 1898.]

Regulation No. XXXI of 1803, s. 6--Revenue-free grant--Settlement in favour of daughter purporting to render other lands than the lands settled liable in the hands of the settlor and his heirs for the revenue of the settled lands.

One Bakhshish Ali in 1843 settled certain lands on his daughter Rahmat-un-nissa and covenanted that he and his heirs would pay the land revenue due on the estate so assigned along with the land revenue for their own estate. The deed of settlement then went on to provide that if at any time the heirs of the settlor, or whoever might be in possession of the rest of his estate, should demand from Rahmat-un-nissa, or the person in possession of the lands assigned [13] to her, the revenue assessed on those lands, then Rahmat-un-nissa and her heirs would be entitled to claim and take possession of the legal share in the settlor's estate to which she would be entitled under the Muhammadan law of inheritance.

Held, that as regards a person who had acquired a portion of the settled property partly by private sale and partly by sale at auction the settlement contravened the provisions of s. 6 of Regulation No. XXXI of 1803, and the heirs of the settlor could not be compelled to pay the land revenue due on the portion of the settled lands acquired by the said purchaser, nor had the purchaser any right under the deed of settlement to a proportionate part of the inheritance which would have come to Rahmat-un-nissa from her father.

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court.
Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellants.
Munshi Ram Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is a plaintiffs' second appeal. The following are the facts of the case:—One Bakhshish Ali was the owner of a taluqa called Taluqa Fatuha. On the 5th of December 1843, he executed a document called a tamliknama, in favour of his daughter Musammamat Rahmat-un-nissa, by which he assigned to her lands in two villages, ^{*} Second appeal No. 119 of 1896, from a decree of Babu Sanwal Singh, Subordinate Judge of Allahabad, dated the 22nd November, 1895, reversing a decree of H. David, Esq., Munsif of Allahabad, dated the 27th May, 1895.

namely, chak Sikandar and Mugarsan. In this document he covenanted that he and his heirs would pay the land revenue due on the estate assigned to his daughter along with the land revenue for their own estate. The document went on to provide that if at any time his heirs, or whoever might be in possession of the rest of his estate, should demand from Rahmat-un-nissa, or the person in possession of the lands assigned to her, the revenue assessed on those lands, then Rahmat-un-nissa and her heirs would be entitled to claim and take possession of the legal share in his estate to which she would be entitled under the Muhammadan law of inheritance.

1898
AUG. 3.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 12 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 149.

The suit out of which this appeal arises was brought by one Musammat Izzat-un-nissa, who had acquired a portion of the land bestowed by Bakhshish Ali on Musammat Rahmat-un-nissa, in the village Mugarsan. Part of this land the plaintiff had acquired by private sale on the 20th of September 1872, and another portion she had purchased at auction on the 22nd of February 1875. [14] The persons representing the other heirs of Bakhshish Ali having successfully asserted against the plaintiff Musammat Izzat-un-nissa, a right to recover from her land revenue payable on the portion of Musammat Rahmat-un-nissa's property which she (plaintiff) had acquired, the plaintiff brought this suit, claiming, first, a declaration that the defendants were bound by the tamliknama and liable to pay the land revenue assessed on the property in the possession of the plaintiff, and that if the amount of the revenue should be recovered by Government from the plaintiff, that the defendants were liable by reason of the tamliknama to repay the amount to the plaintiff; secondly, in the event of the above declaration being refused, the plaintiff claimed a decree for the amount of revenue which the defendants had recovered from her; and, thirdly, failing the above reliefs, the plaintiff claimed to be entitled to recover possession out of the share of Bakhshish Ali's estate which would have fallen to Rahmat-un-nissa by the Muhammadan law of inheritance of a portion bearing the same relation to the whole of Rahmat-un-nissa's share as the land which the plaintiff had acquired bore to the whole of the land bestowed on Musammat Rahmat-un-nissa. The Court of first instance decreed the second of the alternative reliefs set forth in the plaint. On appeal, the learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit of the plaintiff on two grounds: first, that under the tamliknama only the heirs of Rahmat-un-nissa were entitled to hold revenue-free, and that the plaintiff, not being an heir, but an assign, was not entitled to enforce the condition of the tamliknama; the second was that the grant by Bakhshish Ali to his daughter Musammat Rahmat-un-nissa was a grant in contravention of the provisions of section 10 of Regulation XIX of 1793, and that consequently the condition that she should hold it free from the payment of revenue was one which could not be enforced.

The plaintiff died during the pendency of the suit and is now represented here by her heirs. On their behalf three contentions are put forward. The first is, that the grant by Bakhshish Ali is not a grant of the nature prohibited by section 10 of Regulation XIX of 1793. We may observe that the Regulation applicable [15] to the question before us is really Regulation XXXI of 1803, which in s. 6 re-enacts the provisions of s. 10 of Regulation XIX of 1793. In support of this plea much ingenious argument was addressed to us. We are of opinion, however, that it cannot prevail. There is no doubt the grant was of a nature which was declared in the Regulations referred to 1898

AUG. 3.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 12=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 149.

to be null and void. It was argued that as no power save Government can free land from its responsibility to pay Government revenue, and that whatever the owner of the land may purport to do, Government can always in the last resort enforce its demand by having recourse to the land itself, the grant in question was not one of the kind at which the Regulations were aimed. The preamble to the regulations shows no doubt that the main object of the Government was the security of the land revenue which was considered to be imperilled by such grants. But that this was not the only object the Government had in view is clear from a reference to other legislation which took place about the same time. Regulation XLIV of 1793, for instance, was intended to prevent the grant by zamindars of leases and farms for long terms or in perpetuity at a reduced rent. The preamble states that such engagements, if held valid, would leave it in the power of weak, improvident or ill-disposed proprietors to render their property of little or no value to their heirs. Similarly, s. 81 of Act No. XIX of 1873 provides that grants of land which the grantor has expressly agreed not to resume shall be valid as against him, but not as against his representatives after his death. This shows that the intention of the Legislature was not merely to secure the public revenue, but to protect the heirs of zamindars from the effects of their improvidence. We hold that the grant in this case comes within the purview of s. 6 of Regulation XXXI of 1803, and consequently, being contrary to law, cannot afford a basis for either of the first two reliefs asked for in the plaint.

The next contention put forward by the learned advocate for the appellants was based on the provisions of s. 28 of Act [16] No. X of 1859. That section provides that applications to dispossess grantees of land exempt from revenue must be instituted within the period of twelve years from the time when the title of the person claiming the right to assess the land, or dispossess the grantee, or of some person claiming under him, has accrued; and that if such period has already elapsed or will elapse within two years from the date of the passing of that Act, the suit might be brought at any time within two years from such date. It was argued that the right of the defendants to resume the land and have it assessed expired on the 29th of April, 1859, on which date the period of two years after the passing of Act No. X of 1859 expired, and that consequently the plaintiffs had acquired an indefeasible title to hold the land revenue free. This plea might have been advanced by the plaintiffs in answer to the suit which was brought against them by the defendants in the Revenue Court to recover the revenue which they had paid for the land held by the plaintiff, but we do not think that this section, though it might perhaps have been pleaded in bar of a suit by the defendant for resumption or assessment, can be of any assistance to the plaintiff in this case.

The third and last contention on behalf of the appellants was that the defendants having failed to perform the conditions attached to the grant made in favour of Rahmat-un-nissa by Bakhshish Ali, by realizing from the plaintiffs the revenue for the land which was the subject of his grant, the plaintiffs were entitled to possession of a proportionate share of Rahmat-un-nissa's inheritance out of Bakhshish Ali's estate. In the view which we have taken of the validity of the grant, we are unable to accede to this contention. As in our opinion the condition which Bakhshish Ali imposed upon his heirs was a condition in violation of law, a breach of such a condition could not, in our judgment, confer on Rahmat-un-nissa, or on any person deriving title from her, the right to claim the share which Rahmat-un-nissa would have inherited out of Bakhshish Ali's estate under the Muhammadan law.

For the above reasons the appeal must, in our opinion, fail. We dismiss it with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 17=18 A.W.N. (1898) 183.

[17] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Banerji.

THE COLLECTOR OF MORADABAD (Defendant) v. HARBANS SINGH
AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs).^{*}
[3rd August, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 14—Suit on a foreign judgment—Power of Court to inquire into the merits—Muhammadan Law—Dower.

Where a suit was brought in a Court in British India upon the basis of a decree of the Council of Regency of the State of Rampur, it was held that the Court was empowered by s. 14 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as amended by s. 5 of Act No. VII of 1888, to consider the merits of the case in which the decree of the Council of Regency had been passed.

[F., 24 B. 86.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Mr. A. E. Ryves, for the appellant.
Mr. W. M. Colvin and Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX and BANERJI, JJ.—This was a suit instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Moradabad on the basis of the judgment of a foreign Court, namely, the Council of Regency of the Native State of Rampur. The suit in which that judgment was passed was brought by Musammat Humai Tajdar Begam against her husband Nawab Mohib Ali Khan, also called Nabba Sahib, to recover her dower, the amount of which was admittedly one crore of rupees and 25,000 Murshidabad gold mohurs. Both the lady and her husband belonged to the family of the Nawab of Rampur, the former being the daughter of a sister of the last reigning Nawab. Differences having arisen between Nawab Mohib Ali Khan and the ruler of Rampur, the former removed to Moradabad in the early part of 1887. His wife, however, continued to live in Rampur, and in the year 1888 brought against her husband the claim for her dower referred to above. Nawab Mohib Ali Khan having died in October 1889, during the pendency of the suit, it was continued against Sahibzada Sajjad Ali Khan, his minor son by another wife, whose estate in the district of Moradabad is under the management of the Court of Wards. On the 26th of January 1891 the [18] Council of Regency, the highest Court of appeal in Rampur, made a decree in favour of the lady. In execution of that decree a sum of nearly 22,000 rupees was realized in Rampur territory, and the amount now due is Rs. 1,07,53,088-7-0. The assets of Nawab Mohib Ali Khan in Rampur having been exhausted, the suit out of which this appeal has arisen was brought to recover the aforesaid amount from the property of the deceased in the district of Moradabad. It was instituted on the basis of the decree

^{*} First Appeal, No. 198 of 1896, from a decree of Pandit Rajnath Sahib, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 29th June 1896.

1898

AUG. 3.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

21 A. 12=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 149.

1898
AUG. 3.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 17=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 183.

of the Rampur Court, dated the 26th January 1891, by Humai Tajdar Begam and the respondent Kunwar Harbans Singh, who has taken from her an assignment of a half of her rights under the said decree. Upon a plea of misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action being raised, the lady withdrew from the claim, which was continued by the other plaintiff alone, and she was made a formal defendant. The lower Court considered the case on the merits, and made a decree in favour of the respondent Kunwar Harbans Singh. From this decree the present appeal has been preferred. Mr. Colvin, on behalf of the respondents, urged before us in limine that as the suit is founded upon a foreign judgment and the object of it is to enforce that judgment, that judgment should be accepted as final between the parties, provided that it is not opposed to natural justice and was not obtained by fraud; that the Court below acted improperly in going into the merits of the case, and that we also in deciding the appeal should not consider the merits of the case. He cited to us several English and Indian rulings on the subject, which are well summarised in Chapter VIII of part II of Mr. Caspersz's work on the Law of Estoppel. It is not necessary for us to consider those rulings, as we are of opinion that the amendment of s. 14 of Act No. XIV of 1882 by s. 5 of Act No. VII of 1888 has introduced an important departure in this respect.

The authorities to which our attention has been drawn seem to show that it is now established in England that when a suit is based on the judgment of a foreign Court which that Court had jurisdiction to pass and which was not obtained by fraud, such judgment must be presumed to be right, and the Court in which the suit on [19] that judgment is brought should not enter into a consideration of the merits of the case. The Indian Legislature has, in our opinion, laid down a different rule in the paragraph added to s. 14 of the Code of Civil Procedure by s. 5 of Act No. VII of 1888. That paragraph declares that when a suit is instituted in a British Indian Court on the basis of a foreign judgment, that Court is not precluded from inquiring into the merits of the case if the judgment is that of certain Asiatic and African Courts specified in the section. In the case of judgments of such Courts the Courts in British India have been given the discretion to regard or not to regard those judgments as conclusive. The exercise of that discretion must depend on the circumstances of each case. But there can be no doubt that by the enactment of s. 5 of Act No. VII of 1888 the finality of the judgment of certain foreign Courts in Asia and Africa has been taken away by the Legislature when a suit is brought on the basis of such a judgment. The Court below was not, therefore, precluded from inquiring into the merits of the case. Whenever a discretion is vested in a Court, that discretion should, it is true, be exercised judiciously and not in an unwarrantable manner. But we are unable to hold that in this case the learned Subordinate Judge acted improperly in considering the case on its merits. It may be that, having regard to the constitution of that foreign Court in this instance, no further inquiry was needed than what could be made upon the material afforded by the judgment of that Court—Fazal Shau Khan v. Gafar Khan (1). As the learned Subordinate Judge has, however, inquired into the merits of the case, as he was competent to do, we think that we also should hear the appeal on its merits.

The judgment of the Court, after a discussion of the case on its merits, thus concluded:—

(1) 15 M. 82.

We are aware that the effect of the decree in this case will be to deprive the appellant—the only son of Nawab Mohib Ali Khan—of the whole of the large property left by the Nawab, and that the said property, or the proceeds of the sale of it, will go to the [20] plaintiff, who evidently embarked on a speculation in taking an assignment of the decree of the Rampur Court. This has made us examine the decree with all the greater anxiety, and we cannot but regret that the Courts in these Provinces have not been vested by the Legislature with the discretion which has been conferred on the Courts in Oudh by s. 5 of Act No. XVIII of 1876, to award to a Muhammadan lady only so much of the stipulated amount of dower as the Court may consider “reasonable with reference to the means of the husband and the status of the wife.” We have therefore no alternative but to make a decree for the amount of the dower contracted for, however extravagant that amount may be.

We dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 20 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 160.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

GUR PRASAD AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. RAM LAL AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [5th August, 1898.]

Execution of decree—Civil Procedure Code, s. 244—Representative of a party to the suit—Purchaser of property under attachment in execution of a decree.

Held, that the purchaser of property which is at the time of the purchase under attachment in execution of a decree is a representative of the judgment-debtor vendor within the meaning of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Lalji Mal v. Nand Kiskore (1) followed. Madho Das v. Ramji Patak (2) explained.

[F., 5 A.L.J. 16, (N); Appr., 28 C. 492; R., 26 A. 447 = 1 A.L.J. 65 = A.W.N. (1904) 61; 34 M. 450 (451) = 20 M.L.J. 961 = 8 M.L.T. 240 = 7 Ind. Cas. 418; 5 C.L.J. 80 = 11 C.W.N. 163; 13 C.P.L.R. 1; D., 20 A.W.N. 107.]

THE plaintiffs in this case came into Court alleging that they had purchased from the defendants Mehrban Singh and others a 10-biswa share in a certain village, and out of the sale consideration, viz., Rs. 8,000, had paid Rs. 5,999 in payment of a mortgage on the share held by the defendants Ram Lal and others, and that the mortgagees had previously, in execution of money decrees held by them against the vendors, caused the property purchased [21] by the plaintiffs to be attached, of which attachment the plaintiffs had been fraudulently kept in ignorance, and now sought to bring it to sale.

The plaintiffs prayed that the property purchased by them might be released from attachment, or, in the alternative, that the property should be sold subject to the sale consideration and mortgage money paid by the plaintiffs.

The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad) decreed the plaintiffs' claim in part by declaring that the property should be sold subject to the mortgage money, Rs. 5,999, paid by the plaintiffs.

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 551 of 1896, from a decree of G. A. Tweedy, Esq., District Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 6th July 1896, confirming a decree of Maulvi Muhammad Anwar Husain, Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 13th December 1895.

(1) 19 A. 332.

(2) 16 A. 286.

1898
AUG. 3.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 17 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 183.

1898

AUG. 5.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

The plaintiffs appealed, and the lower appellate Court (District Judge of Farrukhabad) dismissed the appeal.

The plaintiffs thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Sunder Lal, and Munshi Gulzari Lal, for the appellants.

Pandit Moti Lal, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

21 A. 20=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 160.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—Upon the finding of fact that at the time of purchase there was an attachment, the only question is as to the application of the law to that finding. The question to be decided is:—Are the plaintiffs as purchasers representatives of the judgment-debtor so as to fall within the category of persons specified in s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure? Two cases have been cited to us which are in apparent contradiction. The first is the case of Madho Das v. Ramji Patak (1) and the other is Lalji Mal v. Nand Kishore (2). The first was decided by the late Chief Justice and our brother Banerji, the second by the late Chief Justice and one of us. In the former case it was found as one of the facts that there was a subsisting attachment at the time of purchase, though no mention of such attachment is made in the rest of the judgment. We have consulted one of the judges who decided that case, and he having perused it, informs us that in the course of the delivery of the judgment the fact of the existence of that attachment was not present to the mind of the Court. We [22] see no reason to depart from the ruling in the latter case, which we believe to be sound and in accordance with the drift of the decisions of this Court. The result is that we find that the plaintiffs in this case are representatives of the judgment-debtor, and as such are bound to seek their remedy by application under s. 244, and not by separate suit. The result is, that we allow the preliminary objection taken to the hearing of this appeal, and it follows therefore that the decrees of both the lower Courts are set aside and the suit of the plaintiffs is dismissed ab initio, but, under the circumstances, without costs. We regret that it is impossible for us to take what we believe to be the equitable course of allowing the plaintiffs to turn their plaint into an application under s. 244, the Court in which the suit was filed not being one in which the execution proceedings could be carried on. The appeal is dismissed.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 16 A. 286.

(2) 19 A. 332.

21 A. 22=18 A.W.N. (1898) 151.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Aikman.

MUHAMMAD HUSEN (Defendant) v. MUZAFFAR HUSEN AND ANOTHER
(Plaintiffs).^{*} [5th August, 1898.]

Act No. XII of 1881 (N.-W.P. Rent Act), ss. 93 (h), 203—Suit for profits—Limitation—Act No. XV of 1877 (Indian Limitation Act) s. 5—Act No. 1 of 1887 (General Clauses Act), s. 7.

1898

AUG. 5.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

21 A. 22=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 151.

Held, that a suit for profits under s. 93 (h) of Act No. XII of 1881, the period of limitation for the filing of which expired in respect of a portion of the claim on a day when the Court was closed, could not be brought on the day when the Court re-opened, but, so far as that portion was concerned, was barred by limitation.

[Diss., 23 A. 277 ; R., 6 Ind. Cas. 702=13 O.C. 103 (105) ; 4 O.C. 182 (186).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Mr. Abdul Raoof, for the appellant.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

AIKMAN, J.—This is an appeal by the defendant in a suit brought against him as lambardar by the plaintiffs under the [23] provisions of s. 93, cl. (h) of the Rent Act, to recover their share of profits for the years 1302 and 1303 Fasli, and for the profits of the kharif harvests of 1301 and 1304 Fasli. In the Court of first instance the defendant pleaded that the claim as regards the profits for the kharif of 1301 Fasli was barred by limitation. These profits fell due on the 1st February 1894. The suit was filed one day beyond the three years allowed for such a suit by s. 94 of the Act. The Assistant Collector overruled the defendant's plea on the ground that the Court was closed on the last day of the period of three years, and that the suit was within time, having been instituted on the day on which the Court re-opened. The Assistant Collector, however, found that no profits were due for that year, and gave the plaintiffs a decree for the profits of the remaining years claimed, calculated on actual realizations. The plaintiffs appealed to the District Judge, who modified the decree of the Assistant Collector, and gave a decree for profits for all the years in suit, finding that there had been gross negligence on the part of the lambardar, and that the rental, all but a small amount, might have been collected had due diligence been used. The defendant comes here in second appeal.

In the first ground of appeal he renews his plea that the claim for the profits of 1301 Fasli was barred by limitation. Nothing appears to have been said on the plea of limitation in the lower appellate Court, and it is contended on behalf of the respondents that the appellant should not be allowed to raise it now. I am of opinion, however, that it is open to me to entertain it even at this late stage, and I do so. In my opinion the claim for the profits for that year was barred. It is true that the last day of the period of the three years was a Sunday, but that does not, under the ^{*} Second Appeal, No. 805 of 1897, from a decree of C. Rustamji, Esq., District Judge of Moradabad, dated the 7th July 1897, modifying a decree of Muhammad Nur-ul-hasan Khan, Assistant Collector of Moradabad, dated the 30th March 1897.

1898
AUG. 5.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 22=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 151.

Rent Act, entitle the plaintiffs to an additional day's grace. Section 203 of the Rent Act provides that whenever a Court is closed on the last day of any period provided in this Act for the presentation of any memorandum of appeal or for the deposit or for the payment of any money [24] in or into Court, the day on which the Court re-opens shall be deemed to be such last day. It is noticeable that nothing is said in this section in regard to the presentation of plaints. Consequently the provisions of that section do not apply to the present case. There is no other section in the Rent Act which would help the plaintiffs. The provisions of Act No. XV of 1877 do not affect special or local laws which specially prescribe periods of limitation; consequently the plaintiffs are not entitled to take advantage of the general provisions contained in s. 5 of that Act. Nor will s. 7 of the General Clauses Act of 1887 help the plaintiffs, for by s. 2 the application of part I of the Act, in which that section occurs, is limited to the Act itself and to all Acts made by the Governor-General in Council after the passing of the Act. The former General Clauses Act contained no provisions similar to s. 7 of the present Act. For these reasons I am of opinion that the first ground in the memorandum of appeal must be sustained, and that that portion of the decree of the lower appellate Court which awarded profits to the plaintiffs on account of the kharif harvest of 1301 Fasli must be set aside. In the remaining grounds of appeal it is contended that the lower Court was wrong in allowing the plaintiff's additional profits owing to rents remaining uncollected through the gross negligence of the defendant. Although the reasons given by the learned District Judge do not appear to me in all cases valid, yet there was, in my opinion, evidence upon which he could come to the conclusion at which he arrived. He found on a consideration of the evidence that the lambardar had been unable to collect a sum of Rs. 55-4-8 owing to the poverty of the tenants. With regard to the balance uncollected, his finding appears to me to be one of fact which I cannot disturb in second appeal.

For the above reasons I so far allow the appeal as to set aside that portion of the decree of the lower appellate Court which awarded Rs. 14-0-11 to the plaintiffs on account of the profits of 1301 Fasli. Quod ultra the appeal is dismissed.

[25] The parties will pay and receive costs throughout in proportion to their failure and success.

Decree modified.

21 A. 25 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 156.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAM BARAN SINGH.* [6th August, 1898.]

Criminal Procedure Code, s. 395—Whipping—Sentence of imprisonment in lieu of whipping—Powers of Magistrate.

Where a prisoner who has been sentenced to whipping is found to be unfit to undergo such sentence and such sentence is accordingly commuted to one of imprisonment, such substituted term of imprisonment must not bring the total term to which such prisoner is sentenced up to a term in excess of the maximum which the Court passing the sentence is competent to inflict. Queen-Empress v. Sheodin (1) referred to.

* Criminal Revision No. 398 of 1898.

THIS was a reference under s. 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure made by the Sessions Judge of Benares. The facts of the case sufficiently appear from the order of the Court.

ORDER.

BANERJI, J.—In this case one Ram Baran Singh was convicted by a Magistrate of the first class under ss. 454 and 75 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment and to receive 30 stripes. He was medically certified not to be in a fit state of health to undergo the sentence of whipping. The Magistrate thereupon sentenced him to 6 months' additional rigorous imprisonment in lieu of whipping. The Magistrate was evidently acting under the powers conferred on him by s. 395 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Under that section, upon the offender being found not to be in a fit state of health to undergo the sentence of whipping, the Court may either remit the sentence of whipping, or may, in lieu of whipping, sentence him to imprisonment or a term not exceeding twelve months, which may be in addition to any term of imprisonment to which he may have been sentenced for the same offence. But this term of imprisonment, as held in Queen-Empress v. Sheodin (1) [26] is a substantive sentence of imprisonment. That being so, the Magistrate was not competent to sentence the accused to imprisonment in lieu of whipping for a period which was in excess of the maximum term of two years, for which, under s. 32, he could order the imprisonment of the accused. This is clear from the second paragraph of s. 395, which declares that under that section a Court is not authorised to inflict imprisonment for a term exceeding that which the said Court is competent to inflict. Section 33, which relates to the powers of a Magistrate to pass a sentence of imprisonment in default of fine, distinctly provides that the imprisonment awarded under that section may be in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment for the maximum term awardable by the Magistrate under s. 32. The absence of a similar provision in s. 395 and the provision of the second paragraph of that section, to which I have referred above, leave no room for doubt that the sentence of imprisonment awarded in lieu of whipping cannot be in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment for the maximum term which the Magistrate was competent to award. The sentence of additional imprisonment in lieu of whipping passed in this case was therefore clearly illegal and I set it aside. Ram Baran's bail will be discharged.

1898
AUG. 6.

REVI-SIONAL
CRIMINAL.

21 A. 25 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 156.

1898

AUG. 8.

APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 26=18 A.W.N. (1898) 161.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Banerji.*JADUBAR SINGH AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. SHEO SARAN SINGH (Plaintiff),* [8th August, 1898.]21 A. 26=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 161.Suit for malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—Evidence—Conviction of plaintiff by a criminal Court.

The fact that the plaintiff in a suit for damages for malicious prosecution has been convicted by a competent Court, although he may subsequently have been acquitted on appeal, is evidence, if un rebutted, of the strongest possible character against the plaintiff's necessary plea of want of reasonable [27] and probable cause. Parimi Bapirazu v. Bellamkonda Chinna Venkayya (1) followed.

[R., 26 M. 506 (508) ; 12 C.W.N. 818 (N) ; 6 Ind. Cas. 675 (677) ; 18 Ind. Cas. 830 (831) ; 2 L.B.R. 111 ; 176 P.L.R. 1901 ; U.B.R. (1906), Tort 5 ; D., 10 A.L.J. 423 (424) = 17 Ind. Cas. 879.]

THE plaintiff in this case was prosecuted in the criminal Court by the appellants on charges of riot and robbery. He was convicted by the Court of first instance and fined Rs. 10. That conviction was, however, set aside in revision by the High Court, on a reference by the Sessions Judge, who was of opinion that the charge had not been substantiated. The plaintiff, accordingly, instituted the present suit claiming damages to the amount of Rs. 600. The first Court gave him a decree for Rs. 175, which sum was, on appeal, cut down to Rs. 75. The lower appellate Court (Additional Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur) in its judgment said:—
"Independently of that judgment (the judgment of the Sessions Judge)
"there is a good deal of oral evidence which satisfactorily proves the "innocence of the plaintiff. The parties are old enemies. The defendants "had seen the plaintiff and his other companions carrying away the crops,
"and identified them while beating them. Under the circumstances there "can be no question of reasonable and probable cause, as see the authority
"noted in the margin. (Weekly Notes, 1889, p. 189). Now such being "my view as to the prosecution being false the plaintiff must be held
"entitled to get damages."

The defendants appealed to the High Court. An issue was referred to the lower appellate Court for a finding as to the existence or non-existence of reasonable and probable cause. On return of the finding of that Court, which was in favour of the plaintiff, the appeal again came up for hearing.

Messrs. Amiruddin and Muhammad Ishaq Khan, for the appellants.

Mr. E. A. Howard, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—The plaintiff respondent was prosecuted in the criminal Court by the appellants on charges of riot and robbery. He was convicted by the Court of first instance and sentenced to a fine of Rs. 10. That conviction was set aside by this Court on revision, the Sessions Judge who reported the case to this Court [28] for revision having been of opinion that the charge had not been substantiated. The plaintiff thereupon instituted this suit claiming Rs. 600 as damages. The lower * Second Appeal, No. 454 of 1897, from a decree of Maulvi Mubammad Ismail Khan, Additional Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur, dated the 27th March 1897, modifying a decree of Babu Chandi Prasad, Munsif of Rasra, dated the 28th January 1897.

(1) 3 M.H.C.R. 238.

appellate Court has granted him a decree for Rs. 75. That Court refused to enter into the question of reasonable and probable cause. As it was essential that in a suit of this kind the plaintiff, in order to succeed, must prove not only that the charge was unfounded and was instituted through malice, but also that it was without reasonable and probable cause, I referred an issue to the lower appellate Court for a finding as to the existence or non-existence of reasonable and probable cause. That Court has returned a finding in favour of the plaintiff, to which exception has been taken by the appellants.

The question of the presence or absence of reasonable and probable cause is a mixed question, both of law and fact. In this case, as I have said above, a Magistrate believed in the truth of the complaint brought by the appellants. That alone was sufficient evidence of the existence of reasonable and probable cause. In the case of Parimi Bapirazu v. Bellamkonda Chinna Venkayya (1) the learned Judges observed:—"We do not know of any instance of a suit of this kind being successfully maintained after a conviction of the plaintiffs by the sentence of one competent tribunal." No doubt, as observed in the said judgment, the judgment of one competent Court against the plaintiff should not in every case be considered a sufficient answer to the suit. But the fact of a Court of competent jurisdiction having believed that the complaint is a true complaint is strong evidence to show that it was not brought without reasonable and probable cause. The conviction by the first Court was no doubt subsequently set aside; but on referring to the judgment of the learned Sessions Judge, dated the 11th of November 1895, which is to be found on the record of the connected suit No. 622, out of which Second Appeal No. 455 has been brought, it appears that he held the charge not to be established because he had doubts in his mind as to the truth of the complainant's story. He did not find that the complaint was an [29] utterly false one. On the contrary, it appears from his judgment that a riot did take place that night, for which the complainant's party was convicted by the first Court along with the party of the present plaintiff. We have thus a judgment of a Court of first instance convicting the plaintiff and the judgment of an appellate Court which gave the plaintiff only the benefit of a doubt. Such being the case, it cannot be said that the complaint was totally without probable cause. I have not been referred to any instance in which, under similar circumstances, a decree for damages has been granted. In my judgment the suit ought to have been dismissed. I allow the appeal, and, setting aside the decree of the Courts below, dismiss the suit with costs in all the Courts. The objection under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure necessarily fails and is also dismissed.

Appeal decreed.

[The decision in this case was affirmed on appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent on the 7th of January, 1899.—ED.]

1898

AUG. 8.

APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 26 =

18 A W.N.

(1898) 161.

(1) 8 M. H. C. R. 238.

1898

AUG. 8.

APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 29 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 187.

APPELLATE CIVIL

*Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Banerji.*THE DELHI AND LONDON BANK, LD. (Plaintiff) v. CHAUDHRI
PARTAB BHASKAR AND OTHERS (Defendants).^{*} [8th August, 1898.]21 A. 29 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.Act No. XIX of 1873 (N. W. P. Land Revenue Act), s. 184—Sale for arrears of Government Revenue—Alleged benami purchase—Suit on a mortgage against the debtor and the certified purchasers alleged to be benamidars of the debtor—Civil Procedure Code, s. 317.

Per KNOX, J.—The operation of s. 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873 is not confined to disputes between certified auction purchasers and persons who allege that such auction purchasers purchased on their behalf as their benamidars, but extends to cases where the dispute is between the certified purchasers and third persons who allege that the certified purchasers are not the real purchasers. In such a case the claimants cannot succeed without proof of fraud.

Mussumat Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhoree Lall (1), Sohun Lall v. Lala Gya Pershad (2), Kanizak Sukina v. Monohur Das (3), Chundra Kaminy Debea v. Ram Ruttan Pattuck (4) and Tara Soonduree Deb e v. Oojul Monee Dossee (5) referred to.

[30] Per BANERJI, J.—Section 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873 contemplates a suit between the person claiming to be the real purchaser and the certified purchaser, and not a suit by a creditor of such person in which the creditor seeks to establish that the purchase was in reality made by his debtor and that the certified purchaser is only the benamidar of the debtor. Section 184 does not preclude a creditor of the beneficial owner from suing the certified purchaser on the allegation that his purchase was benami for the debtor, and that the latter is the real purchaser. Mussumat Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhoree Lall (1), Bodh Singh Doodhooia v. Gunes Chunder Sen (6), Lokhee Narain Roy Chowdhry v. Kalypuddo Bandopadhyaya (7), The Uncovenanted Service Bank v. Abdul Bari (8), Sohun Lall v. Lala Gya Pershad (2), Puran Mal v. Ali Khan (9), Kanizak Sukina v. Monohur Das (3), Subha Bibi v. Hara Lal Das (10), Ameeroon nissa Beebee v. Binode Ram Sein (11) and Chundra Kaminy Debea v. Ram Ruttan Pattuck (4) referred to.

[R., 21 A. 238 (245) = 19 A.W.N. 42 (44); 26 A. 82 = A.W.N. (1903) 199; 28 M. 526 = 15 M.L.J. 419; 8 O.C. 306 (311).]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of Knox, J.

Messrs. W. M. Colvin, C. Kirkpatrick and D. N. Banerji, for the appellants.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudri, Pandit Sundar Lal, Pandit Moti Lal, Maulvi Ghulam Muftaba and Kunwar Parmanand, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, J.—In the suit which gave rise to this appeal the Delhi and London Bank, Ltd., plaintiff (now appellant), laid a claim against one Chaudhri Partab Bhaskar alias Chaudhri Raj Kumar, for the recovery of Rs. 1,19,571-9-11, with interest, for an account of what sums might be due to them under a mortgage deed, dated the 17th December 1892, and, in default of payment of the sums found due, for sale of the properties covered by the aforesaid mortgage deed. The suit was instituted on the 27th day of June 1894.

* First Appeal, No. 72 of 1896, from a decree of Maulvi Anwar Husain Khan, Subordinate Judge of Farrukabad, dated the 26th November 1895.

| | | |
|-----------------------------------|--------------------------------|----------------------|
| (1) 14 M. I.A. 496. | (2) 6 N.W.P.H.C.R. (1874) 265. | (3) 12 C. 204. |
| (4) 12 C. 302. | (5) 14 W.R.C.R. 111. | (6) 19 W.R.C.R. 356. |
| (7) 23 W.R.C.R. 358 = 2 I.A. 154. | | (8) 18 A. 461. |
| (9) 1 A. 235. | (10) 21 C. 519. | (11) 2 W.R.C.R. 29. |

As the suit proceeded the plaintiff asked and obtained leave from time to time to add to the array of defendants (i) several persons who had purchased some of the villages covered by the deed on which the Bank had based their claim ; (ii) several other [31] persons who claimed a prior mortgage over certain of the same villages, and (iii) other persons whom they considered representatives of defendants who had died during the progress of the suit, until at last the total number of defendants arrayed on the record was twenty-five.

The plaint as originally framed was amended and added to more than once. Unfortunately these amendments and additions were so carelessly and inartistically carried out that even as it now stands the plaint abounds in errors which are creditable neither to the plaintiff nor to the Court which allowed the suit to proceed without taking care that so important a document as the plaint was free from all patent and obvious errors.

As an instance of such errors, the plaint says in paragraph 6 that "defendant No. 7", i.e., Tulshi Ram, for he is No. 7 on the array of defendants, "purchased Ani Bojh." Now it is not and never was any part of the plaintiff's case that the mahal Ani Bojh was purchased by Tulshi Ram. Indeed, in the same paragraph, only two lines lower down, the plaint goes on to say that the auction purchaser of Ani Bojh was "defendant No 8, i.e., the auction purchaser." Even here in these nine words there is another error, for on consulting the array of the defendants it will be found that Mashuk Ali is not defendant No. 8, but defendant No. 9.

It is evident that those who were responsible for the plaint have grievously neglected the duty imposed upon them by law of preparing for the Court to consider and for the defendant to answer an accurate, plain and concise statement of the circumstances constituting the cause of action. Ill considered and hasty additions have been made, until the plaint is no longer a safe guide as to what the plaintiff's case really is.

While reading the array of parties it has to be noted that after the appeal had been filed in this Court, Chaudhri Partab Bhaskar alias Chaudhri Raj Kumar, the principal defendant, died, and the name of Musammat Indomati has now been inserted in place of her deceased husband as his legal representative.

[32] The claim was not resisted in the Court below by Chaudhri Raj Kumar. In appeal no one appears to defend the appeal on the part of Musammat Indomati, his widow. The real litigant parties are the London and Delhi Bank, Ltd, and the persons subsequently added to the array of defendants, who from time to time purchased or pretended to purchase portions of the property covered by the mortgage deed of the 17th of December 1892.

It will materially assist the understanding of the real points at issue if those matters are first set out, upon which the litigants are practically agreed, and to dispute which no attempt has been made in the very prolonged arguments which have been addressed to us.

The late Chaudhri Raj Kumar was the son of one Chaudhri Fateh Chand, the owner of a very large amount of landed property situate in the Farrukhabad and Mainpuri districts. He was a man of a very spendthrift nature, and we find that the Collector of Farrukhabad had, with the sanction of the Board of Revenue, advertised for sale, on the 22nd of December 1892, 46 mahals, in all of which the Government revenue was in arrear. There is abundant evidence to show that the villages were good valuable property, well worth, if we may borrow a term in use in 1898

AUG. 8.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 29 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

1898
AUG. 8.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 29 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

auction marts, the attention of purchasers. Chaudhri Raj Kumar suffered the day fixed for sale to come on without apparent effort to avert the catastrophe beyond the negotiations with the Delhi and London Bank, which ended in the mortgage deed of the 17th of December 1892. The 22nd of December arrived, and of the 46 mahals, there stood advertised for sale 32 villages, in which the Government revenue still remained in arrears.

The Assistant Collector, specially appointed by the Collector under s. 172 of Act No. XIX of 1873 to hold the sale, one Misr Banarsi Das, after selling by auction 3 of the villages so advertised, namely, the mahals Shahpur, Atrauli and Salimpur, stayed his hand and did not proceed to the sale of the remaining [33] villages on his sale sheet. His reason for abstaining from sale is set out in a proceeding which will be found at page 55 of the appellant's printed book No. 1. In this proceeding he begins by setting out that he found the total balance due from Chaudhri Raj Kumar, on the 22nd of December 1892, was Rs. 20,101. To recover this balance an auction sale was held. As by the sale of only 3 villages the whole of the money had been realized, as he thought, the remaining villages had not been sold, and he reported his proceedings to the Collector for necessary orders. On this report reaching the Collector, that officer drew up a proceeding (see page 10 of appellant's printed book II), in which he pointed out that the procedure adopted by the Deputy Collector was in error, and ordered that the sale be continued on the 24th of December 1892; that all the villages and mahals which were not sold on the 22nd of December 1892, and the demand in respect whereof had not been paid, be sold on the 24th of December 1892. No further proclamation was issued, and the Deputy Collector proceeded to sell 27 villages out of 29 still remaining on his list for sale. The remaining two villages which he did not sell were left unsold because money had been paid in on account of the arrears due from those two particular mahals. Just at the same time, i. e., early on the morning of the 24th of December the plaintiffs, through their servants, paid over at Mainpuri to Babu Amar Singh, the attorney of Chaudhri Raj Kumar, the sum of Rs. 1,00,000, the consideration money for the mortgage deed upon which the suit is based, and had that same mortgage deed duly registered at the Mainpuri tahsil. This payment and registration preceded by a few hours in point of time the sale at Farrukhabad.

It is contended by the plaintiff that this sale of the 24th December 1892 was illegally held and bad in law, because (i) there was in the Government Treasury at the time of sale and to the credit of Chaudhri Raj Kumar, namely, on the 24th of December 1892, more than sufficient money to cover all arrears of Government revenue due on account of the villages under [34] sale, and (ii) because no fresh proclamation or notice of sale had been given.

A further contention is that the purchasers at the so-called sale of the 24th December 1892 were really fictitious purchasers. They were all of them friends or underlings of Chaudhri Raj Kumar, and the learned counsel promised to show that they purchased with the intention that the property purchased should still be Chaudhri Raj Kumar's and only revert to them if Chaudhri Raj Kumar failed to pay in the money which they promised on the 24th of December to pay as purchasers of the property sold.

Of the villages sold on the 24th of December, the following were villages mortgaged to the Delhi and London Bank in the deed of the 17th December 1892:—

(1) Chandpura Chaudhri, (2) Ayubpur, (3) Jhusi Nagar, (4) Kishanpur, (5) Malikpur, (6) Hasanpur, (7) Raura, (8) Bhawani Sarai, (9) Aima-uz-zam, (10) Jahangirpur, (11) Asafpur Patti, (12) Tikri and (13) Ani Bojh. At pages 12 et seqq., are the lists of bids made at the auction sale, and from these we learn that—

1898
AUG. 8.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 29 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

1. Chandpura Chaudhri was sold to Muhammad Umar for Rs. 58.
2. Ayubpur was sold to Mashuk Ali for Rs. 1,025.
3. Jhusi Nagar was sold to Lalta Prasad for Behari Lal for Rs. 4,100.

4. Kishanpur was sold to Lalta Prasad for Behari Lal for Rs. 9,050.

5. Malikpur was sold to Lalta Prasad for Thakur Das for Rs. 4,025.

6. Hasanpur was sold to Mashuk Ali for Rs. 1,600.

7. Raura was sold to Lalta Prasad for Behari Lal for Rs. 4,000.

8. Bhawani Sarai was sold to Kunwar Bahadur for Rs. 8,000.

9. Aima-uz-zam was sold to Mashuk Ali for Rs. 4,050.

10. Jahangirpur was sold to Muhammad Umar for Rs. 100.

11. Asafpur Patti was sold to Mashuk Ali for Rs. 3,780.

[35] 12. Tikri was sold to Ram Saran for Rs. 4,025, and

13. Ani Bojh was sold to Mashuk Ali for Rs. 2,450.

On perusing the history of the above villages after sale we find that the sale certificates of the mahals of Kishanpur, Malikpur, Raura and Jhusi Nagar were granted to Parsotam Rai Tantia Sabib; that he was informed on the 3rd of May 1893, that the sales had been confirmed by the Commissioner; and we also find that on dates between the 8th and 10th of September 1893 he formally acknowledged having been put into possession of them.

In respondents' book No. I at page 32 will be found a sale-deed, dated the 15th of September 1893, by which Mashuk Ali purported to convey to Nawab Safia Jehan Begam the village of Hasanpur Partabpur together with other villages. By a separate deed of the same date, Mashuk Ali conveyed to Nawab Syed Ali Hasan Khan the villages of Ayubpur, Aima-uz-zam, Asafpur Patti and Ani Bojh.

In respondents' book No. II, at page 3, will be found a deed of sale, dated 29th June 1894, under which Kunwar Bahadur conveys the village of Bahawani Sarai, with the village of Sarai Gujurnal to Tulsi Ram.

Chandpura Chaudhri, which was purchased by Muhammad Umar, was sold by him to Gauri Lal, since deceased. Gauri Lal's representative on the record is the respondent Kunj Behari Lal.

What the plaintiff seeks is that the mortgage deed of the 17th of December 1892, may be declared to have preference to all these transactions. According to him the sales of the 24th of December 1892 were illegal, because they were held without any fresh proclamation issued; or if they were, in spite of this defect, sales according to law, then he contends that the real purchaser at all these sales was Chaudhri Raj Kumar, and the nominal purchasers were people who never intended to purchase in their own right, but who assisted him with loans of money on the security of the villages purchased. In either case the sales of the 24th and the subsequent transactions should be all held to in no [36] way derogate from the mortgage-deed in his (plaintiff's) favour and to have no higher status than that of subordination to it.

1898
AUG. 8.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 29=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

This is the contention in appeal. Before considering it, it will be necessary once more to pass in review the case as put by the plaintiff for the defendants to answer; in other words, the case that on the pleadings had to be tried by the Court below.

The plaint sets out that Chaudhri Raj Kumar has not up to the present paid anything towards the principal or interest due under the mortgage-deed of the 17th of December 1892, and asks that a decree may be passed against him personally for such an amount as may be found due, and a further decree directing that on non-payment by him of the sum so found due on the account, the properties mortgaged in the deed may be sold, and the proceeds applied in liquidation of the sum due.

Two grounds are set out in the 7th paragraph of the plaint as the grounds upon which the sale of the 24th December should be set aside as being illegal and bad in law; the first being that prior to the sale and at the time thereof there was in the Government Treasury and in the hands of the Collector more than sufficient money to cover all arrears of Government revenue due on account of those villages, and the Collector was entitled to, and ought to, have realized the arrears therefrom; the second being that as the sales were originally fixed for the 22nd of December 1892, and the officer conducting the sale on that date had postponed the sale, subsequent sale without proclamation or notice on the 24th of December 1892 was invalid.

In the 8th paragraph the plaintiff says that as he did not advance any money until after the sale had been postponed, he cannot be bound by any subsequent sale of which no proclamation was issued or notice given.

In the 9th paragraph, it is alleged that the said properties were purchased at the sale of the 24th of December 1892, on behalf of the principal defendant, and any subsequent [37] contract cannot affect the plaintiff's right. From this 9th paragraph has been developed the further case, viz., that the sales of the 24th of December 1892 were no sales at all, because the purchaser at one and all of them was the defaulter Chaudhri Raj Kumar, and not Muhammad Umar, Mashuk Ali, or any other of the persons who on that day were declared at the time of sale to be the actual purchasers.

Thus, then, the case in the plaint, as it was filed, which is that the sales of the 24th of December 1892, and all subsequent proceedings are tainted with illegality and convey no title, has been developed into a case that they were sales, not to the certified purchasers, but to Raj Kumar himself; that they are in fact benami transactions.

The paragraph 9 is all the foundation in the plaint for what has been argued before us, viz., that the evidence points distinctly to one of two conclusions, either that the persons who pretended to purchase at the sales held on the 24th of December were benamidars for Chaudhri Raj Kumar and purchased with the agreed intention that, though the benamidar was declared actual purchaser, he should reconvey the property to Chaudhri Raj Kumar as soon as Chaudhri Raj Kumar repaid any money advanced by the benamidars, or that the purchase-money was to be advanced as a loan, the security for which was the particular mahal or mahals bid for by the pretending purchaser, Chaudhri Raj Kumar remaining throughout the de facto proprietor.

A third contention was raised that the evidence established that in some of the sales the money paid as purchase money was the money of Chaudhri Raj Kumar.

The first question then for determination is whether the sales of the several mahals held on the 24th of December 1892 were or were not illegal, either on the ground that there were in fact no arrears due from Chaudhri Raj Kumar on that date, or on the ground that they were held without a fresh proclamation issued.

[38] The Subordinate Judge has held, and rightly, that in the case of any irregularity in revenue sales application has to be made to the Commissioner of the Division, praying that the sale may be set aside. Applications were made by and on behalf of Chaudhri Raj Kumar to have the sales set aside, but such applications were rejected, and that order of rejection is final.

Section 178 of the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, provides that every sale of land under the Act shall be reported by the Collector to the Commissioner. At any time within thirty days from the date of the sale application may be made under s. 179 to the Commissioner of the Division to set aside the sale on the ground of some material irregularity or mistake in publishing or conducting it. There is nothing in the Act which limits the right to present such an application to the parties to the decree only. The right is left open to any and every person, and this being so, it does not lie in the mouth of any person who can show that he has suffered or may suffer from the sale to contend that the section was not intended to and does not provide a means of obtaining the remedy provided and of getting the sale set aside.

The Commissioner of the Division is required by s. 180, on the expiration of thirty days from the date of the sale, where no application to set aside a sale has been made, or if such application has been made and rejected, to make an order confirming the sale, and every order so made is expressly declared by the law to be final.

A right is reserved under s. 181 for the institution of a suit in a civil Court for the purpose of setting aside a sale on the ground of fraud. These provisions, and a further provision in s. 241 (j) of the same Act, which enacts that no civil Court shall exercise jurisdiction over claims to set aside a sale for arrears of revenue other than claims under s. 181, point irresistibly to the conclusion that the view taken by the Subordinate Judge, that the Commissioner's order of rejection is final, was the right and only conclusion.

[39] There is, however, the attempt made to contend that the sales were no sales because there were no arrears of revenue existing for which they could be held.

This contention is hardly worth considering. It is based upon a false foundation of fact, and it ignores the principle upon which sales of land for arrears of Government revenue proceed. The Government to which the revenue is due does not keep a debtor and creditor account with each individual landholder, but keeps its account for each mahal separately with the proprietor or proprietors of that mahal. When a mahal is once advertised for sale on account of arrears of land revenue due on it at the time of the advertisement, the defaulter can release such mahal only by paying the arrear due on that particular mahal at some time before the day fixed for the sale, either to the person appointed under s. 147 to receive payment of the land revenue assessed on such mahal, or to the Collector of the district, or the Assistant Collector in charge of the sub-division of the district.

In the present case, no such payment had been made by or on behalf of Chaudhri Raj Kumar to any of the three persons above mentioned on 1898

AUG. 9.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
21 A. 29 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

1898
AUG. 8.
— —
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 29 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

account of any one of the mahals which were sold on the 24th December 1892.

The Deputy Collector who conducted the sales on the 22nd of December has recorded, in a proceeding to be found at page 55 of the appellant's printed book No. I, the reasoning upon which he stayed sale and held that no arrears of land revenue were due. His conclusion that no arrears of land revenue were due is arrived at by crediting purchase money on account of the three villages sold on the 22nd of December, i.e., moneys payable in the future which might or might not be realized, and which would be in any case moneys paid not before but after the day appointed for sale, and other moneys not paid as required by s. 173 of the Act, but deposited in a civil Court. The proceeding shows most complete ignorance of the Land Revenue Act, 1873, and of the first principles of the land revenue system.

[40] I hold that the sales of the 24th of December 1892 were good and valid sales, and that we have no jurisdiction to entertain or determine claims to set them aside which are based upon alleged irregularities or mistakes in publishing or conducting the sales.

The next plea that we have to determine is whether the sales of the 24th of December were in fact sales made to Chaudhri Raj Kumar and not to the persons who were at the sale certified to be the auction purchasers or who have since been entered as certified purchasers in the certificate granted by the Government under s. 184.

The first question in considering the plea is whether the law as it stands permits the Court to entertain the plea. Section 184 of the Land Revenue Act expressly states:—"The certificate shall state the name of the person declared at the time of the sale to be the actual purchaser, and any suit brought, whether in a civil or revenue Court, against the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of another person, not the certified purchaser though by agreement the name of the certified purchaser was used, shall be dismissed with costs."

To inquire therefore, as the appellant asks us to do, whether the purchases of the 24th of December 1892 were made on behalf of Chaudhri Raj Kumar would be, it appears to me, to evade the clear provisions of law. The appellant must go further and show us, before we can set aside the sales, that fraud has entered into them. This he has not done.

There is a long array of decisions which at first sight would appear to be in favour of the view that the operation of s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure is confined to disputes between certified auction purchasers and persons who allege that such auction purchasers purchased on their behalf and are in reality fictitious purchasers.

It will be found, however, on examining them more closely, that the cases were one and all of them not cases against certified purchasers, but cases by certified purchasers, and therefore beyond [41] the letter and scope of s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The leading case is that of Mussumat Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhoree Lal (1). This was a suit brought by Lalla Buhoree Lal, the certified purchaser, against a mortgagee in possession for the redemption of the taluk and possession of it, alleging that the mortgage debt had been paid off by receipt of the profits, and if not, that he was ready to pay what might remain due. The defence was that the purchase was made by Lalla Buhooree Lall in his own name and as a benami purchaser for one Brij Lall Opadhia and with his money, and that the attempt by Lalla Buhooree Lall to set up title in himself was a fraud. Their Lordships of the Privy Council had no hesitation in holding that this suit was not a suit within the words or scope of s. 260 of the Code of Civil Procedure. S. 260 of Act No. VIII of 1859 is the corresponding section which has been replaced by s. 317 of Act No. XIV of 1882, but with more than one addition to its terms. These additions I need not consider at present. As s. 260 ran, it was word for word identical with s. 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873 as it now stands, except that the latter section prohibits suits being brought, whether in the civil or in the revenue Courts. and the former simply said "any suit brought shall be dismissed."

It is well to look closely into what the Privy Council did lay down in their judgment, for it seems to me that a wider intention has been, in some of the following cases, attributed their Lordships than was ever intended by them. Their Lordships first point out that the Legislature had not by any general measure declared benami transactions to be illegal in India, and that it therefore followed that those transactions must still be recognized and effect given to them by Courts, except so far as positive enactment stands in the way and directs a contrary course. Their Lordships next examined s. 260 of Act No. VIII of 1859, which was put forward as such a positive enactment. They [42] pointed out that this enactment was clear and definite, and went on to say:—"There is nothing from which it can be inferred that more is meant than is expressed. It is confined to the suit brought against the certified purchaser and to a specific direction as to what should be done with that suit, namely, that 'it shall be dismissed with costs'." It will be observed that in this passage their Lordships do not lay down the person by whom the suit may be brought which is liable to dismissal. It has been contended, and the contention has been apparently approved, that their Lordships intended to confine the suit to one brought by the benamidar against the certified purchaser. But I can find no authority for such limitation. It is true that their Lordships went on to deal with the contention that there might be inferred from this section and other sections contiguous to it a general intention having for its object to prevent any inquiry between the purchaser de facto and the person for whom he is alleged to have purchased upon the question whether the purchase was benami or not, and that effect should be given to that general intention. This inference their Lordships refused to draw. But they had not before them for consideration any other contention such as arises in the case before us, and I am not prepared to hold that what they lay down in reference to the contention directly under their consideration would have been laid down with equal emphasis to any other contention that might have been raised. Further on their Lordships say that the object which the framers of the Code probably had in view was to prevent judgment-debtors becoming secret purchasers at the judicial sales of their property and to empower the Court selling under a decree to give effect to its own sale without contention on the ground of benami purchase by placing the ostensible purchaser in possession of what it had sold and insuring him in respect of that possession by enacting that "any suit brought against him on the ground of benami shall be dismissed." If this be taken to be the object, it seems to me that it applies with equal force to those who seek to raise a contention against the ostensible purchaser and to prevent the Courts giving possession [43] to him because they claim to have a title derived from the 1898

AUG. 8.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 29 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

1898
AUG. 8.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 29 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

judgment debtor and which cannot be higher than that of the judgment-debtor. Their Lordships give the instance of cases where actual possession can be given of the things sold by the Court and where (they add) no difficulty arises, "for there the certified purchaser having both the certificate and possession can hold the property by virtue of cl. 260 against any suit brought" (not any suit brought by the judgment-debtor alone) "against him, and if that possession should be interfered with either by force or fraud on the part of any person, even a benami claimant, it no doubt ought, without inquiry as to the benami claim, to be restored." Their Lordships were very emphatic that they were not justified in adopting a construction of s. 260 beyond what the language of the Code imports, when such a construction would, in effect, be to declare that to be unlawful which the Code itself has not declared to be so. What I gather from the above is that every case that may arise to which it is sought to apply s. 260 has to be carefully considered, and it is to be seen whether the case is one which falls within the expressed words of the section. If it does not, the section has no application. If it does, the section must be applied without any arriere pensee as to whether such a construction be one which might under certain circumstances encourage fraud.

Indeed to my mind the boundary line which separates a benami transaction from a fraud, though it may be abundantly real in some cases, in others dwindles down to a line so shadowy and unreal that it is impossible to say where the honest benami transaction, if there be such a transaction, ends and the fraud begins. While therefore I do not seek by the importation of extrinsic matter to expand the words "any suits," I am equally unprepared to import extrinsic matter which will limit or qualify the same words beyond those which are to be found in the section itself, and which limit the suit to a suit (1) brought against a certified purchaser, and (2) based upon the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of a person other than the certified purchaser. It seems to me that the [44] moment an attempt is made to limit those words, at once we limit the power of the Court "selling under a decree to give effect to its own sale without contention on the ground of benami purchase" and "of insuring respect to that possession." Is the suit before us against a certified purchaser and based upon this ground? It is a suit to enforce the mortgage covenant of the Bank as against Raj Kumar and assignees from Raj Kumar, i.e., certified purchasers; and on what ground? The only ground is stated in the ninth paragraph of the plaint, namely, that the said properties were purchased on behalf of Raj Kumar. The person who framed this paragraph might almost be said to have had before his eyes the fatal words of s. 184 and to have copied them verbatim.

I know that it was held by Stuart, C.J., and Brodhurst, J., in Sohn Lall v. Lala Gya Pershad (1) that the provisions of s. 260 of Act No. VIII of 1859, which are very similar in terms, did not apply to a case in which a decree-holder brought a suit against the certified purchaser of property sold by a Civil Court, and that a suit based on the allegation that the certified purchaser had purchased the property benami for the judgment-debtor of the decree-holder would lie. The only reason given is that the Code had certainly not for its object the desire to confer a benefit on fraudulent benamidars. There was, moreover, a circumstance in that case which does not exist in the case before us, and that was the fact that, the judgment-debtor, the benamidar, had retained possession of property which in equity ought to have been given up to the decree-holder and was in possession of it at the time when the suit was brought. It was doubtless this fact which caused Mr. Justice Brodhurst to stigmatize the action as that of a fraudulent benamidar and to import the element of fraud into the case.

(1) 6 N.W.P.H.C.R. (1874) 265.

Again in the case Kanizak Sukina v. Monohur Das (1) Mitter, J. and Macpherson, JJ., held that if a creditor of the real owner of a property brings a suit for declaration that it belongs to his debtor and not to the certified auction purchaser, such a suit would [45] not be precluded by the provisions of s. 317. That section, they said, was intended to prevent fraud, and if it were to apply to a case like that stated instead of preventing fraud, it would promote fraud. The case which the learned Judges were considering and in which they uttered this pronouncement was a case by a certified purchaser to have his right declared as against his judgment-debtor and a third person, who were trying to resist his claim by a defence setting up the third person, and not the judgment-debtor as the real owner. The suit was really one by, and not against, a certified purchaser, whose title was the purchase just made. It is true that as against the third person it proceeded upon an allegation that the third person's name had been used in the transaction as benamidar for her mother and that she had no right to the property in the suit. It was really a suit by a certified purchaser against a trespasser and is quite distinct from the present suit.

The case of Chundra Kaminy Debea v. Ram Ruttun Pattuck (2) is also in reality a case by a certified auction purchaser against trespassers, a person who set up a title adverse to the title of the person whose property had been ostensibly sold and purchased, a person who sought to use s. 36 of Act No. XI of 1894 as a shield to cover her title. She may have been the certified purchaser at a previous sale, she was not the certified purchaser at the sale for the time being in question, and so far as the latter sale was concerned, was neither certified purchaser nor benamidar. Similar to this was the case of Tara Soonduree Debee v. Oojul Monee Dossee (3).

All these suits were suits which could not be brought within the terms of s. 317, except by expanding the words of the section, and are therefore no guide in the case before us.

For these reasons I hold that the law does not allow us to entertain this plea, and that I ought not to go into the question whether the appellants can or cannot, on the evidence, now substantiate a case to the effect that the purchasers at any of the sales of the [46] 24th of December 1892 were not the certified purchasers, but Chaudhri Raj Kumar, though, had I to do so, I should be prepared to show that in none of the sales has it, in my opinion, been established that the real purchaser was any person other than the certified purchaser. On this matter I am quite in accord with the conclusions drawn by my brother Banerji from his careful and exhaustive analysis of the evidence.

I would therefore dismiss this appeal with costs.

BANERJI, J.—This appeal arises in a suit brought by the appellant, the Delhi and London Bank, Ltd., for sale under a mortgage dated the 17th of December 1892, executed by one Chaudhri Partab Bhaskar alias Raj Kumar, who was the first defendant to the suit. He has died since 1898

AUG. 8.

APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 29=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

(1) 12 C. 204.

(2) 12 C. 302.

(3) 14 W. R. 111.

1898
AUG. 8.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 29 =
18 A. W. N.
(1898) 187.

the institution of this appeal, and is now represented by his widow. The amount secured by the mortgage is a lakh of rupees, and the property mortgaged consisted of the zamindari property of the mortgagor (whom I shall in this judgment designate by his commonly known name of Raj Kumar) in several villages. There is no controversy in this appeal between the mortgagor and the mortgagees, or in regard to the amount claimed as due upon the mortgage. The only question before us is whether the appellants are entitled to a decree for the sale of such of the mortgaged villages as are in the possession of the respondents other than the widow of Raj Kumar. Those villages were sold by auction on the 24th of December 1892 for arrears of land revenue due in respect thereof, and were purchased by the said respondents or their predecessors in title. Those respondents claim that under s. 167 of the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, they have acquired the villages purchased by them free of all incumbrances, and that the plaintiff's mortgage is void as against them.

Their claim is resisted on behalf of the plaintiffs on two grounds. First, that the sale was illegal and void; and second, that the property was in reality purchased by the mortgagor Raj Kumar in the names of the different purchasers.

[47] I propose to consider the questions thus raised in the order in which they were argued before us. The learned counsel for the appellants first addressed us on the second of those questions, and urged that Raj Kumar was the de facto purchaser of the property; that the persons in whose names it was purchased were his benamidars, and that as he was the real purchaser and the respondents acquired their title, if any, from him, they could not defeat the plaintiffs' mortgage. This plea of benami purchase was distinctly raised in the 9th paragraph of the plaint as amended, and was traversed by all the defendants in their written statements.

It has been contended before us on behalf of only one of the respondents, namely, Tulsi Ram, that the plaintiffs are precluded by the provisions of s. 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873 from urging that the certified purchaser made the purchases on behalf of some other person, namely, the mortgagor Raj Kumar. It is noteworthy that this contention was not raised before us by the learned counsel who appeared for the other respondents. In my opinion the contention is untenable.

Section 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873, so far as it bears on the present question, runs as follows:—

"Any suit brought, whether in a civil or revenue Court, against the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of another person not the certified purchaser, though by agreement the name of the certified purchaser was used, shall be dismissed with costs." The above provisions are exactly the same as those of s. 260 of Act No. VIII of 1859 (the former Code of Civil Procedure), and are similar to the provisions of s. 317 of Act No. XIV of 1882 (the Code of Civil Procedure now in force), of s. 36 of Act No. XI of 1859 (the Revenue Sale Law for the Lower Provinces), and s. 21 of Act No. I of 1845 (the Revenue Sale Law—now repealed). The policy of all these sections is only to discourage benami purchases at auction sales, and it seems to me that the Legislature intended to give effect to that policy by forbidding the person who purchases property at auction in the name of another from bringing a suit [48] against the ostensible purchaser for recovery of the property from him on the ground that he is not the real purchaser.

Those sections do not declare a benami purchase to be illegal and absolutely void. This has been repeatedly held by their Lordships of the Privy Council.

In Mussammatt Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhoree Lall (1), their Lordships observed :—"It is well known that benami purchases are common in India, and that effect is given to them by the Courts according to the real intention of the parties. The Legislature has not by any general measure declared such transactions to be illegal, and therefore they must still be recognized, and effect given to them by the Courts, except so far as positive enactment stands in the way and directs a contrary course." With reference to the provisions of s. 260 of Act No. VIII of 1859, which, as I have said above, are exactly in the same terms as s. 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873, their Lordships said :—"The object which the framers of the Code probably had in view was to prevent judgment-debtors becoming secret purchasers at judicial sales of their property." They added :—"The Code had certainly not for its object the desire to confer a benefit on fraudulent benamidars. Its provisions must have been framed on grounds of public policy * * *. That policy, if it was meant to be carried to the extent of making such transactions unlawful, might have been so declared and enacted, but the Code stops short of such an enactment."

A similar view was entertained in Bodh Singh Doodhuria v. Ganesh Chunder Sen (2), in which their Lordships, speaking of the provisions of the same section, remarked :—"They were designed to check the practice of making what are known as benami purchases at execution sales, i.e., transactions in which A secretly purchases on his own account in the name of B." This opinion was adhered to by their Lordships in Lokhee Narain Roy Chowdhry v. Kalypuddo Bandopadhyaya (3). Upon the [49] authority of their Lordships of the Privy Council, the highest authority on the subject, it must be held as settled that a benami purchase is not illegal; that such a purchase at an auction sale is not ab initio void; that the policy of the Legislature in enacting s. 260 of Act No. VIII of 1859 and similar sections is only to discourage benami purchases, especially by judgment-debtors; and that the Legislature intended to enforce that policy by forbidding the institution of suits by real purchasers against ostensible purchasers on the ground that the purchase made by the latter was on behalf of the former. Section 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873, like s. 260 of Act No. VIII of 1859 (which, as I have said above, is worded exactly in the same terms as s. 184), and like s. 317 of Act No. XIV of 1882, contemplates, in my opinion, a suit between the person claiming to be the real purchaser and the certified purchaser, and not a suit by a creditor of such person in which the creditor seeks to establish that the purchase was in reality made by his debtor, and that the certified purchaser is only the benamidar of the debtor.

Even in regard to suits of the former description, the Privy Council has held in two of the cases cited above that if the certified purchaser is the plaintiff, his claim may be resisted on the ground that he is only a benami purchaser. In my judgment, s. 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873 does not preclude a creditor of the beneficial owner from suing the certified purchaser on the allegation that his purchase was benami for the debtor, and that the latter is the real purchaser. If any other construction were

1898
AUG. 8.

APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 29=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

(1) 14 M.I.A. 496. (2) 19 W.R.C.R. 856. (3) 23 W.R.C.R. 858=2 I.A. 154.

1898
AUG. 8.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 29=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

placed upon that section, it would lead to the perpetration of fraud, and such surely could not have been the intention of the Legislature. The object of discouraging and checking benami purchases at auction sales by judgment-debtors is evidently to minimise the chance of the judgment-debtors being able to defraud their creditors. If, therefore the creditor of a person who has purchased his own property at auction in the name of another, with the intention of preventing that property being availed of by his creditors be debarred of the right of establishing [50] the real nature of the purchase and showing that it was made on behalf of the debtor himself, the very object of the Legislature would be frustrated, and facilities would be afforded to the debtor for perpetrating the fraud which it was the intention of the Legislature to prevent. The case-law on the subject is entirely in support of this view. With reference to the provisions of s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act No. XIV of 1882), it was held by my brother Aikman and myself in The Uncovenanted Service Bank, Ltd., v. Abdul Bari (1), that those provisions contemplate suits between the certified purchaser and the beneficial owner, and do not bar a creditor of the latter from asserting that the certified purchaser is not the beneficial owner. The same was the ruling of this Court in Sohun Lall v. Lala Gya Pershad (2), and in Puran Mal v. Ali Khan (3), in regard to s. 260 of Act No. VIII of 1859. The High Court of Calcutta also held the same view in reference to s. 317 of Act No. XIV of 1882 in Kanizak Sukina v. Monohur Das (4) and Subha Bibi v. Hara Lal Das (5). The same Court held in Ameeronnissa Beebee v. Benode Ram Sein (6) with reference to the provisions of s. 21 of Act No. I of 1845 (the Revenue Sale law—now repealed) that they were "not intended to protect purchases made in the name of third parties from the operation of decrees against the person beneficially entitled to the purchased property." In Chundra Kaminy Debea v. Ram Ruttun Pattack (7), that Court held, according to the head note, that "the object of s. 36 of Act XI of 1859 is to prevent the true owner from disputing the title of his benamidar (certified purchaser), and not to preclude a third party from enforcing a claim against the true owner in respect of the benami property." Wilson, J., in delivering the judgment of the Court, observed:—"It would be a departure from the principle on which these sections are framed, and would introduce, instead of checking [51] fraud and dishonesty, if we were to construe the section as meaning that where a creditor of the real owner has to bring the property to sale, this sham title of the benamidar may be set up against the purchaser. That would be making this provision, which was intended to discourage fraud, an instrument of fraud." These remarks have my full concurrence, and apply exactly to the case before us. We have not been referred to any ruling, nor am I aware of any, in which the provisions of s. 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873 were considered. But, as I have already said, that section is similar to s. 36 of Act No. XI of 1859 (the Revenue Sale Law for the Lower Provinces), and the principle and policy of all these sections are the same. I may add that our attention has not been drawn to any case, reported or unreported, in which a contrary view was held. Upon the provisions of the law itself and upon the authority of the case-law on the subject, I am of opinion that s. 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873 does not preclude the plaintiffs from showing that the

(1) 18 A. 461,
(4) 12 C. 204.

(2) 6 N.W.P.H.C.R. (1874) 265.
(5) 21 C. 519.

(6) 2 W.R.C.R. 29.

(3) 1 A. 235.
(7) 12 C. 302.

respondents, or those from whom they derive their title, purchased the property in question benami for Raj Kumar.

[The judgment then went on to discuss the evidence as to whether the purchases in question were in fact made benami for Raj Kumar, and, finding on this point against the plaintiff Bank, thus concluded] :—

The only question which now remains to be determined is that of the validity of the auction sale held on the 24th December 1892. That sale has been impeached in the argument before us on two grounds : first, that upon the sale not being proceeded with on the 22nd December 1892, the sanction which was granted by the Board of Revenue for the sale of the villages lapsed, and a further sanction was necessary ; and secondly, that a fresh proclamation of sale should have been issued, and as no proclamation was issued, a sale could not legally be held on the 24th. Neither of these grounds is, in my judgment, a tenable and valid ground for holding the sale to be ab initio void. The sanction which the Board of Revenue grants for the sale of the patti or mahal for [52] arrears of land revenue remains in full force until the sale has taken place or the arrears have been paid up before sale, and the mere fact of a sale which has been duly ordered being for some reason postponed does not necessitate the obtaining of a fresh sanction. An alteration in the date on which a sale is to take place does not, under any provision of Act No. XIX of 1873, put an end to the sanction already granted.

As for the issue of a fresh proclamation of sale, it is not necessary to decide whether or not the law enjoins it. The omission to issue a proclamation was nothing more than an irregularity or a mistake in publishing the sale on the ground of which an application could be made to set aside the auction sale. There is nothing in the Act which limits the right of making such an application to the defaulter alone. In this particular case applications were made by Raj Kumar which were rejected. I am unable to hold that the non-issue of another proclamation of sale renders the sale a nullity.

For the above reasons, I am of opinion that the Court below has rightly held that the plaintiffs are not entitled to enforce their mortgage against the property which was sold by auction on the 24th of December 1892, the purchasers of such property having acquired it free of all incumbrances.

I agree in dismissing the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

1898
AUG. 8.

—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

—
21 A. 29 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 187.

1898

JUNE 24.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 53

(P.C.)=2

C.W.N. 681=

28 I.A. 195=

7 Sar. P.C.J.
370.

21 A. 53 (P.C.)=2 C.W.N. 681=25 I.A. 195=7 Sar. P.C.J. 370.

[53] PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT.

Lords Watson, Hobhouse and Davey, and Sir R. Couch.(On appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces.)

SRI MAHANT GOVIND RAO, (Defendant), Appellant, v. SITA RAM
KESHO AND OTHERS, (Plaintiffs), Respondents, AND A CROSS-APPEAL.
[26th April and 24th June, 1898.]

Lapse to the British Government of a foreign State in ceded territory—Grant of lands therein—Construction of official correspondence—Obari, or abatement of revenue on the estate.

The State of Jalaun, in the territory ceded in 1804 by the Peishwa, lapsed in 1840 to the British Government. Before the lapse, the lands now in suit belonged to the chief, and were in the hands of managers on his behalf. The last manager, the ancestor of the present parties, remained, after 1840, in possession of the estate till his death in 1880, having been continued therein for life in 1852. In 1867 the Government directed the continuance of the entire estate to "the loyal members of his family."

Held, that no proprietary interest in the estate had been shown to have belonged to the ancestors when Jalaun was a principality; that all that could be claimed by the decedents was derived from the Government, which, after the lapse of the State, had the right, at their discretion, to control the descent of the estate, and had exercised this discretion. There had been no formal sanad; but on the true construction of the official correspondence, as to which the Courts below had differed, the Government first continued the possession of the ancestor for life, and afterwards conferred the inheritance, as to one moiety of the estate, upon the defendant, who was one of the sons of the original holder, and, as to the other moiety of the estate, upon the plaintiffs, who were the four brothers of the defendant, then living. The claim made by the plaintiffs, having been founded on a different title, was dismissed by the High Court. But this dismissal was accompanied by a declaration that the above grant had been made. This was now altered into a declaratory decree to the same effect, with the direction that inquiry be made as to who were entitled to the plaintiffs' moiety, and further directions were reserved.

[R.,—28 B. 153 (160); 6 Bom. L.R. 288 (290); D., 11 Bom. L.R. 606 (622)=3 Ind. Cas. 257.]

APPEAL and cross-appeal, consolidated, from a decree (30th July, 1890) of the High Court, reversing on second appeal a decree (14th January, 1889) of the Commissioner of the Jhansi Division, who had decreed the plaintiffs' suit. The Commissioner had reversed a decree (21st April, 1888) of the Deputy Commissioner of Jhansi, who had dismissed the suit.

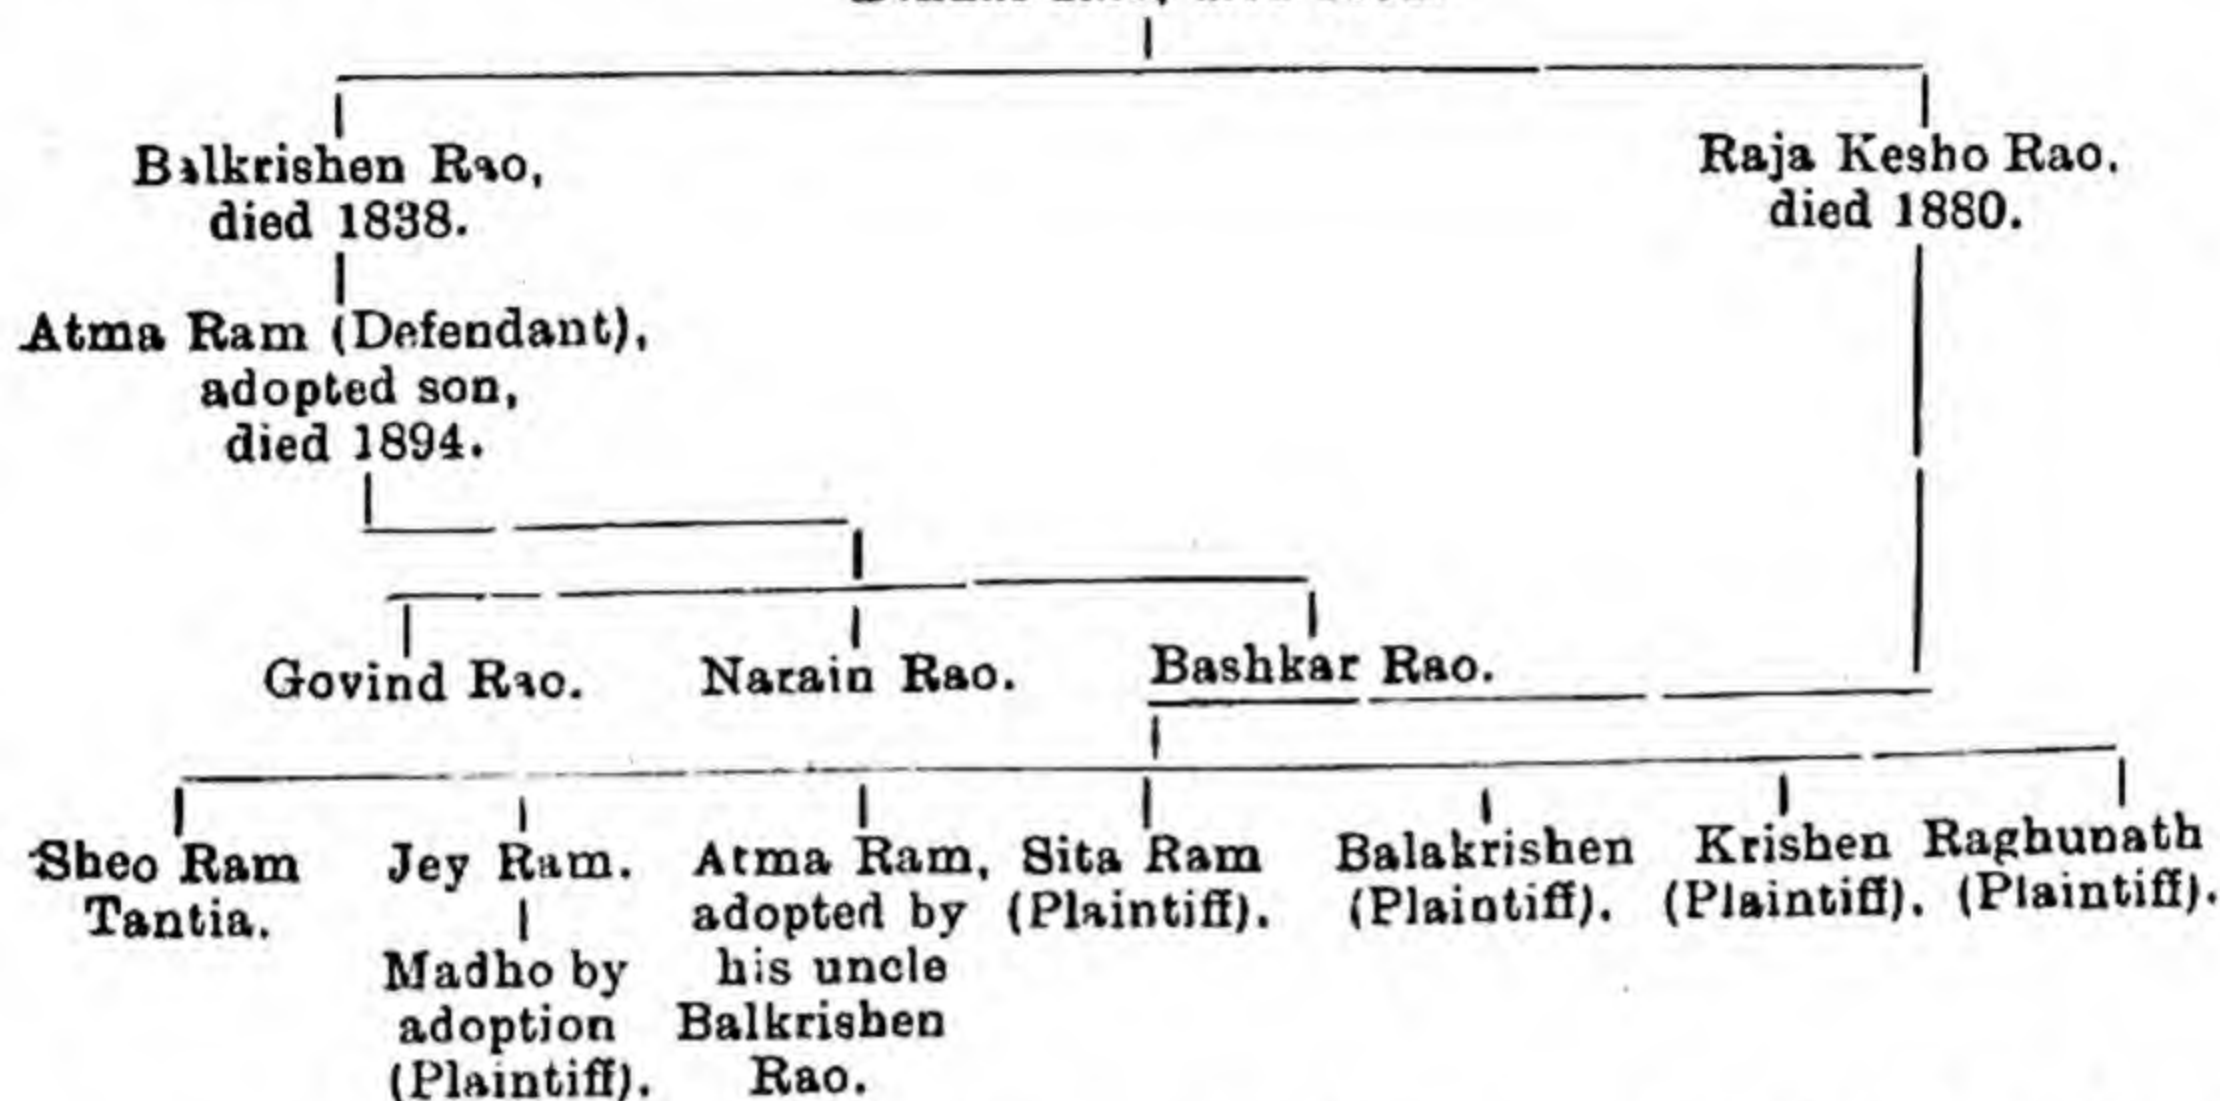

The plaintiffs, now respondents and cross-appellants, claimed in this suit possession from the defendant of the estate of Gur-[54]sarai which, before 1840, was in the territory of the Maharatta State of Jalaun, which was brought under the administration of British India in that year. The estate consisted of sixty villages, the fort and town of Gursarai, with land. It was termed in the plaint a riasat, and described as having been, before the lapse of the State, managed by two brothers on behalf of the Rao, who then ruled Jalaun. The one brother was the father of the parties, and the other brother had adopted the defendant.

A claim for moveables had been found by the first Court to be barred by limitation, and had been no further pursued. The defendant Atma Ram died in 1894, and for him was substituted, on this record, his son Mahant Gobind Rao, now appellant, who was also guardian of two minor brothers.

The relationship of the parties is shown in the following table. All the facts appear in their Lordships' judgment.

Dinkar Rao, died 1831.

The questions sought to be raised on these appeals related to alleged rights of inheritance in the estate held during his life by the late Raja Kesho Rao, those rights being contested between Atma Ram on the one side, and his brothers on the other; and [55] related to a declaration of their rights made by the High Court. The object of the defendant's appeal was to get rid of that declaration.

The title alleged in the plaint, which claimed possession, was that "the father of the plaintiffs in 1852, obtained from the Government the estate of Gursarai on an obari of Rs. 22,500 a year as a reward for his services"; that this estate had been managed by their father and his brother Balkrishen Rao, under the Raj of Jalaun, to which the estate belonged. Balkrishen, according to this plaint, had adopted the defendant, Atma Ram, and had died in the year 1838, before the acquirement of the property by Kesho Rao, and the defendant, being such adopted son, had no right to inherit from his natural father, Kesho Rao.

The defendant, in his written answer, set up that, before the grant of 1852 to Kesho Rao, the estate belonged to Balkrishen in proprietary right as ancestral property, and the defence was a title through Balkrishen. It was added that, with the sanction of the British Government, the defendant had been declared "owner, and possessor, and gaddi-nashin" of the estate in suit, which had been granted for life to Kesho Rao on an obari of the above sum, it having been recorded that after his death, "the obari should be fixed in the name of this defendant."

The principal issues raised questions of the terms on which the estate was held under the British Government; as to whether it was ancestral property, or acquired by Kesho Rao; as to what the character and effect of his possession had been, and whether the obari was a holding on the terms of the reduction of the revenue below what might have been assessed on the estate; also as to the meaning of the orders of the Government made in 1852 and 1867, and whether the last was effective to confer estates of inheritance, and on whom.

1898

JUNE 24.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 53

(P.C.) = 2

C.W.N. 681 =

25 I.A. 195 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

370.

1898

JUNE 24.

PRIVY

COUNCIL.

21 A. 53

(P.C.)=2

C.W.N. 681=

25 I.A. 195=

7 Sar. P.C.J.

370.

The Deputy Commissioner found that the brothers, Balkrishen and Kesho Rao, had no proprietary interest in Gursarai. There was, in his opinion, no evidence to show that the defend-[56]ant was in possession of any heritable zemindari interest in respect of which such a suit as the present could be maintained. According to this judgment the defendant held only an obari, or right to have remitted to him a part of the revenue that was assessable on the estate. The suit was, accordingly, dismissed.

That decision was reversed by the Commissioner who, however, concurred in the findings of fact by the Court below that, under the Jalaun State, the Gursarai estate was only under the management of the brothers, who had no proprietary interest in it, but had to account for the revenue collected by them, and pay the allowances assigned thereout; while the ruler of Jalaun could make rent-free grants within the estate.

Under ss. 584 and 585 of the Code of Civil Procedure, this finding was final, as was adjudged by the High Court, who, however, assented to it.

The Commissioner found that in 1852 Kesho Rao was in sole possession of the estate, as an obari, at Rs. 22,500 a year, receiving for his own benefit the difference between that sum and the annual yield of the estate. This privilege acquired by him was to pay a reduced jama, and was resumable by the Government, who could have raised, but allowed to remain as it was, the revenue to the full amount. To inherit the estate, subject to this, the plaintiffs, in the Commissioner's opinion, had title. Their right, as they were the heirs of Kesho Rao, prevailed over that of the defendant, who had passed from among the sons of the latter, having been adopted by Balkrishen, who died before Kesho Rao acquired the estate.

The defendant's appeal to the High Court was heard by a Divisional Bench, Sir JOHN EDGE, C.J., and YOUNG, J. In his appeal he abandoned what he had claimed in his written statement, viz., to be exclusively entitled to Gursarai as heir to Balkrishen. He now sought to maintain that the right to the inheritance, having been after the lapse of the State at the disposal of the Government, had been conferred upon himself; and that, in any event, he was entitled to half the properties in suit.

[57] The following contains that part of the judgment of the Chief Justice which is referred to at the beginning of the judgment of the Lords of the Judicial Committee.

"The estate of Gursarai had, prior to the death in 1840, of the boy-chief of the family of Jalaun, formed part of the property of the Jalaun State. On the death of the boy-chief without issue, in 1840, his territories lapsed to the British Government.

"As appears from the judgment of the lower appellate Court, Dinkar Rao, the father of Balkrishen Rao and Kesho Rao, had been in the management or charge of the Gursarai estate from at least 1815 down to his death in 1831. In 1815, Dinkar Rao made up the accounts of the estate from 1775. Those accounts were returned for revision, and were, fifteen years later, finally accepted by the then chief of Jalaun. On the death of Dinkar Rao, in 1831, Balaji Gobind, the then chief of Jalaun, wrote to Balkrishen Rao and Kesho Rao condoling with them on the death of their father Dinkar Rao, and desiring them to continue in the management of the fort and mahal.

"Gobind Rao Bala, who was the Chief of Jalaun from 1832 to 1840,

" wrote, ordering a payment of a pension which had apparently been " kept in arrear. The lower appellate Court considered that it appeared " from letters which were in evidence that the Gursarai family, that is,
 " Dinkar Rao and after him Balkrishen Rao and Kesho Rao, were treated
 " by the chiefs of Jalaun with high consideration, and that, probably, the " family of Gursarai was related to the chiefs of Jalaun.

" In considering what had been, prior to the lapse of the Jalaun
 " territories and estates to the British Government in 1840, the position
 " of the Gursarai family, Dinkar Rao and after his death Balkrishen Rao
 " and Kesho Rao, and their connection with the Gursarai estate, the " lower appellate Court has found :— 'The evidence, however, establishes
 " 'very clearly the fact that, under the Jalaun Government, the " 'Gursarai family had no [58] proprietary right in the estate. They had " 'to pay the allowances assigned to individuals upon that revenue, and
 " 'the ruler of Jalaun was free to make rent-free grants within the " 'estate.' There can be no pretence for suggesting that, prior to the " lapse of the Jalaun territories, including the estate of Gursarai, to the " British Government in 1840, Balkrishen Rao and Kesho Rao, or Kesho
 " Rao alone had acquired any proprietary or any heritable in the estate
 " of Gursarai. It would be contrary to rudimentary principles of " law to hold that an agent could, adversely to his employer, acquire " any proprietary or any heritable interest in an estate which he " was managing for that employer, and in respect of which he " was accounting to him. Indeed, the plaintiffs do not in their plaint
 " suggest, nor is there any evidence, that any heritable interest in the " Gursarai estate had been acquired by Kesho Rao or by any one prior " to 1852. It is obvious that the lower appellate Court, when it found " that from the date of the lapse of the Jalaun estates in 1840 until the " death of Kesho Rao on the 26th of October 1880, he had enjoyed the " income of the Gursarai estate upon the sole condition of paying Rs. 22,500
 " annually to the British Government, did not mean by that finding that " prior to 1867, Kesho Rao had acquired any proprietary or any heritable
 " interest in the Gursarai estate; for in the opinion of the lower appellate " Court such proprietary title as was conferred on the family of Kesho
 " Rao was conferred by the order of the Secretary of State for India in " Council, conveyed by the despatch of the 28th of February 1867,
 " and not before. It is also clear from the judgment of the lower appel" late Court that, from 1840 to 1852, Kesho Rao had been permitted to " enjoy the income of the Gursarai estate as an obaridar under a miscon" ception on the part of the Government as to his true position and " rights."

It was then added that in 1852, when the orders of the Government, to the effect that Kesho Rao's rights should not be touched during his life, were communicated to the Governor-[59] General's Agent with a representation that the estate was an obari, what was then intended as the recognition of an old status was in fact, the recognition of a new one. That status was, however, merely for the life of Kesho Rao, and the estate did not carry with it heritable rights. The judgment also referred to a suggestion made to the Court that the existence of the obari gave rise to the inference of a heritable estate, already and before then, existing in Kesho Rao. There had, however, been no descent of the Gursarai riasat except in the family of the chiefs of Jalaun; and all the documentary evidence was against there having been before the lapse of the estate any inheritance conferred.

1898
 JUNE 24.
 —
 PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 53
 (P.C.) = 2
 C.W.N. 681 =
 25 I.A. 195 =
 7 Sar. P.C.J.
 370.

1898

JUNE 24.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 53

(P.C.)=2

C.W.N. 681=

25 I.A. 195=

7 Sar. P.C.J.
370.

The judgment passed on to the effect of the order of the Secretary of State of the 25th of February 1867, sanctioning the family arrangement between the sons of Kesho Rao, and conferring upon both the parties to this suit interests in the moieties of the estate. That the British Government had the right to confer such interests, and did confer them, could not be doubted. On the findings of fact of the Courts below, and on the construction of the order last mentioned, the judgment was that the claim of the plaintiffs to exclusive possession must fail.

This was followed by the dismissal of the suit. With a view to settling the rights of the parties, a declaration was added that the defendant was entitled to a moiety only of the Gursarai estate, and that the plaintiffs were entitled, among themselves, to the other moiety.

The defendant appealed from this decree contending, among other objections, that this declaration should not have been made. The plaintiffs afterwards obtained special leave to cross-appeal, and now claimed that, as declared by the High Court, they were, at all events, entitled to the half of the estate under the order of the 25th of February 1867.

Mr. Herbert Cowell for the cross-appellants, respondents, obtained leave to begin, as their cross-appeal raised the whole question of title to the estate. In 1840 the estate came under the revenue administration, and until December 1852 the Agent to [60] the Governor-General in Bundelkhand controlled that administration for Jalaun. After that time the Government of the North-Western Provinces administered the District. Thereupon all mahals, or estates, would in ordinary course be brought under settlement, a survey would be made, an assessment of revenue would take place, and a jama be adjusted with those responsible. The rules to guide Collectors were compiled and issued in 1849, showing clearly that those persons who were entitled to surplus profits, beyond the revenue demanded, would be the proprietors of the land in respect of which they engaged for the revenue. And as such proprietors they would, unless reason were assigned, possess the heritable estate. For the Gursarai riasat, or estate, Kesho Rao was admitted to engage for the revenue due thereon, and this he paid for forty years, from 1840 to 1880, in undisturbed possession. No village survey was made upon the estate, and in other respects it was treated as exempt from the ordinary course. The Government, in fact, instead of bringing Gursarai to an assessment at the full jama, on the half assets principle, allowed Kesho Rao to pay a privileged jama of Rs. 22,500 annually. This remission of revenue was generally attendant upon an interest in the land where admitted, and had not the Government been under an implied promise not to enhance that amount, they might have exercised their right to raise this jama. No such right was enforced. The inference was a just one that, inasmuch as the Government when they succeeded to the rights of the Jalaun State did not effect any confiscation whatever of any private right, there remained the proprietary right in the possessor, who was admitted on the above favourable terms to continue in the possession for forty years. The proprietor, as a general rule, was the person who engaged for the revenue, whether in a regular settlement or on special and exceptional terms, including such a holding as the one in question, locally known as an obari. It was argued that, as obaridar, Kesho Rao had a heritable property in the land. The Government had the right to assess it to the full revenue but there their right ended.

[61] Reference was made to Thomason's Direction's for Settlement Officers, published by the authority of the Government of India in 1848.

The Raja Kesho Rao had held possession, exclusive and adverse, for a period beyond limitation, in virtue of a proprietary right by title, family arrangement, and by recognition of Government. Thus it appeared that, on his death in 1880, the plaintiffs, his sons, became entitled to possession of the riasat. The right of the Government was to bring the estate under assessment on full terms under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, XIX of 1873, Chapter III. The correspondence in evidence was referred to in order to show that the Government, not exercising any rights over the estate other than rights to the revenue, had left the proprietary rights to Kesho Rao, in whom they were at the time of the lapse, and had confirmed and granted the inheritance to him and his family. On the other hand, Atma Ram had not been shown to have acquired any right in the estate but such as he might have acquired under the grants made by the Government in 1852 and 1867 to Kesho Rao; and in virtue of such share in the succession as he might be found entitled to. If the contention failed that Kesho Rao's other sons could receive more than the moiety, which was declared in the Secretary of State's order of the 25th of February 1867, still that order itself was conclusive against Atma Ram's having a title to the whole estate. The High Court should not have dismissed the plaintiffs' suit, but, in order to give effect to the declaration which the Court had made, the suit should have been decreed in their favour. The claim to such a decree would have been covered by the issues raised and the evidence adduced.

Mr. J. D. Mayne and Mr. G. E. A. Ross, for the appellant, were not called upon as to the title of Kesho Rao during his life, but as to the declaration added by the High Court at the dismissal of the suit. They urged that the plaintiffs had not come forward setting up the case, which the High Court had declared in their favour. They had, on the contrary, set up a claim which [62] was inconsistent with the declaration made after the dismissal of the suit. The appellant now only asserted his title to the moiety assigned to him in the order of the 25th of February 1867.

Mr. H. Cowell, in reply, contended that the relief granted in the declaration was right, upon the whole of the evidence, and the issues. There was no reason why the form of the decree should not be reconciled with the declaration.

Afterwards, on the 24th June, their Lordships' judgment was delivered by LORD HOBHOUSE.

JUDGMENT.

The question raised in these appeals arises out of transactions following on the merger of the Native State of Jalaun into the dominion of the East India Company. The earlier history of the case, which goes back so far as the year 1840, is stated both succinctly and lucidly by the learned Chief Justice of Allahabad, and their Lordships need not re-state it except in bare outline until they come to the documents on which the Courts have differed. There has been very little dispute as to matters of fact; and now as the appeal to the High Court was a second appeal, the facts found by the Commissioner of Jhansi, the First Appellate Court, are conclusively found; but the three Courts below have taken different views as to the proper treatment of the case upon those facts.

The property in dispute is the riasat or estate of Gursarai, consisting of 60 villages and some other particulars. It was part of Jalaun, one of the subordinate Mahratta States or chieftainships within the large territory of Bundelkhand, the sovereignty of which passed to the Company

1898
JUNE 24.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 53
(P.C.)=2
C.W.N. 681=
25 I.A. 195=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
370.

1898 by treaties with the Peishwa. The chieftainship was continued to the JUNE 24. existing chief, called the Rao, and to his family, which became extinct in — the year 1840. The estate of Gursarai was managed for the chief PRIVY by Dinkar Rao, the head of a noble family, till his death in 1831.
 COUNCIL. He had two sons, Balkrishen and Kesho. Balkrishen, having no issue, — adopted his nephew Atma, one of Kesho's sons; and he died about 21 A. 53 the time of the change of dominion. When the [63] Company's officers
 (P.C.)=2 came to make the requisite arrangements they found Kesho in occu-
 C.W.N. 681= pation of the estate.

25 I.A. 195= It is conclusively established in this suit that Dinkar Rao and 7 Sar. P.C.J. his sons had no proprietary interest in the estate; they were only managers,
 370. accountable to their chief for the revenues and bound to deal with the estate as he ordered. It is probable that the officers of the Company who came to deal with the Jalaun lands were, as both the Deputy Commissioner and the Commissioner of Jhansi have intimated, under a misapprehension on this point, and thought that Kesho enjoyed some proprietary holding on a favourable rent, called locally an obari tenure. We need not examine this hypothesis very closely. It would account for some inaccurate expressions which occur in the official correspondence, but it does not affect the official acts of the authorities. Kesho made himself acceptable to the British Government, and, though no sanad or grant of any kind was made to him, his possession of Gursarai was continued, and his jama was assessed at the low rate of Rs. 22,500.

The earliest official document in the Record which relates to Gursarai is a letter dated the 8th of October 1852 from the Government of India to the Bundelkhand Agent.* The material passage is as follows:—

"Case No. 1, Book 7.—Family arrangements of this description, His Lordship in "Council observes, particularly where no deeds are executed, are in general open to "revision on the death of incumbents. The present incumbents has done good,
 "service, and his rights should not be touched during his lifetime, but on his death,
 "His Lordship in Council desires the case should be reported for orders."

There is no clue to the meaning of the terms "family arrangement" and "his rights." There may have been, as above observed, some misapprehension. But the important point to mark is that whatever benefit was given to Kesho, the present incumbent, was for his life only, and that everything beyond that was reserved for further orders.

Kesho has had seven sons. The eldest, Tantia, rebelled in the year 1857, but he must have made his peace with the Government [64] afterwards, though not admitted to favour. The second, Jey, is dead and is represented in this suit by his adopted son Madho, one of the plaintiffs. Atma was the third. He was the sole defendant in this suit, and appellant in the first appeal to the Queen in Council, but he has since died and has been re-placed by his eldest son, Mahant Gobind. The four younger sons are plaintiffs in this suit. Two of them were born subsequently to the transactions now about to be mentioned.

On the 31st of July 1866 Atma and his four then existing brothers signed an agreement to the effect that Atma, being the descendant of Balkrishen, the eldest son of Dinkar, was sharer of half the riasat, and the four others were sharers in equal shares of the other half.† This agreement is of no legal validity in itself; if only because it was not registered; but it is of importance as leading up to and explaining that which has legal validity.

* [Rec. p. 47.—ED.]

† [Rec. p. 50.—ED.]

On the 4th of August 1866 Major McNeile, then Commissioner of Jhansi, wrote to the Provincial Board of Revenue intimating that Kesho was anxious to obtain the orders of Government regarding the terms on which his estate was to descend to his sons*. The letter relates not only to Gursarai, but to other villages which it seems had been granted to Kesho for his loyalty during the Mutiny. The writer mentions the agreement between the brothers thus :—

"All parties interested in the matter have consented that Atma Ram shall take half the estate on his father's death and the other four brothers one-eighth each, and this may be considered as finally adjusted."

He then goes on to suggest what shall be done with what he calls the quit-rent, meaning the obari or reduced jama. He goes into many particulars which need not be detailed now because they are summed up in a document of higher authority, which was not produced to the two lower Courts, but was before the High Court.

That document is a letter from the Board of Revenue to the Government of the North-West Provinces†. The material passages are as follows :—

[65] "The Raja's eldest son, who was a rebel in 1857, has been set aside by a family arrangement, duly executed by all parties and attested before the Deputy Commissioner; and Atma Ram, the third son of the present Raja, has been declared to be the heir to the Raj by virtue of an adoption on the part of his uncle, the late Raja.

"The rebel son of the present Raja is consequently excluded from the succession, and there would therefore appear to be no reason why the Government should not authoritatively declare its intention in regard to the tenure upon which the estate is to be held after the death of the present Raja.

"The proposals submitted by the Commissioner, and to which the Board see no objection, are as follows :—

"The family compact is that Atma Ram shall succeed to the Raj and to one-half of the estate as adopted son of the late Raja Balkrishen.

"That the other four sons of the present Raja shall each take one-eighth of the estate.

"The Commissioner's proposals in regard to the estate, are :—

"1st. That the villages in Jalaun, granted in reward for the loyal services of the family, be at once resumed.

"2nd. That on the death of the Raja, the present obari jama be raised from Rs. 22,500 to Rs. 25,000 per annum, and be continued to the family in perpetuity.

"3rd. That this obari grant be continued on the condition of the estate remaining in joint undivided possession of the family, and that if any member of it should cause his share to be divided off, such share be liable to assessment at full jama.

"4th. That Atma Ram be recognised as the heir to the title and privileges enjoyed by the present Raja, the latter (privileges), which consist in the exercise of police and judicial powers, to be dependent upon a proper exercise of them by the Raja for the time being."

It may be observed here that the chieftainship of Atma in succession to Kesho did not form a term of the written agreement between the brothers, nor does it seem to have been at this time the wish of Kesho, himself‡. But both Kesho and his sons recognized Atma as the son of Dinkar's eldest son; and in later years Kesho treated him as head of the family.

There are no letters in the records showing the transmission of the proposals through the regular stages to the Governor-General in Council, and to the Secretary of State in Council. They were probably pure formalities. The answer of the [66] Secretary of State is dated the 25th of February 1867, and is as follows :—

"Having considered in Council the letter of Your Excellency's Government, No. 190, dated 23rd November 1866, in which you suggest the continuance to the loyal

* [Rec. p. 90.—ED.]

† [Rec. p. 143.—ED.]

‡ [Rec. p. 53.—ED.]

1898
JUNE 24.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 53
(P.C.) = 2
C.W.N. 681 =
25 I.A. 195 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
370.

1898
JUNE 24.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 53
(P.C.)=2
C.W.N. 681=
25 I.A. 195=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
370.

"members of the family of Kesho Rao Dinkar of Gursarai in Bundelkhand, of the entire estate now held by him, on the terms set forth by the Board of Revenue of the North-West Provinces and Commissioner of the Jhansi Division, I have to signify to you the ready assent of Her Majesty's Government to the indulgence now accorded to the family of this meritorious chieftain.

"You will of course take measures to prevent the occurrence, on the death of the aged chief, of any disputed relative to the succession of the second son."

Nobody has doubted that by the terms "second son" Atma is meant. It is to be observed that this letter is not only the effective source of whatever title Kesho's descendants have, but is also the most accurate statement of the true nature of the grant to them. Previous documents in 1852 and 1866 use some inapt and inaccurate expressions such as "family agreements," "rights," "descent" of the estate, and so forth. The facts as we now know them were, that such grant as was made, or can be implied, to Kesho was for his life only; that there was no heritable interest to descend; that the reversion was vested absolutely in the Secretary of State in Council; and that his grant is described with exact precision as a continuance to Kesho's family of the estate then held by him, and as an indulgence to them, on account, it is hinted, of his merits.

The record contains other letters which passed between Kesho, Atma, and the officers, but they do not give any additional light, unless it be to show that Kesho himself was quite conscious that the enjoyment of the property after his death was entirely in the discretion of the Government, only he claimed favourable consideration on account of his services. He lived long, and died in the year 1880. In 1878 or 1879 he entrusted the management of the estate to Atma, and declared him in a formal letter to be head of the family.* Some family disputes occurred, but were [67] composed, at least for the time, by the officials. On Kesho's death Atma took, or more probably retained, possession. The Government accorded the title of Raja to him, and the jama of the estate was raised, as intended, to Rs. 25,000.

How soon afterwards disputes took their present form is itself a matter of dispute, but at some time Atma refused to allow that his brothers owned shares in the estate, and they commenced this suit in March 1887. The plaintiffs claim the entire estate, as having been acquired by and inherited from Kesho; omitting mention of Tantia, and claiming to exclude Atma on the score that he had been adopted by Balkrishen. They refer to the agreement of 1866, but only to contend that it is void. The defendant Atma also claims the whole estate, on the ground that it belonged to Balkrishen and had descended from him. He referred to the agreement of 1866 and to some order of Government in so obscure a way that it is difficult to know what he founds upon them. In fact both sides put forward unsustainable claims, and neither put forward the true case. When, however, the issues came to be settled the effect of the proceedings of 1866 was brought into question. The issue was not clearly defined, but it was clear enough for both parties to go fully into evidence, and for the Courts to treat it as being the substantial point of dispute in the case.

The Deputy Commissioner, who formed the Court of First Instance, shows that the family of Dinkar Rao were simply managers, and that the plaintiffs failed to prove any grant except that of the Secretary of State, which he calls the sanad on which the defendant bases his claim to succession. He dismissed the claim with costs.

On appeal the Commissioner found *that the estate was acquired by Kesho, and that the plaintiffs as heirs of Kesho had a title superior to that of the defendant; and he decreed accordingly. His view, to state it very briefly, was that in some way not now apparent the ownership of the estate had become absolutely vested in Kesho, and that the official correspondence and acts in 1852 and 1866 are explained by confining the [68] discretionary action of the Government to the obari or favourable jama. That view has been supported by Mr. Cowell in argument at this Bar. It is true, as before observed, that some expressions in official letters tend to imply that the writers ascribed to Kesho some proprietary interest which it is shown that he did not in fact possess. It is also true that the estate and the jama are not always clearly distinguished. But their Lordships find it impossible to read even one of the material letters without seeing that it refers to both estate and jama; and the correspondence as a whole would lose the greater part of its meaning if it were supposed that the Government was not exercising the discretion which it had to determine how the estate should be enjoyed after Kesho's death.

To this effect was the opinion of the High Court, which reversed the decree of the Commissioner and dismissed the suit, but with a declaration the effect of which and the reasons for it are explained in the following passage at the end of the judgment of the learned Chief Justice:—

"I would allow this appeal with costs, and dismiss the suit with costs in all Courts, "with this exception that in order, if possible, to prevent further litigation between "these parties, I would make a declaration, but without costs, that the defendant Atma "Ram is entitled to a moiety only of the Gursarai estates, and that the plaintiffs inter se are entitled to the other moiety. It is true that no such declaration was asked for "in the plaint, and that, as a general rule, according to the decisions of their Lordships "of the Privy Council which have been cited to us, a relief, a right to which is not "disclosed in the plaint, and which is not asked for in the plaint, should not be granted. "Mr. Reid, who has appeared before us on behalf of the plaintiffs, has pressed us to "make a declaration, declaring the rights of the parties in the Gursarai estate, and has "informed us that the plaintiffs raise no question of their rights inter se. Mr. Reid also "asked us for a decree for possession to the extent which might be covered by the "declaration which we might make. This latter request we should not, in my opinion, "accede to. The estate has not been partitioned and this is not a suit for partition. "Should the estate be partitioned, then the plaintiffs can get possession of those portions "of the estate which may be allotted to them on partition."

The defendant's appeal is for the purpose of getting rid of this declaration.

[69] Their Lordships quite agree with the High Court that, as a rule, relief not founded on the pleadings should not be granted. But in this case, as their Lordships have been at pains to show, the substantial matters which constitute the title of all the parties are touched, though obscurely, in the issues; they have been fully put in evidence, and they have formed the main subject of discussion and decision in all three Courts. The High Court are right in treating the case as not within the rule. As between plaintiff and defendant the case has been thoroughly tried out. Indeed, Mr. Mayne for the defendant does not now dispute that the other members of the family are entitled to a moiety. It is quite right to make a declaration on the subject. But then their Lordships think that the terms of the declaration may be advantageously modified, and that the Court may found on the declaration an inquiry into the plaintiff's title.

According to the letter of the 17th of August 1866, paragraphs 6 to 10, † the persons entitled to the four shares, each to a separate share, are

* [Rec. p. 144—ED.]

† [Rec. p. 148—ED].

1898
JUNE 24.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 53
(P.C.) = 2
C.W.N. 681 =
25 I.A. 195 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
370.

1898
JUNE 24.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 53
(P.C.)=2
C.W.N. 681=
25 I.A. 195=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
370.

"the other four sons of the present Raja." Two of those sons are plaintiffs, and one being dead is represented by his adopted son, who is a plaintiff. Tantia, the eldest, is passed over in silence. But under the family compact which is the basis of the grant, Tantia takes a share. It was his claim by primogeniture which was set aside, not his claim as a sharer, as is clearly shown by Major McNeile's letter.* What has become of his share does not appear. The two youngest sons took no share under the compact. It may be that by agreement of the brothers the plaintiffs are entitled as their Counsel state, but there is no proof, and no other allegation of it. The declaration should be founded on the grant by the Secretary of State, but that will not of course preclude the effect of any agreement between the brothers by which the younger brothers have been or may be admitted to a share, or other transfer of interest created.

The same reasons which support the declaration also show the propriety of giving in this suit such effect to the declared title of the plaintiffs as circumstances may admit. The High Court has [70] made a declaration in favour of the plaintiffs, but it has dismissed the suit. Neither Atma Ram nor his son has shown any disposition to yield any thing which the law does not exact. If the title of the plaintiffs is still disputed, they must bring a new suit, which would certainly increase expense; and in which, considering the peculiar nature of the grant, the lapse of time, and the uncertainty whether a declaration in a dismissed suit can supply a fresh starting ground, the plaintiffs would run substantial risks of miscarriage. Instead of dismissing the suit, the better course will be to direct an inquiry who are the persons now entitled, and to reserve further directions, under which it will probably be found possible to place them in legal possession and so to terminate this unfortunate litigation. The High Court has quite rightly refused to make any order for possession under present circumstances.

The decree does not notice the personal position of Atma, as head of the family. He is now dead, and it does not appear that the title of Raja or any other position of dignity which the Crown may confer has been conferred on his successor. The provision against partition appears also to concern the Treasury alone, which was not willing to continue the favourable jama to any sharer who would not hold his share in an undivided state.

With regard to costs, their Lordships think it just that both parties should bear their own. Both have made excessive demands. The plaintiffs have persisted in theirs up to the present moment.

The defendant persisted in his before the three Lower Courts, though in the High Court he made an alternative case that he was at all events entitled to a moiety. Even now, though he does not claim the entirety, his whole appeal is grounded on his objection to any declaration as to the moiety which is not his. And he has excluded his co-sharers at least till the High Court judgment was delivered, if not later.

Though their Lordships agree with the High Court on the substance of the case, and indeed are doing little more than to apply the views of the learned Judges in a more ample way, it will be simpler in point of form to discharge their decree and to [71] substitute a decree to the following effect:—Reverse the decree of the Commissioner of Jhansi. Declare that the defendant Atma Ram was entitled to a moiety only of the Gursarai estate, and that his successors in title are now entitled to a like moiety. Declare that the other moiety belongs to the persons entitled thereto by virtue of the letter of the Secretary of State in Council, dated the 25th of February 1867, and according to the terms of the letter of the Board of Revenue dated the 17th of August 1866 (that is to say) the four brothers of Atma then living referred to in the last-mentioned letter or those who represent them in title. Inquire who, having regard to the above declaration, are either directly or by inheritance, transfer, agreement or otherwise entitled to the last-mentioned moiety. Declare that as regards all proceedings in the Courts below, the parties are to bear their own costs respectively. Reserve further directions, and costs subsequent to this decree.

* [Rec. p. 91—ED.]

As regards these appeals, both parties are in the wrong and they must bear their own costs.

Solicitors for the appellant and cross-respondent: Messrs. Pyke and Parrott.

Solicitors for the respondents and cross-appellants: Messrs. Ranken, Ford, Ford and Chester.

1898
JUNE 24.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 53
(P.C.) = 2
C.W.N. 681 =
25 I.A. 195 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
370.

21 A. 71 (P.C.) = 2 C.W.N. 729 = 25 I. A. 183 = 7 Sar. P.C.J. 417.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT.

Lords Watson, Hobhouse and Davey, and Sir R. Couch.

On Appeal from the High Court for North Western Provinces.

SHAM SUNDAR LAL AND OTHERS, (Plaintiffs) Appellants v. ACHHAN KUNWAR AND ANOTHER (Defendants), Respondents. [24th June and 27th July, 1898.]

Estate of Hindu widow, or daughter—Powers to alienate family estate—Ancestral family trade—Powers of manager.

The estate of a Hindu family, in which, after the death of the father and his widow, a daughter held an interest for life, comprised a family trade, carried on by a manager on her account.

Held that the restriction upon her power to alienate remained the same, notwithstanding the trade, without being relaxed on that account.

Justifying necessity, or good grounds, after due inquiry, for belief in its existence, would have been required to render valid an alienation made by her of the family estate.

[72] The case of a widow, or of a daughter under such circumstances, differs from that of the manager, or head of an undivided family, who manages an ancestral trade, and has a certain power to pledge for the requirements of the business. The validity of his charge, however, on the family estate, where there is a minority, or non-consent, among the members of the family, depends on proof that the charge was necessary, or was believed to be so by the mortgagee, after due inquiry.

The manager, appointed by the daughter, on whom the family estate has devolved, has no larger power to pledge the ancestral assets than his principal.

It is not incumbent on the defendant who relies on the absence of legal necessity for the borrowing by a woman, holding her limited estate, to plead or to prove such absence: but it is for the plaintiff to state and to prove all that will give validity to the charge.

Lala Amarnath Sah v. Rani Achhan Kuar (1) referred to and followed.

(1) 19 I. A. 196 = 14 A. 420.

1898
JULY 27.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 71
(P.C.) = 2
C.W.N. 729 =
125 I.A. 183 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
417.

[F., 31 A. 53 = 6 A.L.J. 49 = A.W.N. (1908), 284 ; 35 B. 169 (178) = 12 Bom. L.R. 910 = 8 Ind. Cas. 625 ; 9 C.L.J. 50 (52) = 1 Ind. Cas. 590 ; Rel., 32 A. 88 = 7 A.L.J. 11 = 4 Ind. Cas. 144 ; R., 27 A. 97 (104) = 1 A.L.J. 435 (442) ; 33 A. 342 = 8 A.L.J. 474 = 13 Bom. L.R. 384 = 13 C.L.J. 441 = 15 C.W.N. 466 = 21 M.L.J. 641 = 9 M.L.T. 465 = (1911) M.W.N. 445 = 10 Ind. Cas. 274 ; 26 B. 206 = 3 Bom. L.R. 738 ; 31 B. 165 (173) = 8 Bom. L.R. 781 (786) ; 32 B. 577 (580) = 10 Bom. L.R. 927 (929) ; 29 C. 355 (358) ; 31 M. 366 = 18 M.L.J. 309 = 3 M.L.T. 355 ; 7 Bom. L.R. 172 ; 8 Bom. L.R. 252 ; 10 Bom. L.R. (210) (218) ; 9 C.L.J. 453 = 13 C.W.N. 544 = 1 Ind. Cas. 434 ; 17 C.L.J. 499 = 17 C.W.N. 701 (730) ; 2 Ind. Cas. 865 ; 14 M.L.J. 175 ; 1 N.L.R. 66 (68) ; 8 O.C. 21 (25) ; 10 O.C. 277 (279) ; 14 O.C. 170 ; 9 P.L.R. (1904) 17 (26) ; Expl. & D., 10 C.L.J. 263 = 3 Ind. Cas. 178 (180) ; D., 2 A.L.J. 436 (441) ; 8 O.C. 349.]

[N B.—See in this connection 17 A. 125 whereon this appeal has arisen.—Ed.]

APPEAL from a decree (15th January 1895) of the High Court, reversing a decree (9th June 1892) of the Subordinate Judge of Bareilly.

The plaintiffs now appellants were bankers in Philibhit. The defendants, respondents, Achhan Kunwar, and Inayat Singh, mother and son, were the daughter and grandson, of Raja Khairati Lal, who resided in Bareilly. He died without a son in 1866. The daughter, who was married to Raja Lalji, succeeded for her daughter's estate on the death of her father's widow, Hulas Kunwar, on the 22nd of June 1878. The son, Inayat Singh, was the only surviving, next reversionary heir, expectant on the death of his mother. She had one other son, Shamsher, who died before this suit was brought.

Besides owning zemindaris, Raja Khairati Lal had a hundi business, and lent money. This, after his death, was carried on by Raja Lalji, for the benefit of the widow. He was the husband of Achhan Kunwar, and he afterwards managed the business for her. He died in 1889.

This suit (2nd June 1890) was brought to enforce two mortgages securing sums of money, together with interest. The first was dated the 2nd of December 1877 ; the second, the 1st of April 1881.

[73] On the 5th of March 1877, a mukhtarnama to Raja Lalji was executed by the widow and the two respondents. This authorization came into question in 1886-87 in Amarnath Sah v. Achhan Kuar (1).

The facts of the case, and the contents of the documents, are stated in their Lordships' judgment.

The main question on this appeal related to Achhan's having possession, as a daughter, for life, of a family inheritance, which included an ancestral trade, the latter having been carried on, on her behalf, by a manager. The question was whether the restriction on her power, as a daughter, to charge the inheritance with mortgages, was or was not relaxed by reason of the requirements of the family business, and her position in reference to it.

In a joint answer the two defendants set up that they had no knowledge of the mortgage of the 2nd of December 1877, which was signed by Raja Lalji only, and that his signing was unauthorized by them. They stated that the mortgage of the 1st of April 1881, had been sealed by them under his influence, and without their knowing that a liability upon the family estate was thereby acknowledged.

The Subordinate Judge found, that Raja Lalji was duly authorized by the defendants, now respondents, in regard to the first of the two mortgages, and that it was supported by good consideration. He found that the second, also, had been sealed by them of their own free will and consent. He decreed the plaintiffs' claim.

On appeal (1), the High Court (Sir John Edge, C. J., and P. C. Banerji, J.,) held that Achhan Kunwar, who signed the muktarnamah of the 5th of March, 1877, understood that she was signing a document which empowered her husband, Raja Lalji, to act as the agent of the family in the management of the zamindaris and family estate, but no more. That its object and scope were not explained to any of the persons who executed it, and that neither [74] of the respondents was bound by it. In addition to this, the Court found that it was not proved that there was any necessity for borrowing the money secured by the mortgage of the 2nd of December, 1877, or that those who were stated to have lent it had made due inquiry as to the necessity for the loan. With regard to the mortgage of the 1st of April, 1881, the appellate Court found that no receipt of consideration by the respondents had been shown, nor had it been proved that the document was ever explained to Achhan Kunwar. They found that Inayat "blindly executed it at the bidding of his father Raja Lalji," but added "even if it were to be assumed that he understood its scope" and effect, that would not entitle the plaintiffs to the relief claimed by them."

They found that Inayat had no present vested interest in the estate. As a reversioner he had no power to sell, or to mortgage, his interests in expectancy; Ram Chunder Tantra Doss v. Dhurmo Narain Chuckerbutty (2) was referred to on this point.

They found no proof that the daughter, or her son, or the family property, were under any liability in respect of any part of the money, the alleged consideration for the mortgage of the 1st of April, 1881, or that either of the two had received any of it. They found that mortgage not to be binding upon Achhan Kunwar, or her estate as a Hindu daughter. Also, they found that Shamsher, her son, was then alive, and had an equal interest with Inayat, in expectancy; neither of them being capable of binding that prospective interest. There was no valid mortgage at all: and further, that advantage had been taken of Inayat's inexperience. They decreed the appeal, dismissing the suit. The judgment of the High Court will be found reported at length in I.L.R. 17 All., at pp. 127 et seqq.

The plaintiffs having filed this appeal—

Mr. Cozens Hardy, Q. C. and Mr. H. Cowell, for the appellants, argued that the respondents were bound by the mortgages in suit which operated as charges on the family estate. [75] There had been sufficient evidence that Rani Achhan Kunwar had, as well as her son, understood the documents which they had sealed. They could hardly have been under the belief that the mukhtarnama of the 5th of March, 1877, which empowered Raja Lalji to act for them, was only to manage the zamindaris and general property left by Raja Khairati Lal, and not raise money for the family business. But the main point was one upon which there should have been an issue, as being the important question really in contest, what was the implied authority of the agent and manager Lalji to pledge the assets of the estate for the conduct of the family business in hundis and money dealings? The assents of the respondents had been taken to these particular transactions, from abundant caution, to obtain the concurrence of the members of the 1898

JULY 27.

—

PRIVY

COUNCIL.

21 A. 71

(P.C.)=2

C.W.N. 729=

25 I.A. 183=

7 Sar. P.C.J.

417.

(1) See 17 A. 125.

(2) 15 W.R. F.B. 17.

1898 family having interests in the inheritance; but the engagement in trade
 JULY 27. must be regarded as the source, at once, of the authority and the neces— sity. In such a case third parties dealing with the firm, carried on PRIVY after the death of the founder, could not know the precise rights vested COUNCIL. in each member of the family partnership, but they would regard the — manager as empowered to act in the matter of raising money for the 21 A. 71 requirements of the business. The managing member of a family under (P.C.)=2 the Mitakshara, where that family was a trading firm, was entrusted C.W.N. 729= with the full conduct of its affairs, though some of the members might 25 I.A. 183= be minor in age. Trade liabilities affected the family estate. Thus a 7 Sar. P.C.J. question had arisen of partnership liability and agency.
 417.

Reference was made to—

Ram Lal Thakursidas v. Lakhmichand Muniram (1), Johurra Beebee v. Sreegopal Misser (2), Joykisto Cower v. Nittya Nund Nundy (3), Benola Dassee v. Mohun Dassee (4), Dowlut Ram v. Mehr Chand (5), Samalbhair Nathubhai v. Sameshvar Mongal (6).

[76] Mr. J. D. Mayne for the respondent Achhan Kunwar, who alone appeared, argued that the suit had been rightly dismissed. There was no sufficient evidence of the defendants' having understood the effect of either of the documents, and one of them was a parda-nashin. The mukhtarnama under which Lalji professed to act in executing the mortgage of the 2nd of December, 1877, was not understood by Achhan Kunwar, and the transaction was not binding on Inayat, who was a minor at the time. The mortgage of the 1st of April, 1881, was without any more consideration given than what was already contained in security already invalid as against the daughter who sealed it.

There was no evidence that Achhan Kunwar knew anything about this second bond. Nor that Inayat Singh knew what he was executing, nor that he received such explanations as should have been given in the case of a son who had recently reached majority and was acting under his father's directions.

As to the question of necessity, the burden of proof had been entirely on the appellants to prove a justifying necessity. But on all the facts in evidence it was clear that the finding of the High Court was correct as to the absence of such necessity. Some of the items in the account belonged neither to the family expenses nor to the liabilities of the firm; and it was part of the appellants' case to establish affirmatively the necessity of the loan; Lala Amarnath Sah v. Rani Achhan Kuar (7).

The authority of Raja Lalji could not be implied from his position as manager. The power to mortgage this ancestral family estate could only be founded on proof of recognised necessities. None had been shown to exist. Therefore neither the principal in this case, holding the daughter's estate, nor the agent, had power to bind by their direct alienation any part of the family estate inherited from Khairati.

Mr. Cozens Hardy, Q. C., replied. Afterwards on the 27th of July, their Lordships' Judgment was delivered by Lord Davey.

JUDGMENT.

[77] On the 2nd June 1890, the present appellants brought their suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bareilly, against the present

(1) 1 B.H.C.R. App. LI at p. LXXI.

(4) 5 C. 792 (805).

(6) 5 B. 38.

(2) 1 C. 470.

(5) 14 I.A. 187=15 C. 70.

(7) 19 I.A. 196=14 A. 420.

(3) 3 C. 738.

respondents for Rs. 32,858-8-6 on account of a bond, dated the 2nd of December, 1877, and Rs. 53,485-4-6 on account of a subsequent bond, dated the 1st of April, 1881, in all Rs. 86,338-13* and to enforce payment by sale of the property purporting to be hypothecated by the two bonds. The First Court found that the personal remedy upon the bonds was barred by limitation, but that the bonds were effectual against the property. The High Court held that the property was not bound, and dismissed the suit.

The property sought to be sold for payment of the bond debts was formerly the estate of Raja Khairati Lal, who died in 1866. He seems to have carried on during his lifetime a business of money-lender and dealer in hundis. He left no sons, and his widow Rani Hulas Kunwar, on his death, succeeded to a widow's estate in his property. He left one daughter, the respondent Mussamat Achhan Kunwar, who was married to Raja Lalji and had two sons, Inayat Singh, the other respondent and Shamsher, who died sometime after the 1st April 1881, the date of the second bond. Hulas Kunwar died on the 22nd January 1878, and Lalji died about 1888. Lalji, during his lifetime, seems to have managed the property for Hulas Kunwar, and after her death for his wife Achhan Kunwar, who on death of her mother succeeded to her father's property for a daughter's estate. Inayat Singh though named as a respondent did not appear on this appeal.

On the 5th of March, 1877, Hulas Kunwar and the two respondents executed a mukhtarnama of that date, whereby they purported to appoint Lalji as the mukhtar-a'am and to empower him on their behalf (amongst other things) to borrow money and execute documents or hypothecate, mortgage, sell or otherwise transfer moveable and immoveable property.

The bond of the 2nd of December 1877, purports to be made by Raja Lalji, son-in-law, Hulas Kunwar wife, and Achhan Kunwar daughter, and Inayat Singh, grandson, heirs of Raja Khairati [78] Lal, and contains an hypothecation of certain property formerly of Khairati Lal and described as "in our possession and enjoyment as proprietors" for Rs. 10,000, of which Rs. 7,683-3 is deducted on account of debts previously due to the creditors and Rs. 2,311-13 is said to be paid in cash. It is signed by Lalji alone, and it is at least doubtful whether such an execution would be a valid exercise of the power of attorney, but the Counsel for Achhan Kunwar declined, very properly, to insist upon this point.

The second bond of the 1st of April 1881 purports to be made by the same parties other than Hulas Kunwar (who was then dead) under the same description as in the previous bond. It commences with a declaration that Rs. 20,000 have been found payable by them to the creditors on account of prior debts and interest on two bonds for Rs. 30,000 as detailed below in addition to the principal amount of the two bonds aforesaid, and contains a statement that "the creditors have no deed of any sort other than the bond dated the 25th of May 1877 and the bond dated the 2nd of December 1877, which are payable, and this bond." The zamindari property hypothecated is admittedly part of the estate of Khairati Lal. The mortgagors "profess to bind all rights which we possess or may possess in future." The Rs. 20,000 acknowledged to be owing is thus made up:—

[N.B. * It is true that the suit was for Rs. 86,338-13. But the figures that go to make up this amount, as given here (Rs. 32,858-8-6 and Rs. 53,485-4-6) seem to be incorrect.—ED.]

1898
JULY 27.

—
PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 71

(P.C.) = 2

C.W.N. 729 =

25 I.A. 183 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

417.

| | | | | | |
|---------------|---|--------|-------|----|----|
| 1898 | | | Rs. | A. | P. |
| JULY 27. | Interest on two bonds, less previous payments | | 8,100 | 0 | 0 |
| — | In respect of the Rukka dated 1st December | | | | |
| PRIVY | 1880 :— | | | | |
| COUNCIL. | Principal | 10,475 | 0 | 0 | |
| 21 A. 71 | In respect of the interest on the amount | | | | |
| (P.C.)=2 | of the Rukka | 1,300 | 14 | 0 | |
| G.W.N. 729= | In cash | 124 | 2 | 0 | |
| 25 I.A. 183= | | | | | |
| 7 Sar. P.C.J. | | | | | |
| 417. | | 20,000 | 0 | 0 | |

[79] And in a note to the Record* the sum of Rs. 10,475 is explained to be made up as follows :—

| | | | |
|--|-------|----|----|
| | Rs. | A. | P. |
| On 22nd June 1879 for revenue | 2,000 | 0 | 0 |
| On 5th November 1879 to pay interest to | | | |
| Intizam Begam | 1,575 | 0 | 0 |
| On 17th May 1880 to defray expenses of | | | |
| daughter's marriage | 2,000 | 0 | 0 |
| On 2nd August 1880 to pay interest to Moti | | | |
| Ram Sah | 4,000 | 0 | 0 |
| On 9th October 1880 to pay interest to | | | |
| Intizam Begam | 900 | 0 | 0 |

This bond is executed by Raja Lalji by the affixing of the seal of Achhan Kunwar and by Inayat Singh then of age. It should be mentioned that by a previous power of attorney, dated 1st August 1878, Inayat Singh, Achhan Kunwar and Lalji in his own right and as father and guardian of Kunwar Shamsher Bahadur, appointed Lala Shankar Sahai their general attorney and agent with power (amongst other things) to have documents executed by them registered. The bond of 1881 was registered on the admission by this person of the execution, completion and receipt of Rs. 124-2 in cash on behalf of the executants.

What was the position of the parties at the respective dates of the execution of these two bonds? At the date of the bond of 1877, Hulas Kunwar as the heir of Khairati Lal was the owner of his estate, but with a restricted power of alienation. Achhan Kunwar was next in succession, and would, if she survived, her mother become her father's heir and take the estate subject to the same restriction. Inayat Singh was one of the two male heirs next in succession to the restricted estates who would be full owners in the event of their surviving their grandmother and mother. Inayat was moreover a minor. At the date of bond of 1881, Achhan Kunwar was owner of the property for a daughter's estate with restricted power of alienation and Inayat Singh was one of the heirs apparent. At both dates [80] Inayat Singh was living in his father's house and dependent upon him. In 1877 neither Achhan Kunwar nor Inayat Singh (even if he had been of age) could by Hindu law make a disposition of or bind their expectant interests, nor does the deed apply to any but rights in possession, and in 1881 Inayat Singh was equally incompetent to do so, though the deed purports to bind future rights. To give validity to the bonds as against the estate of Khairati Lal the plaintiffs and appellants must show that there was legal necessity for raising the money by a charge on Khairati's estate, or at least that in advancing their money the creditors gave credit on reasonable grounds to representations that the money was wanted for such necessity. It is not a case in which all the kindred of Khairati have assented or could assent to the bonds or either of them, and the circumstances are not such as, in the opinion of their Lordships, to raise any presumption from such concurrence as there was of Achhan Kunwar and Inayat Singh in the first bond or of Inayat Singh in the second bond that the transaction was a fair one or one justified by Hindu law. In order to raise such a presumption the consent of the deceased's kindred to his widow's or daughter's alienation must be shown to be given with a knowledge of the effect of what they were doing and an intelligent intention to consent to such effect. There is a complete absence of any such evidence in the present case. Achhan Kunwar was a purdahnashin lady. In her evidence she states that she remembers having executed a mukhtarnama in Lalji's name with a view to manage the villages. She did not know her estate was encumbered, and came to know of the existence of debt when the Paharwalas filed a suit. She does not know the mortgagees. She did not borrow any money from them and never heard of Lalji having borrowed money from them, but since the filing of the present suit she came to know that a demand was made upon herself and her son. "Raja Lalji never consulted me" in matters relating to the management of the estate. He was my elder "and malik, and out of respect for him I could not interfere." Inayat Singh admits the [81] execution of the power of attorney in 1877, but says that at that time he had not sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of what he was writing. Indeed, as already mentioned, he was a minor at the time. He says he signed the document of 1881 because filial duty prevented him from disobeying his father's order. So long as Lalji was alive the income of the ilaka was brought to and spent by him. His parents and he lived together. There is no evidence that either Achhan Kunwar or Inayat Singh had any advice on the matter independent or otherwise. It is unnecessary to pursue this topic further.

Nor is there any proof of any legal necessity for borrowing on the credit of Khairati's estate or of any such representation made to the creditors as could give validity to either of the bonds sued on. It is unnecessary to discuss the evidence that was offered because the learned Counsel for the appellants very properly admitted that if it was incumbent upon them to prove a legal necessity for the borrowing the appellants had failed to do so, but they contended, first, that the absence of necessity was not pleaded in the written statement of the defendants and there was no issue raising the question, and, secondly, that Khairati's estate included the business of a money-lender or dealer in hundis which was carried on after his death for the benefit of his heir under the management of Lalji, and that as such manager Lalji had by Hindu law a power to pledge any part of the estate for the purposes of the business.

As regards the bond of 1877 their Lordships think that paragraph 3 of the written statement of the defendants sufficiently, though not in such precise or accurate language as is desirable, raises the absence of necessity for the borrowing as a defence, and that the 3rd issue as settled by the Judge after presentation of the written statement is directed

1898
JULY 27.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 71
(P.C.)=2
C.W.N. 729=
25 I.A. 183=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
417.

1898 JULY 27. — PRIVY COUNCIL. 25 A. 71 (P.C.)=2 C.W.N. 729= 25 I.A. 183= 7 Sar. P.C.J. 417.

to the same point. But their Lordships observe that in a suit like the present on a bond made by a person with restricted power of alienation the defendants are not required to plead the absence of legal necessity for the borrowing. It is for the plaintiffs to [82] allege and prove the circumstances which alone will give validity to the mortgage, and they repeat what was said in the judgment of this Board in an appeal arising out of a suit on another bond executed by Hulas Kunwar (1):—

“When the issues were settled this point was treated as belonging to the defence and was raised in the form of a question how far the objections resting on the absence of necessity were tenable. It is obvious that such a mode of raising the question is incorrect, because it appears to assume that it was for the defendants to show absence of necessity; whereas the rule is that a mortgagee claiming title under a Hindu widow as against her husband’s heirs should prove the validity of his mortgage.”

Moreover it appears from the record that the question of necessity was explicitly raised in the first reason of the present respondents for their appeal to the High Court*, and the present appellants, so far from complaining that the question was not in issue on the trial before the Subordinate Judge, accepted the issue, and in their 3rd and 6th reasons§ contended that upon the evidence it had been established that the consideration of the bond of 1877 was advanced for legal necessity after due and proper inquiry, and as regards the consideration of the bond of 1881 also that it was advanced for meeting family necessities and in any case under the bona fide belief that it was required for such purposes and after due and reasonable inquiry. And the case was dealt with in the High Court upon this footing.

Their Lordships think that the second point made by the appellants is unsupported either by reason or authority. The owner of the business at the time of the execution of the bond of 1877 was Hulas Kunwar, and Lalji was managing it as her agent only and for her benefit, and she could not of course confer on her agent any larger power than she had herself, and there is no exception from the restriction on alienation by a Hindu widow when the estate consists of or includes a business. [83] The authorities quoted by Mr. Cowell have no application to the case. They were cases of a family business being carried on by the manager of an undivided family estate. In that case the manager of a family business has a certain power of pledging assets for the requirements of the business. But the position of a Hindu widow or daughter is not by any means the same as that of the head of an undivided family, and even in the latter case the validity of a mortgage by the manager of a family business without the concurrence of the other members of the family, or when some of those members are minors, depends on proof that the mortgage was necessarily entered into in order to pay the debts of the business. This is clear from the cases cited, including that of Doulut Ram v. Mehr Chand (2). To use the language of Mr. Justice Pontifex in a judgment quoted in that case, the touchstone of the authority is necessity.

These considerations dispose of the appeal so far as it rests on the bond of 1877 alone. But the appellants say that the earlier bond was

[* Rec. p. 74, ED.]
(1) 19 I. A. 196.

[§ Rec. p. 95, ED.]
(2) 14 I. A. 187.

confirmed by the bond of 1881. It remains to consider the validity of this bond as against Khairati's estate represented by the two respondents. By the 5th paragraph of their written statement the defendants plead that they signed the bond at the earnest request of Lalji, whose position in the family influenced them, and that at the time of execution of the said bond they did not understand the nature of the document, nor were they informed that the debt incurred or admitted under the bond in question was actually payable and was such as would create liability upon the estate of Khairati Lal. One of the issues upon which the case was tried was founded upon this paragraph of the defence. The evidence of the two respondents has been already referred to.

The admission of the bond of 1877 is contained only in the statement that the creditors have no deed except the bonds of the 25th of May 1877 and the 2nd of December 1877 "which are payable," and this bond. The effect of these apparently innocent [84] words was certainly not likely to attract the attention or arouse the suspicion of the executants of the bond unless it was specially explained to them.

The Subordinate Judge on this issue found in favour of the appellants. The High Court reversed this finding and found that the bond of 1881 was not explained to Achhan Kunwar and that it is not proved that she understood that bond or the liabilities it purported to create or admit. The Court also found that it was not proved that there was any family necessity for the making of the bond of 1881 or that the mortgagees satisfied themselves upon any reasonable inquiry that there was any family necessity for the making of that bond.

It will be convenient to examine the nature of the consideration for the bond of 1881. The first item is made up of compound interest on a bond dated the 25th of May, 1877, and the bond of the 2nd of December, 1877. There is no evidence whatever that the bond of the 25th of May, 1877, was binding upon Khairati's estate or upon either of the defendants—and their Lordships have already expressed their opinion that the bond of the 2nd of December was not binding on Khairati's estate. There is no proof that the sum of Rs. 2,000 was owing for revenue, or if it were that it was necessary to borrow in order to pay it. Then come two items for interest to Intizam Begam. The principal witness for the appellants was Nand Kishore, the father of Gobind Prasad one of the appellants. He states that Lalji and Inayat Singh asked him to get some more money advanced to them and accordingly he got Rs. 30,000 advanced to them by Intizam Begam, wife of Asman Khan, and that she had obtained a decree, but against whom is not stated. Even assuming that Nand Kishore's statement may be relied on, it does not prove that Intizam Begam's debt bound the estate of Khairati Lal, but their Lordships observe that no question on this point was addressed to Inayat Singh in cross-examination, and Nand Kishore's statement is uncorroborated. There is no explanation why the expenses of "daughter's marriage" (which apparently means a daughter [85] of Lalji and Achhan Kunwar) should be paid out of Khairati's estate instead of by her father Lalji. And lastly the payment to Moti Ram Sah was for interest on the bond which was decided not to constitute a charge on Khairati's estate in the case already referred to and reported in 19 Ind. Ap. 196. It does not appear to whom the small balance of Rs. 124-2 was paid, and it is conjectured that it was applied in paying the cost of the stamp. It is therefore not proved that any part of the debt which Achhan Kunwar purported to admit and which formed the consideration of the bond of 1881 was a debt for which Khairati's

1898

JULY 27.

—
PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 71

(P.C.)=2

C.W.N. 729=

25 I.A. 183=

7 Sar. P.C.J.

417.

1898
JULY 27. estate was liable, and as to the greater part of it there is proof that Khairati's estate was not liable for it.

—
PRIVY
COUNCIL. The respondents' admission could not make it a debt of Khairati, or one for which his estate is liable, and that is the only question in this suit. It was not contended that the bond could be enforced against Achhan Kunwar's interest in the income of the estate during her lifetime, but their Lordships think it right to add that there is no proof, and having regard to the relation both of Achhan Kunwar and Inayat Singh to Lalji, and to her own evidence and that of Inayat Singh which has been quoted above, the form of the professed admission of the bond of 1877 and to all the other circumstances of the case they do not believe that the nature and effect of the bond of 1881 or of the admission of liability for past debts contained in that bond was ever explained to or, properly appreciated by either of the respondents, and they do not differ from the finding of the High Court on this issue.

21 A. 71
(P.C.) = 2
C.W.N. 729 =
25 I.A. 183 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
417.

Their Lordships will therefore humbly advise Her Majesty that the appeal be dismissed and the appellants must pay the costs of the respondent Achhan Kunwar, who alone appears on this appeal.

Solicitors for the appellants: Messrs. Ranken, Ford, Ford and Chester.

Solicitors for the respondents: Messrs. Pyke and Parrott.

21 A. 86 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 162.

[86] REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MAN MOHAN LAL AND ANOTHER.*
[11th August, 1898.]

Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 110, 121, 514, sch. V., Form No. XLVI—Security for good behaviour—Conviction of principal—Forfeiture of bond—Mode of proving conviction.

Where a person has given a security bond under s. 118 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, for the good behaviour of another, and the principal during the term for which the bond is in force, is convicted of an offence punishable with imprisonment, the production of the conviction and, if necessary, of proof of identity of the principal, is sufficient evidence upon which the Magistrate is authorized to issue notice to the surety under s. 514 of the Code, to show cause why the penalty of the bond should not be paid. In such case, it is for the surety to show what cause he can. It is not incumbent on the Magistrate to re-summon the witnesses on whose evidence the principal was convicted and practically to re-try the case against the principal.

[F., 12 Cr.L.J. 404 = 11 Ind. Cas. 588 = 226 P.L.R. 1911 = 35 P.W.R. 1911.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the order of the Court. The Officiating Government Advocate Mr. A. E. (Ryves), for the Crown.

ORDER.

KERSHAW, C. J., and BURKITT, J.—This is a reference made under the following circumstances by the learned Sessions Judge of Allahabad. In July 1897, one Ballam Das was bound over by the Joint Magistrate to be of good behaviour for two years, and two persons became sureties for his good behaviour during that period. In January, 1898, the said Ballam Das was convicted by a bench of Honorary Magistrates at Allahabad of the offence punishable under s. 323 of the Indian Penal Code. Subsequently the District Magistrate, in the exercise of his powers as such, recorded a proceeding setting forth the above facts, and stating that it had been proved to him that a breach of the bond had been committed. Thereupon the District Magistrate issued to Ballam and his surviving surety a notice in the Form No. XLVI in sch. V to the Code of Criminal Procedure. After hearing the cause shown, the Magistrate ordered the penalty of the bonds to be paid by Ballam and by his surety.

* Criminal Revision No. 451 of 1898.

[87] On an application in revision by the surety, the Sessions Judge referred the case to this Court, recommending that the Magistrate's order should be set aside. The wording of the notice prescribed by Form XLVI is important, and the difference between it and Form No. XLIX is noticeable. It recites the execution of the security bond by the sureties, and then proceeds to say that as the principal had been convicted of an offence—in this case the offence punishable under s. 323 of the Indian Penal Code—the security bond had become forfeited. Now this schedule No. V is as much a portion of the Code of Criminal Procedure, as any other portion of it, and is most useful in throwing light on the meaning of those sections of the Code in connection with which the forms prescribed by it are to be used. Now the wording of the notice to which we have just referred distinctly lays down that a conviction for an offence, such as here, works a forfeiture of the bond, and this notice moreover is one which is to be issued after the Magistrate has satisfied himself that the bond has been forfeited.

Reading this notice with the provisions of s. 121 and s. 514 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, we are satisfied that the production of the conviction, and, if necessary, of proof of the identity of the principal, is sufficient evidence upon which the Magistrate is authorised to issue the notice No. XLVI. The purport of that notice is that the surety should show cause why his security bond should not be forfeited.

It was contended before the Magistrate and before the Sessions Judge, who apparently approves of the contention, that before the penalty of the bond can be forfeited it is necessary for the Magistrate practically to re-try the case in which the principal had been convicted, that is to say, in the words of the reference by the Sessions Judge, that the surety is entitled to have the witnesses to the offence again examined in his presence, and to be given an opportunity of cross-examining them and proving that the conviction was wrong. To this contention we cannot accede. The notice served on the surety is one calling upon him to show [88] cause. If he has any cause to show, the burden lies upon him. It is for him to produce his own witnesses, and from their mouths to establish that the conviction of his principal was wrong. We do not think that at the hearing of a notice of this kind it is incumbent on the prosecution to prove that the principal was properly convicted. On the form of the notice the burden of proof rests on the surety; and as to the suggestion that the surety would be allowed to cross-examine the witnesses, we do not see how that is possible. Just as much as the surety was not a party to the case in which his principal was convicted, so he would practically thought present, be no party to the renewed trial of the charge against, his principal on the hearing of the notice to show cause. In the former case he would have had no locus standi to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses, and similarly at the re-trial on the hearing of the notice he 1898

AUG. 11.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 86=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 162.

1898
AUG. 11.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 162.

would not be in a better position. When the surety appears before the District Magistrate under the notice to show cause he should then be prepared with any evidence he can produce to show the impropriety of the conviction of his principal, or with a list of witnesses whom he desires to have summoned to give evidence in his behalf; but we are quite satisfied for reasons given above, that it is no part of the duty of the prosecution to have re-tried, on the hearing of the notice to show cause, the case in which the principal was convicted and to prove again the guilt of the principal. In this case the surety did not produce any witnesses or ask for any to be summoned. We therefore see no reason for interfering in this case.

As to the further portion of his reference in which the Sessions Judge suggests that the District Magistrate did wrong in forfeiting the full amount of the bond, we need only say that we decline to interfere with the discretion of the Magistrate, who is responsible for the peace of the district. Let the record be returned.

21 A. 89 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 157.

[89] REVISIONAL CIVIL.

Before Sir Louis Kershaw, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

VIAS RAM SHANKAR (Decree-holder) v. RALLA RAM MISIR
(Judgment-Debtor)* [11th August, 1898.]

Act No. IX of 1887 (Small Cause Courts Act) s. 25—Civil Procedure Code, s. 622—Revision—Discretion of Court in dealing with applications under s. 25 of Act No. IX of 1877.

Although s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure may properly be taken as indicating the lines along which a Judge would do well to exercise his discretion in admitting an application under s. 25 of the Small Cause Courts Act, a Judge is not absolutely bound to refuse any application under s. 25 of the latter Act which could not be admitted under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Sarman Lal v. Khuban (1) (2) referred to and explained.

[R., 5 A.L.J. 295 = A.W.N. (1908) 141; 9 Bom. L.R. 466; 5 C.L.J. 413; 138 P.L.R. 1903 = 66 P.R. 1904.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the order of the Court. Pandit Moti Lal (for whom Mr. D. N. Banerji), for the applicant. Mr. G. E. Foy and Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the opposite party.

ORDER.

KERSHAW, C. J., and BURKITT, J.—This is an application for revision of an order passed by the Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Benares, in the suit Vyas Rama Shankar v. Ralla Ram Misir. The applicant, it appears, had obtained a decree ex parte against the opposite party. The latter applied, under the provisions of s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure, as amended by s. 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (No. IX of 1887), to have the ex parte decree set aside and the case re-heard. That application was allowed by the Judge of the Court of Small Causes, who directed the case to be re-tried. The contention on behalf of the plaintiff in the suit—the applicant here—was that, under art. 164 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act of 1877, the application to have the ex parte decree set aside was time-barred and should not have been [90] entertained. That is the contention which the Court below over-ruled, and which is now repeated in the present application.

Civil Revision No. 29 of 1898.

(1) 16 A. 476.

(2) 17 A. 422.

At the hearing before us, Mr. Chaudhri took a preliminary objection to the effect that this application, which calls in question a decision of the Court of Small Causes, which by law is final between the parties, is one which, with reference to former rulings of this Court, we ought not to entertain. The learned advocate cited the cases of Raghu Nath Sahai v. The Official Liquidator of the Himalaya Bank, Limited (1), Sarman Lal v. Khuban (2) and Sarman Lal v. Khuban (3). For the opposite party Mr. Banerji cited Muhammad Bakar v. Bahal Singh (4) and the The Poona City Municipality v. Ramji (5). We have carefully considered all the cases cited on both sides.

The argument on one side in this matter proceeded very much on the assumption that in the cases cited from the 15th, 16th and 17th volumes of the Allahabad Series of the Indian Law Reports this Court had bound itself by an inflexible rule not to admit, under s. 25 of the Small Cause Courts Act, any application which would not be admissible, under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That assumption is entirely erroneous, as will be seen from the remarks of the late Chief Justice when delivering the decision of the Full Bench in the case of Sarman Lal v. Khuban (2). The judgment points out that s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be taken as a guide indicating the lines along which a Judge would do well to exercise his discretion in admitting an application under s. 25 of the Small Cause Courts Act. But neither that case, nor any of the others, professes to compel a Judge to refuse any application made under s. 25 of the Small Cause Courts Act which could not be admitted under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Those cases leave the discretion of the Judge quite unfettered, while at the same time indicating to him a line which he might well follow, and a general principle which he ought to apply. [91] As to the case now before us, we, in the exercise of our discretion in this particular case, refuse (as in Sarman Lal v. Khuban, (3)) to try in revision and reopen questions of law and fact which have, in the lawful exercise of its jurisdiction, been decided by a Court whose decision the Legislature made final. We reject the application with costs.

Application rejected.

1898
AUG. 11.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CIVIL.
—
21 A. 89=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 157.

(1) 15 A. 139.
(4) 13 A. 277.

(2) 16 A. 476.
(5) 21 B. 250.

(3) 17 A. 422.

21 A. 91(P.C.) = 25 I.A. 219 = 7 Sar. P.C.J. 304.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT.

1898
AUG. 3.
PRIVY
COUNCIL.*Lords Hobhouse, Macnaghten and Morris and Sir R. Couch.[On Appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces.]*21 A. 91
(P.C.) =
25 I.A. 219 =
7 Sar. P.C.J
304.MAZHAR HUSEN (Defendant-Appellant) v. BODHA BIBI AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs-Respondents.)
[16th February, 3rd August, 1898.]Muhammadan will—Construction of a letter containing a bequest—Suicide of testator.

A letter, written shortly before the testator's death, contained directions as to his property, conferring the proprietary right therein in equal shares on certain persons, to take effect on his death. Accordingly, the letter acted as a will under Muhammadan Law. The testator died, within a few hours after, from poison administered by himself with the intention of suicide. The letter stated that he had taken poison, but this was construed as a representation of the state of things as they would present themselves at the time when the letter arrived.

Title under the will having been disputed in this suit, on the ground that the will having been made by a person who had taken poison for the above purpose, was invalid by Muhammadan Law.

Held, that the burden of proving that the will was written after the taking the poison was on the party impugning the will; that the letter was consistent with its having been written before the taking the poison; that the other evidence tended strongly to show that it was written before; and that, therefore, the reason alleged against the validity of the will was not applicable to the case.

[N.B.—See in this connection 17 A. 112 (P.C.) reporting the opinion of the Privy Council on the application for special leave to appeal to the Privy Council.—ED.]

Two appeals, by special leave, consolidated from two decrees (11th January 1894) of the High Court, reversing decrees (17th March 1891) of the Subordinate Judge of Allahabad.

The plaintiff in both these suits, which were heard together in the original and appellate Courts, was Bodha Bibi, widow [92] of Amir Ali, and in one of the suits Nasiban Bibi joined her. The defendants were the same in both. They were Haidri Begam; her husband, Syed Mazhar Husen, who, after her death in 1894, represented her; and Nazir Bandi, Habib Bandi, two sisters, with Fayed Fazal Husen, husband and representative of Rahim Bandi, a third sister.

In each of the suits proprietary possession was claimed of property alleged to have been bequeathed by the will of the late Syed Ibn Ali to the extent of one-third of his estate, consisting of zemindaris and other immoveables, to the three sisters abovenamed, his first cousins.

The plaintiffs claimed, as assignees of the property from the legatees, to recover from the second defendant, who had obtained possession of the property from the first defendant, all such interests in it as had been validly bequeathed to them by Ibn Ali's will. And they joined two of the assignors, and the representative of the third, these being the said three sisters, as defendants.

The alleged testator, Syed Ibn Ali, died on the 2nd August 1878, unmarried and without issue. It was a fact not disputed that he committed suicide with arsenic; and it was not contested that, if a letter written by him on the forenoon of the 1st August, the preceding day, had not contained a valid bequest of his property to the three sisters, his mother, Hindri, would have inherited his property.

The question raised was whether the letter of the 1st August contained a valid bequest to the three sisters; this comprehending a further question (in view of what was alleged by the appellant to be the Muhammadan Law on the subject of wills), whether or not the deceased had taken the poison which caused his death before he wrote the letter alleged to contain his will.

The facts, as stated in the judgment of the appellate Court below, were that Syed Ibn Ali, early in the forenoon of the 1st August 1878, wrote a letter to his mukhtar, Zain-ul-Abdin, which was the document relied upon as containing his will, [93] and that he was found to be dead on the 2nd August 1878. The letter professed to be written an hour before his death, and used words which gave rise to the question whether they might, or might not, accord with his having already taken poison. The letter stated his desire that his mother should not get a pie of his property, and for a disposition in one part of the letter in favour of other persons the writer substituted a direction that the three daughters of his paternal uncle should share equally his property, directing Zain-ul-Abdin to see that each should get an equal share. The words of the bequest appear in their Lordships' judgment.

The two principal issues tried by the Subordinate Judge were, first, as to whether the letter of the 1st August contained what could by the law of the Shias be held to be a bequest to the three daughters. As to this the Judge was of opinion that Ibn Ali's object was to exclude his mother from a share in his estate, but he decided as follows:—

"There was no tamlik ain (constituting a proprietor of the property itself) nor ijab (proposal) which is one of the conditions for enforcement (of a bequest) in respect of the profit. For tamlik ain it would have been essential to write in clear terms—'My uncle's daughters shall be the owners of my property on my death.' And for ijab it would have been necessary to write:—'I have given my property to my sisters (cousins) after my death.' The modes of transferring the property suggested in the letter were calculated to waste the property, and they did not show an intention to carry out a bequest, or to bequeath the property absolutely to his cousins. From these circumstances it may be concluded that the contents of the letter do not amount to a will, and, according to Muhammadan Law, as observed by the Shia sect, a bequest cannot be inferred from such a declaration or writing."

Secondly, as to whether the will was or was not invalid on the ground that it had been written after the writer had taken poison. As to this the Subordinate Judge wrote:—

"The book called Riyaz-ul-masael, commonly known as Sharah Kabir, Volume IV, chapter on wills, contains a [94] passage in Arabic which may be translated thus:—If any one intentionally wounds himself so that there is a danger of death, and then makes a bequest, such bequest will not be accepted. Sharah Suma, chapter on wills, which is in Arabic, contains a passage which may be translated thus:—But a bequest made by any of these, namely, a lunatic, one in a state of intoxication, and he who has inflicted a fatal wound on himself is void; in the first two cases, apparently from want of sense, and in the last case there is a saying of Abi Vilad based on a tradition of Sadik, 'may peace be with him, that is, if any one makes a bequest after he has wounded himself or done an act which must necessarily result in his death, such bequest will be illegal, for this act goes to prove his want of sense, and also because he falls within the category of a dead man, and therefore the

1898
AUG. 3.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 91
(P.C.)=
25 I.A. 219=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
304.

1898
AUG. 3.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 91
(P.C.) =
25 I.A. 219 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
304.

“provisions which hold good in respect of the living will not hold good in respect of him, and consequently it is not necessary for him to pay zakat, though he be fit to pay it. And the less authoritative saying is that the bequest is valid provided the mind was sound. This opinion was a good one, if it were not inconsistent with the well-known tradition. The book called Tahzip also says that bequests made by such persons are invalid. In Maula-yah Zar-ul-fakih also this tradition is found. This doctrine was followed in the book called Vasail Tashaya. In Furu Kafi this doctrine has been recognized and Jawahirul-kalam contains a verdict that such bequests are invalid. In the book called Sharaya-ul-Islam and in its commentary, and in the book Mukhtasar Mani also this doctrine has been followed.

“The passage in the book called Javahar-ul-Kalam, which bears upon this doctrine may be translated thus,—‘One who voluntarily does an act from which he thinks he must die, is to be classed with one who has committed suicide; for instance, one who has taken poison will come under the same category.’ From the above authorities it will appear that, even assuming that the letter written by Ibn Ali amounts to a [95] will, such will is void and unenforceable, because Ibn Ali made it after his attempt at suicide.”

From this decision the plaintiffs appealed, and the judgment of a divisional bench (TYRRELL and BLAIR, JJ.) reversed it. They were of opinion that the letter constituted a will under Muhammadan Law, and that it was not bad as being executed by a suicide, who had already taken poison when he wrote it. They remanded the suit under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Their judgment was the following,—part being omitted.

“The two leading questions sent to trial below were:—First, can it be concluded from the contents of the letter, and from its surrounding circumstances, that the letter is not a will under the Muhammadan Law of the Shias from the declarations of which a bequest cannot be inferred? and, secondly, whether the will is invalid because it was made by a man who had previously taken poison for the purpose of suicide?

“The Court below has found on both these issues against the appellant. It is convenient to deal with the suicide question first.”

With reference to this question the Judges, after examining the evidence on the record, decided as follows:—

“We think that the finding that the letter was written after the writer had poisoned himself is based on flimsy evidence and is against good and solid evidence to the contrary. So far, therefore, the appellant succeeds, and the bequest, if it was a bequest, is not bad for being the act of a suicide.”

With regard to the question as to whether it could be concluded from the contents of the letter and from its surrounding circumstances, that the letter or document dated August 1st, 1878, was not a will, under the Muhammadan Law of the Shias, from the declarations of which a bequest could not be inferred, the Judges differed from the conclusions arrived at by the Subordinate Judge, and held that the letter constituted a valid will, under the [96] Muhammadan Law of the Shias, and they concluded their judgment as follows:—

“In what we have said, we have tried to show that the very terms of this will are virtually the terms which the Court below would accept as fulfilling the requirements of the Shiah law as to bequests. We believe that the word ‘bequeath’ has been rightly defined under that law,

“as the act of conferring a right in the substance or the usufruct of a thing after death.’ We find on the 460th page of the first volume of Syed Amir Ali’s book on the Muhammadan Law relating to Shias that a bequest may be constituted by the use of any expression that sufficiently indicates the intention of the testator. A ruling of their Lordships of the Privy Council to be found in the 25th volume of the Weekly Reporter, page 121, where their Lordships held, that ‘no particular form, even of verbal declaration, is necessary as long as the intention of the testator is sufficiently ascertained.’ If this decision was between Shias, and we have no reason to think otherwise, it lends the strongest authority to our view of the effect of paragraph 10 of Ibn Ali’s document of the 1st August 1878. The result of these our findings is that this case must be remanded under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to be restored to the register of original suits, and to be disposed of on the other issues according to Law. The costs will abide the result.”

1898
AUG. 3.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 91
(P.C.) =
25 I.A. 219 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
304.

The High Court refused to admit an appeal to Her Majesty against their decision, on the ground that their decree was not a final one within s. 595 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But on an application for special leave to appeal being made on the 24th November 1894 it was granted. Saiyid Muzhar Hossein v. Mussamat Bodha Bibi (1).

Mr. J. D. Mayne and Mr. W. A. Raikes, for the appellant, contended that the High Court should have found that there was no evidence that the poisoning took place after the letter had been written. As regards the state of the testator’s mind, the [97] important consideration, there would be little difference whether he had already taken the poison or had resolved to take it immediately afterwards. The sources of the law on the point did not appear numerous. Reference was made to the translations on the judgment of the Subordinate Judge of the passages on the work cited by him.

They also referred to the Muhammadan Law Imamia by E. N. Baillie, 232, and to Taylor’s Medical Jurisprudence (edn. 1883), 252.

The Indian Evidence Act, 1872, s. 101.

Mr. G. E. A. Ross, for the respondents, argued that the case that the letter operated as a will had been established.

The High Court had rightly reversed the finding of the original Court as to the arsenic having been taken before the letter was written. The expressions in the letter were consistent with the writer’s not having, in fact, already taken it at the time of writing. The general evidence tended to show clearly that he had not. He referred to the Introduction, Baillie’s Imamia, p. 26, and p. 232 of the book.

The order of remand under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure was right under the circumstances.

Mr. J. D. Mayne replied. Afterwards, on 3rd August, their Lordships’ judgment was delivered by LORD MORRIS.

JUDGMENT.

Ibn Ali died on the 2nd of August 1878. He was possessed of property. The respondents are the assignees of two ladies, the first cousins of Ibn Ali, and described in the letter or will of the 1st of August as his paternal uncle’s daughters.

The appellant is the assignee and representative of Haidri Begam, the mother and heir of Ibn Ali. The respondents claim the property in dispute under a letter or will of the 1st of August 1878.

1898
AUG. 3.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 91
(P.C.)=
25 I.A. 219=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
304.

Two questions arose: 1st, whether the letter of 1st August amounted to a will. 2nd, was it written after Ibn Ali had taken poison from the effect of which he died. On both questions the Subordinate Judge decided in favour of the appellants, [98] holding that the passages in the letter of 1st August did not amount to a bequest, and that even if they did it was written after Ibn Ali had taken poison, the cause of his death. On appeal, the High Court reversed the decision of the Subordinate Judge on both questions. The bequest on which the respondents rely is contained in the letter written by Ibn Ali to his general attorney, Syed Zain-ul-Abdin. The fact of the writing the letter by Ibn Ali was clearly proved and was so accepted by the Subordinate Judge and is not now disputed. The letter was sent by the hand of Musharraf, a servant of Ibn Ali. The Subordinate Judge decided that the contents of the letter did not amount to a bequest, as they did not bequeath the property directly to his cousins. The letter by cl. 10 states "You should not have the property given to (my) grandmother and paternal uncle's wife, but you should give the whole to my three sisters, who are my paternal uncle's daughters. You should see that they all get an equal share, and in the same manner as stated by me in paragraph 3." This paragraph appears to their Lordships to confer a right on the three sisters in the property to take effect on Ibn Ali's death, and accordingly that the letter acts as a will under Muhammadan Law.

Now comes the more important question as to the writing of the will being before or after the poison was taken by Ibn Ali. It is not at all free from difficulty, but their Lordships are not prepared to dissent from the decision of the High Court. It appears reasonable to hold that the onus of proving whether the letter or will was written after the swallowing of poison should rest on the party impugning the will. The Subordinate Judge came to his conclusion apparently on the terms of the letter itself in which the writer states "I, in consequence of my honour having suffered to a certain extent, and the exposure being so great that I could not show my accursed face to any one, thought it advisable to put an end to my life and therefore took poison and died to-day." And again in paragraph 5 the writer states: "Please begin to take all these [99] proceedings after perusing this letter. Don't delay in hope of my life, for, by God, I am actually dead and this letter I have written an hour before death." The Subordinate Judge considers these passages prove that Ibn Ali had taken the poison, but their Lordships are of opinion, though the words "took poison" are in the past tense, they are connected with the words "and died to-day," which cannot be read in the past tense, and the statement is consistent either with the fact that he had taken the poison or that he had resolved to take poison and resolved to die. The evidence is circumstantial and the evidence of Musharraf and Husen Bakhsh go strongly to show that it must have been subsequent to the sending of the letter that Ibn Ali retired from the mardana and went into the zenana on the 1st of August then apparently well. The circumstances lead their Lordships to agree with the conclusion of the High Court that the deceased Ibn Ali took the poison after sending the letter to his friend, who lived some twenty miles distant. Their Lordships will therefore humbly advise Her Majesty that the appeals in this case should be dismissed. The respondents will have their costs.

Solicitor for the appellant: Mr. T. C. Summerhays.

Solicitors for the respondent: Messrs. Barrow and Rogers.

21 A. 99=18 A.W.N. (1898) 170.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.*SHOME SHANKAR RAJENDRA VARERE (Plaintiff) v. RAJESAR SWAMI JANGAM (Defendant).^{*} [11th August, 1898.]1898
AUG. 11.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.*Hindu Law—Mitakshara—Sudras—Illegitimate sons—Collateral succession.*21 A. 99=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 170.

Amongst Sudras governed by the Mitakshara law an illegitimate son does not inherit collaterally to a legitimate son by the same father. Sarasuti v. [100] Mannu (1), Jogendra Bhupati Hurro Chandra Mahapatra v. Nityanand Man Singh (2), Sadu v. Baiza (3), Nissar Murtojah v. Kowar Dhunwunt Roy (4), and Krishnayyan v. Muttusami (5).

[Appr., 25 M. 429; 25 M. 519=11 M.L.J. 399; R., 34 B. 321 (325)=12 Bom.L.R. 204=5 Ind. Cas. 964; 12 Ind. Cas. 767 (769)=14 O.C. 227; 9 O.C. 352 (354).]

THE facts of this case are sufficiently stated in the judgment of the Court.

Munshi Ram Prasad and Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellant.

Pundit Sundar Lal, and Munshi Jwala Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J. (AIKMAN, J., concurring).—The appellant brought the suit out of which this appeal has arisen for recovery of certain sums of money and for possession of a grove and some moveable property alleged to have formed the separate estate of Raja Lingraj, a legitimate son of the ex-king of Coorg.

Raja Lingraj died on the 16th of January 1874, leaving two widows, Rani Deo Amma and Rani Chin Amma. The latter died shortly afterwards. The former took possession of her husband's estate, and continued in possession till her death on the 21st of May 1891. She devised the estate by will to the predecessor in title of the defendant, who has obtained probate of the will.

The property claimed consists of Government Promissory Notes for Rs. 31,000 in deposit in the Bank of Bengal at Benares, Rs. 20,000 deposited with the Maharaja of Vizianagram, withdrawn by the defendant, articles of furniture of the value of Rs. 1,000, and a grove valued at Rs. 1,000.

The plaintiff is one of the sons of the ex-king of Coorg by a lady alleged by the defendant to have been one of the concubines of the king. The plaintiff, however, claims to be of legitimate descent and to be a half-brother of the deceased Raja Lingraj, and as such his legal heir under the Hindu law. As the parties are admittedly Sudras governed by the Mitakshara law, it is further claimed on behalf of the plaintiff that even if he is illegitimate he is entitled to inherit the estate of Raja Lingraj as a collateral heir.

[101] The claim was resisted on two grounds: first, that the plaintiff being an illegitimate son of his father could not, under the Hindu law, inherit the separate estate of a legitimate son of his father; and, secondly, that the money and moveable property claimed did not form part of Raja Lingraj's estate, but belonged solely to Rani Deo Amma.

* First Appeal, No. 117 of 1896, from a decree of Babu Nilmadhab Rai, Subordinate Judge of Benares, dated the 24th March 1896.

(1) 2 A. 134.

(2) 18 C. 151.

(3) 4 B. 37.

(4) (1868) Marshall 609.

(5) 7 M. 407.

1898
AUG. 11.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 99=
18 A.W.N.
1898) 170.

The lower Court has dismissed the claim on the first of the above grounds, and has expressed no opinion as to the other.

The learned advocate for the plaintiff who has preferred this appeal has frankly conceded that he is unable to support the plea of legitimacy. It appears that the ex-king of Coorg died in England, and upon his death a suit was filed in regard to his estate in the Court of Chancery. That Court declared the present plaintiff and other sons of the king similarly circumstanced to be illegitimate sons, and made a decree dividing the estate between them and Raja Lingraj, the legitimate son. There can be no question therefore that the plaintiff is an illegitimate son of his father.

It has been held in this Court in Sarasuti v. Mannu (1), that the son of a continuous concubine is a dasi putra (son begotten on a female slave), to whom the rule of succession laid down in chapter I, s. XII of the Mitakshara, applies. The plaintiff is therefore a dasi putra within the meaning of s. XII.

It is stated by the author of the Mitakshara in § 1 of that section that Yajnavalkya "delivered a special rule concerning the partition of a Sudra's goods" in the following terms:—"Even a son begotten by a Sudra on a female slave may take a share by the father's choice. But if the father be dead, the brethren should make him partaker of the moiety of a share; and one who has no brother may inherit the whole property in default of daughter's sons." (vv. 134 and 135). According to this rule, which is interpreted by the author of the Mitakshara in § 2, an [102] illegitimate son of a Sudra inherits a part of his father's estate jointly with the legitimate son of his father, and it is by virtue of this rule that the plaintiff obtained a share out of his father's estate under the decree of the Court of Chancery. It has been held by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Jogendra Bhupati Hurro Chundra Mahapatra v. Nityanand Man Singh (2), affirming the decision of the Calcutta High Court in the same case, and approving the judgment of the Bombay High Court in Sadu v. Baiza (3), that where property was jointly inherited from their father by the son of a wedded wife and an illegitimate son, and was held jointly by them, the rule of survivorship applies, and upon the death of the legitimate son the property goes to the illegitimate son by right of survivorship. Had the property claimed in this suit been property which the plaintiff and the deceased Raja Lingraj had inherited jointly from their father and held as undivided property, we should have been bound to hold, upon the ruling of their Lordships of the Privy Council, that the plaintiff was entitled to it. The property in dispute in this case is, however, admitted to be the separate property of Lingraj, and the plaintiff claims it, not by right of succession to his father or by right of survivorship, but as heir to his legitimate brother, the deceased Lingraj. We have therefore to determine whether the plaintiff is, under the Mitakshara law, an heir to Raja Lingraj.

The special rule of succession of illegitimate sons among Sudras to which we have referred above, appears in chapter I of the Mitakshara, which deals with unobstructed heritage, that is, lineal inheritance. The plaintiff's claim is based upon the right of collateral inheritance, which is treated of in chapter II. In § 2, s. I of that chapter, the order of succession on failure of sons "principal and secondary," is thus stated:—"The wife and the daughters, also both parents, brothers likewise and their sons, gentiles, cognates, a pupil and a fellow student; on failure of the first

(1) 2 A. 134.

(2) 18 C. 151.

(3) 4 B. 37.

among these the next in order is indeed heir to the estate of one who departed for heaven [103] leaving no male issue. This rule extends to all (persons and) classes." No mention whatever is made in this chapter of illegitimate sons or persons who are entitled to inherit collaterally. On the contrary, we have in the 11th section of chapter I a text of Manu, that an illegitimate son, that is, the son of an unmarried woman, is not a collateral heir. With reference to the different classes of sons, it is laid down in that chapter as follows :—

"Section 30. Manu having premised two sets of six sons, declares the first six to be heirs and kinsmen and the last to be not heirs, but kinsmen. The true legitimate issue, the son of a wife, a son given, and one made by adoption, a son of concealed origin and one rejected (by his parents) are the six heirs and kinsmen. The son of an unmarried woman, the son of a pregnant bride, a son bought, a son by a twice-married woman, and a son self-given, and a son by a Sudra woman are six, not heirs, but kinsmen.

"Section 31. That must be expounded as signifying that the first six may take the heritage of their father's collateral kinsmen (sapindas and samanodacas) if there be no nearer heir, but not so the last six."

This is a distinct authority for holding that the illegitimate son is not a collateral heir. By an exceptional rule laid down in s. XII of chapter I of the Mitakshara on the authority of Yajnavalkya he takes only his father's estate by right of inheritance, and according to their Lordships of the Privy Council he does so by right of survivorship also. But there is no authority for holding that he succeeds to the estate of collaterals as heir. Had it been intended to confer on him the right of collateral succession in the same way that the right of lineal succession has been bestowed on him, we should have expected a similar rule in chapter II, as an exception to the general rule, in the case of Sudras. The enumeration of heirs in that chapter is no doubt not exhaustive, but the rule which guides collateral succession is based on the text of Manu that "to the nearest sapinda the inheritance next belongs." As sapinda [104] relationship pre-supposes a lawful marriage, an illegitimate son cannot come within the category of sapindas so as to have a right of succession collaterally. He cannot be ranked as a brother within the meaning of s. IV or of § 2 of s. I. The brothers referred to in chapter I, s. XII, § 2, are sons of the wedded wife of a Sudra. The brothers referred to in the first portion of § 1 are also brothers of the same description. (See Virmitrodaya, Sarkar's Translation, p. 130). In the last clause of that placitum it is no doubt said that the son of a female slave "who has no 'brothers' may inherit the whole property in default of daughter's sons"; but there the word seems to have been used in its usual signification, an illegitimate son of the father being in one sense the brother of a legitimate son. As such brother he succeeds to the father lineally and by survivorship under the exceptional rule laid down in s. XII, but there is no authority for holding that he can succeed collaterally to the separate estate of his legitimate brother. The authority of Manu and the author of the Mitakshara is, as has been pointed out above, the other way. To the same effect is the opinion of writers on Hindu law. In W. H. Macnaghten's Principles and Precedents of Hindu Law it is stated, at p. 15, that there is "no law admitting the son of a Sudra by a female slave to share the estate of collaterals." West and Buhler express the opinion that "illegitimates inherit collaterally only by caste custom" (p. 83); and Mayne in his Hindu Law and Usage

1898

AUG. 11.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 99=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 170.

1898
AUG. 11.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 99=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 170.

says, in paragraph 508, that "illegitimate sons can only take to their father's estate. They have no claim to inherit to collaterals." The authority of decided cases, such as we have on the subject, is also to the same effect. In Nissar Murtojah v. Kowar Dhunwunt Roy (1), and in Krishnayyan v. Muttusami (2), it was held that illegitimate sons cannot succeed collaterally, and we have not been referred to any authority in which a contrary view was adopted. The learned counsel for the appellant has urged that the decision of the Privy Council in the case to which we have referred above must be held to be conclusive [105] on the point and to have finally decided it in favour of the appellant's contention. As we have pointed out above, all that their Lordships held was that an illegitimate son succeeds by right of survivorship to the paternal estate which jointly passed to him and his legitimate brother. The question of collateral succession was neither raised nor considered, nor was it decided. So far as the illegitimate son's right of survivorship goes, the ruling of their Lordships must be regarded as conclusive. But the question which we have to decide in this case was not raised before their Lordships and was not decided. In the case of Sadu v. Baiza (3), Nanabhai Haridas, J., advisedly abstained from deciding that question. We see no reason therefore to extend the operation of the ruling of the Privy Council beyond what was actually decided in the case with which their Lordships were dealing. In Sadu v. Baiza, Sir Michael Westropp, C.J., observed that a legitimate son and an illegitimate son who had jointly inherited the estate of their father should be regarded as joint tenants and not as tenant in common, and that therefore the rule of survivorship would apply to them. This view, it seems, was approved by the Lords of the Privy Council. In a case like this where the legitimate son and the illegitimate son were separate that rule can have no application. It does not follow from the fact that a person is entitled to succeed by right of survivorship that he is an heir and may inherit collaterally also, although the converse proposition may be true.

The learned advocate for the appellant referred us to a passage on p. 944 of Sarvadhikari's Tagore Lectures on the Hindu Law of Inheritance, where the author expresses the opinion that the son of a dasi should "by all the analogies of Hindu law and the plain rules of equity and justice" be declared entitled to the property of collaterals. The analogy to which he refers is that of an adopted son; but it must be observed that by an express text of Manu an adopted son is declared "entitled to take the heritage [106] of his father's collateral kinsmen." (See Mitakshara, Chapter I, s. XII, §§ 30 and 31.)

For the above reasons, we are of opinion that the plaintiff appellant has been rightly held not to be the heir of Raja Lingraj, deceased, and his suit has been properly dismissed. We dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) (1863) Marshall 609.

(2) 7 M. 407.

(3) 4 B. 37.

21 A. 106 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 185.

CRIMINAL REVISIONAL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

1898

AUG. 22.

CRIMINAL.
REVI-
SIONAL

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BABU LAL.* [22nd August, 1898.]

*Criminal Procedure Code, s. 285—Assessors—Effect of incapacity of assessors to understand the proceedings.*21 A. 106 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 185.

Three assessors were chosen to assist the Court at a trial. Before the case commenced, it was discovered that one of the assessors was deaf, and his presence was accordingly dispensed with. The trial proceeded with two assessors present; but after the Public Prosecutor had closed his case, it was discovered that one of the remaining assessors was so deaf as to be incapable of understanding the proceedings. Under these circumstances, it was held that the trial having been held with practically only one assessor, the proceedings ought to be set aside and a new trial ordered.

[F., 25 B. 694 = 3 Bom.L.R. 274; R., 24 M. 523 (528).]

THE record of this case was submitted to the High Court by the Officiating Sessions Judge of Azamgarh for such orders as the Court might think fit to pass. There was also an appeal to the High Court by the convict. The facts which led to the case being referred are stated in the order of the High Court, which was as follows:—

ORDER.

BANERJI, J.—This case has been reported to this Court by the learned Sessions Judge of Azamgarh. It appears that before the trial, began it was discovered that, of the three assessors who attended, one was deaf, so that the trial began with two assessors. It was discovered, after the Public Prosecutor had closed his case, that another assessor was so deaf as to be incapable of understanding the proceedings. The learned Judge, however, proceeded with the trial, being of opinion that by the analogy [107] of s. 285 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the trial would be a valid one, one assessor having been present throughout and having understood the proceedings. I am unable to agree with the learned Sessions Judge. Section 285 contemplates the case of a trial which had commenced with the aid of two or more assessors, who at the commencement of the trial were capable of acting as assessors. Such was not the case here. The assessor who has been discovered to be deaf and incapable of understanding the proceedings was not a fit person to be selected as an assessor; therefore the trial was really held with the help of one assessor only. Section 268 requires that all trials before a Court of Session should be either by jury or with the aid of assessors, and under s. 284 two or more assessors should be chosen to aid the Judge. Whereas, in this case, the trial was held with the aid of only one assessor who was capable of acting as such, the Court holding the trial was not properly constituted, and all the proceedings were null and void. The same view appears to have been taken by the Madras High Court—see the case cited at p. 270 of Henderson's edition of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898. I set aside the proceedings held by the learned Sessions Judge of Azamgarh, and direct that the accused be tried again with the aid of assessors chosen, according to law.

* Criminal Miscellaneous No. 86 of 1898.

1898

AUG. 24.

REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.

21 A. 107=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 185.

21 A. 107 = 18 A W.N. (1898) 185.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MUTASADDI LAL.* [24th August, 1898].

Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 110, 119—Security for good behaviour—Power to order further inquiry—Accused person—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 437.

Held that a person against whom proceedings under Chapter VIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure are being taken is "an accused person" within the meaning of s. 437 of the Code. Queen-Empress v. Mona Puna (1) and Jhoja Singh v. Queen-Empress (2) followed.

[Diss., 42 P.R. 1905 (Cr.)=131 P.L.R. 1905; F., 35 B. 401 (403)=13 Bom. L.R. 505 (507)=12 Cr.L.J. 430=11 Ind. Cas. 614; 36 C. 163=8 C.L.J. 565=13 C.W.N. 151=9 Cr. L.J. 36=1 Ind. Cas. 737 (738); Appl., 25 A. 375 (377)=23 A.W.N. (1903) 79; R., 24 A. (148 150)=21 A.W.N. (1901), 206; 34 A. 533 (536)=10 A.L.J. 27 (31)=13 Cr. L.J. 452 (453)=15 Ind. Cas. 84; 28 C. 709 (714)=5 C.W.N. 749; 2 L.B.R. 80; D., 2 C.L.J. 149 (151)=9 C.W.N. 983.]

[108] IN this case a Magistrate of the first class of the Muzaffarnagar district instituted proceedings, upon a report made by the Police, against Mutasaddi Lal under s. 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Mutasaddi Lal appeared to show cause before the Magistrate; evidence on both sides was heard, and ultimately the rule against Mutasaddi Lal was discharged. Subsequently the Magistrate of the district again took up the proceedings against Mutasaddi Lal, purporting to act in doing so under s. 437 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Mutasaddi Lal was called upon to show cause why the order of the first class Magistrate discharging him should not be set aside. On the date fixed no cause was shown, and the District Magistrate set aside the order of discharge, and called upon Mutasaddi Lal to show cause again why he should not furnish security to be of good behaviour.

Against this order Mutasaddi Lal applied in revision to the High Court, on the ground mainly that, as he was not an "accused person" within the meaning of s. 437 of the Code, the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to reopen the proceedings against him under s. 110.

Mr. G. W. Dillon, for the applicant.

The Government Pleader (Munshi Ram Prasad), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—The applicant was called upon by a Magistrate to furnish security for good behaviour. After holding proceedings under Chapter VIII of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Magistrate being of opinion that sufficient reasons had not been made out for ordering the applicant to give security, discharged him under s. 119 of the Code. The District Magistrate has ordered further inquiry into the matter, purporting to act under s. 437. It is urged that under that section the Magistrate of the District was not competent to order further inquiry, as the applicant was not an "accused person" within the meaning of that section. The Code of Criminal Procedure contains no definition of an "accused person," but it was held by the Bombay High Court in [109] Queen-Empress v. Mona Puna (1), that the term "accused" means "a person over whom a Magistrate or other Court is exercising jurisdiction."

* Criminal Revision No. 441 of 1898.

(1) 16 B. 661.

(2) 23 C. 493.

The same view was held by the Calcutta High Court in Jhoja Singh v. Queen-Empress (1). I see no reason to put a different interpretation on the words "an accused person" in s. 437. The District Magistrate was therefore competent to order further inquiry, and this application is not sustainable. I dismiss the application.

1898
AUG. 24.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.

21 A. 109 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 186.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

21 A 107 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 185.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ABDUL RAZZAK KHAN AND ANOTHER.*
[25th August, 1898.]

Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 190, 191—Cognizance taken by Magistrate under s. 190, sub-s 1, cl. (c)—Jurisdiction of the Magistrate to hold preliminary inquiry not thereby ousted.

Held that the fact of a Magistrate having taken cognizance of a case under s. 190, sub-s. 1, cl. (c) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, does not disqualify such Magistrate from holding a preliminary inquiry and committing the case to the Court of Session.

IN this case a preliminary inquiry was pending before the District Magistrate of Mainpuri into a charge of offences under s. 218 of the Indian Penal Code alleged to have been committed by one Abdul Razzak Khan, an Inspector of Police, and another. Previously to this inquiry, the same Magistrate had made a departmental investigation into the charges against the accused, and had thus taken cognizance of the case under s. 190 (1), cl. (c) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The accused accordingly under s. 191 of the Code moved the District Magistrate to transfer the case to some other Magistrate. This the District Magistrate declined for various reasons to do, mainly, because the charge was exclusively triable by the Court of Session, and must necessarily [110] be committed if any case against the accused were made out, and, if the transfer were to be granted as a matter of grace, the case was one which ought to be in the hands of the Magistrate of the District, and the other Magistrates to whom it was possible to transfer it were for one reason or another unsuitable.

Against the order of the District Magistrate rejecting their application for transfer, the accused applied in revision to the High Court, urging that the Magistrate having taken cognizance of the case under s. 190 (1), cl. (c), was thereby debarred from making a preliminary inquiry into it.

Mr. B. E. O'Connor and Kunwar Parmanand, for the applicant.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—This is an application for the transfer to another Court of a criminal case now pending in the Court of the District Magistrate of Mainpuri. The application purports to be made under ss. 191 and 526 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The case is one exclusively triable by a Court of Session, so that the Magistrate is only holding a preliminary inquiry into the matter. It appears that he has taken cognizance of the * Criminal Miscellaneous No. 87 of 1898.

(1) 23 C. 498.

1898
AUG. 25.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 109=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 186.

case under sub-s. 1, cl. (c) of s. 190, and it is urged that, that being so, the Magistrate is not competent to hold a preliminary inquiry in this case, having regard to the provisions of s. 191. I am unable to agree with this contention. In my opinion that section does not disqualify a Magistrate who has jurisdiction even to try the case from holding a preliminary inquiry. What that section provides is that if a Magistrate takes cognizance of an offence under sub-s. 1, cl. (c) of s. 190, and if, before any evidence is taken, the accused objects to being tried by such Magistrate, he may either transfer the case to another Magistrate or commit the case to the Court of Session. He is thus empowered to make a commitment in a case within his cognizance. He cannot make a commitment without holding a preliminary inquiry, so that the section distinctly empowers him to hold a preliminary inquiry even in cases triable by him-[111] self. It necessarily follows that he is competent to hold a preliminary inquiry in cases exclusively triable by a Court of Session. In this case it has not been satisfactorily shown that there is a sufficient reason under s. 526 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to transfer the preliminary inquiry to some other Court. It is desirable that the inquiry should be held by an officer holding the position of the District Magistrate, and there is no reason to assume that the District Magistrate of Mainpuri will not make his inquiry with an open mind. I dismiss the application and withdraw the order for stay of proceedings.

21 A. 111 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 196.

APPELLATE CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JEOCHI.* [7th September, 1898.]

Criminal Procedure Code, s. 288—Evidence—Use in Sessions Court of evidence taken before the Committing Magistrate.

Although under certain circumstances a Court of Session may use evidence given before the Committing Magistrate as if it had been given before itself, it is not proper for a Court of Session to base a conviction solely upon such evidence, there being no other evidence on the record to corroborate it. The Queen v. Amanulla (1), Queen-Empress v. Bharamappa (2) and Queen-Empress v. Dhan Sahai (3), referred to.

[R., 28 A. 863 = 3 A.L.J. 852 (854) = A.W.N. (1906) 187 = 4 Cr. L.J. 61.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Satya Chandar Mukerji, for the appellant.

The Government Pleader (Munshi Ram Prasad), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—The appellant, Musammatt Jeochi, was charged with having torn off an ear-ring from the ear of a boy named Muneshar, and has been convicted under s. 394 of the Indian Penal Code. The evidence adduced in the Court of Session did not at all prove the guilt of the appellant. On the contrary, [112] that evidence showed that the ear of the boy had been torn by a mere accident. The witnesses examined in the Court of Session had all of them, with the exception of Sukhu, made statements before the Committing Magistrate which were diametrically

* Criminal Appeal No. 793 of 1898.

(1) 12 B.L.R. App. 15.

(2) 12 M. 123.

(3) 7 A. 862.

opposed to those made in the Court of Session. The learned Sessions Judge purporting to act under s. 288 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, admitted in evidence the statements made by the witnesses in the Court of the Committing Magistrate, and has convicted the accused on that evidence alone. I must observe that, beyond the evidence which was so admitted, there was no other evidence before the learned Sessions Judge which proved the guilt of the accused. It is contended that the learned Sessions Judge was not justified in convicting the appellant on the evidence given by the witnesses in the Court of the Committing Magistrate and retracted in the Court of Session. The contention of the learned vakil is supported by the ruling of the Calcutta High Court in The Queen v. Amanulla (1), which was followed by the Madras High Court in Queen-Empress v. Bharamappa (2), and by this Court in Queen-Empress v. Dhan Sahai (3). In the case last mentioned, it was observed by Straight, J., that "s. 288 was never intended to be used so as to enable a Court trying a case to take a witness' deposition bodily from the Magistrate's record, as the Judge has done here, and treat it as evidence before himself." With these observations I fully concur. As remarked by Morris, J., in Queen v. Amanullah (1), a Court of Session may admit in evidence the statements made by witnesses before the Committing Magistrate when such evidence "is to a certain extent corroborated by independent testimony before himself." There was no such testimony in the present instance. It is true that the attention of the witnesses was called to the statements made by them before the Committing Magistrate, and that those statements were read to them; but the fact of that being done was not alone sufficient to justify the learned Sessions [113] Judge in basing the conviction solely upon evidence no part of which was given before him. Further, having regard to the fact that the witnesses had in two Courts made diametrically opposite statements, it was unsafe to found a conviction on their testimony. I accordingly allow the appeal, and setting aside the conviction and sentence, I acquit the appellant of the offence of which she was convicted, and direct that she be at once released.

1898
SEP. 7.
—
APPEL-
LATE CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 111 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 196.

21 A. 113 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 197.

APPELLATE CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MUHAMMAD SAEED KHAN. *
[7th September, 1898.]

Act No. XLV of 1860 (Indian Penal Code), s. 463 et seq.—Forgery—Meaning of the term "fraud" discussed.

A Police head-constable's character and service roll in his custody was found to have been tampered with in this way, that a page, apparently containing remarks unfavourable to the head-constable, had been taken out, and a new page with favourable remarks, purporting to have been written and signed by various superior officers of Police, had been inserted in its place, the intent being to favour the chances of the promotion of the said head constable.

Held, that this interpolation amounted to forgery within the meaning of s. 463 of the Indian Penal Code, but that inasmuch as it was not proved that the head-constable himself prepared and inserted the false page in his character roll, he was

* Criminal Appeal No. 711 of 1898.

(1) 12 B.L.R. App. 15.

(2) 12 M. 123.

(3) 7 A 862.

1898

SEP. 7.

APPEL-

LATE

CRIMINAL.

21 A. 113 =

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 197.

rightly convicted of abetment only. Queen-Empress v. Shoshi Bhushan (1), Queen-Empress v. Vithal Narayan (2) and Lolit Mohan Sarkar v. The Queen-Empress (3), referred to.

[R., 38 C. 75 (90) = 12 C.L.J. 312 = 14 C.W.N. 1076 = 11 Cr.L.J. 505 = 7 Ind. Cas. 629 ; 28 M. 90 (97) ; 10 P.R. 1902 (Cr.) = 75 P.L.R. 1902 ; 1 P.R. 1907 (Cr.) = 32 P.L.R. 1907 ; 4 L.B.R. 315 (316)]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Mr. Wallach, for the appellant.

The Government Pleader (Munshi Ram Prasad), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—The appellant, Muhammad Saeed Khan, has been convicted of having been in dishonest possession of stolen property and of having abetted the offence of forgery. He has been sentenced for these offences to a total term of ten years' rigorous imprisonment.

[114] He was a head-constable stationed at a police station in the city of Agra. Upon information received by the District Superintendent of Police that Saeed Khan had received a bribe in marked rupees, the District Superintendent searched his quarters, and found in a box belonging to him, of which he produced the key, certain books and papers. Among these were eleven "character and service roll" books of the N.-W. P. and Oudh Constabulary, five of which were blank. These books are Government property, and, with the exception probably of one, were kept either in the Police office at Agra or in the office of the Inspector-General of Police. They must have been stolen from the place where they were kept, and as the accused has not given any explanation of his possession of them, it is clear that he knew that they were stolen property. He has therefore been rightly convicted under s. 411 of the Indian Penal Code.

Mr. Wallach, the learned counsel for the appellant, addressed his argument chiefly to the second branch of the case, namely, that relating to the abetment of forgery. He does not dispute the facts as found by the learned Sessions Judge, which are as follows :—In the character and service roll of the accused (Ex. 14), page 11 has been substituted for some other page, very probably Ex. 12, which contained remarks apparently unfavourable to the accused made by several District Superintendents of Police as to the general conduct and Police work of the accused, and the entries in p. 11 of Ex. 14 are undoubtedly false entries, in which the unfavourable remarks contained in Ex. 12 do not find place. A glance at the entries on p. 11 of Ex. 14 leaves no room for doubt that they are false. Mr. Wallach contends that, accepting the entries to be false, they do not amount to forgery as defined in s. 463 of the Indian Penal Code. He urges that the fabrication of p. 11 was not made dishonestly or fraudulently, and therefore the said page is not a false document within the meaning of s. 464, and that even if it is a false document, it was not made with any of the intents mentioned in s. 463, and is consequently not a forgery. Two questions thus arise for [115] determination. First, whether the document is a false document ; and second, whether it was made with one or more of the intentions specified in s. 463. In reference to the first point, it may be conceded that the document was not made "dishonestly ;" but was it made "fraudulently," that is, "with intent to defraud ?" If the document was made "with intent to defraud," as stated in s. 25, and "with intent to commit fraud or that fraud may be committed," as stated in s. 463, it is a forgery. The terms "fraud" and "defraud" are not defined in the Indian Penal Code. Sir James FitzJames Stephen in his History of the Criminal Law of England, vol. II, p. 121, observes that "whenever the words 'fraud' or 'intent to defraud' or 'fraudulently' occur in the definition of a crime, two elements at least are essential to the commission of the crime; namely, first, deceit or an intention to deceive, or in some cases mere secrecy; and secondly, either actual injury or possible injury, or an intent to expose some person either to actual injury, or to a risk of possible injury by means of that deceit or secrecy." "This intent," he adds, "is very seldom the only or the principal intention entertained by the fraudulent person, whose principal object in nearly every case is his own advantage. * * * A practically conclusive test as to the fraudulent character of a deception for criminal purposes is this:—Did the author of the deceit derive any advantage from it which could not have been had if the truth had been known? If so, it is hardly possible that the advantage should not have had an equivalent in loss or risk of loss to some one else, and if so, there was fraud." Where, therefore, there is an intention to deceive and by means of the deceit to obtain an advantage there is fraud, and if a document is fabricated with such intent, it is a forgery. This was held by this Court in Queen-Empress v. Shoshi Bhushan (1). A somewhat wider interpretation has been placed on the word 'fraud' by the Bombay High Court in Queen-Empress v. Vithal Narayan (2), which was followed by the Calcutta High Court in Lolit Mohan Sarkar v. The [116] Queen-Empress (3). In the case in the Bombay High Court the learned Judges accepted the interpretation of Le Blanc, J., in Haycraft v. Creasy (4), that "by fraud is meant an intention to deceive; whether it be from any expectation of advantage to the party himself or from ill-will towards the other is immaterial." Whatever interpretation of fraud may be adopted, the false entries in the character roll of the accused were made with the intention of committing fraud. The intention was to deceive the superior officers of the accused, and by means of such deception to secure his advancement in the service, and thus to gain an advantage for him at the sacrifice of others. The entries were therefore a forgery within the meaning of s. 463. As it has not been shown that the forgery was committed by the accused himself, he has been rightly convicted of the abetment of that offence.

(1) 15 A. 210.

(2) 13 B. 515.

(3) 22 C. 313.

It is next urged that the sentence passed on the accused is unduly severe. The learned Judge has inflicted on him the highest penalty to which he could be liable under ss. 411 and 466. In my opinion this was not such a gross case as to call for such severe punishment. The stolen character books, of which the accused was in possession, were of little value, and had his object in retaining possession of them not been to obtain facilities for the perpetration of the forgery, his offence would not have justified a heavy sentence. The forgery also was not of a very heinous character, although fabrication of the writing and signatures of several superior officers of the Police was a most impudent act. In my opinion it will be sufficient for the ends of justice to sentence the appellant to two years' rigorous imprisonment for the offence under s. 411, and to three years' rigorous imprisonment for the other offence, and altogether to a term of five years' rigorous imprisonment. While, therefore, I confirm the convictions, I reduce the sentence to the extent stated above.

1898
SEP. 7.
—
APPEL-
LATE CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 113=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 197.

(1) 15 A. 210.

(2) 13 B. 515.

(3) 22 C. 313.

(4) (1801) 2 East 92.

1898

Nov. 11.

APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 117=18 A.W.N. (1898) 201.

[117] APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.*JAMNA DAS AND ANOTHER (Defendants) v. UDEY RAM
AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs).^{*} [11th November, 1898.]21 A. 117=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 201.Procedure—Appeal—Appeal by defendants against whom specifically no decree was made but whose defence to the suit was necessarily disposed of by the decree.

Certain plaintiffs sued as second assignees of a debt to recover the debt, and made defendants to the suit their assignors, the original debtors, and certain persons whom they alleged to have been prior assignees of the debt, but whose assignment, according to them, had become void through non-fulfilment of the conditions upon which it was made. The Court of first instance gave a decree to the plaintiffs against the original debtors. An appeal by the first assignees was dismissed by the lower appellate Court, on the ground that there being no decree against the appellants their appeal would not lie. On second appeal it was held that the appeal would lie, inasmuch as the decree, though not a decree against the appellants by name, necessarily implied a finding that the assignment to the appellants, upon the basis of which they resisted the plaintiffs' claim had become void.

[R., 10 C.L.J. 80=10 Cc. L.J. 287=3 Ind. Cas. 393 (394); 9 C.W.N. 584; 9 M.L.T. 39 (40)=8 Ind. Cas. 337; 84 P.L.R. 1904=56 P.R. 1904; Doubted, 57 P.R. 1907=66 P.W.R. 1907; D., 21 M.L.J. 947 (951)=10 M.L.T. 291=(1911) 2 M.W.N. 303 (305)=12 Ind. Cas. 167 (168).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellants.

Mr. T. Conlan (for whom Mr. A. H. C. Hamilton), for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—This suit was one to recover a debt alleged to be due by the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 to one Sri Kishan Das, defendant No. 3, in the array of parties, by virtue of an assignment from the said Sri Kishan Das. The debt had originally been assigned by Sri Kishan Das to the defendants Nos. 4 and 5, Jamna Das and Lachmi Narain, the present appellants; but it was alleged that these defendants Nos. 4 and 5 had failed to perform the conditions upon which the assignment to them had been made, that the assignment was thereupon cancelled and a new assignment in favour of [118] the plaintiffs was substituted. The material issues framed by the Court of first instance upon the pleadings of the parties were:—(1) Upon what condition was the debt assigned to the defendants Nos. 4 and 5? (2) Had that assignment become void by reason of any default on the part of the defendants Nos. 4 and 5? The Munsif found that the assignment had been made to these defendants upon certain conditions; that they had not fulfilled those conditions, and that therefore the assignment to them had become void. The Munsif accordingly, in pursuance of those findings, gave a decree in favour of the plaintiffs against the defendants Nos. 1 and 2, whose debt had been assigned to the plaintiffs by Sri Kishan Das, the third defendant. The decree drawn up in pursuance of the judgment containing the findings mentioned above was as follows :—“ It is ordered and decreed that the claim for Rs. 790-3-0, with future interest at 8 annas per cent. per mensem, be decreed against the defendants Nos. 1 and 2. The plaintiffs and the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 shall recover their costs from Sri Kisben Das, defendant No. 3. The other defendants Nos. 4 and 5 shall bear their own costs.” The defendants Nos. 4 and 5 appealed against that decree, but the lower appellate Court (Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore), on a preliminary objection raised before it by the respondents, refused to hear and dismissed the appeal, on the ground that no portion of the claim had been decreed against the appellants. He held in effect that the decree as drawn up did not damage the appellants. These appellants have now come to this Court in second appeal, contending that the lower appellate Court was wrong in holding that they had no right of appeal.

^{*} Second Appeal No. 723 of 1896, from a decree of Syed Muhammad Tajammul Husen, Additional Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore, dated the 11th August 1896, confirming a decree of Lala Banke Behari Lal, Munsif of Cawnpore, dated the 24th December 1895.

For the respondents it has been contended, as before the lower appellate Court, that the appellants should have made an application to the original Court under s. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and should have procured an entry in the decree of the finding that their assignment had become void.

[119] In our opinion the decision of the lower appellate Court which gave effect to that contention is wrong. We are unable to perceive any variance between the decree and the judgment which the appellants could have asked the Munsif to remedy. The decree as it stands does, in our opinion, fully and necessarily imply a finding that the appellants' assignment had become void, inasmuch as, but for the existence of such a finding, a decree could not have been given in favour of the plaintiffs, who admittedly were but subsequent assignees of the debt originally assigned to the appellants.

Under these circumstances we think the decree of the lower appellate Court was wrong. We allow this appeal. We set aside the decree of the Subordinate Judge, and, as his decree proceeded upon a preliminary point and as we have overruled his decision upon that point, we remand the case for trial upon the merits under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The appellants will have their costs of this appeal in any event.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

21 A. 119 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 202.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.

MUJIB-ULLAH (Plaintiff) v. UMED BIBI AND ANOTHER (Defendants).^{*} [12th November, 1898.]

Pre-emption—Muhammadian Law—Wajib-ul-arz—Pre-emptor disentitled by his own conduct to pre-empt part of the property sold—Pre-emptor not entitled to pre-empt any portion thereof.

Where a pre-emptor sued for possession by right of pre-emption of certain property sold by one and the same sale-deed, claiming as to one portion of the property sold under the Muhammadian law and as to another under the wajib-ul-arz, and it was found that he had by his own acts or omissions disentitled himself from claiming that portion of the property to which the Muhammadian ^{*} Second Appeal No. 806 of 1896, from a decree of V. A. Smith, Esq., District Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 13th June 1896, confirming a decree of Pandit Bansidhar, Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 30th March 1896.

1898
Nov. 11.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 117 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 201.

1898
NOV. 12.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 119=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 202.

law applied, it was held that the pre-emptor was not entitled to pre-emption in respect of any portion of the property covered by the said sale-deed. Muhammad Wilayat Ali Khan v. Abdul Rab (1) followed.

[120] THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Messrs. T. Conlan and D. N. Banerji, for the appellant.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Pandit Moti Lal, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—This is an appeal brought by a plaintiff in a pre-emption suit. The sale-deed, in respect of which the suit has arisen, was dated the 7th of May 1894, and purported to convey to the vendee shares in some 47 villages, 3 pacca houses and a mortgage-deed. In the Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur) the suit was dismissed on the ground that the document upon which the suit was founded was not a sale-deed, but was a deed of gift. On the appeal on that point to the District Judge it is not easy to say what the opinion of the lower appellate Court was. The learned Judge disagreed with the finding of the Court of first instance, that the document was a deed of gift, but at the same time seems to have held that it was not a sale, that it was only a "family arrangement," and finally affirmed the decree of the Court of first instance, on the ground that there were "no materials for determining the plaintiff's share of the Rs. 15,500 set forth in the sale-deed, and it passes the wit of man to devise a decree which should assign to the plaintiff his proper share of the contingent liabilities imposed on the transferee." With respect to the judgment of the lower appellate Court we desire it to be understood that we do not concur in any proposition of law laid down therein, but as the question as to the nature of the deed and the manner in which the sum payable by the pre-emptor should be calculated have not been fully discussed on both sides in this case, we refrain from saying any more on that matter. On behalf of the respondent Pandit Moti Lal contended that this case was exactly on all fours with the case of Muhammad Wilayat Ali Khan v. Abdul Rab (1). In that case, as in the present case, two properties were claimed by right of pre-emption, one property being claimed under the Muhammadan law and the other by virtue of the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz.

[121] Such is also the case here, the three houses being claimed under the Muhammadan law, and 8 out of the 47 shares sold being claimed under the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz. In the case just cited the plaintiff-pre-emptor failed to prove that he had fulfilled the conditions required by Muhammadan law as preliminaries to the institution of a claim for pre-emption. So here also it has been found as a fact by both the lower Courts that the plaintiff here failed to perform these preliminaries. The result is that the plaintiff-appellant, being shown to be disqualified from claiming to pre-empt these houses under the Muhammadan law, cannot possibly get a decree for the whole of that which by law, but for his own laches, he would be entitled to pre-empt. In the case of Muhammad Wilayat Ali Khan v. Abdul Rab (1), cited above, the late Chief Justice of this Court, whose opinion on such a matter is entitled to every weight and respect, remarked as follows:—"The question then arises, can there be any difference between the case of the plaintiff coming into Court and claiming a portion of the property sold, and the case of a plaintiff coming into Court and claiming the whole, he being at the time disentitled by his own act or laches to maintain a claim as to a part? It appears to us that there can be no difference in principle, and that exactly the same result must follow in this case as would have followed if the plaintiff had come into Court and had abstained from claiming the property in Moradabad. A person who claims to be a pre-emptor and has disqualified himself from claiming the whole, cannot be in a better position than a person who has come into Court and has claimed a part only when he was entitled to claim the whole." The case now before us and the case just cited are admittedly on all fours. No attempt has been made, or indeed could be made, to show any distinction between them. It is contended that we should not follow the rule laid down in that case. We, however, fully concur in the rule laid down therein and in the reason given for it. We agree with the learned Judges who decided that case, that an intending [122] pre-emptor who has placed himself in the position occupied by the plaintiff here and by the pre-emptor in the case of Muhammad Wilayat Ali Khan v. Abdul Rab (1) must be considered to have, by his own act as a matter of law, forfeited his right to pre-empt any portion of the property. We follow the rule of law laid down in that case and for the reasons given above, and not because we agree with the lower appellate Court, with whose judgment, as a matter of fact, we disagree, we dismiss this appeal with costs.

(1) 11 A. 108.

1898

Nov. 12.

—

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

—

21 A. 119=

18 A.W.N.

(1898) 202.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 122=18 A.W.N. (1898) 208.

APPELLATE CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox, Acting Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Banerji.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. TIMMAL AND OTHERS.* [18th November, 1898.]

Act No. XLV of 1860 (Indian Penal Code), s. 96 et seqq—Right of private defence—Act No. I of 1872 (Indian Evidence Act), s. 105—Presumption—Pleadings.

Held, that an accused person who at his trial has not pleaded the right of private defence, but has raised other pleas inconsistent with such a defence, cannot in appeal set up a case, founded upon the evidence taken at his trial, that he acted in the exercise of the right of private defence; neither is the Court competent to raise such a plea on behalf of the appellant. Queen-Empress v. Prag Dat (2), referred to.

[F., 32 A. 451 (455)=7 A.L.J. 438=11 Cr. L.J. 374=6 Ind. Cas. 589 (591); R., A.W.N. (1904) 113; 10 Cr. L.J. 102 (106).]

THE facts of this case are fully discussed in the judgment of the Court. The Officiating Government Advocate (Mr. A. E. Ryves), for the appellant.

Babu Bishnu Chandar, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, ACTING C. J., and BANERJI, J.—This is an appeal presented under directions of the Local Government from an appellate order of acquittal passed by the Sessions Court of Mirzapur. The Magistrate of the 1st class at Mirzapur, before whom the case originally came, had

* Criminal Appeal No. 1007 of 1898.

(1) 11 A. 108.

(2) 20 A. 459.

1898 found five persons guilty of offences under ss. 147 and 325 read with
Nov. 18. s. 149 of the [123] Indian Penal Code; but had passed sentences upon — the five only for offences under s. 147. The learned Sessions Judge arriv-APPEL- ed at the following conclusions upon the evidence, namely, first, that the LATE appellants before him had acted in exercise of the right of private defence CRIMINAL. of property; secondly, that there was no evidence that the same accused — formed an unlawful assembly. He accordingly acquitted them of the 21 A. 122 = charge under s. 147, and apparently omitted to take any notice of the 18 A.W.N. conviction under s. 325 read with s. 149 of the Indian Penal Code.
(1898) 208. Holding the views he did, the learned Sessions Judge should have in terms recorded an acquittal upon this charge also.

The facts found by the Magistrate were that Timmal, one of the respondents before us, considered he possessed a right to gather the fruit of certain mahua trees. That fruit was being peaceably gathered by certain persons on behalf of one Altaf Husain. With a view of enforcing Timmal's right or supposed right, the five accused came upon the spot and with clubs assaulted five men. The injury caused to two was, according to the medical evidence, which has not been rebutted, "grievous hurt." The Magistrate added to the above recital of facts the words:—"Timmal's party cannot claim that they were defending the enjoyment of a right actually in possession." The appeal as presented sets out that the respondents have not made out their defence that they acted within their right of private defence of property. This ground is not happily worded. We have, with the assistance of the learned vakil who appeared for the respondent, examined the defences raised by the various respondents before the Magistrate. Timmal says that he never beat any one and that he saw no assault. Badan does not say, so far as he is concerned, that he hit any one; he says, on the contrary, that he was hit. The other three respondents all say that they were not on the spot at the time when the disturbance took place. The only hint that such a plea was ever in contemplation as a plea in defence [124] is to be found in the examination of Badan, and of Badan alone. We need not go into the question whether Badan, an accused, can, in his statement, raise a plea on behalf of the co-accused, which those co-accused never raised for themselves, and which they virtually repudiated in the statements made by them. In appeal before the Court of Session all the five respondents, who were then appellants, did put forward as one of the grounds of appeal that they had acted as they did in exercise of the right of private defence of property.

The learned Government Advocate contended that the respondents were precluded from raising this plea by the very nature of the defences which they had set up. He drew our attention to an unreported case, and further to the case of Queen-Empress v. Prag Dat (1). It was laid down in both these cases, more particularly in the latter case, that the law in India is that, when a person is accused of an offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Indian Penal Code, is upon the accused, and it is directed by that law, as enacted in s. 105 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, that the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances. He pointed out that not only had the accused not set up the plea that they had acted in the exercise of the right of private defence of property, but further that there was no evidence on the record upon which any circumstance could be inferred which would substantiate such a plea.

(1) 20 A. 459.

We followed the learned vakil very carefully in his answer to this part of the Government case. Taking all that he said as being matter proved, we found it amounted to this, namely, that Timmal and his party had been put into possession of the mahua trees in dispute before any lease of the same trees had been given to the persons on whose behalf the persons assaulted were on the day in question collecting the mahua fruit, and that the fact of possession having been given to [125] Timmal and his party had, at the time possession was given, been proclaimed in the village. At this point the learned vakil stopped, and rightly stopped; he had no evidence upon which to set up a case that any one of his clients had struck a single blow or committed any assault. No blows having been struck and no assault committed, the exercise of the right of private defence fell at once to the ground. The learned vakil made some attempt to show that a conviction under s. 147 was not justified by the evidence, and he referred us to the case of Pachkauri v. Queen-Empress (1), and Queen-Empress v. Narsang Patha Bhai (2). Neither of those cases is in point here. In Pachkauri v. Queen-Empress the accused were at the time the assault was committed on the spot, and exercising their rights over the property claimed by them. In the present case the circumstances were the very reverse; the persons before us, who were assaulted, were picking up the mahua fruit peaceably and under cover of a lease; the assailants came upon them while so employed, and commenced the attack with a view of enforcing the right which they considered rested with them. In Queen-Empress v. Narsang Patha Bhai the assault was commenced by the complainant and not by the persons assaulted by the complainant. In the case before us the respondents did form an unlawful assembly, and in using force committed rioting; they could not plead as a justification for their act that the persons picking the mahua were in so doing guilty of theft, mischief or criminal trespass. They were acting throughout in the bona fide belief that they had a right to the mahua, and the element of dishonesty was wanting. Hence there could be no theft or mischief. When they went upon the land they did not go on it with the intention of committing any offence, hence there was no criminal trespass. From every point of view the plea of private defence of property was one which could not have been raised in this case, and was in fact never raised by the accused until they went before the appellate Court. There being no evidence on the [126] record, the learned Sessions Judge was distinctly in error, and that error an error of law, when he presumed the presence and not the absence of circumstances which would form any basis for the plea of private defence of property.

The learned vakil, probably feeling the weakness of this portion of his argument, commenced his defence by urging that the appeal before us was one which should never have been put forward by the Local Government. He referred us to the cases of Queen-Empress v. Gayadin (3), Queen-Empress v. Chotu (4), and Queen-Empress v. Robinson (5). All these cases were considered by this Court in the recent case of Queen-Empress v. Prag Dat, to which we have already referred. It is true that the right vested in the Local Government is a right which should be advanced with care and caution. In two of the cases cited by the learned vakil the errors which the Local Government sought to have rectified were errors on questions of fact. In the case before us the learned Sessions

1898
Nov. 18.
—
APPEL-
LATE CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 122 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 208.

(1) 24 C. 686.
(4) 9 A. 52.

(2) 14 B. 441.
(5) 16 A. 212.

(3) 4 A. 148.

1898
Nov. 18.
—
APPEL-
LATE CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 122=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 208.

Judge erred upon a question of law, and he was at the time sitting as a Court of Appeal, and his error of law led him to set aside the conclusion of the Magistrate upon facts that he himself would probably have accepted but for the error of law into which he had fallen. A riot in the jungles of Mirzapur, where it is not easy to have recourse to the protection of the police, is an offence which wounds public security, and very often leads to fatal results. We cannot therefore agree with the learned vakil in holding, as he wishes us to do, that we ought not to exercise the powers vested in us in this particular case. We set aside the finding of acquittal, restore the conviction recorded by the Magistrate, and pass the sentence which was in the first instance passed by him. In computing the term of imprisonment any portion of the imprisonment already undergone will be deducted. Subject to the above the sentences will run from to-day's date.

21 A. 127=18 A.W.N.] 1898) 205.

[127] REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Aikman.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MATHURA PRASAD.* [19th November, 1898.]

Act No. XLV of 1860 (Indian Penal Code), ss. 21, 161—"Public servant"—Manager employed under the Court of Wards.

Held that the manager of an estate employed under the Court of Wards is a "public servant" within the meaning of s. 31 of the Indian Penal Code. Queen-Empress v. Arayi (1) referred to.

[Diss., 28 C. 344=4 C.W.N. 798 (800); R., 1 S.L.R. 30 (31).]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court. Messrs. C. Ross Alston, A. H. C. Hamilton, and Babu Satish Chandar for the applicant.

The Government Pleader (Munshi Ram Prasad), with whom Babu Satya Chandar Mukerji, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

AIKMAN, J.—This is an application asking this Court to exercise the powers of revision conferred on it by s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The applicant, Mathura Prasad, was an employ of the Court of Wards on an estate under the Court in the Shahjahanpur district. He was charged with and tried before a Magistrate of the 1st class for nine different offences, six of which were under s. 409 of the Indian Penal Code, namely, Criminal breach of trust by a public servant, and three under s. 161 read with s. 114 of the Indian Penal Code, abetting the receipt of illegal gratification by a public servant. Objection was taken before the Magistrate to all these offences being tried together. The Magistrate was under the erroneous impression that the provisions of s. 234 of the Code of Criminal Procedure empowered him to try at one time any number of offences, provided no more than three offences of one kind were charged. Although he found the accused guilty of all the nine offences, he considered therefore that he complied with the law by convicting him of three only of the six offences under s. 409 of the Indian [128] Penal Code. He also convicted him of the three charges under s. 161

* Criminal Revision No. 548 of 1898.

(1) 7 M. 17.

read with s. 114 of the Indian Penal Code. In the result he sentenced him to an aggregate punishment of four years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 120. On appeal the learned Sessions Judge sustained one of the convictions under s. 409 and one of the convictions under s. 161 read with s. 114 of the Indian Penal Code. The convictions and sentences under the other charges were set aside.

Before this Court the first plea urged by the learned counsel, who appears in support of the application, is that an employee under the Court of Wards is not a public servant. So far as the charges of criminal breach of trust are concerned, this question is of little importance, for on the facts found the applicant was guilty, if not under s. 409, at least under s. 408 of the Indian Penal Code, and the sentences imposed on him are within the limit of punishment prescribed for offences under the latter section. But the question is of importance with regard to the charge of abetment of the taking of an illegal gratification, for if the manager of the Court of Wards, whom the appellant is said to have abetted in taking illegal gratifications, cannot be held to be a public servant, the offence charged was not committed. The learned Counsel relies, in the first place, on the decision in the case The Queen-Empress v. Arayi (1). In that case it was held by TURNER, C. J., that a peon employed by a manager of an estate under the Court of Wards is not a public servant within the meaning of that term in the Penal Code. Counsel were not instructed in that case, and no reasons are given for the view taken. Whether the learned Chief Justice would have held that the manager of an estate under the Court of Wards was not a public servant, does not appear.

Reference was next made to the provisions of s. 12, sub-s. (ii) of Act No. XVII of 1885, which is entitled "An Act to make better provision for the Superintendence of Government Wards in the Central Provinces." That Sub-section [129] is as follows:—"Every manager, or other servant of the Court of Wards, shall be deemed a 'public servant' within the meaning of ss. 161, 162, 164 and 165 of the Indian Penal Code; and in the definition of 'illegal remuneration' contained in the said s. 161 the word 'Government' shall, for the purposes of this sub-section, be deemed to include the Court of Wards." It was argued that if the Legislature found it necessary to make this provision in the Act for the Central Provinces, it was clear that the provisions of s. 21 of the Indian Penal Code, which section defines what persons fall under the description of "public servant," were not sufficient to cover the case of a Court of Wards' employee.

As neither Act No. XIX of 1873 (The North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act), nor any other Act applicable to these Provinces, contains any provision similar to that quoted from s. 12 of Act No. XVII of 1885, it is clear that a Court of Wards' employee cannot be held to be a "public servant," if he cannot be brought within one or other of the ten clauses of s. 21 of the Indian Penal Code. Reference was also made to s. 35 of the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, which contains the following provision:—"Every kanungo and patwari and every person appointed temporarily to discharge the duties of any such officer shall be deemed to be a public servant within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code." It was contended with much force that if the Legislature had intended that 1898

Nov. 19.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL
—
21 A. 127 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 205.

(1) 7 M. 17.

1898
Nov. 19.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 127 =
18 A. W. N.
(1898) 205.

Court of Wards' employees should be held to be public servants, some provision similar to that quoted above would have appeared in Chapter VII of Act No. XIX of 1873, which contains the law as regards the Court of Wards. I must say that I was much impressed with the force of this reasoning: but after full consideration I have arrived at the conclusion that the provisions of the 9th clause of s. 21 of the Indian Penal Code are wide enough to include the case of Court of Wards' employees. The material words of that clause are—"Every officer whose duty it is as such officer to take, receive, keep or spend any property on behalf of [130] Government." Now the Board of Revenue, which is a department of Government, is the Court of Wards for these Provinces, and as such is in charge of the estates of proprietors who are held disqualified to manage their own lands. It is true that s. 202 of Act No. XIX of 1873, which lays down the duties of a manager, says that the manager "shall in every respect act to the best of his judgment for the proprietor's interest as if the property were his own." But while the disqualification of a proprietor lasts he has no power to collect any rents from his own estates. If he does receive rents he cannot give a good discharge to tenants. The collection of rents is taken from him by the Court of Wards, that is, by the Government, and although the Government may ultimately be accountable to the proprietor for the money which it has realized, it is none the less Government which receives the money. Therefore it seems to me that an officer of the Court of Wards does, when he realizes money from a Court of Wards' estate, realize that money "on behalf of Government." The provisions referred to above from the Central Provinces Act may have been enacted with the object of removing any doubts; but as the words of the Penal Code seem to me to be wide enough to cover the case of Court of Wards' servants I overrule the objection which the learned counsel urged with so much ingenuity and force.

The next point taken on behalf of the applicant is, that the defect in the trial which has been referred to at the outset of this judgment, is a defect which, ipso facto, renders the whole proceedings void. In support of this reliance is placed on a dictum of Petheram, C. J., in the case in the matter of Lachmin Narain (1). At page 131 of the judgment the learned Chief Justice says:—"It is clear from the terms of that section (s. 234 of the Code of Criminal Procedure), that a man can only be tried for three separate offences of the same kind at the same trial, and, speaking for myself, I think that if a man were tried for four specific offences at one trial it would not only be an [131] irregularity which could be cured by s. 537 of the Code, but a defect in the trial which would render the whole trial inoperative, unless it were cured by some subsequent proceeding by striking out some portions of the charge, and as to the propriety or legality of such a proceeding, we do not at present express any opinion." There is no doubt that this dictum is clearly in favour of the applicant, but it must be taken to be obiter, for it was not necessary for the decision of the case then before the Court. S. 233 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides that, with certain exceptions therein specified, for every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge, and every charge shall be tried separately. I think there is much force in the view taken by Petheram, C. J., that a breach of the provisions of this section is something more than a mere irregularity, but, in my opinion, it is not open to me to adopt that view, inasmuch as I find that not only in this Court but in the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts a breach of the provisions of s. 233 or of the corresponding s. 453 of the former Code, has been treated as an irregularity, and not as an illegality rendering the whole proceedings void.

(1) 14 C. 128.

That a grave irregularity was committed there cannot be any doubt, and I have to consider whether the irregularity has in fact occasioned a failure of justice. In the explanation appended to s. 537 of Act No. V of 1898, it is said that in determining whether any error, or omission or irregularity in any proceeding under the Code has occasioned a failure of justice, the Court shall have regard to the fact whether the objection could and should have been raised at an earlier stage in the proceedings. It is clear from the Magistrate's own record that the accused did take objection before him, and I am informed that immediately after the accused had been furnished with a copy of the charges and when his objection before the Magistrate was overruled, he had recourse to the Court of Session by a petition presented on the 7th of June, the charges having been framed on the 2nd of June, in which the same objection to the trial of so many offences [132] together was urged. The Court of Session, however, declined to interfere at that stage of the case. The object of the law which enacts that, with the exceptions specified, there must be a separate trial for each offence, is framed no doubt, as well to prevent the cumulative effect upon the mind of the Court of a number of charges being brought forward together as in the interest of the accused, who cannot but be harassed and bewildered by having to meet in one trial a number of separate charges. Now in this case the accused had not only to meet nine separate charges but in reality as much larger number. For instance, charge No. 8 includes not only a charge of abetting the manager in the receipt of a bribe of Rs. 10, but a charge against the accused of accepting one for himself. Again, it appears that in charge No. 9, in which the applicant is accused of having accepted on behalf of the manager a sum of Rs. 175, this sum was made up of a number of small sums realized from a number of tenants as an illegal gratification for allowing them to continue in their holdings. Although the amount is said to have been handed over to the manager in a lump sum, the evidence of a number of tenants was called to prove the payments of separate sums by them to the applicants. The result was that the record swelled to an enormous length, to upwards of 300 closely written pages. To meet all these different accusations at one trial must, it appears to me, have seriously prejudiced the applicant in his defence, and that the bringing forward of so many different charges must have influenced the mind of the Magistrate is equally clear. It is further argued with reference to the 9th charge, the conviction under which has been sustained by the learned Sessions Judge, that the accused was prejudiced by the manner in which it was drawn up. In it the offence is said to have taken place in the "month of Magh" last year. Evidence was called on behalf of the defence which the Sessions Judge seems to hold has the effect of proving that the offence could not have taken place in that month, inasmuch as the manager is said to have been during the whole of that month absent from Shahjahanpur, where the offence is alleged [133] to have been committed. It is to be noted that the charge is not worded "in or about the month of Magh," and it is contended that the accused was prejudiced by being called on to meet only a charge for that month. The Sessions Judge is of opinion that the offence may have been committed in the following month of Phagun. If so, the accused

1898
Nov. 19.

—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.

—
21 A. 127=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 205.

1898
Nov. 19.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 127 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 205.

ought to have had an opportunity of calling evidence to prove that the offence was not committed by him in Phagun. The result of the above examination of the record is, that I am constrained to come to the conclusion that the irregularities committed in the Court of the Magistrate are such as are not covered by the provisions of s. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is to be regretted that the Magistrate, who seems to have gone into the case before him very patiently, should have, by neglect of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, rendered the interference of this Court necessary. But, in my opinion, I have no alternative but to set aside the convictions and sentences, and direct that the accused be re-tried according to law. The fines, if paid, will be refunded; the sentence of rigorous imprisonment will cease. Accused will be detained in custody until the District Magistrate makes arrangements for the re-trial of the accused, which he will proceed to do forthwith. In the event of a fresh trial resulting in conviction, the term of imprisonment which the applicant has already undergone ought to be taken into account.

21 A. 133 (F.B.) = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 204.

FULL BENCH.

Before Mr. Justice Knox, Acting Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL
(Opposite party) v. JILLO (Applicant).^{*} [10th November, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 409 - Application for leave to sue in forma pauperis—Decree—Appeal.

Held that no appeal will lie from an order rejecting an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis. Baldeo v. Gula Kuar (1) and Lekha v. Bhauna (2), referred to.

[R., 28 A. 72 = 2 A.L.J. 749 = A.W.N. (1905) 191; 13 C.L.J. 688 = 15 C.W.N. 879 (881) = 11 Ind. Cas. 65 (66); 12 O.C. 381, U.B.R. (1910) 28 (29) = 8 Ind. Cas. 475.]

[134] THIS was an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis. The applicant, Musammatt Jillo, came into Court alleging that she had been married to the defendant, Chand Khan, on the 13th of October 1886, on a prompt dower of Rs. 10,000; that she had lived with her husband up to 1895, but that in January 1895 her husband had turned her out and refused to pay her dower. She prayed for a decree for Rs. 10,000 and costs of suit. On presentation of this application in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Moradabad the applicant's statement was recorded, the application was registered and notice was issued fixing the 26th October 1895 for the further hearing. The case was adjourned from time to time until the 4th of January 1896, on which date the Subordinate Judge recorded the following order:—"The applicant's pleader stated that he "was not directed to conduct the case, and he did not produce any evidence as to (the applicant's) poverty. The defendant's pleader also is "absent. As the application is rejected for want of prosecution, the Government Pleader also is not entitled to any costs. Order: The application

^{*} First Appeal, No. 101, of 1896, from an order of Pandit Raj Nath, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 4th January 1896.

(1) 9 A. 129.

(2) 18 A. 101.

"be rejected with costs." This order was followed by a decree, the operative part which was in the following terms:—"It is, therefore, ordered that the application be rejected with costs in default of prosecution." Against this order an appeal was preferred to the High Court by the Government, claiming its costs on the application.

The Officiating Government Advocate (Mr. A. E. Ryves), for the appellant.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, Acting C. J., BANERJI and BURKITT, JJ.—Musammat Jillo, the respondent to this first appeal, presented in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Moradabad an application praying for permission to institute a suit in forma pauperis. She was examined and her deposition recorded. After that a date was fixed, and notice given to the Government Pleader, as required by s. 408 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Upon the day on which inquiry was to be made as to whether Musammat Jillo was or was not a pauper we find the Court recording [135] an order, which is both extraordinary and in its terms contradictory. The order runs as follows:—"The applicant's pleader stated that he was not directed to conduct the case, and he did not produce any evidence as to (the applicant's) poverty. The defendant's pleader also is absent. As the application is rejected for want of prosecution, the Government Pleader also is not entitled to any costs. Order:—"The application be rejected with costs." We examined the original order, as we found it difficult to believe that the translation before us was a correct translation. We find that the order has been correctly translated and is as above. We next examined the decree: we find the language of that equally, if not more, unsatisfactory. The effective order of the decree is in these terms: "It is therefore ordered that the application be rejected with costs in default of prosecution." There is nothing whatever to indicate by which of the parties and in what proportion the costs are to be paid, or to whom they are to be paid. It would be a matter of regret if we found a decree like this passed by the most junior Munsif in these Provinces. From this decree the present appeal before us has been filed by the Secretary of State for India in Council, contending that the appellant is entitled to his costs, inasmuch as he appeared to protect the revenue, and, it might have been added, after he had received notice from the Court calling on him so to appear.

A preliminary objection was raised to the hearing of the appeal, on the ground that the order under consideration was not a decree within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that the order was not one appealable under s. 588 of the Code of Civil Procedure. We are of opinion that the objection taken is a sound one and must prevail. The learned Government Advocate attempted to support the appeal upon the authority of the case Baldeo v. Gola Kuar (1). That case is one not entirely on all fours with the present, still it very much resembles it, and was certainly one on which the learned Govern- [136] ment Advocate was entitled to rely in support of his contention. If the learned Judges who pronounced that decision intended to lay down that an order like the one in appeal here was a decree within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure, we find ourselves unable

1898
Nov. 10.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 133
(F.B.)=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 204.

1898
 NOV. 10.
 —
 FULL BENCH.
 —
 21 A. 133
 (F.B.)=
 18 A.W.N.
 (1898) 204.

to concur with them. The order before us was not an adjudication in any stage of a suit. It was passed upon an application which, if granted, would, after the order granting it, and only then, have matured into a plaint in a suit. It was not therefore an adjudication deciding a right claimed in a suit. It is true that the definition given for the word "decree" goes on to say that an order rejecting a plaint, or directing accounts to be taken, or determining questions mentioned or referred to in s. 244, is, under certain circumstances, within the definition of a decree. The only part of this portion of the definition which bears at all upon the present case are the words "an order rejecting a plaint." We have, however, pointed out above that in the case before us the stage had not been reached in which the application filed by Musammatt Jillo could be deemed a plaint. A similar point to that before us was considered by this Court in the Full Bench Ruling in the case of Lekha v. Bhauna (1) in which the Court held that an order under s. 549 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was not a final expression of an adjudication upon any right claimed or defence set up within the meaning of the first paragraph of the definition clause relating to decrees and was not an order appealable as a decree. We therefore dismiss this appeal, but without costs. The order passed by the Subordinate Judge is so extraordinary that we direct this case to be treated as a case in revision under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that it be taken up on a further date so as to allow Musammatt Jillo, if she be so advised, to be heard.

Appeal dismissed.

[137] Under the above order the case was taken up in revision on the 27th of February 1899,* when the following order was passed:—

KNOX, BANERJI and BURKITT, JJ.—We have in previous proceedings commented upon the extraordinary nature of the order passed by the learned Subordinate Judge. There is no question whatever that in passing the order he did on the 4th of January 1896, he acted with material irregularity. We accordingly set aside that order, whatever it may be, for its terms are so ambiguous and contradictory that it is impossible to interpret it, and in lieu of it we pass this order. We direct that the application of Musammatt Jillo for permission to sue in forma pauperis be dismissed with costs, which will be paid by Musammatt Jillo. The Secretary of State will get his costs both in the lower Court and in these proceedings.

* Civil Revision No. 49 of 1898.

(1) 18 A. 101.

21 A. 137=18 A.W.N. (1898) 210.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.*KUNJI BEHARI LAL AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs) v. PARSOTAM NARAIN (Defendant).^{*} [25th November, 1898.]*Act No. XIX of 1873 (N.W.P. Land Revenue Act), ss. 185 and 186—Sale for arrears of revenue—Disposal of surplus proceeds—Distribution amongst creditors of defaulter—Suit by one of such creditors against another—Cause of action.*1898
Nov. 25.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 137=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 210.

An estate which had been mortgaged separately to two different mortgagees was sold for default in payment of Government revenue. By the sale a much larger sum than was sufficient to satisfy the arrears of revenue was realized. The Collector, instead of paying the surplus to the defaulter, mortgagor, paid there-with one of the mortgagees in full and the other in part. The mortgagee who had been paid in part only sued the other mortgagee for the balance due on his (the plaintiff's) mortgage, alleging that it was prior to that of the defendant and ought to have been paid off in full. Held, that the suit would not lie. The [138] action of the Collector in contravention of the express provisions of s. 185 of Act No. XIX of 1873 gave the plaintiffs no cause of action against the other mortgagee.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Munshi Ratan Chand, for the appellants.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—We are unable to agree with any of the reasons given by either of the two lower Courts for their decisions in this case. Put very briefly, the facts are as follows:—

A certain estate, which had been mortgaged separately to the plaintiffs and to the defendant, was sold to pay arrears of Government revenue. The effect of that sale was to wipe off all incumbrances theretofore existing on the estate, though of course leaving untouched the mortgagee's personal remedies, if any, against the mortgagor. The estate, when sold, produced a much larger sum than was necessary to discharge the arrears of revenue. When such an event occurs, the duty of the Collector is distinctly laid down by s. 185 of the Land Revenue Act of the North-Western Provinces (Act No. XIX of 1873). That section directs the Collector to pay the surplus to the person whose land has been sold, and s. 186 further directs that the surplus shall not be paid to any creditor of the person whose land is sold except under the order of a Civil Court; and further that, except under such order, the money shall not be retained in the Government treasury. It is admitted here that no order of any Civil Court was passed in the matter or served on the Collector. The Collector's duty therefore, as laid down by the sections referred to above, was to have paid the money forthwith to the person whose land had been sold. That person, it seems, did apply to the Collector for the money, and the two mortgagees, the plaintiffs and defendant in this case, also applied. The Collector, disregarding the provisions ^{*} Second Appeal No. 688 of 1896, from a decree of Maulvi Muhammad Mazhar Husain, Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri, dated the 11th June 1896, reversing a decree of Babu Ishri Prasad, Munsif of Mainpuri, dated the 24th September 1894.

1898
 Nov. 25.
 —
 APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
 —
 21 A. 137 =
 18 A.W.N.
 (1898) 210.

of ss. 185 and 186 of the Revenue Act, refused to [139] pay the money to the person whose land had been sold, and, disregarding the claim of the latter, he handed the money over to creditors, thereby paying off the whole of the amount alleged to be due to one creditor and part of the money alleged to be due to the other creditors. The latter thereupon, alleging that their mortgage had priority over the former creditor's mortgage, have instituted the suit against the creditor whose debt the Collector had paid in full, and claim from the latter a sum of money sufficient to pay off the balance of their own debt.

The two lower Courts, for reasons into which it is unnecessary to enter, as they are absolutely wrong from beginning to end and have failed to touch the real point in the case, have decided, one in favour of the plaintiffs and the other in favour of the defendant.

In our opinion, the plaintiffs have failed to show any cause of action in this case. According to their plaint they seem to be of opinion that they and the other creditors had a right by law to call on the Collector to discharge their debts in order of priority. That is an entirely erroneous and unfounded position. The Collector not only was not bound to discharge their debts, but he was forbidden by law to adopt such a course. In the absence of any order from a Civil Court, the Collector's duty was to have forthwith paid the surplus proceeds of the sale to the person whose land had been sold, and to no one else. He has chosen to disregard the provisions of the Act by discharging the debts of the creditors according to his own notions of equity. Such an unauthorized, and, we may call it, voluntary payment by him in violation of his duty did not, in our opinion, create any cause of action in the plaintiffs as against the defendant. In illustration of our meaning we would take the case, say, of a wealthy and philanthropic individual who, hearing of these debts, was good enough to pay off one in full and the other in part. Can it be said that such payment of one debt in full created a cause of action in the other creditor to have the balance of his debt made good, because of its priority, by the other creditor? We think not, and we [140] regard the payment of this sum to this creditor by the Collector as nothing more than a voluntary act of the Collector, who, disregarding the law he was bound to administer, thought fit to divide the money in his hands, which was payable to the defaulter only, between the two creditors of the latter.

In our opinion this suit fails, there being no cause of action. For that reason, and not for the reasons given by the lower appellate Courts, which, in our opinion, are completely erroneous, we dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 140=18 A.W.N. (1898) 212.

REVISIONAL CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox, Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Dillon.

HARBANS LAL (Decree-holder.) v. KUNDAN LAL AND OTHERS
(Opposite Parties.)* [7th December, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, ss. 311, 312—Execution of decree—Sale in execution—Application to set aside sale—Court limited to grounds mentioned in s. 311.

1898
DEC. 7.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CIVIL.
—
21 A. 140=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 212.

A Court to which an application under s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside a sale held in execution of a decree, is made, is limited to the grounds set forth in that section. If the Court fails to find both a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale and consequent loss to the applicant, it is bound to dismiss the application and confirm the sale. It cannot set aside the sale upon other grounds not pleaded by the applicant. Tassaduk Rasul Khan v. Ahmad Husain (1) and Shirin Begam v. Agha Ali Khan (2) referred to.

[Rel., 9 Ind. Cas. 816 (817)=102 P.L.R. 1911; R., 11 P.L.R. 1907=132 P.R. 1906; D., 9 O.C. 289 (291).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the applicant.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, for the opposite parties.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, Acting C. J., and DILLON. J.—On the 22nd of September 1897, certain property, the property of the judgment-debtor Kundan Lal, was sold by auction in execution of a decree held by Harbans Lal. After the sale had been held the judgment-[141] debtor put in an application which he termed an application under s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure. He alleged that no sale notification had been issued and no proclamation duly and properly made; that owing to these irregularities he had sustained great loss, and he asked that the sale might be set aside. The Court found that there had been an irregularity in publication, but it also distinctly found that no loss had accrued to the applicant by reason of the irregularity. Having so found, the course which the Court should have taken, in our opinion, was, that it should have disallowed the objections and passed an order confirming the sale. So far as we can see, s. 312 of the Code of Civil Procedure gave the Court no other alternative. Instead, however, of so acting, the Court came to the conclusion, it does not appear at whose instance or on whose application, that there had been no sale, as there had been no attachment of the property sold, and it proceeded to set aside the sale. On appeal the learned Judge took the same view and confirmed the order of the Court of first instance setting aside the sale. We are asked in revision to hold that as no irregularities in the conducting or publishing of the sale had been found and as the judgment-debtor had sustained no injury, the Court had (and here we must have recourse, not to the petition, but to the argument before us) no jurisdiction to set aside the sale on an application under s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This contention is undoubtedly

* Civil Revision, No. 35 of 1898.

(1) 20 I.A. 176.

(2) 18 A. 141.

1898
DEC. 7.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CIVIL.
—
21 A. 140=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 212.

supported by a ruling of this Court in the case of Shirin Begam v. Agha Ali Khan (1), a case which can in no way be distinguished from the present. It was, however, contended by the learned vakil for the opposite party that there were a number of rulings, which he proceeded to lay before us, in which this Court had held that where the question complained of was not a mere irregularity, but an illegality, Courts had jurisdiction, under s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to set aside a sale, even though it had not been proved that substantial loss had resulted to the applicant by reason of such irregularity. Those [142] cases were Mahadeo Dubey v. Bhola Nath Dichit (2), Jasoda v. Mathura Das (3), Raghu Nath Das v. Raj Kumar (4), Ganga Prasad v. Jag Lal Rai (5), Sant Lal v. Umrao-un-nisa (6); he also referred us to the case of Mohendro Narain Chaturaj v. Gopal Mondul (7). With reference to all these cases one remark applies, namely, that they were all decided before the case of Tassaduk Rasul Khan v. Ahmad Husain (8), in which their Lordships of the Privy Council ruled very positively as to the object and purport of s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure. We find nothing in s. 311 which allows a Court to go into any question over and above that of material irregularity in the publication and conduct of the sale. Before the Court can set aside a sale under s. 311, the applicant must prove a material irregularity and substantial injury sustained thereby. He cannot come into Court upon these allegations, and when he has failed, as in the present case, to make them out, then ask the Court to pray in aid some further ground which he considers would entitle him to the relief asked for, and, as was pointed out before, the Court cannot do this of its own motion. When put in motion under s. 311, it must either find the irregularities complained of established, or, if it does not find this, it must pass an order confirming the sale. We accordingly reverse the orders setting aside the sale, and direct that the sale held on the 22nd of September 1897 be confirmed. The petitioner will get his costs throughout.

21 A. 143=18 A.W.N. (1898) 213.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

[143] Before Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Dillon.

RAM SUKH AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. GOKUL CHAND (Plaintiff)*
[7th December, 1898].

Jurisdiction—Civil and Revenue Courts—Act No. XII of 1881 (N.W.P. Rent Act); s. 34 et seqq, 95 (d) and 206 et seqq—Landholder and tenant—Suit to eject a tenant on the ground that the tenant had denied the landholder's title.

The reason which a landholder may have for desiring to eject a tenant of agricultural land has nothing to do with the procedure to be adopted for the tenant's ejectment. Where the procedure laid down in s. 36 et seqq of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, is available, the landholder must adopt that procedure, and the mere fact that the landholder's alleged cause of action is the denial by the tenant of the landholder's title will not give the landholder a right to sue for ejectment in a Civil Court.

[F., 4 A.L.J. 253-N; R., 1 Ind. Cas. 665.]

* Second Appeal No. 831 of 1896, from a decree of L. G. Evans, Esq., District Judge of Aligarh, dated the 26th May 1896, confirming a decree of Babu Bepin Behari Mukerji, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 18th June 1895.

| | | | |
|----------------|---------------|----------------|------------------|
| (1) 18 A. 141. | (2) 5 A. 86. | (3) 9 A. 511. | (4) 7 A. 876. |
| (5) 11 A. 333. | (6) 12 A. 96. | (7) 17 C. 769. | (8) 20 I.A. 176. |

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Mr. J. Simeon, for the appellants.

Mr. Roshan Lal and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT and DILLON, JJ.—In the suit out of which this appeal has arisen the plaintiff, a zamindar, sued to eject the defendants, who were his tenants. The suit was brought in a Civil Court, and the appeal before us is one from the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Saharanpur. The suit is founded on the allegation that the defendants, being tenants without rights of occupancy, have denied the landholder's title and have set up a title as owners in themselves. The landholder therefore sues to eject them. A great part of the judgment of the lower Court is occupied in discussing the question as to whether a tenant of agricultural land who denies his landlord's title thereby renders himself liable to ejectment. We do not mean to enter into that question further than to say that neither of us—one of us having had a very long experience at the bar, and the other having had [144] a very long experience as a revenue officer—are aware of the existence in these Provinces of the common law respecting that matter upon which the Subordinate Judge has founded his decision. But, putting that matter aside, the suit, in our opinion, fails and must be dismissed for two reasons. Firstly, because it violates the provisions of clause (b) of s. 34 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act. That section distinctly lays down that “no tenant shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree or order under the provisions of this Act.” The defendants here were admittedly tenants. The plaintiff is the landlord. Secondly, the defendants, according to the plaintiff's showing, are tenants without a right of occupancy. To such a state of things the opening words of s. 95 of the Rent Act apply, which say that:—“No Courts other than Courts of revenue shall take cognizance of any dispute or matter on which any application of the nature mentioned in this section might be made.” Now one of the applications mentioned in clause (d) of s. 95 is an application by a landholder to have a notice of ejectment issued and served under s. 38. Section 38 supplies the machinery under which the provisions of s. 36 are put into action, and s. 36 provides that if a landlord desires to eject a tenant not having a right of occupancy, he shall have a notice of ejectment served on such tenant. Then follow ss. 37, 38, 39 and 40, which provide the subsidiary machinery for giving effect to a notice issued under s. 36. Now the defendants in this case being, according to the respondent, tenants without right of occupancy, and being tenants whom the landholder desired to eject, it is perfectly clear that this is a case in which an application might be made under s. 95, clause (d) of the Rent Act. The reason which the landholder may have for desiring to eject the tenant is perfectly immaterial. The law does not require him to state any reason. All that s. 36 requires is that he should be desirous of ejecting the tenant. He is not bound to give any reason for that desire, whether he wishes to eject the tenant as a troublesome person, as one who denies his title, or for any other [145] reason. It therefore follows, in our opinion, that this suit is one the cognizance of which by a Civil Court is absolutely forbidden by s. 95, the matter of the suit being one in which an application might be made under clause (d) of s. 95 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act. We quite fail to understand why the respondent, having at his disposal the 1898

DEC. 7.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 143=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 213.

1898 summary procedure provided by s. 36 and the following sections of the DEC. 7. Rent Act, should have preferred to take his case into a Civil Court. This — is not a case in which we can proceed under the provisions of s. 206 and APPEL- the subsequent sections of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act. As LATE has been frequently held, these sections contemplate those cases only in CIVIL. which a suit would lie in the Rent Court: but the procedure in the — present case in the Rent Court would be by application and not by suit.
 21 A. 143= It therefore follows that we cannot apply to the proceedings in this case
 18 A.W.N. the sections mentioned above. For the above reasons we allow this (1898) 213. appeal. We set aside the judgment and decree of the lower appellate Court, and we direct that this suit do stand dismissed with costs in all Courts.

Appeal decreed.

21 A. 145=19 A.W.N. (1899) 12.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

FIDA HUSAIN (Defendant) v. MAULA BAKHSH (Plaintiff).^{*}
 [12th December, 1898.]

Execution of a decree—Civil Procedure Code, s. 268—Attachment of debt—Payment of debt attached out of Court.

Where a debt, which had been attached under s. 268 of the Code of Civil Procedure, was paid out of Court to the only person who, had the money due been paid into Court as required by the terms of the said section, would have been entitled to withdraw the said money from Court, and such payment was certified to the Court, it was held that such payment amounted to a sufficient compliance with the requirements of s. 268.

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court.
 Mr. Amiruddin, for the appellant.
 Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

[146] BANERJI, J.—This appeal arises out of proceedings relating to an application for an order absolute for sale under s. 89 of Act No. IV of 1882. Certain property which belonged to the appellant Fida Husain and to other persons was mortgaged by them to one Ulfat Rai in 1886. The same property was subsequently mortgaged in 1887 to Ulfat Rai and Murlidhar, the father of one Atma Rai. The second mortgage fell by partition into the share of Atma Rai, and was assigned by him to the respondent, Maula Bakhsh, so that Maula Bakhsh became the holder of the second mortgage over the property. Before the assignment to Maula Bakhsh, Ulfat Rai brought a suit for sale upon his first mortgage and obtained a decree. It is alleged that he did not make Atma Rai, who, as I have said above, was at that time, jointly with Ulfat Rai, the holder of the second mortgage, a party to that suit. In execution of the decree which Ulfat Rai obtained on his first mortgage, he caused the mortgaged property to be sold by auction, and himself became the purchaser. He then sold the property so purchased to Fida Husain, and for a portion of the amount of the consideration for the sale he took a bond from Fida Husain. Maula Bakhsh brought a suit for sale upon the mortgage of 1887, of which he was the assignee, and in that suit he offered to redeem the first mortgage in favour of Ulfat Rai, the benefit of which had been acquired by Fida Husain by virtue of his purchase from Ulfat Rai. On the 13th of April 1896, a decree was passed in favour of Maula Bakhsh. The decree directed that Maula Bakhsh should pay to Fida Husain or into Court within three months of the date of the decree Rs. 250, the amount due on the first mortgage, and that upon his doing so he, Maula Bakhsh, would be entitled to bring to sale the whole of the mortgaged property for the realization of the said sum of Rs. 250, as also of the amount due upon the mortgage of 1887. After the decree was passed, Ulfat Rai brought a suit against Fida Husain upon the basis of the bond executed in his favour by Fida Husain for a part of the consideration for the sale effected by Ulfat Rai in favour of Fida Husain. In that suit he obtained an order on the 3rd [147] of June 1896 for attachment of the money payable by Maula Bakhsh to Fida Husain under the decree of the 13th of April 1896. This was an order passed, before judgment, under s. 484 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Under s. 486 a prohibitory order in the terms of s. 268 of the Code was issued to and served upon Maula Bakhsh. On the 11th of July 1896, that is, before the expiry of the three months fixed in the decree of the 13th of April 1896, Maula Bakhsh paid into Court Rs. 85-8-0, and informed the Court that he had paid the balance of Rs. 164-8-0 to Ulfat Rai in pursuance of the attachment. I may here observe that before the date last mentioned Ulfat Rai had obtained a decree in the suit brought by him against Fida Husain. On the 12th of November 1896 Maula Bakhsh presented the application which has given rise to this appeal, on the allegation that he had complied with the requirements of the decree passed in his favour, and that, as the amount of that decree had not been paid, he was entitled to an order absolute for sale under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act. The application was opposed by Fida Husain, who contended that the payment of Rs. 164-8-0 to Ulfat Rai was not equivalent to a payment to him, and was in violation of the terms of the decree of the 13th of April 1896. The Court of first instance overruled this contention, but the lower appellate Court allowed it and held that Maula Bakhsh had not performed the obligation which lay on him under the terms of the decree referred to above. That Court, however, for the reasons stated in its judgment, granted Maula Bakhsh an extension of time for payment of Rs. 164-8-0. From the order granting extension Fida Husain has preferred this appeal. Maula Bakhsh has taken objection under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure, contending that there was a sufficient compliance on his part with the decree passed in his favour. After the case for the appellant had been stated, the objection under s. 561 was allowed to be first argued, because if it prevailed it would not be necessary to consider the appeal. In my judgment the objection under s. 561 must be allowed. Under the decree made in [148] favour of Maula Bakhsh he was no doubt liable to pay to Fida Husain or into Court Rs. 250 within three months from the date of the decree. There is no question that he has paid Rs. 85-8-0 out of that amount within the time fixed in the decree. It is also not disputed, and indeed the Courts below have found, that he paid Rs. 164-8-0 to Ulfat Rai within the three months. Now the question is, whether such payment was a payment in compliance with the decree. After the prohibitory order under s. 486 (read with s. 268) of the Code of Civil Procedure had been 1898

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 876 of 1897, from an order of Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghafur, Subordinate Judge of Saharanpur, dated the 13th August 1897, modifying an order of Pandit Mohan Lal, Munsif of Deoband, dated the 11th January 1897.

DEC. 12.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 145 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 12.

1898
DEC. 12.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 145=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 12.

issued to Maula Bakhsh, he was not competent to pay the amount for which the prohibitory order had been issued to Fida Husain. If he had made such payment to Fida Husain he would have been guilty of non-compliance with the order of the Court which issued that prohibitory order. Under s. 268 a debtor, prohibited to pay the debt due by him, might pay the amount of the debt into Court, and such payment would discharge him as effectually as payment to the party entitled to receive the debt. If the sum of Rs. 164-8-0, to which the prohibitory order related, had been paid into the Court which issued the prohibitory order, such payment would undoubtedly have absolved Maula Bakhsh from liability to Fida Husain for payment of the amount. In this case, instead of paying the amount into Court, he paid it to the person who would have been entitled to withdraw it from the Court if it had been paid into Court. The fact of the payment to Ulfat Rai appears to have been certified to the Court, so that although in fact the payment was made to Ulfat Rai, it was in reality a payment which, by reason of the certification of it into Court, was equivalent to a payment into Court within the meaning of s. 268. The lower appellate Court seems to think that payment to a creditor who has obtained an attachment from the Court is the same thing as payment to an ordinary creditor. This view of the Court below is, in my opinion, erroneous. No creditor other than a creditor who had obtained an attachment of a debt due to his debtor could enforce payment of such debt. After the issue of the order of [149] attachment Maula Bakhsh could not have paid the sum of Rs. 164-8-0 to Fida Husain without being called upon by the Court, which had forbidden him to make the payment, to answer for his conduct. The only way in which he could have obtained immunity from liability was by paying the amount mentioned in the attachment order into Court. In order to reap the fruits of the decree obtained by him, he was also bound to make the payment within the three months allowed in the decree, and as he made the payment to the person who, as I have said above, was the only person who could withdraw it from Court, the payment to such person was equivalent to payment into Court, and consequently to a payment made to Fida Husain. That being so, Maula Bakhsh complied with the decree, and was entitled to an order absolute for sale under s. 89. The fact that after the order of the lower appellate Court allowing the objections of Fida Husain, Maula Bakhsh deposited the Rs. 164-8-0 over again, does not preclude him from maintaining his present objection. I allow the objection, and, setting aside the order of the lower appellate Court with costs, restore the order of the Court of first instance.

The appeal must necessarily fail, and I dismiss it with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 149 = 18 A.W.N. (1898) 214.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.*ISHAQ ALI KHAN (Plaintiff) v. CHUNNI AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [12th December, 1898.]Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 85—Mortgage—Non-joinder of parties—Subsequent mortgagee after suit on prior mortgage filed.Held, that s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, does not require the joinder in a suit on a prior mortgage of a subsequent mortgagee whose mortgage was only executed subsequently to the filing of such suit.

IN this case one Moti Singh, who was the owner of a certain share in mauza Muhammadpur Ghiror, mortgaged, on the 12th [150] of September, 1881, one-half of his share in favour of Chunni and Kharagjit. On the 31st of January, 1884, Chunni and Kharagjit brought a suit for sale of the mortgaged property, for interest on their mortgage, against Moti Singh. On the 24th of April, 1884, Moti Singh caused the mortgaged property to be recorded in equal shares in the names of Bhup Singh, his son, and Zabar Kunwar, his wife. Moti Singh died in 1884, and the names of Bhup Singh and Zabar Kunwar were recorded as defendants to the suit of the mortgagees then pending. The mortgagees obtained a decree in that suit on the 15th of May, 1885. Bhup Singh subsequently to the filing of the suit, namely, on various dates between the 15th of July, 1884, and the 2nd of November, 1885, mortgaged a half share of the property, which Moti Singh had caused to be entered in his name in 1884 to Imam Ali Khan, the father of Ishaq Ali Khan. On the 22nd of July 1886, Chunni and Kharagjit filed a second suit for recovery of interest by sale of mortgaged property against Bhup Singh, and obtained a decree on the 5th August, 1886. Neither in this suit nor in the former suit of the 31st of January, 1884, was the subsequent mortgagee Imam Ali Khan made a party. On the 19th of April, 1895, Ishaq Ali Khan (his father, the subsequent mortgagee, having died) brought the present suit against Chunni and Kharagjit, the original mortgagees, Bhup Singh and another person alleged to be in possession of a portion of the mortgaged property, in which he asked for a declaration that unless the defendants Chunni and Kharagjit obtain as against the plaintiff such decrees as they have obtained as against Bhup Singh and Zabar Kunwar (dated the 15th of May, 1885), and against Bhup Singh (dated the 5th of August, 1886), and get the property entered in the name of Zabar Kunwar to be charged, they cannot take out execution of those decrees for sale of the share of the village Muhammadpur Ghiror entered in the revenue papers against the name of Bhup Singh and mortgaged to the plaintiff.

The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri) dismissed the plaintiff's suit in toto.

[151] On appeal by the plaintiff the lower appellate Court (District Judge of Mainpuri) confirmed the decree of the first Court, though upon different grounds. The District Judge found as follows:—"The lower Court has pointed out that appellant's deeds were executed pendente lite and are therefore void as against the first suit. As regards the second * Second Appeal, No. 825 of 1896, from a decree of H. W. Lyle, Esq., District Judge of Mainpuri, dated the 7th July 1896, confirming a decree of Maulvi Muhammad Mazhar Husain, Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri, dated the 23rd December 1895.

1898
DEC. 12.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—

21 A. 149 =
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 214.

1898
DEC. 12.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 149=
18 A.W.N.
(1898) 214.

suit, however, the deeds were prior to its institution, and the lower Court has got out of the difficulty by finding that the deeds were not proved. This reason will not stand. The deeds were never denied, and no issue was framed as to whether they were valid or not. Under the circumstances no proof was adduced with regard to them, and none was necessary. It seems to me, nevertheless, that the deeds are bad in respect to both suits. Both suits are for interest on the same deed, it having been apparently stipulated that interest should be separately sued for. I cannot hold that deeds which were void owing to having been executed while the first suit was pending are valid with regard to a second suit for interest on the same deed but for a subsequent period. One suit must be regarded as a continuation of the other, and appellant's deeds are void with regard to both."

The plaintiff thereupon appealed to the High Court.

JUDGMENT.

The Court (STRACHEY, C.J., and KNOX, J.) allowed the appeal so far as it related to the decree against Bhup Singh, dated the 5th of August, 1886, but dismissed it so far as it related to the decree against Bhup Singh and Zabbar Kunwar of the 15th of May, 1885, observing that it was not necessary for the mortgagees of 1881 to have made Imam Ali Khan a party to their first suit, inasmuch as the earliest of his mortgages was not executed until after that suit was filed.

Decree modified.

21 A. 152=19 A.W.N. (1899) 1.

[152] REVISIONAL CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

ABDUL SADIQ AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. ABDUL AZIZ (Plaintiff).^{*}
[16th December, 1898.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 622—Revision—Discretion of Court in exercising revisional powers—Civil Procedure Code, s. 623 et seqq—Review of judgment.

A Munsif granted a review of judgment on a ground which was no ground in law for granting a review, but his order in review had the effect of making the decree in the suit a right decree instead of a wrong decree. The District Judge allowed an appeal from that order on grounds which, having regard to s. 629 of the Code of Civil Procedure, were not open to him. On an application for revision of the Judge's appellate order it was held that the proper course was to set aside only the District Judge's order and to leave standing the order of the Munsif granting a review of judgment, which order, though wrong in principle, was, it appeared, right in its results.

[F., 9 A.L.J. 348=14 Ind. Cas. 810.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Baldeo Ram Dave, for the applicants.

Pandit Moti Lal Nehru, for the opposite party.

STRACHEY, C.J. (KNOX, J., concurring).—The suit out of which this application has arisen was originally heard by a Munsif, and one of the pleas taken by the defendants was that the suit was barred by limitation.

^{*} Civil Revision No. 37 of 1898.

The Munsif, holding that a period of twelve years' limitation applied, overruled this plea, and on the merits decreed the suit. The defendants subsequently applied to the Munsif for review of judgment on the ground that there had not been brought to the notice of the Court a certain decision of the Full Bench of this Court, according to which a period of six years', and not twelve years', limitation was applicable to the suit. This decision of the Full Bench had been pronounced previously to the passing of the original decree, but, either because it had not then been published, or for some other reason, had not been brought to the notice of the Munsif. The Munsif considered the Full Bench ruling, thought it applicable, reviewed his decree, and dismissed the suit as barred by limitation. [153] In giving his reasons for granting the review the Munsif refers to that portion of s. 623 of the Code of Civil Procedure which speaks of the discovery of new and important matter or evidence, and to the question whether, at the original hearing, the applicant or his pleader knew, or had means of knowing, of the existence of the Full Bench ruling. That portion of s. 623 can have no application. The words "new and important matter or evidence, which after the exercise of due diligence was not within his knowledge, or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed," have never been held to apply to the non-production of a ruling in force when the decree was passed. They refer to evidence or other matter in the nature of evidence, and not to legal authority in existence, but not brought to the Court's notice. Apparently the Munsif himself had misgivings on this point, for he did not rest his decision on this ground alone, but also expressly referred to the other words in s. 623 of the Code, which allow a review of judgment "for any other sufficient reason." Although he does refer to the earlier part of the section about the discovery of new matter, still the real meaning and substance of his judgment on the review is, in our opinion, that by reason of his having been unaware of the Full Bench ruling, his original decision was based on a mistake in law; whether that was a proper ground for review of judgment we need not consider.

The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, not from the decree dismissing the suit, but from the order granting the review. The Judge had no power to entertain an appeal from that order except under s. 629 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The only part of s. 629 which, it has been suggested, would have been applicable in this case is cl. (b), namely, if the admission of the application for review is in contravention of the provisions of s. 626. The only part of s. 626 of which any contravention was suggested was cl. (b). If s. 626, cl. (b), had no application, s. 629, cl. (b), also could not apply. In our opinion s. 626, cl. (b), had no application to the appeal [154] before the Judge. What it says is, in effect, that an application for review on the ground of discovery of new matter or evidence must not be granted without strict proof of the allegation that the applicant was ignorant of the matter or could not have adduced the evidence when the decree or order was passed. But that could no more apply to the discovery of a Full Bench ruling, than could the corresponding words of s. 623 about the discovery of new and important matter or evidence; and hence it was impossible to say that there was any contravention of s. 626, cl. (b), or that the Munsif ought to have put the applicant to strict proof of his allegation that, when the decree was passed, he and his pleader were ignorant of the ruling. Nor does the District Judge express any such view. He does not in his judgment make any reference to s. 626, cl. (b), or discuss

1898
DEC. 16.—
REVI-SIONAL
CIVIL.—
21 A. 152 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 1.

1898
DEC. 16.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CIVIL.
—
21 A. 152 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 1.

the question whether there has been any contravention of it. The only question which he discusses is whether the Munsif was right in holding that the discovery of a High Court ruling was a sufficient ground for review : he comes to the conclusion that the Munsif was wrong in so holding, and he accordingly sets aside the order as passed on insufficient grounds. Whether the Judge's view was correct, is a question upon which we need express no opinion. It is sufficient to say that he overlooked the provisions of s. 629, and that he had no power to set aside the order on the ground that he thought it unreasonable, or on any ground not mentioned in the section.

Now, a Judge who, in contravention of s. 629, entertains an appeal from an order admitting a review undoubtedly acts with material irregularity within the meaning of s. 622 of the Code. But orders for revision under s. 622 are discretionary, and Mr. Moti Lal contends that here we ought not to interfere. He contends that, although the Judge may have acted irregularly in setting aside the Munsif's order, still he was right in his objections to that order, and in holding that if a review might be granted whenever a ruling was overlooked or afterwards discovered, applications for review would be endless. Mr. Moti [155] Lal therefore argued that the result arrived at by the learned Judge was substantially right and ought not to be disturbed in revision. But in deciding whether or not we should interfere with the Judge's irregular order, we must look a little further into the matter and consider what would be the consequences of interfering or not interfering. If we refuse to interfere, the result is that the suit stands decreed. If we interfere, the result is that the suit stands dismissed. The reason why the Munsif ultimately dismissed the suit was that, according to the Full Bench ruling, it was barred by limitation. The Judge does not hold that the Munsif was wrong in this view. It has not been disputed that, assuming the Full Bench ruling to be applicable, the suit was barred. Although the question whether the Full Bench ruling was applicable has not been argued before us, it seems at least probable that it did apply. The Judge appears to assume that it did, but says that it is to the same effect as earlier rulings, and that its discovery was no ground for review. In one of the two memoranda of appeal to the Judge from the two connected orders of the Munsif there was no plea that the ruling was inapplicable. The result of our refusing to interfere with the Judge's order would therefore be that a suit which the Munsif dismissed is barred by limitation, which has not been shown to be within time, and which was probably beyond time, would stand decreed. We allow this application for revision, set aside the order of the Judge, and restore that of the Munsif with costs.

Application allowed.

21 A. 155=19 A.W.N. (1899) 6.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Aikman.*JIT MAL AND OTHERS (Decree-holders) v. JWALA PRASAD (Judgment-debtor).^{*} [21st December, 1898.]*Execution of decree—Limitation—Civil Procedure Code, s. 230—Warrant of arrest—Warrant not exhausted if on one occasion the serving officer is unable to find the judgment-debtor.*1898
DEC. 21.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.21 A. 155=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 6.

The holders of a decree for money, dated the 2nd of December, 1885, after various infructuous applications for execution, applied, on the 4th of August, [156] 1897, for a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor. That application was granted, but the peons sent to arrest the judgment-debtor reported that he had concealed himself, and the Court in consequence struck off the application for execution. On the 29th of November, 1897, the decree-holders again applied for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, but that application also was struck off without the arrest having been made. Against the order striking off this latter application the decree-holders appealed to the High Court, where, on objection made that the decree could no longer be executed, having regard to s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it was held that the warrant of arrest issued on the decree-holders' application of the 4th of August, 1897, still subsisted and ought to be executed. Anwar Ali Khan v. Phul Chand (1) followed.

[F., 6 Ind. Cas. 490=6 P.L.R. 1910=125 P.W.R. 1910; R., 9 Ind. Cas. 240; 27 P.R. 1905=79 P.L.R. 1905; D., 5 Ind. Cas. 815 (816)=20 P.L.R. 1910=22 P.W.R. 1910=17 P.R. 1910; 11 O.C. 57 (59).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Munshi Ratan Chand, for the appellants.

Babu Satish Chandar Banerji, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is an appeal on behalf of certain decree-holders, who, on the 2nd of December, 1885, got a money decree against the respondent, Jwala Prasad, for a sum of Rs. 8,223. The lower Court rejected the application filed on the 29th of November, 1897, for the arrest of the judgment-debtor. That application was presented within twelve years from the date of the decree. The decree-holders come here in appeal. The history of the case set forth by the lower Court in its finding of the 28th of September, 1898, is a melancholy and forcible illustration of the truth of the saying that a successful suitor's troubles only begin when he has obtained his decree. The decree, as stated above, was passed in December, 1885. On the 9th January, 1886, the unfortunate decree-holders began their attempts to recover the money which had been found due to them. From that time onwards they have made one attempt after another to have the decree executed, with the result that only an insignificant portion of the decretal amount has been realized, and that the sum still due under the decree, with interest thereon, amounts to upwards of Rs. 10,000. The judgment-debtor has by one device or another succeeded in evading up to now payment of the money which was found due from him. That the satisfaction of the judgment-[157] debt was delayed by the poverty of the judgment-debtor, we cannot believe. The history of what has taken place during the past twelve

* First Appeal, No. 85 of 1898, from an order of Maulvi Ahmad Ali Khan, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 15th January 1898.

(1) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 137.

1898
DEC. 21.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 155 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 6.

years is sufficient to show that it is not from want of means that he has not paid his debts. He has blocked the execution by transfers made in the names of his sons and son-in-law. Property, which was on the point of being attached, was removed. When warrants of arrest were issued, the ministerial officers of the Court sent to execute the warrants seem to have been seized with sudden blindness and incapacity to discover the whereabouts of this judgment-debtor. On one occasion only is he said to have been found, and then, according to the report, he managed, with the help of his friends, to make his escape from the custody of the peons. On the 4th of August, 1897, the decree-holders applied for and obtained an order of the Court for the judgment-debtor's arrest. As usual the peon reported that the judgment-debtor had concealed himself; and thereupon the Court lost no time in striking off the case. What impresses us in these proceedings is the singular want of sympathy exhibited by the Court towards the decree-holders. We should have thought that in a case like this the lower Court would have taken some pains to see that its order was carried out, and not have hastened to strike off the case on the mere report of its peons that the judgment-debtor had concealed himself. The last application was made on the 29th of November, 1897. In this also the decree-holders asked that the judgment-debtor should be arrested. The judgment-debtor filed an objection. That objection was allowed by the Court on grounds which appear to us, looking to the past history of the case, to be quite inadequate, and the case was struck off on the 20th February, 1898. When the appeal was last before us, a difficulty presented itself to us, arising out of the wording of s. 230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, namely, that even if we were of opinion that the Court was wrong in striking off the application of the 29th of November, 1897, it would be impossible to grant it now, looking to the fact that upwards of twelve years has elapsed since the date of the decree sought to be enforced and that previous applications [158] for execution have been granted. The learned vakil for the appellants contended, with reference to this difficulty, that his clients were entitled to the benefit of the proviso contained in the last paragraph of the section just quoted, namely, that notwithstanding the lapse of twelve years, they were still entitled to execute their decree owing to the fact that previous applications for execution had been defeated by the judgment-debtor through fraud or force. In order to enable us to dispose of this plea, we asked the lower Court for a finding on the issue as to whether execution had been prevented by the fraud or force of the judgment-debtor. The return to this order of reference is, that no fraud or force on the judgment-debtor's part, preventing the execution of the decree, has been established. To this finding objections have been taken. In the view, however, which we now take of the case, we deem it unnecessary to express any opinion whether or not the finding is warranted by the evidence. We have the fact that in August, 1897, the Court issued an order that the judgment-debtor should be arrested, and that order has not yet been carried out. With reference to this we may quote the following passage from a recent judgment of this Court in the case of Anwar Ali Khan v. Phul Chand (1):—"The mere fact that a warrant issued and came back unexecuted is not, in our opinion, sufficient evidence of the proceeding for execution in pursuance of which it issued being exhausted and thereby determined." With this view we are in entire accord. The learned vakil for the respondent argues that the application of the 29th of November, 1897, is in terms a fresh application under s. 235 of the Code of Civil Procedure. We do not think that this is material. In our judgment that application is merely ancillary to the previous application. To yield to the contention of the learned vakil for the respondent, we should have to hold that the order passed on the application of August, 1897, is exhausted by the return of the warrant, stating that the peons had been unable to find the judgment-debtor. [159] That is a position which, as stated above, cannot, in our opinion, be maintained. For the above reasons we allow the appeal with costs, and, setting aside the order of the lower Court, we direct the execution to proceed. We must, in conclusion, express a hope that the Judge of the lower Court will devote his personal and particular attention to the execution of this decree, and will see that trustworthy men are sent to carry into effect the order for arrest.

Appeal decreed.

21 A. 159 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 5.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ZAKIR HUSAIN.* [21st December, 1898.]

Act No. XLV of 1860 (Indian Penal Code), ss. 192 and 193—Fabricating false evidence — False entry made by a Police officer in a special diary.

Held that a Police officer who made a false entry in the special diary relating to a case which was being investigated by him could not be convicted thereof of the offence of fabricating false evidence as defined in s. 192 of the Indian Penal Code, inasmuch as the document in which the alleged false entry was made was not one which was admissible in evidence. Empress v. Gauri Shankar (1) and Keilasum Putter (2), referred to.

[R., P.L.R. (1900) 63 (66) (Cr).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the order of the Court.

Alston, for the applicant.

The Officiating Government Advocate (Ryves), for the Crown.

ORDER.

BANERJI, J.—The applicant, Zakir Husain, has been convicted, under s. 193 of the Indian Penal Code, upon the two following charges:—

First, that on or about the 30th July 1898, he fabricated the special diary of July 29th, in the case of Queen-Empress v. Balla and others, so as to make it appear that the list of stolen property was furnished on that date; and, secondly, that [160] on or about the 4th of August, in the Court of the District Magistrate, in the same case, he stated that the list of stolen property was furnished before the search and arrest of the accused.

The conviction and sentence have been affirmed by the learned Sessions Judge on appeal. It is urged that the conviction on each of the two charges is bad in law. In my opinion the contention is valid.

* Criminal Revision No. 600 of 1898.

(1) 6 A. 42.

(2) 5 M.H.C.R. 373.

1898
DEC. 21.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
21 A 159=
19 A.W.N
(1899) 5.

The facts found are these :—The house of one Ranjit was broken into by burglars, who carried away some of his property. He made a report of the burglary at the Etah Police Station. The applicant, who was the second officer at that station, suspected Balla and others, and searched their houses. He discovered certain property, and after having done so, caused Ranjit to give him a list of the property stolen from his house, so as to make it correspond with the articles found in the houses of Balla and others. This was on the morning of the 30th July 1893 ; but in his special diary of the previous day, the 29th, he entered a list of stolen property as given to him on that date before the search. It is in respect of this entry in the special diary that the applicant has been held guilty of having fabricated false evidence as defined in s. 192 of the Indian Penal Code.

In my opinion the conviction for that offence cannot be maintained. In order to constitute the offence of fabricating false evidence, three things must exist :—First, that the entry or document in question is false ; second, that the false entry or document was made with the intention that it may appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding, or in a proceeding taken by law before a public servant as such, or before an arbitrator ; and, third, that so appearing in evidence it may cause any person who in such proceeding is to form an opinion upon the evidence to entertain an erroneous opinion upon a material point. Where any of these elements is wanting, the offence is not that of fabricating false evidence. As two of the elements of the offence are that [161] the false document is intended to appear in evidence, and that when it so appears in evidence it should cause a judicial officer, or other public servant, or an arbitrator, to form an erroneous opinion upon a material point, it is clear that the document must be capable of being used in evidence. The offence of fabricating false evidence cannot therefore be committed in respect of a document which is not admissible in evidence. This view is supported by the ruling of this Court in Empress v. Gauri Shankar (1) and that of the Madras High Court in Keilasum Putter (2) to which the learned counsel for the applicant has drawn my attention. The document which the applicant, Zakir Husain, is said to have fabricated is a Police special diary, which under s. 172 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, is not evidence. It was held by a Full Bench of this Court in Queen-Empress v. Mannu (3) that "entries in the special diary cannot by themselves be taken as evidence of any date, fact or statement therein contained." The diary may, it is true, be used by a Police officer for the purpose of refreshing his memory, or it may be used for the purpose of contradicting the Police officer who made the entries which it contains ; but the entries by themselves are not evidence, and therefore a special diary is not a document which is capable of being used in evidence. The learned Sessions Judge is wrong in holding that the entry in the diary could be referred to in support of the allegation that the list of the stolen property was produced before the discovery of the property. The entry could not be used as corroborative evidence, and this is conceded by the learned Government Advocate. He contends that it is the intention of the accused which is the gravamen of the charge, but he loses sight of the fact that not only must the accused intend that the document may appear in evidence, but the document must be such as may appear in evidence before the officer who is to form an opinion upon the evidence. [162] A document which is inadmissible in evidence can never be produced for the purpose of enabling an officer to arrive at any conclusion, erroneous or otherwise, upon a relevant point. A special diary, which can never be used as evidence, cannot be produced for the purpose mentioned above, and therefore the offence of fabricating false evidence cannot be committed in respect of it. Whether the accused in this case committed the offence punishable under s. 218 of the Indian Penal Code, or any other offence, it is unnecessary at present to decide. But I am of opinion that his conviction for the offence of fabricating false evidence cannot be sustained.

(1) 6 A. 42.

(2) 5 M. H. C. R. 373.

(3) 19 A. 390.

The conviction of the accused upon the second charge, namely, that of giving false evidence, is equally unsustainable. The charge itself as drawn is very defective. It does not set out the particular statement in respect of which the accused is charged with perjury. It only states the substance of what the accused is said to have stated in his deposition. As the accused pleaded not guilty to the charge, it was the duty of the prosecution to prove the particular statement which the accused was charged with having made falsely. For this purpose the deposition itself ought to have been put in evidence and formally proved. This was not done in this case, and there is absolutely no evidence on the record to prove that the accused made any statement on the 4th of August, and, if he made any, what that statement was. I am unable to follow the observation of the learned Sessions Judge that the "Court could take judicial notice" of the deposition, and that the accused "did not, and could not, deny having made it." When the accused pleaded not guilty he did deny everything. If by the judicial notice to which the learned Judge referred he meant the provisions of s. 80 of the Indian Evidence Act, he was clearly in error. Even if the alleged deposition of the 4th of August 1898 had been produced in evidence, it would not have been admissible against the accused unless it was proved that it was he who gave the deposition and made the statement [163] which was the subject of the charge. The mere production of the deposition would not, under s. 80, have made it admissible. As the deposition was not produced and the identity of the accused with the person who gave the deposition was not proved, the charge of giving false evidence was not established. I may observe that the learned Government Advocate very properly abandoned this part of the case against the applicant.

The result is, that the application is allowed, the conviction and sentence are set aside, and the applicant is acquitted of the offences with which he was charged. I direct that he be at once released.

The learned Government Advocate has asked me to order the trial of the applicant for the offence punishable under s. 218 of the Indian Penal Code. I do not deem it desirable to make any such order at present; but I may observe that this decision will not preclude the Magistrate of the District from taking any proceedings justified by law against the accused for any other offence with which the accused may be lawfully charged.

1898
DEC. 21.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 159 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 5.

1898

DEC. 22.

MISCEL-LANEOUS
CIVIL.

21 A. 163 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 4.

MISCELLANEOUS CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

KALIAN MAL (Plaintiff) v. RAM KISHEN AND OTHERS
(Defendants.)* [22nd December, 1898.]

21 A. 163 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 4.

Regulation No. 1 of 1877 (Ajmere Courts), ss. 18 et seqq.—Reference by Commissioner of Ajmere—Powers of High Court—Jurisdiction.

Held that where a point of law or a question as to the construction of a document is referred to the High Court by an order purporting to be made under s. 18 of the Ajmere Courts Regulation, the High Court cannot consider whether the point referred arises in the case in which the reference before it has been made or not; but its functions are limited to pronouncing an opinion on any point which may be so referred to it.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the order of the Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Mr. W. K. Porter and Babu Devendro Nath Ohdedar, for the opposite party.

ORDER.

[164] BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—This matter comes before us upon a reference by the Commissioner and District Judge of Ajmere under the provisions of s. 18 of Regulation No. I of 1877. By that Regulation the Commissioner is empowered to ask from this Court a ruling upon a question of law, or, amongst other things, upon the construction of any document. The point at issue is a narrow one. The plaintiff in the suit is the representative of a mortgagor who mortgaged with possession a house and its appurtenances in suit in 1828. Several documents purporting to be sub-mortgages with possession were executed. In the series of mortgagees and sub-mortgagees and assignees the defendants in the suit are the last. Their names are Ram Kishen and Kishori Mal. To the mortgagor's suit for redemption they set up the protection of art. 134, sch. II of Act No. XV of 1877. It was contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the case fell within the operation, not of art. 134, but of the general rule provided for by art. 148 of the same Act. Article 134 is in the following words:—"To recover possession of immoveable property conveyed or bequeathed in trust, or mortgaged, and afterwards purchased from the trustee or mortgagee for a valuable consideration." The question put to this Court is, whether the transfer made to the present defendants by their predecessor in title, Raj Mal, as evidenced by the deed dated the 9th of April, 1883, was a sale of proprietary rights, or only an assignment of the limited rights held by the vendor in the property transferred. It is to be observed that the vendees set up a protection limiting the mortgagor's right of suit to 12 years in place of the period provided by art. 148, which is 60 years. It is manifest, and there is abundant authority for the proposition, that it is incumbent upon them to bring themselves strictly within the provision of art. 134. They must first of all show that the document which confers title upon them is one which purports to convey an absolute proprietary right, and they must then show that an absolute proprietary right, and nothing less is what they believed that they were buying. If they fail to establish either of these conditions, they fail to bring themselves within the [165] protection of art. 134. We have had the sale deed translated and have heard arguments upon its terms, and we are unable to discern in that document any single provision or any single expression which would be applicable only to a sale of full proprietary interest. The vendor nowhere asserts that he himself possesses such full proprietary rights. Indeed there are provisions in the document granting in express words the right to inhabit, the right to let to tenants, and the right to alienate, which would be superfluous if the preceding provisions of the document had conveyed an absolute title in full. We are satisfied then that the defendants cannot claim the benefit of art. 134.

* Miscellaneous No. 37 of 1898.

We have been invited by Mr. Porter to consider the question whether the matter upon which our ruling is sought did really arise in the case. We are of opinion that we should be exceeding our functions if we entered upon such an inquiry. The provisions of the Regulation are, that a certain judicial officer may ask from us a ruling on a specific point or points of law arising out of an appeal which has been heard by him and upon which he has expressed his own opinion. We have no roving commission to enter upon the merits of the case in any other respect.

Our answer to the question put to us is, that the transfer made by Raj Mal, dated the 9th of April 1883, was not a sale of proprietary rights, and can therefore only have been an assignment of the more limited rights possessed by the vendor as sub-mortgagee. The costs of this hearing will be costs in the appeal.

21 A. 165 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 8.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Aikman.

ANWARI BEGAM (Defendant) v. NIZAM-UD-DIN SHAH (Plaintiff).^{*}
[23rd December, 1898.]

Muhammadan Law—Gift—Possession—Gift of property attached by the Collector for arrears of revenue—Act No. XIX of 1873 (N.W.P. Land Revenue Act), s. 154.

Held that it was possible to make a gift, which should be valid under the Muhammadan law, of property which had been attached by the Collector for [166] arrears of revenue under s. 154 of Act No. XIX of 1873. All that was necessary to a valid gift was that the donor should transfer possession of such interest as he had at the time of the gift: it was not necessary that he should transfer possession of the corpus of the property. Mullick Abdool Guffoor v. Muleka (1), Mahomed Buksh Khan v. Hussein Bibi (2), Rahim Bakhsh v. Muhammad Hasan (3), and Mohinudin v. Manchershah (4) referred to.

[R., 13 Bom. L.R. 717 (736) = 12 Ind. Cas. 225; 8 Ind. Cas. 717 (718); D., 36 P.L.R. 1902.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Messrs. T. Conlan and S. Amiruddin and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Mr. Abdul Majid and Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the respondent.

^{*} First Appeal, No. 149 of 1896, from an order of Syed Siraj-ud-din, Subordinate Judge of Agra, dated the 5th February 1896.

(1) 10 C. 1112.

(2) 15 C. 684.

(3) 11 A. 1.

(4) 6 B. 650.

1898

JUDGMENT.

DEC. 23.

APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.21 A. 165 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 8.

BLAIR and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is an appeal arising out of a suit brought by Nizam-ud-din, a minor, through his mother and certified guardian, to set aside a deed of gift which was executed by Ghulam Jilani, the grandfather of the minor, in favour of the appellant Anwar Begam, daughter of Ghulam Jilani, and to recover possession of one-half of the property covered by the deed, of which, it is said, the donee assumed possession on Ghulam Jilani's death. Mesne profits are also claimed. Two transferees of separate portions of the property from the donee are made defendants to the suit. One of these, Behari Lal, who purchased a portion of the property from Anwari Begam, has filed a separate appeal. The other transferee defendant was a mortgagee of another part of the property and has not appealed.

* * * * *

The deed, which it was sought to set aside, was executed by Ghulam Jilani on the 21st of October, 1891, and was registered by him at the office of the Sub-Registrar of Agra on the following day. The deed is printed at page 18 of the appellant's book. In it the executant sets forth that he is the absolute owner of certain property detailed in the deed, situated in the city of Agra and in certain villages of the Agra district; that "he is about seventy years of age and has now become feeble and weak, and [167] that owing to the death of his three grown-up sons he has become much dejected, and that there is no certainty of this precarious life." The deed goes on:—"Therefore I have of my free will and without any coercion or compulsion, while in a sound state of body and mind, made a gift of the whole of my property detailed below to my daughter, Anwari Begam, and put the donee in possession of the whole of the aforesaid property. I have removed and severed my possession and proprietary connection from the said property." The deed goes on to provide that the donee shall pay the executant one hundred and twenty rupees annually for his maintenance, either in monthly or half-yearly instalments as may be convenient to the parties. Failing payment of this annual amount the donor is empowered to recover it through the Court. The property conveyed by the deed consists of a share in the village of Basaiya, in the Agra district, a share in the village of Pingri, in the Muttra district, and certain house property in the city of Agra. As stated above, the deed was executed on the 21st of October, 1891. The donor died on the 31st of August, 1892, that is upwards of ten months after the execution of the deed. Ghulam Jilani's three sons had died in their father's lifetime. Only one of them had left issue, namely, the present plaintiff. It is admitted that, failing the deed of gift, Ghulam Jilani's property would on his death have been divided equally between his grandson, the plaintiff, and his daughter, the defendant. The learned Subordinate Judge has decreed the plaintiff's claim upon grounds both of fact and law, which are impugned in this appeal. The argument urged upon us on behalf of the appellant divides itself into two main branches. The first disputes the conclusions of fact arrived at by the learned Subordinate Judge, that the donor was not of "disposing mind" at the date of executing the deed, and that he executed it under "undue influence." The second branch of the argument is a mixed one of fact and law. The Subordinate Judge has found that, as a matter of fact, possession had not in the lifetime of the donor been given to, and accepted [168] by, Anwari Begam of the properties purporting to be conveyed to her in the deed of gift.

[After discussing the first of the contentions mentioned above and coming to the conclusion that there was no evidence of mental incapacity or undue influence, the judgment thus continued :—]

We come now to the second branch of the argument which impeaches the finding of the Subordinate Judge upon the question whether, in relation to the several properties purporting to be given by the deed, possession had or had not, in fact and law, been given to the donee. The property conveyed by the deed of gift consisted in the first place of shares in two villages, namely, Pingri in the Muttra district and Basaiya, in the Agra district. The property in the village of Pingri was, prior to and at the date of the deed of gift, and, for all we know, during the remainder of the lifetime of the donor held under attachment by the Collector of the district for arrears of revenue under s. 154 of Act No. XIX of 1873. Upon that ground it was contended that the donor had himself no possession of this property, and was therefore, according to Muhammadan law, incapable of making a valid gift of it. The share in Pingri being thus in the hands of the Collector it was possible and legal for him, if the arrears had not up to that time been cleared by the usufruct, to retain possession of it for the maximum period of five years, from the 1st of July next after the attachment—vide s. 156 of Act No. XIX of 1873. It is clear that, although the donor had not actual possession, the ownership of the village had not passed away from him. It was open to him at any period to pay off the arrears and regain absolute possession of the property, and in any case he could not be kept out of possession for a longer period than five years. It was strenuously argued by the learned counsel for the respondent that under the Muhammadan law a gift could not be made of a share in a village which was the subject of such attachment. The decision of this point brings us to the consideration of the question, what property can form the subject of a gift according to [169] Muhammadan law? In Grady's Hamilton's Hedaya, a work of considerable, but not infallible, authority on Muhammadan law, we find, at page 482 of the edition of 1870, the following definition under the title of hiba or gift :—" Hiba in its literal sense signifies the donation of a thing from which the donee may derive a benefit. In the language of the law it means a transfer of property made immediately and without any exchange." Again, in Baillie's Digest of Muhammadan Law, second edition, page 515, gift is defined as "the conferring of a right of property in something specific without any exchange." It is to be noted here that the word property is used by these two authorities without any limitation and is conterminous with what, according to the definition which is given of hiba in its literal sense, may form the subject of a gift, namely, something from which the donee may derive a benefit. There is nothing, therefore, in that definition to show that a Muhammadan cannot make a valid donation of a reversionary right. In Volume I of Ameer Ali's Muhammadan Law, second edition, page 58, it is said by that learned writer that "anything over which the dominion or the right of property may be exercised, or anything which can be reduced to possession, or which exists as a specific entity, or as an enforceable right, or anything in fact which comes within the meaning of the word mal, may form the subject of a gift." It was admitted in argument that property can, under the Muhammadan law, be validly conferred by gift, though it be not in the actual, or what is known as khas, possession of the donor, as, for instance, a share in a village in the occupation of tenants or held in farm by a lessee. It was not, however, admitted that property in the possession

1898
DEC. 23.

—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

—
21 A. 165 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 8.

1898
DEC. 23.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 165=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 8.

of a usufructuary mortgagee was capable of such donation. We fail entirely to understand how any distinction can be drawn between the case of a lessee and of a usufructuary mortgagee. It is equally difficult to detect any legal principle upon which a right to property held under attachment by the Collector differs from a right to property held by a lessee or usufructuary mortgagee.

[170] From page 31 of Baillie's Digest it appears that a valid gift may be made of a debt in favour of a person other than the debtor. In the case of Mullick Abdool Guffoor v. Muleka (1), a gift of malikana rights, i.e., the right to receive an annual allowance, was upheld. In the case of Mahomed Buksh Khan v. Hosseini Bibi (2) the Privy Council upheld a gift of property which was not at the time of the gift in the donor's possession. It was held in that case that as the donor "had done all that she could to perfect a complete gift which was attended with complete publicity, and as the donee had afterwards obtained possession, the fact that the donor had been out of possession and therefore had not delivered possession did not of itself invalidate the gift in favour of the respondent." There is a decision of the Bombay High Court in the case of Mohinudin v. Manchershah (3), in which two Judges held that the owner of property which was in the possession of a mortgagee could not, under the Muhammadan law, make a gift of it. Kembell, J., dissented from this view. With reference to this case it was remarked by Mahmood, J., in the case of Rahim Baksh v. Muhammad Hasan (4):—"I may respectfully say that it probably carries the rule as to seisin too far." Mr. Ameer Ali, at page 61 of the aforesaid volume, says, with reference to the case of Mohinudin v. Manchershah:—"The view taken by the majority of the Judges is founded upon an erroneous impression of Hanafi law, under which seisin is requisite for hypothecation. According to the correct view of the Hanafi doctrine on the subject, there is nothing to preclude the mortgagor from granting his equity of redemption to another."

There is no doubt that the principle of Muhammadan law is that possession is necessary to make a good gift; but the question is, possession of what? If a donor does not transfer to the donee, so far as he can, all the possession which he can transfer, the gift is not a good one. As we have said above, there is, in our [171] judgment, nothing in the Muhammadan law to prevent the gift of a right to property. The donor must, so far as it is possible for him, transfer to the donee that which he gives, namely, such rights as he himself has; but this does not imply that where a right to property forms the subject of a gift, the gift will be invalid unless the donor transfers, what he himself does not possess, namely, the corpus of the property. He must evidence the reality of the gift by divesting himself, so far as he can, of the whole of what he gives. Now as to the village Pingri, we find that within a fortnight after the gift the donor went to Muttra, in which district the village of Pingri is situated, and stated on oath before the Assistant Collector as follows:—"I have transferred my share in the village Pingri to Musammam Anwari Begam, under a deed of gift dated the 21st of October, 1891, and have put her in possession of the said property like myself. I wish that by removal of the name of me, the donor, the name of the donee may be entered in the Government papers." The usual proclamation and inquiry followed, and it is admitted that in January, 1892, the donor's name was removed

(1) 10 C. 1112.

(2) 15 C. 684.

(3) 6 B. 650.

(4) 11 A. 1 (10).

and the donee's name entered in the Government records as proprietor of the share in Pingri. The donor could not give actual possession of the share, as it was at the time held under attachment by the Collector. But it appears to us that, so far as he could, he took the steps necessary to put Anwari Begam in his shoes, and she, in point of fact, took his place.

We now come to consider the case as it relates to the giving of possession of the share in the village Basaiya. The learned counsel for the respondent laid stress upon the fact that proceedings were not taken to obtain mutation of names in respect of this share until the 14th of April, 1892. The fact, however, remains that those proceedings were taken at the instance of the donor, and in order expressly to give effect to his gift, and were completed in his lifetime. We consider that where possession is transferred by a donor to a donee in pursuance of the deed of gift previously executed, the provisions of the Muhammadan law are [172] satisfied and delay is immaterial. The delay which took place was explained by the learned counsel for the appellant as to some extent referable to the fact that the deed of gift had been filed in the Muttra proceedings which did not terminate until January 1892, and there was consequently a delay in getting the document from that district for the initiation of proceedings in relation to the village in the Agra district. It is not to be forgotten that the decision of the Revenue Court in mutation proceedings is based upon a transfer of possession effected before mutation takes place. Upon the weight to be attached to the decision of the Revenue Courts in such proceedings, the following observations of the Privy Council in the case of Muhammad Mumtaz Ahmad v. Zubaida Jan (1), may be quoted:—"But the order for mutation is important as showing that no objection was made to the mutation, and that the report of the patwari, made during the lifetime of Zahur, as to the execution of the deed of gift and of the transfer of possession under it, which had been adopted by the tahsildar, was also adopted and acted upon by the Deputy Collector."

We will now consider the documentary evidence relied on by the plaintiff as showing that, notwithstanding the deed of gift and the assertions contained in it as to the donor having put the donee in possession of the property, the donor himself continued in possession, exercising all the rights of ownership. In the first place copies are filed of plaints and decrees in suits brought by Ghulam Jilani against tenants in the village of Basaiya for arrears of rent. All these plaints were filed on the 1st of February, 1892, and were for the recovery of the arrears of rent for the kharif instalment of the year 1299 F. In them the cause of action is described as arising on dates ranging from the first to the 10th of November, that is, by far the major portion of the rent had accrued before the date of execution of the deed of gift. We note also that in all the plaints Ghulam Jilani describes himself, not as zamindar but as lambardar, and we have no [173] information as to the date upon which he ceased to be lambardar. Another circumstance is, that all these suits were instituted before the mutation of names had been made, at a time when Ghulam Jilani's name still appeared in the revenue record. The same observation applies to certain ejectment proceedings taken by Ghulam Jilani against tenants in Basaiya. In this connection we may quote another passage from the judgment of their Lordships

1898
DEC. 23.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 165 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 8.

(1) 11 A. 460 (477).

1898
DEC. 23.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 165=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 8.

of the Privy Council in the case of Muhammad Mumtaz Ahmad v. Zubaida Jan, referred to above, most of the incidents of which bear a remarkable resemblance to those of the case now before us. At page 477 of the judgment their Lordships say:—"The reasons of the Subordinate Judge in support of his finding that the donee died before she obtained possession are weak and unavailing. First, he relies upon five decrees in suits brought in the name of Himayat Fatima for rent which accrued after the date of the deed of gift, and also upon one payment of revenue made in her name on the 26th November 1879, but the suits were commenced and the revenue paid before the mutation of names in the Collector's office, at a time when actions for rent and payment of revenue would in all probability be brought and made in the name of the person entered as the proprietor in the Collector's book." In this case also two receipts for revenue paid in the name of Ghulam Jilani are relied on. One of these for Rs. 200 is dated the 4th of May, 1892. The sum purports to have been received from Ghulam Jilani as lambardar and on account of the rabi instalment of 1291F. At the time of that payment Ghulam Jilani's name stood in the Government books as the proprietor of the share and also as lambardar. The second receipt is dated the 18th of July, 1892, and is for Rs. 24-14-3. The money purports to have been received from Ghulam Jilani, lambardar, on account of revenue; miscellaneous items. At the date of this payment mutation proceedings had terminated, Auwari Begam's name having been substituted for Ghulam Jilani's on the 23rd of June 1892; but the receipt does not show on account of what instalment the money was paid, and from the amount of the payment and its date we have little [174] doubt that it was on account of a balance due in respect of some instalment previous to the mutation of names.

Applying the criticisms of the Privy Council in the above case, we think that the above evidence does not negative the abandonment by the donor to the donee of his possession in the village of Basaiya. As to the positive evidence to prove the donee's possession of the above share in the lifetime of the donor, we attach great weight to entries in the diary of a deceased patwari, produced by his successor, one of which is dated the 28th of June, 1892. These show that the agent of the donee was on her behalf exercising proprietary rights in the village prior to the decease of the donor.

The above entries strongly corroborate the genuineness of certain leases granted by the donee's agent, on which doubts have been thrown—it appears to us on insufficient grounds—by the lower Court. We have examined these documents and are unable to agree with the opinion expressed by the learned Subordinate Judge regarding them. We find that transfer of possession of the share in Basaiya did take place in the donor's lifetime.

The third property, the subject of the deed of gift, is the house property in the city of Agra. It is contended on behalf of the respondent that a part of the property purporting to be conveyed by the deed of gift had been the subject of a suit brought by Ghulam Jilani upon the 19th of April, 1892, in which he claimed to be the owner in possession of the property sued for. We have examined all details and descriptions by metes and bounds, and a map of the house property in question, and the respondent has failed to satisfy us as to the identity of the property sued for in the plaint above mentioned with any part of the property covered by the deed of gift. A tenant of this property was called as a witness and a number of endorsements upon the back of the lease to this tenant, purporting to be acknowledgments of receipts by the lessor of rent from him, were relied on. It is contended, and is no doubt true, that the oral statements made by the witness do not correspond therewith in relation to the amounts [175] due and payable by him in respect of this house property. We think there is possibly an explanation of the discrepancy, but we find it unnecessary to arrive at a conclusion upon that matter. In our opinion, if the receipts for rent had been forgeries or interpolations for the purposes of this case, they would have purported to be signed by some person on behalf of the lessor. We are also satisfied that if the story of the witness had been a concocted story, it would have been made to coincide accurately with the documentary evidence in possession of the party who called him. We therefore find that the gift of the house property is not invalid for lack of possession by the appellant here. The result is that the appeal is allowed, the decree of the lower Court is set aside, and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed with costs. The appellant will have her costs of this appeal.

Appeal decreed.

21 A 175 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 14.

APPELLATE CRIMINAL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SONEJU AND OTHERS.* [3rd January, 1899.]

Criminal Procedure Code, s. 288—Admissibility of evidence—Statement of approver made before committing Magistrate and afterwards retracted in the Court of Session.

Pardon was tendered by a Magistrate to one of several persons who were being tried before him for dacoity. The pardon was accepted, and the person to whom it was tendered made a statement as a witness before the Magistrate. The case having been committed to the Court of Session, the approver in that Court totally repudiated his statement made before the Magistrate. Held that this repudiation did not prevent the Sessions Court from considering the evidence of the approver under the provisions of s. 288 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

[R., 2 L.B.R. 214 = 1 Cr. L.J. 483.]

IN this case twenty persons were committed for trial to the Court of the Sessions Judge of Jhansi charged with dacoity under s. 395 of the Indian Penal Code. Out of these, twelve were convicted, of whom two were sentenced to transportation for life, and the remainder to rigorous imprisonment for ten years.

[176] In the course of the inquiry preceding the Sessions trial one of the accused, Jujhar Singh, was offered a pardon by the committing Magistrate. He accepted the offer, and made a statement at considerable length, naming all the accused, and giving a minute account of the manner in which the dacoity was carried out. This statement was repeated a few days later. In the Court of Session, however, Jujhar Singh absolutely denied his previous statements. He asserted that he had been induced to make them by torture practised upon him by the Police, and that even while he was in the midst of making his second statement before the committing Magistrate, a Police officer had taken him outside the Court-room and threatened him with a renewal of the treatment to which he had been formerly subjected.

* Criminal Appeal, No. 1059 of 1898.

1898
DEC. 23.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 165 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 8.

1899
JAN. 3.
—
APPEL-
LATE CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 175 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 14.

Concerning the evidence of this witness the Sessions Judge recorded the following opinion :—“ Although, however, the above testimony corroborates the statements made by Jujhar Singh and the confessions made by Mazbut Singh and Jaggat Singh in the committing Magistrate's Court, yet I am afraid that the former statements cannot be used as evidence against the accused in this Court. The ruling in Queen-Empress v. Nagu (1) very clearly lays down that where, in the Sessions Court, a person to whom a pardon has been tendered in the committing Court, in consequence of which he made a full confession implicating himself and another person of murder, retracts and disavows that confession, the latter is no evidence in the trial. Straight, J., in Empress v. Nazzara (2) says that he entertains the gravest doubts whether s. 288 of the Criminal Procedure Code was ever intended to apply to the case of an approver who has made a deposition before the Magistrate, but in the Sessions Court withdraws it in toto upon the allegation that it was not a voluntary but an enforced statement. In the light of those rulings I am unable to take upon myself the responsibility of admitting in evidence, under s. 288 of the Criminal [177] Procedure Code, the depositions made by Jujhar Singh in the preliminary inquiry, whatever my own opinion may be of their truth.”

On appeal from the convictions under s. 395 of the Indian Penal Code the question of the admissibility of the statement of the accomplice Jujhar was discussed.

The Officiating Government Advocate (Mr. A. E. Ryves), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

The Court (STRACHEY, C. J., and KNOX, J.) held that there was nothing in the previous rulings of the Court which would make inadmissible, under s. 288 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the statement of the approver made before the Magistrate.

21 A. 177 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 15.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. LALIT TIWARI AND OTHERS.* [4th January, 1899.]

Rules of Court of the 18th January 1898, rule 83—Finality of judgment or order of the High Court—Judgment or order not complete until sealed.

Held that a judgment or order of the High Court is not complete until it is sealed in accordance with rule 83 of the Rules of Court of the 18th January 1898, and up to that time may be altered by the Judge or Judges concerned therewith without any formal procedure by way of review of judgment being taken.

[F., 27 A. 92 (94) = A.W.N. (1904) 195 ; Rel., 38 C. 828 = 13 Cr. L.J. 120 = 13 Ind. Cas. 776 ; D., 10 C.L.J. 80 (81) = 3 Ind. Cas. 393.]

A reference asking for an enhancement of sentence being before a Judge of the High Court, the Judge wrote an order declining to interfere, and signed and dated it. Subsequently, on the same day, the Judge reconsidered that order and erased it, substituting therefor an order calling upon certain convicts to show cause why the sentences passed upon them should not be enhanced. When the case came up for disposal

* Criminal Reference, No. 656 of 1898.

(1) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 184.

(2) (1881) 2 Leg. Rem. 170.

on the return of the notice to show cause, Mr. Amiruddin, for the persons called upon, contended that the Judge had no power to change the order which had been originally written and signed by him, except on [178] application for review of such order.

JUDGMENT.

On this point the Court (STRACHEY, C. J., and KNOX, J.) held that, having regard to the rules of the Court, a judgment was not complete until it was sealed, and that until a judgment was sealed it might be altered by the Judge concerned without the necessity of having recourse to any formal procedure by way of review of judgment.

1899
JAN. 4.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
21 A. 177 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 15.

21 A. 178 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 23.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt.

BALLI RAI AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. MAHABIR RAI (Plaintiff).^{*}
[5th January, 1899.]

Court-fee — Act No. VII of 1870 (Court-Fees Act), s. 5; sch. ii, art. 11—Letters Patent, s. 10—Appeal from an order of remand under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Held that in an appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent from an order of a single Judge of the Court remanding a case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure the proper Court fee is Rs. 2.

THIS was a reference to the Taxing Judge of the Court under s. 5 of the Court Fees Act, 1870. An appeal had been filed under s. 10 of the Letters Patent from an order of a single Judge of the Court remanding a case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the memorandum of appeal was stamped with a Court fee stamp of Rs. 2. On this memorandum of appeal being laid before the stamp reporter of the Court, the following report was made:—

“1 stamp Rs. 2.

“In time up to 15th September 1898.

“This is an appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent from the judgment of the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Banerji remanding the Second Appeal No. 531 of 1897, under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

“The appellants pay Rs. 2 only as court fee. The question is, whether a court fee of Rs. 2 paid is sufficient. The valuation of this appeal is Rs. 240, so also was that of the Second Appeal, on which an ad valorem fee of Rs. 18 was paid.

[179] “There have been similar appeals under s. 10 of the Letters Patent from the judgments remanding cases under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, on which an ad valorem fee has always been paid. A new question has arisen now. Mr. Haribans Sahai, vakil for the appellant, contends that as Rs. 2 is paid on an appeal to this Court from an order passed by lower Courts under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the fee of Rs. 2 paid on the same principle is sufficient.

“I am really in doubt, but beg to submit the following two points for the consideration of the Taxing Officer:—

“(1) That the Civil Procedure Code makes a distinction between orders and decrees, and hence when appeals are filed from orders

* Appeal No. 25 of 1898 under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

1899
JAN. 5.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 178=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 23.

under s. 588 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Rs. 2 is paid, but under the Letters Patent appeals are filed from judgments and not from orders or decrees.

“(2) That since the establishment of the High Court, the same amount of fee as paid in Second Appeals has hitherto been paid on appeals under the Letters Patent, whether the judgments appealed from dismissed the Second Appeals in default or remanded them under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure.”

On this report the Taxing Officer made the following reference to the Taxing Judge :—

“In this case an appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent has been filed against the judgment of Mr. Justice Banerji in Second Appeal No. 531 of 1897. For the purposes of this reference I quote the words of the judgment which appear necessary :—‘I set aside the decrees of the Court below and remand the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, with directions to re-admit it under its original number on the register, and try it according to law on the merits.’”

“The appeal against this judgment has been filed on a Rs. 2 stamp, and the stamp reporter brings to notice that hitherto appeals such as these have always been presented on an ad valorem fee. The appellant’s counsel contends that a Court fee [180] of Rs. 2 is sufficient, and that an appeal to this Court from an order passed under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code by a lower appellate Court can be filed on a Rs. 2 stamp. I am of opinion that the stamp of Rs. 2 is sufficient, and that the practice hitherto prevailing of realizing Court fees ad valorem in Letters Patent appeals against a judgment formulating an order under s. 562, Civil Procedure Code, is wrong.

“Under s. 588, Civil Procedure Code, cl. 28, the directing of a lower Court to re-admit a case under s. 562 is an ‘order’. It is not a decree (vide s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code). According therefore to sch. ii, art. 11 of the Court Fees Act, the present appeal being one not ‘from an order rejecting a plaint, or from a decree or order having the force of a decree’ a fee of Rs. 2 is sufficient.

“The language of s. 10 of the Letters Patent does not affect the matter in issue. It is provided in that section that an appeal shall lie against the ‘judgment’ of one Judge, (etc., etc.). A ‘judgment’ means the statement given by the Judge of the grounds of a decree or order, and in appeals for the purpose of determining jurisdiction, or the amount of Court fee payable, regard is had, not to the judgment as a judgment, but as to whether it embodies a decree or an order.

“I consider the matter one of general importance, and particularly so as the practice which has obtained hitherto seems to me to be wrong in law. I accordingly refer the case to the Taxing Judge under s. 5, Act VII of 1870.”

On which this order was passed :—

ORDER.

BURKITT, J.—I think a Court fee of Rs. 2 is sufficient. That is the fee leviable on an appeal against an order of a District Court remanding a case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. I know of no reason why a higher fee should be leviable on a memorandum of appeal against an order of a similar nature passed by a Judge of this Court. The wording of the Letters Patent does not affect the question.

21 A. 181=19 A.W.N. (1899) 15.

[181] REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF MADHO RAM.*

[6th January, 1899.]

1899
JAN. 6.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.*Act No. XVIII of 1879 (Legal Practitioner's Act), s. 36—Order including a person's name in the list of touts—Revision—Statute 24 and 25 Vic., Cap. CIV, s. 15—Powers of superintendence of the High Court.*21 A. 181=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 15.

Held that in the case of an order passed under s. 36 of Act No. XVIII of 1879, the High Court could only interfere in the exercise of the powers of superintendence conferred upon it by s. 15 of the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, and that it would not interfere even then, where the sole ground upon which its interference was asked for was that the decision of the District Judge was against the weight of the evidence.

[R., 31 A. 59=6 A.L.J. 22=A.W.N. (1908) 279=1 Ind. Cas. 143; 11 C.L.J. 513=11 Cr.L.J. 320 (322)=6 Ind. Cas. 327; 10 Cr.L.J. 443=3 Ind. Cas. 977=11 P.R. 1909=115 P.L.R. 1909=28 P.W.R. 1909 Cr.; P.L.R. 1900 17 (18) Cr.; 22 P.R. 1904 Cr.=108 P.L.R. 1904.]

IN this case, the committee of the local Bar Association at Saharanpur having represented to the District Judge that certain persons named by them were persons against whom action ought to be taken under s. 36 of the Legal Practitioners' Act, the Judge took evidence and heard such of the persons proceeded against as appeared and tendered evidence in their own exculpation, and finally recorded an order, the substance of which, so far as the present report is concerned, is as follows:—"As to the other four men, against Madho, Sri Ram, and Sajjad Husen, there is ample ground for concluding that they are touts. This would appear from the evidence of their own witnesses almost as clearly as from their general reputation as evidenced by members of the local Bar." * * * * *

"The result is that I order that the following men be proclaimed as touts, viz.:—

"Bhura, age 35, Gujar, residence Chandanpur.

"Madho, age 35, son of Ganpat Rai, mahajan, of Saharanpur.

"Sri Ram, age 34, son of Parbhu Lal, mahajan, of Saharanpur.

"Sajjad Husen, age 28, son of Zulfikar Ali, Syed, of Saharanpur.

[182] "The names of these men will be posted in my Court and in every Court subordinate to mine in the Judicial Division, and I hereby order, under s. 36 (4), Legal Practitioners' Act (Act No. XVIII of 1879) as amended by Act XI of 1896, that the above-mentioned men be excluded from the precincts of each of the Courts above-mentioned."

Against this order Madho Ram applied in revision to the High Court. Mr. G. P. Boys, for the applicant.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J. (KNOX, J. concurring):—This is an application to the Court to set aside an order passed by the District Judge of Saharanpur, under s. 36 of the Legal Practitioners' Act, XVIII of 1879, as amended by s. 4 of Act No. XI of 1896. That order of the District Judge was an order including the name of this petitioner in the list of persons proved to the satisfaction of the Judge habitually to act as touts. The only ground stated in the petition to us is:—"Because the finding is against the weight of the evidence." We are of opinion that this Court ought not

* Miscellaneous No. 218 of 1898.

1899
JAN. 6.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.

21 A. 181 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 15.

to interfere, on any such ground as that, with an order passed by a subordinate Court under s. 36 of the Legal Practitioners' Act. The law gives no right of appeal to this Court from any such order. As regards revision, such cases are clearly not criminal proceedings to which the revisional powers of the High Court under s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, would apply. They do not fall within the powers of civil revision conferred by s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. There remain only the powers of superintendence conferred by s. 15 of the High Courts Act. Under that section this Court has, no doubt, very wide powers of superintendence over the proceedings of subordinate Courts; and it is possible to imagine cases in which, in the exercise of those powers, it might be the Court's duty to interfere with an order passed under s. 36 of the Legal Practitioners' Act. Although under s. 36 the Courts have an extremely large discretion in framing lists of touts and including the [183] names of particular individuals in such lists, the conditions prescribed by the section must of course be observed: for instance, no person's name is to be included unless he has had an opportunity of showing cause against such inclusion, and in all cases the person must be proved to the Court's satisfaction habitually to act as a tout, and must be so proved by evidence, whether of general repute or otherwise. But in considering whether this Court should interfere in the exercise of its powers of superintendence, one must bear in mind, first, that the test prescribed by s. 36 is proof to the satisfaction of the Court framing the list and of no other tribunal; and, secondly, that it is settled that this Court is not competent, under s. 15 of the High Courts' Act, to interfere with the order of a subordinate Court, merely on the ground of error in law or error in fact. Its powers of superintendence are not applicable where the only question is whether the decision of the lower Court is against the weight of evidence. That is the only question raised by the present petition. It is admitted that there is evidence upon which the lower Court has acted—evidence on the one side and on the other. We must, therefore, decline to interfere, and must dismiss the application.

21 A. 183 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 22.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

RAGHUBANS KUNWAR AND ANOTHER (Defendants) v. BHAGWANT KUNWAR (Plaintiff).^{*} [11th January, 1899.]

Hindu Law—Hindu widow—Maintenance—Suit for arrears of maintenance—Discretion of Court in allowing arrears.

Where a Hindu widow sues for maintenance from the family and estate of her deceased husband, with arrears of such maintenance, the allowance of arrears of maintenance is a question for the discretion of the Court, and the Court, if it allows arrears of maintenance at all, will not necessarily allow arrears at the same rate as it may allow future maintenance, especially where the plaintiff has made serious delay in bringing her suit for maintenance.

[R., 16 C.P.L.R. 30; 1 N.L.R. 33.]

[184] THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

^{*} First Appeal No. 206 of 1896, from a decree of Babu Prag Das, Officiating Subordinate Judge of Meerut, dated the 26th June 1896.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Munshi Ram Prasad, for the appellants.
 Pandit Bishambar Nath, Pandit Moti Lal Nehru and Pandit Baldeo
 Ram Dave, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—The plaintiff respondent, who claimed to be the widow of Rao Partab Singh, brought the suit, which has given rise to this appeal, for a declaration of her right to maintenance out of the estate of the deceased, and for recovery of Rs. 10,480 as arrears of maintenance, and Rs. 7,016-6-6 as interest on those arrears. She prayed that her maintenance should be declared to be a charge upon the estate of Rao Partab Singh, which at the time of the suit was in the possession of the defendants appellants, who are the daughters of his adopted son, Rao Maharaj Singh. The plaint alleged that the plaintiff obtained her maintenance from Rao Maharaj Singh, and after him from his widow, up to 8th July 1883; that subsequently to that date the payment of her maintenance was stopped by Raja Ghansham Singh, who was appointed guardian of the minor daughters of Maharaj Singh and manager of the estate, and that in 1893 her right of maintenance was denied.

The suit was defended upon various grounds, the principal of which was that the plaintiff was not the widow of Rao Partab Singh. The defendants denied the right of the plaintiff, not only to future maintenance, but also to the arrears claimed by her, and they further disputed the rate at which maintenance had been claimed. The Court below held it established that the plaintiff was the widow of Rao Partab Singh, and granted a decree in her favour for future maintenance at the rate of Rs. 80 a month, and for the arrears of maintenance claimed by her. It dismissed the claim for interest upon the arrears. It also granted the prayer that the maintenance should be a charge upon the estate.

[185] The defendants have preferred this appeal, and the plaintiff has taken objection under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure in regard to the dismissal of the claim for interest. In the memorandum of appeal to this Court the pleas taken in the Court below were reiterated, but the learned counsel for the appellants has conceded that upon the evidence on the record he cannot substantiate the first two pleas, which are to the effect that the plaintiff was not the wife, but was the concubine, of Rao Partab Singh. The learned counsel has not also disputed the rate at which future maintenance has been decreed to the plaintiff.

The principal contention before us was, that the Court below should not have decreed arrears of maintenance to the plaintiff. The main ground upon which this contention was based was that the plaintiff had advanced no claim in regard to the arrears for nearly eleven years, and that she had been living apart from her husband's relations, and was being maintained by her own relations. The learned counsel further contended that, even if the plaintiff was entitled to arrears of maintenance, those arrears should not be awarded at the rate decreed by the Court below.

There can be no doubt that a Hindu widow is entitled to maintenance out of her husband's estate, and is also entitled to claim arrears of such maintenance, even if she lives apart from her husband's relations. The grant of arrears is, however, a matter within the discretion of the Court and the Court may, for sufficient reasons, be justified in refusing to grant any arrear or arrears at the rate claimed. As authorities for this view we may refer to paragraph 417 of Mayne's Hindu Law, and page 466 of the Tagore Law Lectures for 1879, and the authorities therein cited. In 1899

 JAN. 11.
 —
 APPEL-LATE CIVIL:

21 A. 183 =
 19 A.W.N.
 (1899) 22.

1899
JAN. 11.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 183=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 22.

this case we find from the evidence of the brother of the plaintiff that she was residing since 1883 with him, and occasionally with Rao Umrao Singh, who, according to the Subordinate Judge, has been promoting this litigation. From the evidence of the brother of the plaintiff it appears that the [186] additional expense entailed on him by reason of his supporting the plaintiff was about Rs. 10 a month, so that the amount which has been decreed is far in excess of the sum which was necessary to meet the charges incurred for her support. Having regard to this fact, and to the fact that for nearly eleven years the plaintiff made no claim whatever for her maintenance, leaving probably the defendants under the impression that she had waived her claim for maintenance, we think that she is not entitled to be allowed arrears of maintenance at the rate at which maintenance has been fixed for her for the future. Having regard to the expense incurred by her brother in maintaining her, we think that if we allow arrears at the rate of Rs. 16 a month, that will be sufficient to meet the justice of the case. It has not been proved that the plaintiff incurred any debts for her maintenance, and we see no valid reason for awarding to her the large sum she claims. We entirely agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that the plaintiff is not entitled to any interest on the arrears. We accordingly vary the decree of the Court below by reducing the sum allowed for arrears from Rs. 10,480 to Rs. 2,096, and we declare the plaintiff entitled to maintenance at the rate of Rs. 80 a month, with effect from the 8th of June 1893, the said maintenance being a charge upon the estate. As for the costs of the suit, we are of opinion that as the defendants improperly denied the plaintiff's status as the widow of Rao Partab Singh, the defendants should bear their own costs and pay to the plaintiff her costs in the Court below in proportion to her success as now decreed. The defendants will bear their own costs of this appeal. We dismiss the objection under s. 561 with costs.

Decree modified.

21 A. 187 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 18.

[187] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerjee and Mr. Justice Aikman.

MUHAMMAD ABDULLAH KHAN AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs) v. KALLU AND ANOTHER (Defendants).^{*} [12th January, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 539—Suit for a declaration that a certain piece of land is a grave-yard—Jurisdiction.

Held that a suit for a declaration that a certain piece of land was a grave-yard dedicated to the use of such persons as had no grave-yards of their own, and asking the Court to appoint a mutawalli and settle a scheme for the management of the grave-yard, was not such a suit as fell within the purview of s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Lakshmandas Parashram v. Ganpatrav Krishna (1) and Strinivasa Ayyangar v. Strinivasa Swami (2) referred to.

[F., 33 A. 660 (664) = 8 A.L.J. 710 (714) = 11 Ind. Cas. 36 (37); 33 C. 789 = 10 C.W.N. 581; R., 2 C.L.J. 431 (439).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

^{*} First Appeal No. 237 of 1896, from a decree of A. M. Markham, Esq., District Judge of Meerut, dated the 19th August 1896.

(1) 8 B. 965.

(2) 16 M. 31.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the appellants.
 Pandit Moti Lal, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs to a suit which purported to have been brought under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and was instituted in the Court of the District Judge of Meerut. The allegation was that a certain piece of land was wakf property, being a grave-yard dedicated to the use of persons who had no grave-yards of their own, that the defendants had taken wrongful possession of the land, and that one of the defendants had sold it to the other. The plaintiffs asked for a declaration that the land was endowed property, for the appointment of one of the plaintiffs or some other person as mutawalli of the property, for the framing of a scheme for the management of the property, for the ejectment of the defendant No. 1 from the land and for the making over of the land to the person who might be appointed mutawalli. The Court below has dismissed the suit on the ground that this was not a case to which s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure applied.

In our opinion the learned Judge was right in holding that this suit did not come within the purview of s. 539. [188] That section contemplates the existence of an express or constructive trust created for public, charitable, or religious purposes. In this case all that is alleged is that the land in question is endowed property, and it is not alleged that there was any express or constructive trust in favour of any one. S. 539 cannot, in our opinion, apply to the case of property from which it is sought to remove a trespasser. This view is supported by the ruling of the Bombay High Court in Lakshmandas Parashram v. Ganpatrav Krishna (1), and of the Madras High Court in Strinivasa Ayyangar v. Strinivasa Swami (2). It is clear therefore that the suit could not have been instituted in the Court of the District Judge under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The learned vakil for the appellants has contended that even in the view which we have taken of the case, and which was taken by the learned Judge of the Court below, the plaint ought to have been returned for presentation in the proper Court, and the suit should not have been dismissed. It may be that some of the reliefs claimed are such that an ordinary Civil Court may not be competent to grant; we do not decide this point; but there are certainly other reliefs claimed which are clearly within the cognizance of an ordinary Civil Court, and for this reason we are of opinion that the learned Judge of the Court below should, instead of dismissing the suit, have dealt with it under s. 57, cl. (a) of the Code of Civil Procedure, and returned the plaint to be presented to the proper Court. We therefore set aside the decree of the Court below dismissing the suit, and remand the case to that Court with directions to deal with the plaint in the manner which we have indicated above. The respondents will get their costs in this Court and in the Court below, as the appellants have substantially failed.

Appeal decreed.

1899
 JAN. 12.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 187=
 19 A.W.N.
 (1899) 18.

(1) 8 B. 365.

(2) 16 M. 31.

1899
JAN. 20.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL
—
21 A. 189=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 34.

21 A. 189=19 A.W.N. (1899) 34.

[189] REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MUKUNDI LAL.* [20th January, 1899.]

Criminal Procedure Code, s. 263—Summary trial—Matters necessary to be stated in the record of a summary trial.

Where a Magistrate, invested with powers under s. 260 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, is trying a case summarily, it is desirable that he should set out under the column reserved for that purpose so much of the reasons that have influenced him as to satisfy the accused that the Magistrate has considered each of the ingredients necessary in law for the conviction to which the Magistrate has proceeded, and that while this should be recorded with brevity, the brevity should not be such as to tend to obscurity.

The record of a summary trial contained in the column corresponding to cl. (h) of s. 263 of the Code of Criminal Procedure the following entry:—"The Police made a raid on information received and caught all the accused gambling. The defence of Mukundi, Mannu, Kali Charan, Ballan and Gulzari Lal involves the absurdity that the Police obtained a warrant to raid a house in which they could have no reason to suppose they would find any one. I convict Mukundi of keeping a common gaming-house,—s. 4, Gambling Act. I convict the other six defendants of gaming in a common gaming-house,—s. 3, Gambling Act."

Held, that this entry, though it should have been more explicit, was a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the law.

[F., 2 Cr.L.J. 375=3 L.B.R. 3; R., 2 S.L.R. 3 Cr.]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the order of the Court.

Mr. W. M. Colvin and Pandit Moti Lal, for the applicant.

The Government Pleader, (Munshi Ram Prasad), for the Crown.

ORDER.

KNOX, J.—This is an appeal presented by one Mukundi Lal. Mukundi Lal has been convicted of keeping a common gambling house, and, so the Magistrate's order runs, sentenced under the provisions of s. 4 of the Gambling Act, to rigorous imprisonment for one month. S. 4 of Act No. III of 1867 prescribes no penalty for owning or keeping a gambling house; that offence is provided for by s. 3. The grounds on which I am asked to interfere are that the record of the summary trial does not comply with s. 263 of the Code of [190] Criminal Procedure, and it is urged that the formalities laid down in that section should be strictly observed for the protection of the public. Reference is here made to the entry required by law under s. 263, cl. (h), of the Code of Criminal Procedure under the head in the summary register relating to this case. The entry made is as follows:—"The Police made a raid on information received and caught all the accused gambling. The defence of Mukundi, Mannu, Kali Charan, Ballan and Gulzari Lal involves the absurdity that the police obtained a warrant to raid a house in which they could have no reason to suppose they would find any one. I convict Mukundi of keeping a common gaming-house,—s. 4, Gambling Act. I convict the other six defendants of gaming in a common gaming-house,—s. 3, Gambling Act." Then follows the sentence. The contention is, that there is in the above passage no brief statement of the reasons given for the conviction. Certainly the letter of the law has been very scantily complied with, and it would have been well if the learned Magistrate, instead of recording his reasons in this telegraphic form, had expanded them so as to show that the reasons for conviction were founded upon evidence; that the Police had received information, as required by the Act, and that acting on the information, they had made a raid and found all the accused gambling with whatever were the instruments found on the spot. I am satisfied, however, that this is what the Magistrate meant by the words he has used, and they show me that he had his mind concentrated upon the evidence so far as it went to the important points of information followed by authority as required by s. 5 of the Act, and to the fact there had been gambling with instruments of gambling as laid down in s. 4, and that, finding this proved, he had looked to see whether the presumption thus created by law against the accused had been rebutted. The entry required by cl. (g) of s. 263 shows no rebutting plea and no proof of any such plea. At the same time the record made does show signs of want of full care and attention on the [191] part of the learned Magistrate. He would never have convicted Mukundi Lal under s. 4 and the other six accused under s. 3 if he had observed due care. Even when his attention had been drawn to the fact that his proceedings were impugned, he does not seem to have discovered the error into which he had fallen. Again, the reasons given for the conviction afford no ground for the conclusion that Mukundi Lal was the owner or occupier of the house. The only reference to this very material question is to be found in the prisoner's plea, and that plea, without evidence to the contrary, had to be accepted as it stood. Mukundi Lal said that the house belonged to his father and that he lived in the house opposite. My attention was drawn to the rulings in the case of The Empress v. Panjab Singh (1); Yacoub v. Adamson (2); Queen-Empress v. Shidgauda (3); The Queen v. Johrie Singh (4); Empress v. Chotey Lal (5); Empress v. Girwar Dial (6); Empress v. Mohan (7); Empress v. Lachman (8).

* Criminal Revision No. 747 of 1898.

The cases of this Court reported in the Weekly Notes for 1883, 1885, and 1886, do not set out the entries made by the Magistrate in the column given for the findings. So far as these cases are concerned, I may take it that there was no statement of the reasons given. The case in the Weekly Notes of 1882 was a case under Act No. X of 1872, and the report given does not show what was the offence of which the accused were convicted. This was certainly a fatal defect, and the reasons given as there stated do not show that any offence under any section whatever had been committed. So far this case is clearly to be distinguished from the other cases of this Court which have been brought to my notice. I think it distinctly desirable that Magistrates should set out under the column reserved for the purpose so much of the reasons that have influenced them as to satisfy the accused that the Magistrate has considered each of the [192] ingredients necessary in law for the conviction to which the Magistrate has proceeded, and that, while this should be recorded with brevity, the brevity should not be such as to tend to obscurity. There is no question in my mind from the language used by the Legislature that the intention was that in cases of this kind the procedure should be summary and the record should contain the barest particulars. I am therefore not prepared, if I find compliance with these requisites, to interfere and to lay down that facts and reasons should be set out at such length as to make the Court of revision more or less also a Court of appeal so far as facts are concerned. The law intended the procedure to be summary, and it is not 1899

JAN. 20.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 189=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 34.

(1) 6 C. 579.

(2) 13 C. 272.

(3) 18 B. 97.

(4) 22 W. R. Cr. R. 28.

(5) 2 A.W.N. (1882) 242.

(6) 3 A.W.N. (1883) 114.

(7) 5 A.W.N. (1885) 213.

(8) 6 A.W.N. (1886) 181.

1899
JAN. 20.
 —
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
 —
21 A. 189=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 34.

for this Court to lay down otherwise than the law has directed. In a previous case, I pointed out that the responsibility thrown on Magistrates entrusted with summary powers is very great, and the responsibility of those who have to entrust them with such powers is equally great. Magistrates who are sufficiently alive to the responsibility entrusted to them will take care that the procedure and the record is not made more summary than the law has laid down. In this case after carefully looking into the whole record I am not satisfied on the Magistrate's own showing that, so far as the applicant is concerned, any offence beyond that provided for by s. 4 has been established. I alter the conviction to a conviction for being found in a gambling house gambling, and, under s. 4 of Act No. III of 1867, direct that Mukundi Lal pay a fine of Rs. 25, and that the fine be recovered from him in the manner prescribed by s. 388 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The conviction and sentence imposed by the Magistrate are set aside.

21 A. 193 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 27.

[193] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

RAM NATH RAI AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. LACHMAN RAI
 AND OTHERS (Defendants.)* [26th January, 1899.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 85—Hindu law—Joint Hindu family—Suit on a mortgage executed by a Hindu father—Sons not made parties—Notice—Burden of Proof.

Where the sons in a joint Hindu family come into Court seeking to get rid of the effect, as against their interests in the joint family property, of a decree on a mortgage executed by their father obtained in a suit to which they were not made parties, the burden of proof lies on them to establish that the mortgagee when he brought his suit had notice of their interests in the mortgaged property.

[R., 12 Bom. L.R. 940 (943) = 8 Ind. Cas. 633 (634); 6 C.L.J. 719 = 11 C.W.N. 1078; 14 C.L.J. 530 (534) = 12 Ind. Cas. 155 (157); 16 C.P.L.R. 169; 3 Ind. Cas. 570 = 5 N.L.R. 117.]

THIS was a suit brought by the sons in a joint Hindu family against their father and his mortgagee to obtain a declaration that their interests in certain property which they alleged to be ancestral property were not liable to sale in execution of a decree obtained in a suit for sale on a mortgage against the father. The plaintiffs had not been made parties to the suit for sale against their father.

The defendant mortgagee pleaded that the property in suit was not ancestral, but the personal property of the father, to whom he advanced the loan in good faith.

The Court of first instance (Munsif of Muhammadabad) found that the defendant mortgagee had no notice of the property in question being ancestral or of the plaintiff's interest therein, and accordingly dismissed the suit.

The plaintiffs appealed. The Lower Appellate Court (District Judge of Azamgarh) found that the property was ancestral; but that the plaintiffs had failed to discharge the burden, which lay on them, of proving that the defendant mortgagee had notice of their interests in the property at the time when he brought his suit on the mortgage. That Court accordingly dismissed the appeal.

* Second Appeal No. 883 of 1896, from a decree of H. D. Griffin, Esq., Officiating District Judge of Azamgarh, dated the 5th June 1896, confirming a decree of Pandit Guru Prasad Dube, Munsif of Muhammadabad Gohna, dated the 24th March 1896.

[194] The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court.

Mr. A. H. C. Hamilton, for the appellants.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C.J. (KNOX, J., Concurring.)—We have come to the conclusion that the judgment of the lower appellate Court is correct. There is undoubtedly a clear finding of fact that the mortgagee had no notice of the interests of the present plaintiffs in the suit in which the mortgage decree was passed. There are, however, expressions in the judgment which indicate that in coming to that conclusion the learned Judge was influenced by his view that it was for the plaintiffs in this suit to establish that the mortgagee, when suing upon his mortgage, had notice of their interests, and that, as they were not made parties to that suit, the decree obtained under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act would not affect them. We think that the learned Judge was right.

We think that it was for the plaintiffs—Hindu sons trying to prevent, so far as their interests were concerned, a sale of an ancestral property in execution of a mortgage decree against their father only—to prove that the sale would not under the circumstances affect their interests. The property was undoubtedly ancestral property. It is found as a fact that no evidence was given by the plaintiffs in support of their allegation that the mortgage was executed for immoral purposes. The only ground which remained for them to show that their shares were not liable to sale under the mortgage decree was that there had been a neglect to comply with the provisions of s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that in consequence of such neglect, under the ruling in Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu (1) the sale could not affect their rights and interests. We think that, just as in the case of an allegation that the mortgage was executed for a debt tainted with immorality, the burden of proving that allegation and of showing that their interests were not liable to sale would rest on the plaintiffs, so the burden of proof [195] lies on them to establish the only other ground on which the effect of the sale against their rights and interests could be avoided. It was therefore for the plaintiffs to prove that the mortgagee had notice of their interests, and that his omission to make them parties to the former suit exempted their interests from liability to sale under the decree. This view is in keeping with the judgment of BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ., in F. A. No. 213 of 1896, decided upon the 12th January, 1899.* That decision seems exactly in point, and we agree with it. We dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 17 A. 537.

* The judgment in this case was as follows:—

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—The respondents, Mewa Lal and Lachmi Narain, obtained a decree upon a mortgage, dated the 8th of February, 1886, executed by Ranbahadur Singh, the father of Bijai Bahadur Singh, plaintiff, Randhir Singh, the father of the other plaintiff, and Hanwant Singh, a brother of Ranbahadur Singh and Randhir Singh. At the time of the suit Hanwant Singh was dead and his widow was made a defendant to the suit. The other defendants were Ranbahadur Singh and Randhir Singh. In execution of that decree, which is dated the 7th of December, 1892, Mewa

1899
JAN. 26.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 193=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 27.

21 A. 196 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 30.

[196] APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.*SIBTA KUNWAR (Plaintiff) v. BHAGOLI (Defendant).^{*}
[28th January, 1899.]1899
JAN. 28.APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.21 A. 196 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 30.Civil Procedure Code, s. 317—Benami transaction—Suit against heir of certified purchaser—Interpretation of Statutes.

Held that s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure would not preclude a suit against a person who claimed title through the certified purchaser based on the allegation that the certified purchaser was not the real purchaser, but only purchased benami for the person through whom the plaintiff claimed. Mussumat Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhoree Lall and Jokhee Lall (1) referred to.

[Not F., 31 B. 61 = 8 Bom. L.R. 873; R., 28 P.L.R. 1904 = 4 P.R. 1904; 16 Ind. Cas. 449 (452) = 8 N.L.R. 107 (112).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the appellant.

Messrs. C. Dillon and Roshan Lal, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—This was a suit for the possession of certain shares in two villages, namely, Amirta and Nadeli, and of a share in a house in the village Amirta, which belonged originally to one Kishan Lal. The plaintiff is one of two daughters of Kishan Lal. The defendant is the daughter of a predeceased son of Kishan Lal, named Lokman. Lokman's widow was Musammam Natholi, who survived Kishan Lal, but is now dead. On the 19th of February 1884, Kishan Lal executed a deed of gift in favour of Musammam Natholi in respect of the village Nadeli and a house. In execution of a decree which a creditor of Kishan Lal Lal and Lachmi Narain caused the mortgaged property to be advertised for sale. Thereupon the present suit was brought on the 1st of February, 1896, for a declaration that the interests of the plaintiffs in the mortgaged property were not liable to sale. The sole ground upon which the suit was brought was that the plaintiffs had not been made parties to the mortgagees' suit. If the property was ancestral and the mortgagees had notice of the interests of the plaintiffs in the mortgaged property at the time they brought their suit upon the mortgage, the plaintiffs would, under the ruling of the majority of the Full Bench in Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu (I.L.R., 17 All., 537) be entitled to succeed. The Court below, however, has dismissed the suit upon the ground that it had not been established that the mortgagees had express or constructive notice of the interests which the plaintiffs claimed in the property. The learned Subordinate Judge, who has recorded a careful judgment in the case, was of opinion that it had not been proved that the mortgagees had any knowledge of the existence of the plaintiffs and that there had not been on the part of the mortgagees either wilful abstention from inquiry or gross negligence such as would bring the case within the definition of notice as given in s. 3 of Act No. IV of 1882. The learned counsel who has appeared for the plaintiffs-appellants has conceded that there was no express notice. He contends, however, that the mortgagees must be taken to have had constructive notice of the existence of the plaintiffs. We are of opinion that the reasons given by the learned Subordinate Judge for holding the contrary view are cogent. It has not been shown that any circumstances existed which ought to have put the mortgagees upon inquiry. The appeal is, in our opinion, untenable. We dismiss it with costs.

* First Appeal, No. 250 of 1896, from a decree of Babu Madho Das, Subordinate Judge of Bareilly, dated the 21st September 1896.

(1) 14 M.I.A. 496.

had obtained against him the share in the zamindari of Amirta was sold by auction on the 20th of June 1884, and was purchased in the name of Musammatt Natholi. Upon the death of Musammatt Natholi the property now in suit was taken possession of by her daughter, Musammatt Bhagoli. Hence the present suit.

The plaintiff asserts that the deed of gift relating to the village Nadeli and the house property was a colourable transaction; that Kishan Lal purchased the share in the village Amirta with his own funds benami in the name of Musammatt Natholi; that he continued in possession as owner of the whole property till his [197] death; that upon his death the plaintiff and her sister have succeeded to that property by right of inheritance, and that the plaintiff is thus entitled to a half share of it.

As regards the village Amirta, the suit was defended upon two grounds: first, that s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure bars the suit; and, secondly, that the share was purchased by Natholi with her own funds. As for the property covered by the deed of gift, the contention was that the gift was a real transaction, and that by it Kishan Lal intended to, and did actually, transfer his interest in the property to Musammatt Natholi.

As regards the property covered by the deed of gift, we are of opinion that the appeal must fail. The deed itself affords internal evidence of the fact that the intention was that the property should go to Natholi. It is stated in it, as a condition attached to the gift, that Musammatt Natholi would have power to transfer it to her daughters, Bhagoli and Jika, but that she would have no power to transfer it to any other person. It further provides that after Natholi's death the property should go to her daughters. If the gift was a mere paper transaction, we should not have expected clauses, like those to which we have referred, carefully limiting the right of the donee. We further find that on the date on which the deed of gift was executed Kishan Lal obtained a power of attorney from Musammatt Natholi, evidently for the purpose of managing the property on her behalf. It is natural to expect that he would wish to make some provision for his widowed daughter-in-law and her children, and it seems to us in the highest degree probable that it was with that intention that he executed the deed of gift. The plaintiff's own witness, Ram Dial, said that "Kishan Lal made the gift for the maintenance of his daughter-in-law, Natholi. He made the gift for the maintenance of of his son's widow, thinking that she might be put to trouble after him." We agree with the Court below in thinking that the plaintiff has failed to show that the gift was a nominal transaction and did not convey to Musammatt Natholi the property to which it relates. So far the appeal must fail.

[198] As for the village Amirta, the learned Subordinate Judge has held that s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure precludes the plaintiff from maintaining the present suit, as Musammatt Natholi was the certified purchaser of that village at auction. Had Natholi herself been the defendant to the suit, we should have seen no reason to differ from the conclusion of the learned Subordinate Judge; but the suit was not brought against the certified purchaser but against a person who derives title from her. Section 317 forbids the maintenance of a suit "against the certified purchaser," which the defendant in this case is not. Why the Legislature stopped here and did not bar a suit against persons claiming through a certified purchaser, we are unable to say; but, as was 1899

JAN. 28.

—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

—
21 A. 196 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 30.

1899
JAN. 28.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 196 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 30.

observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Mussumat Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhnoore Lall and Jokhee Lall (1), "where the Legislature has stopped the Court must stop." As the provisions of s. 317, as they now stand, are in restraint of an ordinary right of suit and preclude a suit against a certified purchaser only, we do not think we should be justified in extending the scope of the section beyond what the language of the section warrants. We are therefore unable to agree with the learned Subordinate Judge in holding that that section bars the maintenance of the present suit.

We have now to consider whether the village Amirta was purchased at auction by Kishan Lal with his own funds, or, as alleged on behalf of the defendants, with the funds of Musammât Natholi. This was an issue which the pleadings in the case raised. The evidence conclusively proves that the purchase-money was paid by Kishan Lal, and there is not a particle of evidence before us to rebut the evidence to that effect. We have further the fact that mutation of names did not take place after auction-purchase in favour of Musammât Natholi, and that up to the time of his death Kishan Lal continued to be the recorded owner of the share in question and in possession thereof. The learned Subordinate Judge has found that it was the intention of [199] Kishan Lal to give this property also to Natholi. In the first place, this view is opposed to the pleadings. It is certainly not borne out by the evidence of the witness Brij Lal, to which the learned Subordinate Judge refers, and it is not supported by any other evidence upon which we can rely. If it was the intention of Kishan Lal that this property also should go to Natholi, we should have expected to find that he had given expression to that intention by a proper deed, as he did in the case of the other village. If such was ever his intention, he died without giving effect to it. We therefore hold that, so far as the suit relates to the share in the village Amirta, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree; but as regards that portion of the claim which relates to the property covered by the deed of gift, her suit has been rightly dismissed.

The plaintiff also claimed a moiety of 214 bighas 18 biswas of khudkasht land in Amirta and some sir land in the same village. The Court below has granted her a decree in respect of the sir as an ex-proprietary tenant. In the view which we have taken of the case the plaintiff is entitled to a decree for possession of the sir land as such. Her father could not be regarded as an ex-proprietary tenant of the sir land, inasmuch as we have held that he was the purchaser and proprietor of the zamindari to which the sir appertained down to the date of his death. As for the khudkasht land, we hold that Kishan Lal held it qua zamindar, and it must go to his heirs along with the zamindari to which it appertained. The defendant has no title in respect of that land superior to that of the plaintiff.

The result is that we allow the appeal and vary the decree below by making a decree in favour of the plaintiff for possession of 3 biswas 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ biswansis share in mauza Amirta, and a moiety of 214 bighas 18 biswas of khudkasht land, and of 12 bighas of sir land and mesne profits in respect of the said share and lands for three years preceding the date of the suit, with future mesne profits up to the date of delivery of possession, or the expiry of three years from this date, whichever event first occurs, such mesne profits to [200] be determined in execution. Quoad ultra we affirm the decree of the Court below. The parties will pay and receive costs both here and in the Court below in proportion to their failure and success.

(1) 14 M.L.A. 496.

Decree modified.

21 A. 200 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 32.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

1899
JAN. 28.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 196 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 30.

GIRDHARI LAL AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs) v. RAM LAL AND ANOTHER (Defendants).^{*} [30th January, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 539—Trust—Suit to compel trustees to account—Court fee—Act No. VII of 1870 (Court Fees Act), sch. ii, art. 17, cl. (vi)—Suit for removal of trustees.

The mere fact that the plaintiffs in a suit under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, may ask for an account to be taken from the trustees and that the trustees may be compelled to refund moneys alleged to have been misappropriated by them, does not take the case out of the purview of art. 17, cl. (vi) of the second schedule to the Court Fees Act, 1870, and rendered the plaintiffs liable to pay an ad valorem Court fee on that part of their plaint. Thakuri v. Bramha Narain (1) referred to.

A suit for the removal of an old trustee who has committed a breach of trust and for the appointment of new trustees may properly be brought under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Husni Begam v. The Collector of Moradabad (2) approved. Rangasami Naickan v. Varadappa Naickan (3) dissented from.

[Rel., 14 C.W.N. 932 (935) = 7 Ind. Cas. 93 (95); R., 2 C.L.J. 431 (439); 2 C.L.J. 460 (468); 3 O.C. 299 (303) 5 O.C. 110 (112).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, and Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellants.

Mr. W. M. Colvin and Munshi Gokul Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—A preliminary objection was raised on behalf of the respondents to the hearing of this appeal, on the ground that the plaint in the Court below and the memorandum of appeal in this Court were not sufficiently stamped. The principal ground of this contention is that the claim embraces a prayer for an account, and that the Court fees ought to have [201] been paid with reference to that prayer under clause (f) of sub-section 4 of s. 7 of Act No. VII of 1870.

The facts are these :—The plaintiffs, who are two in number, brought the suit under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, on the allegations that one Maharaj Kallu Mal had created a trust for the maintenance of a school and a charitable institution; that the first defendant was appointed superintendent of the trust, and that the other trustees had not performed the duties which lay upon them in connection with the trust. The following reliefs were asked for in the plaint :—

(a) that for the purpose of the management of the endowed property and fulfilment of the object of the endowment, new superintendents may

^{*} First Appeal. No. 251 of 1896 from a decree of J. E. Gill, Esq., District Judge of Cawnpore, dated the 7th October 1896.

(1) 19 A. 60.

(2) 20 A. 46.

(3) 17 M. 462.

1899
JAN. 30.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 200=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 32.

be appointed, and the whole of the endowed property, detailed at the foot of the plaint, may be taken out of the possession of the defendants and placed in that of the new superintendents ;

(b) that the defendants may be made to render an account of the income and expenditure from Sambat 1940, when Kallu Mal died, up to the present time, and all the money which the defendant No. 1 should fail to prove had been spent for the purposes of the endowment, according to the terms of the deed of endowment, may be awarded against him to the superintendents, appointed by the Court, and added to the funds of the endowment ;

(c) that proper and necessary instructions and rules regarding the management of the endowment and its income and expenditure may be issued.

The plaintiffs paid a Court fee of ten rupees in the Court below, alleging that the subject-matter in dispute was not capable of valuation, and that the case came under clause (vi) of art. 17 of sch. ii of Act No. VII of 1870. In this Court a further sum of ten rupees was received on the plaint and also on the memorandum of appeal, on the report of the office, the report being to the effect that ten rupees were payable for each of the two reliefs (a) and (b) claimed in the plaint. It is not stated, [202] and we do not understand, under what provision of the Court Fees Act the second fee of ten rupees was realized in this Court.

Are the plaint and the memorandum of appeal insufficiently stamped ?

If it is not possible " to estimate at a money value the subject-matter in dispute, and if there is no other provision in the Court Fees Act for a suit of this description," the plaintiffs were right in paying a Court fee of ten rupees under cl. vi of art. 17 of sch. ii of Act No. VII of 1870. We have therefore to consider what the subject-matter in dispute is. The plaintiffs claim nothing for themselves personally. As persons interested in a trust for charitable purposes, they come into Court asking for the removal of a trustee who, they allege, has committed a breach of trust, and who has in his hands funds belonging to the trust. They also ask for the appointment of new trustees and for the vesting of the trust property in the new trustees. That is the real relief which the plaintiffs seek in this case. Such a relief is not capable of being estimated at a money value. It is true that the value of the property, which is the subject-matter of the trust, is stated in the plaint, but that is not the value of the subject-matter in dispute. We think that this case cannot be distinguished from the principle of the judgment in Thakuri v. Bramha Narain (1). We pointed out in that judgment the difficulties which would arise if it were held that a suit for the removal of a trustee and the appointment of new trustees were to be looked upon as a suit in which Court fees had to be paid with reference to the value of the trust property. Mr. Colvin, on behalf of the respondents, does not contend that this suit should be regarded as a suit for possession of the trust property. He frankly conceded that if the plaintiff had not asked for an account he would be unable to distinguish this case from the ruling to which we have referred. He argues that the plaintiffs having in their plaint asked for the taking of an account, they were bound to pay Court fees on that portion of their plaint. [203] We are unable to agree with this contention. The prayer for an account is only ancillary to the substantive prayer in the plaint for the removal of the trustee-defendant, the appointment of new trustees, and the vesting of the trust property, now in the possession of the old trustee, in the trustees to be appointed by the Court. Reading clause (f) of sub-s. 4 of s. 7 of Act No. VII of 1870 with s. 11 of the same Act and the penultimate paragraph of s. 50 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it is quite clear to what that clause refers. We therefore overrule the preliminary objection taken on behalf of the respondents.

As regards the appeal, we are of opinion that it must prevail. The Court below has dismissed the suit on the ground that it is one for the removal of a trustee, and is not therefore a suit to which s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure applies. If this were so the learned Judge erred in dismissing the suit; he ought to have returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. We are of opinion, however, that the learned Judge was wrong in the view he took of the case. That view is, it is true, supported by the ruling of the Madras High Court in Rangasmi Naikan v. Varadappa Nickan (1), but that ruling has been dissented from in this Court in Husini Begam v. The Collector of Moradabad (2). The High Courts of Calcutta and Bombay have taken the same view of the question as was adopted by this Court, and even the Judges of the Madras High Court have held divergent opinions. We have no hesitation in concurring with the ruling of this Court to which we have referred above. Section 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides for cases of an alleged breach of trust for public charitable or religious purposes, and enables two or more persons having an interest in the trust to institute a suit to obtain a decree "appointing new trustees under the trust." Those words are, in our opinion, wide enough to include a claim for the removal of an old trustee who has committed a breach of trust, and for the appointment of new trustees. The ruling of [204] the Madras High Court based on decisions of English cases on Lord Romilly's Act does not commend itself to us. That Act provides a summary procedure for obtaining relief by petition and not by suit as provided in s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the provisions of the English Statute differ materially from those of s. 539.

We allow this appeal, and setting aside the decree of the Court below, remand the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure with directions to re-admit it under its original number in the register and to try it on the merits. The appellants will get their costs of this appeal. Other costs hitherto incurred will abide the result.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

1899
JAN. 30.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 200=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 32.

(1) 17 M. 462.

(2) 20 A. 46.

1899

JAN. 31.

APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 204 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 36.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.*DALIP RAI (Defendant) v. DEOKI RAI (Plaintiff).^{*}
[31st January, 1899.]21 A. 204 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 36.Act No. XII of 1881 (N.W.P. Rent Act), s. 95 (n)—Land-holder and tenant—Dispossession of tenant—Effect on tenant's right of his neglecting to apply under s. 95 to be restored to possession.

Held, that the failure of a tenant to apply under s. 95 (n) of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, for the recovery of the occupancy of land, of which he has been wrongfully dispossessed, within the period of six months after the date of dispossession prescribed for such applications by s. 96 (e) has the effect not only of barring the tenant's remedy, but of extinguishing the tenant's right to the occupancy of the land.

[R., 27 A. 372 = 2 A.L.J. 69 = A.W.N. (1904) 281; 7 A.L.J. 303 (310) = 2 Ind. Cas. 456 (458); 6 C.L.J. 621 (636); 14 C.L.J. 292 (297) = 16 C.W.N. 351 (354) = 11 Ind. Cas. 465 (468); 2 Ind. Cas. 848 (850); 9 Ind. Cas. 51 (52).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Munshi Haribans Sahai, for the appellant.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C.J. (KNOX, J., concurring).—The question raised by this appeal is whether the failure of a tenant to apply under s. 95 (n) of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, for the recovery of the occupancy of land, of which he has been wrongfully dispossessed, within the period of six months after the date of the dispossession, prescribed for such applications by s. 96 (e) has the effect of [205] extinguishing his title or only of barring his remedy. The facts as found by the lower appellate Court are these: The plaintiffs are zamindars, and the land in suit forms part of their sir. Previous to the year 1892 the defendant was in possession of the land as the plaintiff's tenant-at-will. In that year the plaintiffs, without taking any of the steps necessary under the Rent Act for the defendant's ejectment, wrongfully dispossessed him of the occupancy of the land and assumed the cultivation of it by a shikmi tenant whom they put in possession and whose name was entered in the settlement papers. The defendant made no application under s. 95 (n) for the recovery of the occupancy of the land. In 1895 he forcibly entered upon the land and resumed possession. In 1898 the plaintiffs brought the present suit in the civil Court, claiming his ejectment from the land as a trespasser, and damages. The defendant pleaded that he had never ceased to have the rights of a tenant in respect of the land, and that the suit was not cognizable by a civil Court. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, but the lower appellate Court decreed the appeal and the suit, holding that the defendant's tenancy became extinguished on his failure to apply under s. 95 (n) within six months from the date of the wrongful dispossession, and that when, in 1895, he obtained possession, he did so as a trespasser. On appeal by the defendant to this Court Mr. Justice ^{*} Appeal No. 27 of 1898 under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

Blair took the same view, (see I. L. R., 20 All. 471) and in this further appeal under the Letters Patent we have to consider whether it is correct.

The question is not altogether free from difficulty. There appears to be no reported case in point. The position of the defendant, when he obtained possession in 1895, was this. On the one hand, he had clearly no remedy by legal proceedings. By virtue of the opening words of s. 95 of the Rent Act he never had any remedy in a civil Court. His only remedy in a revenue Court, namely, an application under s. 95 (n), was barred by s. 96 (e). On the other [206] hand, s. 96 (e) in terms enacts only that an application under s. 95 (n) shall not be brought after six months from the date of the wrongful dispossession; it contains no provision similar to s. 28 of the Limitation Act, to the effect that at the determination of the prescribed period the tenant's right to the occupancy of the land shall be extinguished. S. 28 of the Limitation Act itself obviously does not affect applications under the Rent Act. The view expressed in Mazhar Rai v. Ramgat Singh (1) that the tenancy of a tenant of agricultural land can only be determined in one or other of the manners mentioned in the Rent Act, applies to tenants-at-will, who, like other tenants, are protected by s. 34 from ejectment otherwise than in execution of a decree or order under the Act; and among the manners specially mentioned, extinction by lapse of the period prescribed by s. 96 (e) is not one. If within the six months' period the defendant had, without the assistance of the revenue Court, regained possession of the land, there can be no doubt that he would have held it under his original tenancy, which, in that case, would have undergone no legal determination or interruption. The pleader for the appellant contended that it is a general principle of law that in the absence of express words to the contrary a statute of limitation only bars the remedy and does not extinguish the right, and that, as the Rent Act contains no such express words, the defendant's title, notwithstanding the lapse of the prescribed period, still existed at the time when he regained possession.

The nearest analogy available upon the question is afforded by the Indian enactments relating to limitation prior to Act No. IX of 1871, s. 29 of which first introduced the rule now contained in s. 28 of the present Act. The old Bengal Regulations of Limitation, III of 1793 and II of 1805, in reference to suits for the recovery of immoveable property, in terms limited the remedy only and did not on the lapse of [207] the prescribed period expressly extinguish the title. Again, s. 1 of Act No. XIV of 1859 only provided that no suit should be maintained in any Court of Judicature unless the same were instituted within the period of limitation made applicable to a suit of that nature, and of such suits cl. 12 of the section specified suits for the recovery of immoveable property, or of any interest in immoveable property. Notwithstanding the terms of these enactments it was clearly settled that upon the expiry of the prescribed period for such a suit, not only was the claimant's remedy barred, but his title extinguished in favour of the party in possession, however wrongfully that possession might have originated; see Ganga Gobind Mundul v. The Collector of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs (2), and the other cases mentioned by Westropp, C. J., in Sitaram Vasudev v. Khanderao Balkrishna (3). In Bindrabun Chunder Roy v. Tarachand Bundopadhyaya (4), decided under Act No. XIV

1899
JAN. 31.

—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

—
21 A. 204 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899)

(1) 18 A. 290 (294).
(3) 1 B. 286.

(2) 11 M.I.A. 345.
(4) 11 B.L.R. 237,

1899
JAN. 31.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 204=
19 A W.N.
(1899) 36.

of 1859, Mr. Justice Markby said that it was "an accepted doctrine in our Courts that if a party who has been twelve years out of possession and whose suit is therefore barred should again get into possession, he is not (to use an English phrase) remitted to his old title; our Courts adopting, as pointed out by Sir Lawrence Peel in Sibchunder Doss v. Sibkissen Banerjee (1), the English rule that there is no remitter to a right for which the party had no remedy by action at all." In the same case Mr. Justice Birch said:—"I apprehend it to be now well established that, when his remedy is barred, the right and title of the claimant is extinguished and transferred to the person in possession." The only authorities for the contrary view which have been cited to us are two Madras cases, in one of which, Doe d' Kullammal v. Kuppu Pillai (2), decided in 1862, it was held that "the Indian Law of Limitation bars the remedy only, but does not extinguish the right," and in the other, Govindan [208] Pillai v. Chidambara Pillai (3), decided in 1862, it was held that s. 12 of Act No. XIV of 1859 did not extinguish the right at the lapse of the statutory period. Both these cases, however, were decided before the decision of the Privy Council in the case reported in 11 M.I.A., 345, upon which the Bengal judgments were chiefly based. The later cases support, we think, the view expressed by Mr. Mitra that where a law of limitation regarding the possession and dispossession of immoveable property in terms limits the suit only, its effect is nevertheless generally to extinguish the title, unless there co-exists with it a statute such as Bombay Regulation V of 1827, fixing a longer period for the acquisition of title by positive prescription: see Mitra's Law of Limitation and Prescription in British India (3rd ed.), pp. 3, 13, 35, 36, 52, 325, and Rambhat Agnihotri v. The Collector of Puna (4). It is true that in all these cases there was no question of landholder and tenant. The question was not whether, under a special law prescribing a period of limitation, a tenant's right was extinguished in favour of a landholder wrongfully dispossessing him, but whether, under the general limitation law, an original owner's right was extinguished in favour of a wrongful occupant holding adversely for the prescribed period. The cases, however, so far assist us that they establish, first, that a provision as to limitation which in terms merely bars the remedy may have the further effect of extinguishing the right, and, secondly, that as regards the possession and dispossession of immoveable property or an interest therein, the latter effect generally follows. If this view is correct, the presumption appears to be that, on the lapse of the six months' period prescribed by s. 96 (e) of the Rent Act, the defendants' right to the occupancy of the land in suit was extinguished, and that the possession which he afterwards forcibly obtained was not that of a tenant who could only be ejected through a revenue Court, but that of a trespasser who might be ejected through a [209] civil Court. If, on the other hand, this view is not correct, the result would seem to be that there is no limit of time within which the defendant might not forcibly re-occupy the land and assert the continuance of his tenancy. Such a state of things would lead to great insecurity in the occupancy of land by tenants holding under the landholder in good faith and in ignorance of the dispossessed tenant's claim, and to the substitution of irregular and violent methods of recovering possession for the methods which the Legislature has provided for a dispossessed tenant's benefit. We do not think that a construction

(1) 1 Boul. 70.

(3) 3 M.H.C.R. 99.

(2) 1 M.H.C.R. 85.

(4) 1 B. 592 (599).

of s. 96 (e) of the Rent Act which involves these consequences can be correct. We think that the lower appellate Court and Mr. Justice Blair have rightly construed the section, and we dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 209 (P.C.) = 26 I.A. 6 = 7 Sar. P.C.J. 405.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT :

Lords Watson, Hobhouse, and Davey and Sir R. Couch.

[On Appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces.]

MICHAEL MACAULIFFE, (Plaintiff-Appellant) v. CHARLES WILSON (Defendant Respondent.)

[17th, 21st, 22nd June, and 26th November, 1898.]

False representation alleged against vendor by purchaser—Inducement not proved—Shareholder buying shares from a Director of the Company.

To maintain a suit for damages upon a false representation alleged by purchaser against vendor, it must be established that the plaintiff was induced by the misrepresentation to enter into the contract.

Shares in a Banking Company which shortly afterwards went into liquidation, were sold by a Director to the plaintiff, a shareholder. The latter now sued the vendor, alleging inducement to buy the shares by the vendor's false representations as to the state of the Bank's affairs.

Both the Courts below concurred in finding that oral representations as to the latter alleged to have been made by the defendant to the plaintiff were not proved. Those Courts, however, had concurred in finding that the defendant, though he was not responsible for false balance-sheets issued before 1890, [210] was well aware of the falseness of the one issued for the half-year ending on the 30th June 1890. The Judicial Committee saw no reason for interfering with these concurrent findings.

The plaintiff, in this appeal, relied on the issue of the false balance-sheet of 1890, the issue of a false report by the Directors, and a wrongful payment of dividend, for the period above mentioned, acts in which the defendant had taken part; these acts, as a series, constituting false representations, the Bank having in fact been insolvent at the time.

But it was not shown by the evidence that the plaintiff had been induced to buy the shares, which he had contracted to buy in two sets, one in September, the other later on in 1890, by any of the representations so made; regard being had to the dates, respectively, and to his own knowledge. The dismissal of the suit was, therefore, maintained.

APPEAL from a decree C. Wilson v. M. Macauliffe (1) (1st August 1895) of the High Court, reversing a decree (31st July 1893) of the Subordinate Judge of Debra Dun.

The plaintiff-appellant sued the defendant-respondent on the 15th April 1893 for damages, the alleged consequence of the defendant's false representations. The claim was for Rs. 20,950; the price of shares, with Rs. 1,670, interest thereon, in the Himalaya Bank, a Bank limited by shares, registered and carrying on business until 1891, when it failed, at Masuri. In 1890 the plaintiff, who already held shares in the Bank, purchased one hundred shares, at Rs. 110 a share, on the 10th September in that year, and forty-seven more on the 27th November following.

1898 The Bank stopped payment on the 8th July 1891 and went into
Nov. 26. liquidation.

—
PRIVY
COUNCIL.

The plaintiff alleged that he had been induced to buy by the false representations of the vendor, who was then a Director of the Company, and had misrepresented to him the state of the Bank's affairs.

21 A. 209 The question raised, and decided on this appeal in the negative was,
(P.C.)= whether the plaintiff had been induced to buy by the defendant's falsely
26 I.A. 6= representing to him that the Bank was sound.

7 Sar. P.C.J.
405.

The facts are stated in their Lordships' judgment.

[211] The plaintiff's grounds were that he had been induced to buy the defendant's shares, on the faith in his statements, made both as a director and as a private person, to the purport that the Bank was earning profits and had a large reserve fund. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant, having with his co-directors issued half-yearly reports and balance-sheets, had with them issued a balance-sheet and report for the half-year ending on June 30th, 1890, which he knew to be false, and that on the strength of these last, when laid before the shareholders, a dividend was declared and paid, though the Bank was insolvent.

The defendant denied the representations attributed to him personally by the plaintiff. But did not deny that he knew that the last-mentioned balance-sheet was false. He asserted that, before the period to which it related, the accounts had been made up by a manager whom he and his co-directors, trusted; Queen-Empress v. Moss and others (1). The plaintiff had known, he urged, that there were rumours current as to the real state of the Bank at the time when he bought; and that he had bought the shares at his own risk, after making enquiries. The issues were whether the defendant by fraud or false representation, induced the plaintiff to enter into the contract in question, and to what damages he was entitled.

The Subordinate Judge found as a fact that false balance-sheets had been issued since 1886; but he found that there was no evidence to show that the defendant had been a party to the fraud and misrepresentation prior to the issue of the balance-sheet relating to the half-year ending on June 30th, 1890. The Judge doubted not that the latter was known by the defendant to be false at the time, and that he well knew of the unsecured debts due to the bank, and knew that the liabilities exceeded the assets. It was necessary for the plaintiff to establish fraud, and nothing short of it; Derry v. Peak (2). But, in dealing with his shares, a Director of a Company was in a position not, in itself, different from that of other shareholders as regarded sales. Gilbert, in re [212] The National Provincial Marine Insurance Company (3). The oral misrepresentations charged had not been proved. The judgment concluded in favour of the plaintiff for a reason apart from the fraud on which the case was founded. The reason was that the defendant had, when asked about the purchase of shares, mentioned a person whom he believed to be willing to sell some. This the Judge regarded as a fiction to bring on the sale of his own shares, and thereupon decreed the claim for Rs. 18,055.

The High Court (KNOX, Officiating C. J., and AIKMAN, J.) reversed the decision of the Subordinate Judge, and dismissed the suit. The ground of decision below had been taken in contravention of the well-known rule, referred to in Abdul Hossein Zenail Abadin v. Turner (4) that a charge of fraud must be substantially proved as laid; and that ground was also

(1) 16 A. 88.

(3) (1870) L.R. 5 Ch. D. 559.

(2) L.R. 14 Ap. Ca. 337.

(4) 11 B. 620.

insufficient in itself. On the findings of the Subordinate Judge the suit should have been dismissed.

There was the authority of Le Lievre v. Gould (1) for holding that negligence does not of itself constitute fraud. Distinguishing the present case from the Leeds Building and Investment Company v. Shepherd (2) the O. C. J. added:—"I have most carefully and anxiously considered all the evidence bearing on the question, and in my opinion there is no warrant for a finding that the negligence, great as it was, amounted to evidence of fraud. There remains the balance-sheet for the half-year ending 30th June 1890, which we have found was false to appellant's knowledge, and was directly issued by him. The question which arises for consideration in connection with this balance-sheet is whether it was in any way a material inducement which led to the purchase of the shares by the respondent. It could not have led to the purchase made by him of 100 shares on the 10th September 1890, for, according to his own statement, it was not till October 1890 that he received it, and he himself allows, that it in no way induced him to make the [213] purchase. But he alleges that the publication of the balance sheet of the half-year ending the 30th June 1890, was one of the considerations that led him to purchase the remaining 47 shares. It becomes therefore necessary to look at the evidence which bears on the sale of these 47 shares. In a letter dated 3rd October 1890, we find the proposal made by the respondent to buy 47 more shares in the bank from the appellant at the same price, provided that money could be lent him by the Himalaya Bank at 8 per cent. On the 3rd November 1890, the transaction reached a further stage, and respondent asked the appellant to deposit with the Manager of the Mussoorie Bank the scrip for these 47 shares. From this it is evident that the negotiations for the purchase of the 47 shares had been completed by the time the letter was written."

The O. C. J. added that, although the plaintiff had said that in purchasing these shares he was influenced by the report for the half-year ending on the 30th June 1890, it was impossible to accept his statement. The proposal to buy the shares, and the acceptance of the proposal, must have taken place before the 31st October 1890, although payment was delayed. The issue of the balance-sheet could in no way have operated on the defendant's mind to induce him to make the purchase.

The judgment then dealt with the payment of the dividend at 10 per cent. advertised in a newspaper of the 24th July 1890, and showed that this also could not have had effect to lead the plaintiff to enter into the transaction.

After referring to the principles stated in Smith v. Chadwick (3), and in Gerhardt v. Bates (4), the O. C. J. added:—"All this admits of no question; but my difficulty is in believing that the issue of the balance-sheets, reports, and advertisement of dividend did, or any one of them did, induce the plaintiff to purchase the shares. In fact my finding is that it did not. After fully considering all the evidence, I am satisfied that the [214] respondent purchased the shares as being in his eyes a speculation which would probably be a profitable one. While it is our duty to relieve persons who have been deceived by false representations, it is 1898

Nov. 26.

—
PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 209

(P.C.) =

26 L.A. 6 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.
405.

(1) (1893) L.R. 1 Q.B. 491.

(2) (1887) L.R. 36 Ch. D. 787.

(3) (1882) L.R. 20 Ch. D. 27.

(4) (1853) 2 El. and B. 476 = L.J. 22 Q.B. 364.

1898
Nov. 26.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 209
(P.C.)=
26 I.A. 6=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
405.

"equally our duty, as pointed out by Lord Justice Turner in Jennings v. Broughton (1) to be careful that in 'our anxiety to correct frauds,' we do not enable persons who have joined with others in speculation 'to convert their speculations into certainties at the expense of those with whom they have joined.' This would, in my opinion, be the effect of giving the relief for which he asks."

The rest of the judgment dealt with an argument of counsel that in the present case the appellant stood to the plaintiff, in a confidential relation, as a director, having special knowledge. A full report of that part of the judgment is given in the I.L.R. 18 All. 56.

AIKMAN, J., in concurring, after referring to Scott v. Dixon (2) said:—"It appears that a balance-sheet and report for the half year ending 30th June 1890, were published, and to this publication the defendant was a party. There is no doubt that that balance-sheet and report were false and misleading, and had it been shown that this balance-sheet and report were inducements which led the plaintiff to purchase the shares from the defendant, I think plaintiff would have been entitled to recover. But this balance-sheet and report did not reach the plaintiff until he had bought the first parcel of 100 shares, and engaged to buy the remaining 47 shares; he cannot therefore rely on any misrepresentations therein contained; as to previous balance-sheets, it has not been proved that the appellant Wilson had any part in publishing them. It is true that he was a Director from 1885, but up to 1890, when the Manager Moss went away on leave, the Directors appear to have taken no active part in the management of the bank, everything being left to Moss. In thus acting Wilson and his fellow-Directors were most culpably [215] negligent; but as is shown in the case of Le Lievre v. Gould, (3) mere negligence is not sufficient to establish fraud. Although it is not set forth in his plaint, the plaintiff in his evidence refers to a copy of The Pioneer which was received by him on the 25th or 26th July 1890, that is, before the purchase of his shares. In that Pioneer the payment of a 10 per cent. dividend on the bank shares was advertised. I do not, however, think that this would entitle the plaintiff to recover in an action for deceit, unless it was shown that the defendant intended by this advertisement to get his shares sold. That has not been made out to my satisfaction. The defendant is not shown to have advertised his shares for sale, or to have taken any active steps to dispose of them, and when the bank failed he owned 98. The impression which I derive from the perusal of the evidence is, that it was Macauliffe who expressed a wish to purchase the shares, not the defendant who offered them for sale. Much argument was addressed to us with a view of showing that the defendant as Director of the Bank stood in a fiduciary relation to the plaintiff, and that his mere silence as to the state of the Bank was sufficient to render him liable in an action for deceit. As to this I think the conclusion arrived at by the learned Subordinate Judge is correct, and that the case he refers to, i.e., Gilbert's case, (4) is an authority for the view which he took."

On this appeal, Mr. J. D. Mayne for the appellant, argued that there was error in the judgments below, both in fact and in law. The judges

(1) (1854) 5 De G. Mac. and G. 126.

(2) (1859) 29 L. J. Exch. 62; in note, Q. B. Hil. T. 1859.

(3) (1893) L.R. 1 Q.B. 491.

(4) (1870) L.R. 5 Ch. D. 559.

had regarded the contract to buy the forty-seven shares as concluded before the balance-sheet for the half-year ending on June 30th, 1890 was issued in the October following. But in fact the contract was not completed until December 1890. The High Court had also erred in its inference as to the false representation, and had not given due weight and effect to the cumulative statements in the false documents, followed by the dividend paid though not earned. Regarding the balance-sheets issued [216] before 1890, there had been a fraudulent use of them as a basis for the later misrepresentation in the issue of the balance-sheet above specified. However, there having been actual false representation found against the defendant, there was also error in the High Court's not having held him responsible for it to the plaintiff, who in buying more shares, had acted upon it:—this act, the buying more shares, having been the natural and proximate result of the belief which the defendant had brought about. The true view was that the defendant had made a fraudulent representation with intent to make the plaintiff believe in the soundness of the bank, with the result of his having been induced to buy the defendants' shares:—no remote result from what he was led to believe. This should have been held to support the suit. Where a fraudulent representation was made, though not made solely to the person who had acted upon it to his detriment, if made with intent to produce the false impression acted upon in a way that was reasonable, probable, and natural, then the author of that misrepresentation should be held responsible in damages to the person deceived. Therefore, there was error in the judgment in its absolving the defendant from liability on the ground that the aim, or object, of the false representation was not so much to induce any purchase of shares as to keep up the bank. And it was another mistake in the judgment to relieve the defendant from liability on the ground that the plaintiff had chosen the investment as a speculation of his own, voluntarily undertaking the risk, with knowledge of the state of affairs.

The following cases were referred to in connection with the relation between fraudulent misrepresentation and a consequential damage, as cause and effect—Peck v. Gurney (1), Scott v. Dixon (2), Bedford v. Bagshaw (3), Barry v. Crosskey (4), Clarke v. Dickson (5), Smith v. Chadwick (6).

[217] Mr. H. H. Asquith, Q. C., Mr. W. H. Upjohn, Q. C., and Mr. J. Roskill, for the respondent. The right to recover on the alleged fraudulent misrepresentation had not been made out by the evidence. In order to maintain a suit founded upon a false representation it was essential that the plaintiff should have been induced thereby to act, to his detriment. The balance-sheets from 1886 were false, but, except for the one issued in October 1890, the respondent had been found by the Courts below not to be responsible. The evidence was referred to at length to show that the Court below was right in finding that, though this balance sheet was false and the report also, they were not inducements, in fact, leading the plaintiff into the transaction; as he had, in fact, bought the first parcel of shares, and had engaged to buy the remaining forty-seven, before either of these documents had reached him. The case for the defence rested on the facts established by the evidence. But, in regard to the law, it was also contended on behalf

1898
Nov. 26.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 209
(P.C.)=
26 I.A. 6=
7 Sar. P.C.J
408.

(1) (1873) L.R. 6 Ap. Ca. H.L. 377.

(3) (1859) 29 L.J. Exch. 59.

(5) (1859) 6 C.B.N.S. 453 = 28 L.J. C. P. 453.

(6) (1882) L.R. 20 Ch. Div. 443. In Appeal (1884) 9 Ap. Ca. 187.

(2) (1859) 29 L.J. Exch. 62 in note.

(4) (1861) 2 J. and H. 23.

1898
Nov. 26.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 209
(P.C.)=
26 I.A. 6=
7 Sar. P.C.J
403.

of the respondent, that too wide a range of consequential damage had been suggested by the counsel for the appellant for cases of false representation. There must be a limit in respect of what would be legally included among the consequences entitling a person to sue on the ground of false representation made. If here the immediate object of its being made was to keep up the bank, then the sale of shares by a director was only an indirect, and remote, consequence. If the direct aim and intention in issuing the false balance-sheet was to make the shareholders declare a dividend, it did not follow that this false representation would support this suit. Reliance was placed on what was said in the judgment of Lord Cairns in Peck v. Gurney (1). If a representation has been made for a purpose different from the result which is alleged as the ground of damages, responsibility only attaches where the damages are proximate. In this case they were too remote. Barry v. Crosskey (2) was also cited. The injury to support a suit must have been the immediate, not the remote, consequence [218] of the misrepresentation, which, in the case where a third person, to whom it had not been directly addressed, had acted upon it, must have been such that the act was within the defendant's intention, or contemplation. This had not been shown in the present case.

Mr. J. D. Mayne, in reply, argued that the limit of consequences was in the degree of probability attending the act relied on as being a probable consequence of the fraudulent misrepresentation. The limit was to be regarded as dependent upon how far the act may have been a natural consequence.

Afterwards, on the 26th November 1898, their Lordships' judgment was delivered by SIR R. COUCH.

JUDGMENT.

The appellant in this case became a shareholder in the Himalaya Bank in 1886, several years before the transactions which are the subject of this appeal. This respondent had become a director of the bank in 1885, and continued to be one until it stopped payment on the 8th July 1891 and went into liquidation. On the 16th of May 1893 the appellant brought a suit against the respondent, alleging in his plaint that the respondent strongly advised him to buy shares in the bank as a good investment, and said the bank had a large reserve fund; was on a thoroughly sound footing, and that the directors had declared and paid the usual dividend of 10 per cent.; that the respondent had been for years a director of the bank, and for years, certainly since 1887, had issued or permitted the issue of false half-yearly reports and had issued false balance-sheets that alleged the existence of a reserve fund of Rs. 70,000 in 1885, and that every half-year the sum of Rs. 5,000 had been added to the reserve fund, whereas no reserve fund ever existed; that the balance-sheets purported to show that each half-year a profit of about 19 per cent. on the capital had been made, whereas no profit had been made; that in July 1890 the respondent issued a balance-sheet and subsequently issued a directors' report, both of which he knew to be false; that on the 28th of August 1890 the appellant on the faith of the false statements of the respondent, made both as a [219] director and as a private individual, was induced to purchase 100 shares for which he paid Rs. 11,000 on the 10th of September 1890; that on the 31st of October 1890 the false report and balance-sheet for the half-year ending the 30th of June 1890 was laid before the shareholders and the ad interim dividend of 10 per cent. declared and paid on the 1st of August 1890, was on that day confirmed, the respondent using the appellant's proxy for that purpose; that about the end of November 1890, by reason of the false representations made by the respondent, the appellant was induced to purchase 47 more shares for which he paid Rs. 5,170 on or about the 27th of November 1890. The respondent pleaded that he did not induce the appellant to make the purchases, and did not make any false statement or misrepresentation. The suit was heard by the Subordinate Judge of Dehra Dun who on the 31st July 1893 made a decree in favour of the appellant. On appeal to the High Court for the North-Western Provinces this decree was reversed and the suit was dismissed. Although the Courts differed in the result, they were agreed as to some of the facts in the case, and as their Lordships will treat concurrent findings of facts as binding upon the parties it is unnecessary to consider the evidence which is only applicable to them. Both Courts have found that the balance-sheets issued since 1887 were false. But they agree that the respondent is not responsible for them. The High Court say there is not sufficient evidence to show that the balance-sheets issued previous to that of 1890 were false to his knowledge. The Subordinate Judge found expressly that he was not responsible for those balance-sheets. They were prepared by Moss, the Manager of the bank, who was absent in Australia when that for the half-year ending on the 30th June 1890 was prepared. It was indeed admitted by Mr. Mayne who appeared for appellant, that previous to April 1890 the directors were acting upon representations made to them by Moss. The important part of the case is the issuing of the balance-sheet and report for the last half-year and declaring and paying the dividend on the 1st of August. Both [220] Courts have found that the verbal representations alleged to have been made by the respondent were not proved. The evidence of appellant of these representations has not been believed by either of the Courts. The case of the appellant must therefore rest upon what was done after April 1890.

(1) (1873) L.R. 6 Ap. Ca. H. L. 377.

(2) (1861) 2 J. and H. 23.

It appears in the minutes of a meeting of the directors of the bank on the 10th of July 1890, of which the respondent was chairman, that the directors had gone through the accounts of the bank and that the state of its affairs had become known to them. In the minutes of a meeting on the 16th of the same month, the respondent being the chairman, it is stated that "the half-yearly balance-sheets ending 30th June 1890 "having been duly approved of, it was decided to declare the usual ad interim dividend of 10 per cent. per annum, and that the usual notice "be inserted in the newspapers." And both Courts have found that the respondent knew that balance-sheet to be false.

With regard to the 100 shares bought on the 10th September 1890, the material question is whether the appellant in buying them was acting upon a representation contained in the balance-sheet ending on the 30th June 1890, or made by the declaration of the ad interim dividend, and was thereby induced to buy those shares. Barry v. Croskey (1), Peek v. Gurney (2). The appellant was examined as a witness in support of his case, and in considering the value of his evidence it should be observed that as regards the verbal representations said to have been made by the respondent, neither of the Courts below has 1898

Nov. 26.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 209
(P.C.)=
26 I.A. 6=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
405.

(1) 2 J. and H. 23.

(2) L.R. 6 E. and I.A. 412.

1898
Nov. 26.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 209
(P.C.)=
26 I.A. 6=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
405.

believed his evidence. He said, "On the 10th September I bought 100 shares at Rs. 110 each. I produce the scrip. I subsequently bought more scrip in the end of November—47 shares at the same price, from the defendant. The scrip is in the possession of the Mussoorie Bank. In purchasing these I was influenced by the consideration mentioned before by the half yearly report for the half-year ending 30th June 1890, Exhibit B, dated 31st October 1890." In cross-examination being questioned as to a [221] letter of his to the respondent of the 17th September, 1891, in which he said—"You signed the directors' report for the half-year ending 30th June 1890, declaring a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, and stating that the net profits were Rs. 19½ per cent. and a fraction. By this report the public were deceived as to the state of the bank, and I myself was led to buy 147 more shares from you" and asked why he was led by the balance-sheet of the 30th June, 1890 to purchase 147 shares, he answered:—"The No. 147 was a mistake for 47, and the mistake of writing 147 was a clerical error The balance-sheet of 30th June, 1890, did not influence me in buying the shares." In the printed record before their Lordships, there is between "the" and "shares" the words "(paper torn)". It is not necessary to quote the whole of his evidence on this matter. In their Lordships' opinion the effect of it is that he was not induced to purchase the 100 shares by the balance-sheet of the 30th June, 1890, or the declaration of the ad interim dividend.

As to the 47 shares the case is different. The evidence relating to that purchase is mainly documentary. It appears in the appellant's deposition that before the 8th September, 1890, there had been a negotiation for the purchase of the 100 shares, and on that day the appellant wrote to the respondent—"I have sold those 100 shares to Wright & Co. and they pay transfer charges, and I have also sold 200 other shares to our friend at Sialkot, so if Moss" (the Manager of the Bank) "will lend me Rs. 10,000, we can do a large business." On the 3rd October, he wrote another letter to the respondent in which, after speaking about the payment for the 100 shares, he said:—"I suppose Mr. Moss has returned by this. Have you asked him at what rate he can lend me money, say Rs. 5,000? If he lends it at 8 per cent., I will buy 46 more shares in the Himalaya Bank from you at the same price." On the 20th November, he wrote to the respondent:—"I do not understand that I only receive dividends on the 47 shares from the 1st of January, 1891. It is only two months since I [222] bought the 100 shares from you without any such understanding, and as the dividends for the current half-year will not be paid till March or April, I cannot consent to any such condition of the purchase of the 47 shares as you now propose, nor should I have gone to so much trouble in raising a loan for their purchase if you had said that was what you meant. I explained to you that I could only buy Himalaya shares on favourable terms. The bank has now a very bad name as evidenced by the large extra security required by the Mussoorie Bank and by other indications also."

He does not notice the half-yearly balance-sheet, which he said in his deposition he received in October, or the ad interim dividend, as having induced him to buy the shares. And on the 27th November he wrote:—"You state that I am to draw dividends for the current half-year, so the matter is settled between us."

A more important letter is one which the appellant wrote to the respondent on the 11th March, 1891. It is as follows:—

"Dear Wilson.—What are the strange rumours which I hear again respecting the Himalaya Bank? I heard things against it last year, but they were denied by you and the other directors, and so I myself was led not to believe them. At the same time you sold me a large number of shares at less than the market price. Capital has, I am told, a very damaging paragraph against the Himalaya Bank in which it is stated that its paper is being hawked about in the streets of Calcutta. I do not know what all this means."

"Of course, I know very well last year that the Bank had become exceedingly unpopular and had lost numerous constituents under Mr. Greenway's management; but I was hoping that it would come round after Mr. Moss' return."

"Banks generally go to grief, and indeed can only go to grief either by speculation or by large bad debts. Now I do not think that there is anybody robbing the Himalaya Bank, and its operations being necessarily on a small scale, I have not heard nor can I conceive that it has had any serious losses, and I do not understand the rumours I hear except in so far as that the Bank's business is not good at present."

"I would request the favour of your enlightening me and giving me your advice as to whether I ought to sell out, and if so, at what rate? You were quite right in selling, and I cannot blame you if the worst comes to the worst; but I think you ought to give me your candid advice now that matters appear to have become serious."

[223] This letter is not consistent with the appellant having been induced to buy either the 100, or the 47, shares by the half-yearly balance-sheet of June 1890 or the publication of the ad interim dividend. Their Lordships think that if he had been so induced there would have been some allusion in it to them.

It has been seen that his evidence about the verbal representation was not believed by the Courts below, and their Lordships cannot consider his evidence where he says that in purchasing the 47 shares he was influenced by the half-yearly report dated 31st October, 1890, as sufficient proof of it, or infer it from his knowledge of the reports. In their opinion he has failed to prove that, in buying the shares, he acted upon or was induced by any false representation for which the respondent is liable, and they will humbly advise Her Majesty to affirm the decree of the High Court and dismiss the appeal. The costs of it will be paid by the appellant.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant: Messrs. Pyke and Parrott.
Solicitors for the Respondent: Messrs. Rooke and Sons.

21 A. 223 (P.C.) = 3 C.W.N. 201 = 26 I.A. 45 = 7 Sar. P.C.J. 472.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT :

Lords Hobhouse, Macnaghten and Morris, and Sir R. Couch.

On appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces.

MUHAMMAD SIDDIQ KHAN AND OTHERS v. MUHAMMAD NASIR ULLAH KHAN AND OTHERS.* [18th November and 10th December, 1898.]

Contract construed as to interest claimed on part of purchase-money left unpaid by arrangement—Tender.

By an agreement between vendor and vendee part of the purchase-money was retained by the latter, but not as a mere deposit by the vendor. The money was to be retained as security, that the property sold should be cleared of incumbrances and a good title made.

1898
Nov. 26.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 209
(P.C.) =
26 I.A. 6 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
405.

1898

DEC. 10.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 223

(P.C.) = 3

C.W.N. 201 =

26 I.A. 45 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

472.

The vendee was not liable for interest unless he should refuse, or omit, to pay the money so retained when the vendor should have shown readiness to clear off the incumbrances. Till then the vendee was not bound to pay or to tender to the vendor the money retained.

[F., 10 A.L.J. 480 (484) = 15 Ind. Cas. 854 (855).]

APPEAL from a decree (11th June, 1895,) of the High Court modifying a decree (30th June, 1893), of the Subordinate Judge of Meerut.

[224] This suit (16th June, 1892) was brought by Haji Begam, the original plaintiff, now represented by the appellants, against the first respondent, and others, for Rs. 29,935.

In this, with some additions, three sums mainly formed the claim :— one sum of Rs. 17,000, balance of the purchase-money due to the plaintiff as representing her deceased husband, who in his life had sold a share in a mauza, on the 16th September, 1887, to the first defendant and his wife for Rs. 20,000, this purchase-money remaining with the vendees. Another of the sums claimed amounted to Rs. 9,718 for interest on the unpaid purchase-money from the above date to 15th June, 1892. A third sum was claimed as damages. The vendees, by the contract, were allowed to retain Rs. 17,000 for payment over to an incumbrancer, to whom it was due, Lala Srikishen Das; and also to retain Rs. 3,000 for payment to another. The latter of these sums was paid accordingly: but Srikishen was obliged to sue for the money due to him. The damages mentioned above were in respect of his costs of suit.

The defendants paid into Court, on the 25th January, 1893, Rs. 14,400, as being all that was due from them. The question on this appeal related to the interest which was claimed on the money so left in the hands of the vendees.

The Subordinate Judge decreed in favour of the plaintiffs Rs. 14,120. This was for the sum of Rs. 17,000 left as above stated, with interest thereon, but allowing for the money paid into Court, and not awarding anything in respect of costs incurred in Srikishen's suit.

Against this decree both parties appealed.

The High Court (EDGE C. J., and BANERJI, J.) modified the decree awarding, against the purchasers, Rs. 3,000 only, with interest from the date of the decree below till payment. Their reasons were thus expressed :—

“Under that sale deed it was the duty of the vendor to give a clear title to the vendees, they on their part paying Rs. 17,000 and Rs. 3,000, which together made up the purchase-money. [225] The evidence given on behalf of the defendants is entirely consistent with what we would understand from the sale deed itself to have been the terms when once we were informed that there were outstanding liabilities on the property. We find that it was agreed that the vendors should pay Srikishen Das and Indarman. We find that the vendees offered to pay to Srikishen Das before suit by him the Rs. 17,000 and that Srikishen Das would not receive it. Under these circumstances, what is the decree to which these plaintiffs are entitled? They are clearly entitled to a decree for the balance of Rs. 17,000, viz., Rs. 3,000, Rs. 14,000 having been received by them. When the vendees offered to pay the Rs. 17,000 to the vendor, he did not decline the offer on the ground that the money was not produced at the moment the offer was made, but he declined the offer, except on the condition that interest should be paid. Consequently, the offer in this case amounted to a valid tender, and that would disentitle the plaintiffs to any interest prior to decree.”

On this appeal—

Mr. J. D. Mayne appeared, for the appellants.

Mr. Herbert Cowell, for the respondents, was not heard.

Afterwards on the 10th December their Lordships' judgment was delivered by SIR R. COUCH:—

JUDGMENT.

By a deed dated the 10th September 1887, Muhammad Ghulam Kadir Khan sold a share of mauza Alipur Gajauri to Nasir-ul-lah Khan and Mus-sammatt Ulfat, his wife, in consideration of Rs. 20,000, which sum was in the deed stated to be for paying the debts due to Lala Srikishen Das and Indarman, Bhora, and the money was said in the deed to be "left with the vendees" for paying to the former Rs. 17,000 and to the latter Rs. 3,000. The latter sum was paid to Indarman and the question in this appeal relates to the Rs. 17,000. The suit was brought by Haji Begam, the widow of Ghulam Kadir Khan, against Nasir-ul-lah Khan and his wife, and in the course of it the appellants and respondents were on their decease substituted [226] for them as plaintiffs and defendants. The plaint alleged, as was the fact, that the Rs. 17,000 were not paid to Srikishen Das, and prayed for a decree for that sum and Rs. 9,718-6-9 interest from 10th September 1887 to 15th June 1892, the day of filing the plaint, and also for the costs of a suit by Srikishen Das against Ghulam Kadir Khan. The facts were that at the time of the sale Rs. 22,000 were due to Srikishen Das and there was also a mortgage to Harjit Singh and others upon which Rs. 15,000 were due. The evidence showed that the balance due to Srikishen Das and the money due on the mortgage to Indarman were agreed to be paid by Ghulam Kadir Khan and the property sold released from mortgages. Ghulam Kadir Khan failed to provide the money for this purpose, and Srikishen Das brought a suit against him and obtained a decree for what was due to him with interest and costs and the amount decreed was realised by Srikishen Das on the 18th March 1892. The second and third of the issues in the suit were whether the defendants should be charged with interest on the Rs. 17,000, and the costs of that suit. The Subordinate Judge who tried the suit allowed the interest but not the costs, and gave a decree for the balance of the claim after deducting Rs. 14,000, which he said had been paid on the 25th January 1893. It did not appear how this was paid. Both parties appealed to the High Court, which decided that the plaintiffs were not entitled to either the interest or costs, and modified the decree of the lower Court by giving to the plaintiffs Rs. 3,000, the balance of the Rs. 17,000 with interest from the 30th June 1893, the date of that decree. The plaintiffs have appealed against this decree.

Their Lordships are of opinion that there is no ground for the appeal. The Rs. 17,000 were not left with the vendees simply as a deposit of the money of the vendor. They were to retain it as a security that the property sold should be freed from the incumbrances upon it and that they should have a good title. They were entitled to retain it until the vendor provided the rest of the money necessary for this purpose. Unless this [227] was done, a payment of the Rs. 17,000 would leave the property still incumbered, as Srikishen would only receive it, if he did so, in part payment of what was due. From the nature of the transaction it was not a deposit upon which the vendees would be liable to pay interest unless they refused or omitted to pay the money when they were informed by the vendor that he was prepared to pay the balance necessary to satisfy

1898

DEC. 10.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 223

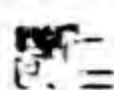

(P.C.) = 3

C.W.N. 201 =

26 I.A. 45 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

472.

1898
DEC. 10.
—
PRIVY
COUNCIL.  Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 223  Solicitors for the Appellants: Messrs. Barrow and Rogers.
(P.C.)=3  Solicitors for the Respondents: Messrs. Ranken Ford, Ford, and C.W.N. 201= Chester.
26 I.A. 45=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
472.

21 A. 227=19 A.W.N. (1899) 45.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Banerji.

SHEORAJ SINGH (Judgment-debtor) v. GAURI SAHAI AND OTHERS
(Decree-holders).^{*} [7th February, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, ss.344 et seqq—Insolvency—Holder of decree on mortgage not entered amongst the scheduled creditors—Decree-holder not debarred from executing his decree.

Held that a judgment-creditor holding a decree for sale upon a mortgage against an insolvent judgment-debtor will not, by reason of his debt not having been scheduled in the insolvency proceedings, lose his right to execute his decree. Haro Pria Dabia v. Shama Charan Sen (1) and Shridhar Narayan v. Almaran Govind (2), referred to.

[Appr., 30 C. 407 (410).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Pandit Baldeo Ram, for the appellant.

[228] Munshi Ram Prasad and Munshi Gokul Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX and BANERJI, JJ.—Raja Sheoraj Singh, the appellant before us, is a judgment-debtor of the respondents. The respondents hold a decree against him, dated the 5th March 1885, for sale under a mortgage deed. Before the decree had been passed Raja Sheoraj Singh had applied, under the provisions of Chapter XX of the Code of Civil Procedure, to be declared an insolvent. With his application he filed a list of his creditors. The list was subsequently amended by him, and in the amended list under the head No. 8 Har Sahai, father of the respondent, was entered as a creditor holding a decree dated the 5th March 1885, arising out of a mortgage bond in favour of Har Sahai, which bore date the 5th March 1879.[†] The judgment-debtor was eventually declared an insolvent by the order of this Court dated the 16th July 1886. Upon this the creditors mentioned in the application were called upon to produce evidence as to the amount and particulars of their respective pecuniary claims, and the record prepared at the time shows that Har Sahai did not put in an appearance. The entry says that he was said to be dead.

^{*} First Appeal No. 278 of 1897, from a decree of Pandit Raj Nath Saheb, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 20th September 1897.

[†] [In 19 A.W.N. (1899) 45, for 5th March 1879 we have 15th March 1879, Ed.]

(1) 16 C. 592.

(2) 7 B. 455.

The amount proved was declared to be nil. A receiver was appointed in due course, who made collections, paid the scheduled creditors in full, and found himself with a balance in hand of Rs. 8,324-7-11. After all this had taken place the present respondents made an application to the Collector, to whom the decree had been transferred for execution by reason of the property concerned being ancestral property, for attachment, and in due course of time we find that the District Judge paid over the balance to the respondents. They took it, and afterwards asked that the property now in dispute might be brought to sale for the recovery of the balance due from the appellant to the respondents. The property in question is the same property which had been mortgaged in the bond of 1879, and which the receiver had handed over for restoration to the judgment-debtor. Upon the application for sale the appellant raised several objections. Among them was the objection now before [229] us; but, with the exception of a question bearing on the question of interest, the application for execution was allowed to proceed and the property declared liable for sale. From this order arises the present appeal. It is contended before us that as the decree-holders had, under s. 356 of the Code of Civil Procedure, received their distributive share of the assets of the appellant in the hands of the receiver they cannot now execute the decree for the balance of the decretal amount; further, that by virtue of the proceedings taken under ss. 351, 356 and 357, the decree is incapable of execution. It was said that the moment the judgment-debtor was declared insolvent all creditors were bound to come and prove their debts; that the schedule prepared under s. 352 operated as a decree, and that any creditor who did not come in within the period of limitation allowed by art. 174 of the second schedule of the Indian Limitation Act and prove his debt, or, when the schedule was in error, did not get the schedule amended, lost any further rights or remedies in respect of his debt. In the present case the respondents had made no attempt either to prove their debt when the schedule was prepared, or to get the schedule amended after it had been prepared, and hence it was urged that they were not entitled to execute the decree they hold. We are unable to agree with this contention. We can find nothing in s. 353 or in any other part of Chapter XX of the Code which declares that where a creditor has not proved his claim or got an entry in the schedule amended he has debarred himself of all rights to execute a decree which he holds, especially when that decree is subsisting and is based upon a mortgage debt. S. 357, which lays down in the effect the consequence of the discharge of the judgment-debtor under the Code, refers only to scheduled debts. More than this, scheduled creditors are expressly declared to be still empowered to proceed against property other than that vested in the receiver under certain restrictions, whether that property was previously or subsequently acquired. In the case of Haro Pria Dabia v. Shama Charan Sen (1) it [230] has been pointed out "that where a person has got a right and it is contended that that right is taken away by statute, the right cannot be held to have been taken away except by express words in the statute, or by inference so clear from the terms of the enactment that there can be no doubt about it." The principle of that case is on all fours with the case before us. Our view is supported by the case of Shridhar Narayan v. Atmaram Govind (2). We dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 16 C. 592.

(2) 7 B. 455.

1899
FEB. 7.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 227 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 45.

1899

FEB. 9.

APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 230 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 38.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.*SITA RAM (Plaintiff) v. NAUNI DULAIYA (Defendant).*

[9th February, 1899.]

21 A. 230 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 38.Civil Procedure Code, ss. 25. 562—Transfer—Procedure—Suit transferred to his own file by District Judge Appeal to High Court—Remand to District Judge—Judge not competent to transfer.

By order of a District Judge under s. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure a suit was transferred from the Court of the Subordinate Judge to his own Court. The District Judge decided the suit, and from his decree there was an appeal to the High Court. The High Court remanded the suit under s. 562 of the Code to the Court of the District Judge. The latter transferred the suit so remanded for trial to the Subordinate Judge. Held that the District Judge had then no power to transfer the suit, but was bound to try it himself.

Semble that s. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure has no application to a case remanded under s. 562 of the Code.

[Diss, 9 C.L.J. 572 (573) = 4 Ind. Cas. 61 = 12 C.W.N. cxxxix; Appr., 24 A. 304; R., 36 C. 193 (202) = 5 C.L.J. 611; 9 N.L.R. 40 (41) = 19 Ind. Cas. 552.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Babu Ratan Chand, for the appellant.

Munshi Gulzari Lal (for whom Babu Satish Chandar Banerji), for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—The suit in which this second appeal has been instituted was transferred under the provisions [231] of s. 25 of the Code of Civil Procedure by the District Judge of Jhansi from the Court of the Subordinate Judge for trial before himself. After trial the District Judge came to the conclusion that the plaint disclosed no cause of action, and he therefore dismissed the suit. On appeal to the High Court the decision of the Judge was reversed. It was held that the plaint did disclose a cause of action, and the case was remanded to the District Judge under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure to be heard on the merits.

The District Judge, however, instead of trying the case himself on the remand, thought fit, for some reason unknown to us, to disregard the orders of this Court, and sent the case for trial to the Subordinate Judge. Subsequently the District Judge heard the case on appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge and dismissed the suit.

On second appeal to this Court the first plea urged is that the District Judge had no power to refer the case for trial to the Subordinate Judge, and that all the proceedings in the Jhansi Courts after the remand order of this Court were without jurisdiction.

We think this plea is sound and must prevail. When a case is remanded under s. 562 of the Code, that section provides that the remand shall be to the Court against whose order the appeal was made—in this case the Court of the District Judge of Jhansi. It then is the duty of that Court to re-admit the suit under its original number in the register and to proceed to hear it on the merits. There is no power given to the Judge to transfer the case to another Court. His power of transfer under s. 25 had been exhausted when the suit was originally withdrawn from the Court of the Subordinate Judge, so, even if s. 25 were applicable to a case remanded under s. 562, (we think it is not applicable) that section does not empower the District Judge to re-transfer the case to the subordinate Court from which it had been withdrawn.

* Second Appeal No. 830 of 1896, from a decree of F. W. Fox, Esq., District Judge of Jhansi, dated the 3rd June 1896, reversing a decree of A. Rahman, Esq., Subordinate Judge of Jhansi, dated the 26th February 1896.

The plain and unmistakeable duty of the Judge was to have obeyed the law by hearing the case himself as a Court of original [232] jurisdiction. He must now perform that duty, and it is much to be regretted that the illegal procedure adopted by the Judge has entailed heavy costs on the parties. We allow this appeal. We set aside as without jurisdiction all proceedings in the Jhansi Courts in this case subsequent to the remand order of this Court, and we direct the District Judge now to re-admit the suit under its original number and to proceed to determine it on the merits.

Costs will follow the event.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

21 A. 232=19 A.W.N. (1899) 46.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

MAHESH PARTAP SINGH (Defendant) v. DIRGPAL SINGH (Plaintiff).^{*}
[11th February, 1899.]

Hindu law—Impartible Raj—Allowance to younger sons - Matters which may be considered in assessing such allowance.

Held that in calculating what allowance might properly be made to the younger brother of the holder of an impartible raj, regard might properly be had, not merely to the extent of the property constituting the raj, but to the other sources of income, whencesoever derived, possessed by the incumbent of the raj.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Munshi Ram Prasad, Pandit Sundar Lal and Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the appellant.

Pandit Moti Lal and Babu Jiwan Chandar Mukerji, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—The appellant, who was the defendant in the Court below, is the Raja of the Anowla raj, in the Gorakhpur district, admitted to be an impartible raj. The plaintiff is one of his younger brothers. The suit, out of which this appeal has arisen, was brought by the plaintiff, and he prayed that property yielding an annual income of twelve hundred rupees be determined to be property out of which he should obtain his [233] maintenance as a junior member of the family, and he be put in possession of such property, or in the alternative a maintenance allowance of twelve hundred rupees a year should be fixed and charged on the property mentioned in the plaint. The plaint contained other prayers also, with which we are not concerned in this appeal. The defendant denied the plaintiff's right to maintenance and disputed the propriety of the amount claimed as the proper amount of plaintiff's maintenance. The Court below has made a decree in the plaintiff's favour, declaring him

* First Appeal No. 102 of 1897, from a decree of Maulvi Syed Jafar Husain, Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 26th March 1897.

1899
FEB. 9.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 230=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 38.

1899
FEB. 11. entitled to an annual allowance of six hundred rupees, to be paid out of the raj.

—
APPEL- Both parties have appealed, but the only question to which the appeals LATE were confined in the argument before us is that of the amount of the CIVIL. allowance fixed, the defendant contending that it is too high and the — plaintiff urging that it is too low. We have to be satisfied that the 21 A. 232= amount fixed by the Court below is unreasonable with reference to the 19 A.W.N. circumstances of the case. As we have said above, it is no longer disputed 1899) 46. that the plaintiff is entitled to an allowance for maintenance. In our opinion the amount of maintenance in a case like this should be determined upon the same principles upon which the amount which ought to be awarded as maintenance has ordinarily to be determined, and every case must be decided with reference to its own peculiar facts. In this case it appears that the raj has an income of over nine thousand rupees from villages. There is also an income from malikana, which is appurtenant to the raj, so that the profits from the raj itself amount to over twelve-thousand rupees per annum. Besides, there is an income of over nine thousand rupees derived from money-lending carried on in the names of the Raja and his wife. It was within the power of the defendant to show that this income was derived from sources unconnected with the raj, but he made no effort to prove that the capital invested in money-lending was not a part of the property which came to him from his father.
Having regard to the amount of profits yielded by the immoveable property belonging to the raj and the number of years the defendant has been in possession it is [234] very probable, as alleged by the plaintiff, that the said capital was inherited by the defendant from his father. It appears no doubt that the plaintiff has some income of his own derived from shares in some villages and other property standing in his name. The defendant urges that the villages in which shares are recorded in the name of the plaintiff were acquired by the father of the parties and form a part of the raj.
This has not been proved. The villages were acquired in the name of the plaintiff and stood recorded for several years in his name. It is, however, immaterial to decide whether the property in the possession of the plaintiff is a part of the raj or not, because we are of opinion that in fixing an allowance for the plaintiff we should take into account the sources of income, however derived, which the plaintiff now enjoys. We think that the principle upon which maintenance is allowed to a Hindu widow should be applied in determining the amount of maintenance to be awarded to the plaintiff.
Having regard to the income of the raj and also to the fact that the plaintiff has some other sources of income, the amount fixed by the Court below, namely, fifty rupees per mensem, does not appear to us to be unreasonable.
In coming to this decision we have to bear in mind the claims of other members of the family and the expenditure which the defendant has to incur in maintaining his position as a Raja. While therefore, on the one hand, the allowance to be fixed for the junior members is not to be such as to cripple the raj, it must, on the other hand, be proportionate to the fair wants of a person in the position and rank in life of the plaintiff. We think the allowance fixed by the lower Court is reasonable and answers all requirements. We dismiss the appeal with costs [which will include one hundred and eighty five rupees as fees for the respondent's Counsel]*

Appeal dismissed.

* [The words in rectangular brackets form a portion of the judgment. They are not to be found in I. L. R. ED.]

21 A. 235 (F.B.) = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 41.

[235] FULL BENCH.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Knox, Mr. Justice Blair, Mr. Justice Banerji, Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Aikman.

MADAN LAL (Defendant) v. BHAGWAN DAS.
(Plaintiff).^{*} [16th February, 1899.]

1899
FEB. 16.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 235
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 41.

Mortgage—Prior and subsequent mortgages—Mortgaged property sold twice in execution of decrees in suits in each of which the other mortgagee was not a party—Suit for ejectment by one auction purchaser against the other—Form of decree.

B mortgaged a house, first to D and subsequently to M and C. M and C brought a suit on their mortgage without making D a party to it, obtained a decree, and put the house up to sale, and it was purchased by ML. Subsequently to the date of the decree in the above suit, D brought a suit on his mortgage, without making M and C parties thereto, obtained a decree and put the house up to sale, and it was purchased by BD. BD then sued ML for ejectment and damages. Held that the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed, and that it was not competent to the Court to grant a decree in favour of the plaintiff conditioned on the failure of the defendant to redeem the mortgage upon which the plaintiff's title was ultimately based. Hargu Lal Singh v. Govind Rai (1) followed and explained.

[Appr. 11 C.W.N. 314 (316) ; R., 26 A. 464 = A.W.N. (1904) 108 ; 29 A. 339 (P.C.) = 4 A.L.J. 329 = 9 Bom. L.R. 656 = 5 C.L.J. 563 = 11 C.W.N. 561 = 17 M.L.J. 263 = 34 I.A. 102 ; 5 C.L.J. 527 ; 21 M.L.J. 213 (230) = 9 M.L.T. 431 (499) = 1 M.W.N. (1911) 165 (175) = 9 Ind. Cas. 513 (520) ; 7 O.C. 243.]

THE facts of the case, as stated in the judgment of the lower appellate Court, were as follows :—

"Bajinath, the owner of a house in Allahabad, mortgaged it first to Dina Nath, a minor, on 26th June 1891, for Rs. 200.

"On 2nd February 1892, he made a second mortgage of the same house for Rs. 150 to Maina Bibi and Mul Chand.

"Dina Nath's mortgage was repayable in 10 years, with interest at 12 per cent. There was a covenant in the deed that so long as the mortgage was not satisfied, the house will not be sold, gifted or mortgaged, and there was a further provision—'if, God forbid, the mortgagee entertained, within the period fixed for payment, in any way, a doubt, whether, weak or strong, with regard to the realisation of his money, he was at liberty to realise at once his money, principal and interest, by the cancelment of [236] the term fixed for repayment: I, my heirs, my representatives have no objection to it.'

"Both the mortgages were registered. Maina Bibi and Mul Chand, the second mortgagees, instituted, on 11th May 1894, a suit on their mortgage, without making the first mortgagee a party to it, and obtained a decree on 25th June 1894. The house was sold in execution of that decree on 21st December 1894, and purchased by Madan Lal, defendant, for Rs. 72.

"On 28th September 1894, Dina Nath instituted a suit on his mortgage, and obtained a decree on 8th November 1894. Maina Bibi and ^{*} Second Appeal No. 644 of 1896, from a decree of Babu Brij Pal Das, Subordinate Judge of Allahabad, dated the 9th June 1896, reversing a decree of Mr. H. David, Munsif of Allahabad, dated the 17th February 1896.

1899
FEB. 16.

—
FULL BENCH.

—
21 A. 235
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 41.

Mul Chand, the second mortgagees, who had obtained the decree on 25th June 1894, on their mortgage, were not made parties to this suit.

"The house was sold on 25th June 1895, in execution of Dina Nath's decree and purchased by the plaintiff for Rs. 265.

"Plaintiff, attempting to take possession of the house, was resisted by the defendant; therefore plaintiff brought this suit for possession and for Rs. 11-4-0 compensation."

The Court of first instance dismissed the claim. On appeal the lower appellate Court reversed the decree of the first Court and decreed the plaintiff's claim, but subject to the condition that if the principal and interest of Dina Nath's mortgage, from the date of the deed to the date of payment, less Rs. 60 received in lieu of interest, should be paid by the defendant within four months from the date of the decree, the plaintiff's suit would stand dismissed.

The defendant appealed to the High Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Babu Satya Chandar Mukerji, for the appellant.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Babu Datti Lal, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J.—We do not think that we ought to allow the questions decided by the Full Bench of this Court in Hargu Lal Singh v. Gobind Rai (1), so recently as July 1897, to be now reopened. The only question therefore upon which we have heard [237] the learned pleaders on both sides is whether the present case is distinguishable from that decided by the Full Bench. The conclusion at which we have arrived is that there is no material distinction in principle between the two cases. Certain differences have been suggested in reference to the title set up by the defendant here; but these cannot make the cases distinguishable, for the decision of the Full Bench was necessarily irrespective of any view of the defendant's title, and based exclusively upon the failure of the plaintiff to prove a title to present possession at the date of his ejectment suit. Here, as there, the only title of the plaintiff was derived from a simple mortgage which did not entitle the mortgagee to possession as against any one, and a purchase under a decree for sale in a suit to which this defendant was not a party. Here, as there, the suit was an ordinary suit for ejectment, the plaintiff claiming to recover possession from the defendant absolutely and not subject to any condition. Here, as there, one of the Courts below—there the Court of first instance, here, the lower appellate Court—gave the plaintiff a decree for possession with a conditional right to the defendant to redeem. Before us the learned advocate for the plaintiff respondent has admitted that his client is not entitled to an absolute decree for possession. He has, however, argued that the case is distinguishable from Hargu Lal Singh v. Gobind Rai, on the ground that here it is the lower appellate Court which has given his client a decree for possession with a conditional right to the defendant to redeem, and that there is nothing in the Full Bench decision which necessarily implies that such a decree is wrong or requires this Court in second appeal to set it aside. From the paper-book in the Full Bench case it appears that there the plaintiff, in his memorandum of appeal in this Court against the lower appellate Court's decree, absolutely dismissing the suit, pleaded that he was entitled, if not to an absolute, at least to a qualified, decree for possession, such as the first Court had given him. The Full Bench nevertheless dismissed the appeal, and did not give the plaintiff the qualified decree for possession [238] which he asked for. It is suggested that that particular plea in the memorandum of appeal may not have been pressed before the Full Bench, as the judgment does not refer to it. However this may be, it appears to us that the Full Bench did distinctly indicate their opinion that, in a suit for ejectment, such as the present, a decree for possession, with a conditional right to the defendant, should not be passed. They say that the plaintiff's suit "was properly dismissed, though on other grounds;" in other words, that the lower appellate Court acted properly in setting aside the qualified decree for possession passed by the first Court, and in substituting for it a decree absolutely dismissing the suit, though it gave wrong reasons for doing so. It is impossible to suppose that they would have said that and proceeded to confirm the lower appellate Court's dismissal of the suit if they had thought that a qualified decree for possession, such as the first Court had passed, was right in such a suit. We cannot see any substantial distinction between this case and that. We must follow the decision in Hargu Lal Singh v. Gobind Rai, and the result is that we allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the lower appellate Court, and restore that of the first Court, dismissing the suit with costs in all Courts. KNOX, BLAIR, BANERJI, BURKITT and AIKMAN, JJ. concurred.

(1) 19 A. 541.

1899
FEB. 16.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 235
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 41.

Appeal decreed.

21 A. 238 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 42.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

KISHAN LAL (Plaintiff) v. GARURUDDHWAJA PRASAD SINGH AND OTHERS (Defendants).^{*} [18th February, 1899.]

Hindu law—Pious duty of son to pay his father's debts - Civil Procedure Code, s. 317—Execution of decree—Sale in execution—Benami purchase—Suit by creditor on the ground that the certified purchaser is not the real purchaser.

Held that the provisions of s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure are subject to no limitation other than such as is contained in the section itself, [239] namely, that the suit the maintenance of which is prohibited by that section should be (1) brought against a certified purchaser and (2) based upon the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of a person other than the certified purchaser. The question of who the plaintiff may be is not material.

The judgment of Knox, J., in The Delhi and London Bank v. Chaudhri Partab Bhaskar (1) approved; Rama Kurup v. Sri Devi (2) followed; The Uncovenanted Service Bank v. Abdul Bari (3) distinguished; Mussumat Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhooree Lall (4) and Williamson v. Norris (5) referred to.

[R., 26 A. 82 = A.W.N. (1903) 199; 30 A. 156 = 5 A.L.J. 175 = A.W.N. (1908) 61; 31 A. 176 = 6 A.L.J. 263 = 1 Ind. Cas. 479; 17 C.L.J. 38 (47) = 17 C.W.N. 280 (288) = 18 Ind. Cas. 625 (630); 8 O.C. 306 (311); 53 P.R. 1901 = 62 P.L.R. 1901].

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court. Munshi Gobind Prasad and Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the appellants.

Mr. D. N. Banerji, for the respondent, Hub Lal.

^{*} First Appeal No. 93 of 1897, from a decree of Rai Anant Ram, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 23rd December 1896.

(1) 21 A. 29. (2) 16 M. 290. (3) 18 A. 461.
(4) (1872) 14 M.I.A. 496. (5) (1898) 68 L.J. Q.B. 34.

1899

JUDGMENT.

FEB. 18.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 238 =

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 42.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by BURKITT, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff from a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, partly dismissing the plaintiff's suit. The suit was one for sale on a mortgage of certain property executed by the defendant Garuruddhwaja Prasad Singh on February 28th, 1893. Among the mortgaged properties, in addition to landed property, was one-half of a fort or kila at Baswan, which had belonged to the mortgagor. This fort had, previous to suit, been sold in execution of a money decree held by one Madhri Saran, and had been purchased by the defendant, Hub Lal. The Subordinate Judge has given the plaintiff a decree against the mortgagor, but dismissed the suit as against the mortgagor's minor son, Matmatangadhwaja Prasad Singh, and as against Hub Lal. The result of this decree is that in execution the plaintiff can proceed only against the father's (the mortgagor's) interest (presumably one-half) in the mortgaged property, other than the fort, and that the latter cannot be touched at all.

The plaintiff now appeals, contending that he is entitled to a decree for sale of the whole property mortgaged to him without any exception. There are thus two matters to be considered in this appeal. The first is concerned with the dismissal of the [240] suit against the respondent, Matmatanga Prasad, the minor son of the mortgagor. We regret that this respondent has not been represented by counsel at the hearing of the appeal. The grounds on which the lower Court dismissed the suit against him are "that Garuruddhwaja is an extremely immoral and extravagant man, and that he has wasted property worth lakhs of rupees in a very short time. Therefore the sons and grandsons of such a man should not be held liable for any debt incurred by him." Further, the Subordinate Judge says that "whatever portion of the debt passed into Garuruddhwaja's hand was, like other debts, spent by him for his own private purposes."

These reasons are not, in our opinion, sufficient to exonerate the son from the pious duty of paying his father's debt. Had it been proved that the debt had been contracted for immoral purposes and that the person who advanced the money was aware of the purpose for which it was being borrowed, the son would not have been liable. There is, however, not a scrap of evidence to show that the debt which formed the consideration for the bond in suit was contracted for any such purpose. Indeed the details in the schedule show that such was not the case. A mere general allegation that the father led an extravagant, immoral, and licentious life would, even if proved, not be sufficient to relieve the son. It is now settled law in this Court since the case of Badri Prasad v. Modan Lal (1), that a son can be sued jointly with his father to recover a debt contracted by the father if the debt had not been contracted for purposes such as would exonerate the son from the pious duty of paying his father's debt. We are therefore constrained to allow this appeal as far as the respondent Matmatangadhwaja Prasad Singh is concerned, and to give a decree against him in favour of the appellant.

We have next to deal with the second portion of this appeal, namely, the case of the respondent, Hub Lal, the purchaser of the mortgagor's interest in the fort at Baswan. That interest was purchased by Hub Lal for Rs. 2,901 on May 10th, 1894, in execution [241] of a decree held by one Madhri Saran, and was under attachment by the Court in execution of the latter decree when it was mortgaged to the plaintiff-appellant in February, 1893. That mortgage, therefore was void to the extent provided for by s. 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The contention for the appellant is that at the auction sale the real beneficial purchaser was not the respondent, Hub Lal, who is the certified purchaser, and that the latter purchased benami for the judgment-debtor Garuruddhwaja Prasad Singh, appellant's mortgagor. It was thereupon contended for the appellant that his mortgagor is the real beneficial owner of the fort, and that the latter was liable to be taken in execution to satisfy any decree which appellant might obtain on his mortgage. It is to be noticed that the plaint does not contain any prayer asking for a declaration that the mortgagor, Garuruddhwaja Prasad, was the beneficial owner, and Hub Lal a fictitious purchaser. But the plaint contained a prayer which is certainly peculiar, bearing in mind the fact that this Court had refused to set aside the sale to Hub Lal. It asked that if the sale to him were found not to be fictitious, the Court should direct him to receive back the purchase-money he had paid, and that on that being done the Court should direct the sale of the fort with the rest of the mortgaged property. This rather extraordinary request does not seem to have been pressed in the Court below, and is not repeated in the memorandum of appeal. The memorandum of appeal, however, contends that it has been established that Hub Lal had purchased benami for Garuruddhwaja Prasad, but like the plaint, it abstains from asking that a declaration to that effect should be made. The appeal, as regards Hub Lal, was, however, fought before us by counsel on both sides as if the object of the suit, as far as the appellant was concerned, was to obtain a declaration that the plaintiff's mortgagor, Garuruddhwaja Prasad was the beneficial purchaser and an order thereupon that the fort should be sold in satisfaction of the mortgage of February, 1893. Such a construction can certainly be put on the plaint, as otherwise the allegation of the benami purchase would be superfluous.

(1) 15 A. 75.

[242] It being then admitted for the appellant that his suit, as far as Hub Lal, the certified purchaser is concerned, is a suit against Hub Lal, instituted on the ground that his purchase was made on behalf of the appellant's debtor Garuruddhwaja Prasad, the question arises whether such a suit can be maintained, or whether it is forbidden by s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The words of that section are:—"No suit shall be maintained against the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of any other person." The opening words "no suit shall be maintained" mean, we have no doubt, "no suit shall be instituted, and if such a suit be instituted it shall fail." That is the only meaning we can attach to the word "maintained." We have heard very able and learned arguments from counsel on either side as to the construction to be put on this s. 317. For the respondent it was contended that the section means what it says, neither more or less, and that it forbids the institution of any suit by any plaintiff against the certified purchaser if the object of the suit is to have it declared that the purchase was made on behalf of any person other than the certified purchaser. For the appellant, on the other hand, it was argued that we should not put on the section its literal and grammatical meaning, that we should import into it an exception which finds no place in it, and that the section should be construed so as to permit of a suit by a creditor of the alleged beneficial purchaser, by adding after "any other person" the words "except it be a suit by a creditor of such other person."

We fail to see why we should put such a restrictive interpretation on the very wide language of the section, and why we should say that the words

1899
FEB. 18.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 238=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 42.

1899
FEB. 13.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
“no suit” do not really mean “no suit” in their plain grammatical sense, and do mean “no suit excepting a suit by a creditor.” Had the Legislature intended that a certain class of suits should be excepted from the sweeping prohibition laid down in s. 317 it would, we think, certainly have altered the wording accordingly and would [243] not have left it to the ingenuity of Judges to discover that it really did not mean what it purported to say in the plainest language.

21 A. 238=
19 A.W.N.
1899) 42.
The object of the section was no doubt to prevent judgment-debtors from purchasing their own property at auction in the name of another, and for that purpose the section provided that no suit shall lie against the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was benami. The section does not designate any particular person or class of persons as being the person who shall not sue. It confines itself to indicating the person who shall not be impleaded as defendant in a suit instituted on the specific ground mentioned. In that way it prevents judgment-debtors who have purchased in the names of other persons from suing the certified purchasers for possession; that is to say, it permits the benami certified purchaser to reap the benefit of his fraud by barring the real purchaser from suing him, and if it also prevents the creditors of such judgment-debtors from suing the certified purchaser, it may well be that the evil is not unequally balanced. The cases are by no means few in which the benami certified purchaser defies all attempts by the real purchaser to get possession and holds on to the property. According to the construction for which appellant contends, such a certified purchaser could be sued by the creditors of the judgment-debtor, though not by the judgment-debtor, the beneficial purchaser. It appears to us that if one infringement of the hard-and-fast rule laid down by s. 317 be allowed in the case of a creditor of judgment-debtor it will be impossible to prevent others. Why should not the same privilege be allowed to a person who had purchased from the judgment-debtor the property fraudulently withheld benami by the certified purchaser? Similarly, why should not a mortgagee holding a mortgage executed by the alleged beneficiary after the alleged fictitious sale, be allowed to sue such certified purchaser for sale on his mortgage? Other cases might be put, such as cases of gift, devise by will, and the like. It seems to us that if the creditor of a judgment-debtor be not debarred [244] by s. 317 from suing the certified purchaser on the ground mentioned in that section, it will be impossible to exclude many other classes of plaintiffs from the same privilege. It is objected that the classes of persons mentioned above derived title from the judgment-debtor. But surely so does the appellant in the present case. How does his title differ from that held by a vendee or mortgagee to whom the alleged beneficiary had sold or mortgaged the property after the alleged fictitious sale? Ex hypothesi the property really belongs to the judgment-debtor to deal with as he pleases. If then the benami certified purchaser set him at defiance, we fail to see how, on the construction of s. 317 for which the appellant contends, a suit by such a vendee or mortgagee could be held to be barred by that section, or even a suit by the holder of a simple money decree for money borrowed subsequent to the date of the alleged fictitious sale, and in this way the alleged real purchaser would be allowed to maintain that suit indirectly through a friendly party which the law forbids him to maintain directly. We cannot see that the fact that these new obligations came into existence subsequently to the alleged fictitious sale has any bearing on the question. On the above considerations we are of opinion that if we accept appellant's contention we must read the opening words of s. 317 as if they ran "no suit by a judgment-debtor shall be maintained" and must hold that with one exception any person may institute a suit against a certified purchaser "on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of any other person." We are not prepared to adopt that conclusion. If the construction we put on this section is one which in some cases enables fraudulent judgment-debtors to defraud their creditors the remedy is, we think, to be sought for in legislation, and not by putting a constrained meaning on words which are plain and unmistakeable.

The question of the construction to put on s. 317 of Code of Civil Procedure has recently been most exhaustively considered by our brother Knox in the case of The Delhi and London Bank [245] v. Chaudhri Partab Bhaskar (1). The decision at which that learned Judge arrived was that he was "unprepared to import extrinsic matter which will limit or qualify the same words beyond those which are to be found in the section itself, and which limit the suit to a suit (1) brought against a certified purchaser, and (2) based upon the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of a person other than the certified purchaser." He also examined the long array of decisions which at first sight appear to support the construction of s. 317 for which the appellant here contends, and showed conclusively that nearly all of them were suits in which the ostensible auction-purchaser, the certified purchaser, was the plaintiff, and not suits against such a purchaser. There can be no doubt now that the maintenance of the former class of suits is not forbidden by s. 317, for, to use the words of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Mussumat Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhooree Lall (2) (on the section corresponding to s. 317 of the present Code)—"there is nothing from which it can be inferred that more is meant than is expressed. It is confined to a suit against a certified purchaser and to a specific direction as to what should be done with it, etc." In suits in which the certified purchaser is the plaintiff the question which has been discussed in this appeal could not arise, and any decision on it would be obiter and not binding on us. The case of the Uncovenanted Service Bank v. Abdul Bari (3), to which our brother Knox did not refer, was a suit in which the certified purchaser was plaintiff, and in which he asked for a declaration that his purchase was not benami. Such a suit clearly is not within the prohibition contained in s. 317.

On the whole, we have come to the conclusion, for the reasons given above, that this suit, so far as it concerns the respondent Hub Lal, being a suit against the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the respondent, [246] Garuruddhwaja Prasad Singh, cannot be maintained. We fully concur in the opinion expressed by our brother Knox in the case cited above, and we are supported in our conclusion by the High Court of Madras in the case of Rama Kurup v. Sri Devi (4), in which the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Handly, dissenting from one of the Calcutta decisions cited by our brother Knox in the case mentioned above, say that that decision "seems to us to contravene the clear meaning of the section (317). It is not, in our opinion, a sufficient reason for not carrying out the express terms of the section, that to do so would be to allow a fraud to be perpetrated. The person in whose name a purchase has been made for the benefit of, and with the money of another, of course

1899
FEB. 18.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 238=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 42.

(1) 21 A. 29 (40 et seqq.)
(3) 18 A. 461.

(2) 14 M.I.A. 496.
(4) 16 M. 290.

1899
FEB. 18.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 238 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 42.

commits a fraud in claiming that property as his own. Nevertheless the law says that a suit shall not be maintained against him on the ground that the purchase was benami, and thus provides that this fraud shall prevail. The object of the section was, we consider, to put a stop to benami purchases at execution sales, and this object can only be carried out by enforcing it in all cases without regard to consequences." The above observations have our fullest concurrence, and to them we would add the following from a judgment of Mr. Justice Wills in Williamson v. Norris (1):—"To argue that, because an enactment may have an effect which was not thought of when it was passed, it cannot have the plain and obvious meaning of the words used is a fallacy, though a common one."

The appeal therefore, as far as Hub Lal is concerned, fails and must be dismissed. It is therefore unnecessary for us to discuss the question of fact as to whether Hub Lal's purchase was or was not benami. We will only remark that the evidence of Hub Lal himself, whom the plaintiff-appellant called as his witness, seems to settle the question.

We allow this appeal with costs as against the respondent Matmatanga Prasad, and we dismiss the appeal with costs as against the respondent, Hub Lal.

Decree modified.

21 A. 247 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 47.

[247] CIVIL APPELLATE JURISDICTION.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

DEOCHARAN SINGH AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. BENI PATHAK
AND OTHERS (Defendants).^{*} [20th February, 1899.]

Landholder and tenant—Act No. XII of 1881 (N.W.P. Rent Act), s. 189—Appeal—
"Rent payable by the tenant" not in issue.

Certain defendants being sued by the zamindars for the rent of land held by them, pleaded in effect that, whatever the rent the land in suit might be, they were entitled to retain it under an agreement between them and the predecessor in title of the plaintiffs in lieu of interest payable to them on account of a mortgage given by the said predecessor in title.

Held that the case was not one in which an appeal would lie to the District Judge under s. 189 of the N.W.P. Rent Act, inasmuch as the rent payable by the tenant was not in issue in the suit.

[R., 23 A. 283 = 21 A.W.N. (1901) 75.]

THE facts of this case are sufficiently stated in the judgment of the Court.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the appellants.

Mr. Amiruddin, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by STRACHEY, C.J.—The question in this appeal is whether Mr. Justice Dillon was right in holding that the plaintiffs had no right of appeal under s. 189 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act, XII of 1881, from the decision of the Collector dismissing their suit on appeal from the Assistant Collector of the second class. Its solution depends on the exact nature of the matter in issue and decided in the suit, and this is not altogether easy to determine. The suit was in terms one for arrears of rent for three years, under s. 93 (a) of the Rent Act. The written statement of the defendants is not very clearly expressed. Its principal plea is thus stated:—"The rent of the land, in respect of which rent is claimed, has all along been enjoyed by the defendants' ancestor and subsequently by the defendants in lieu of interest under a mortgage deed of 23rd December 1886, executed by the former zamindar from the time of the execution of the said deed of mortgage. No zamindars of the mahal ever received or realized [248] rent in respect of the said land. Hence, unless all the co-sharers in the mahal re-pay the mortgage debt and get the mortgage redeemed, no zamindar of the mahal can be competent to sue for arrears of rent." In another paragraph of the written statement the defendant pleaded that in two of the years to which the suit related "the mahal was joint. The plaintiffs alone are not competent to sue. There were also other sharers." The best construction which we are able to place upon the written statement is that the defendants, while not denying that the land in suit was held under the plaintiffs and their co-sharers as zamindars, pleaded that under a mortgage executed in favour of their ancestor by the plaintiffs' predecessor in title, they were entitled, until redemption of the mortgage, to apply, in satisfaction of the interest due, the money which they would otherwise have had to pay to the zamindars as rent. Although they stated that no zamindars of the mahal ever received or realized rent in respect of the land, they did not plead that the relation of landholder and tenant did not exist, or that, as no rent had been either fixed by agreement or determined by a Court, the suit under s. 93 (a) was not maintainable. Their case was, in substance, that while it was true that rent was to be paid on account of the holding of the land, that rent was, by a special agreement, not to be paid to the landholder but to be appropriated by themselves in lieu of interest due to them, the tenants, from the landholder upon a mortgage debt, until the landholder should redeem the mortgage. The mortgage had not yet been redeemed, and hence for years the rent had not been paid to the landholder. They raised no issue as to the rent payable, but pleaded that, whatever it might be, they were entitled to apply it in the manner which had been agreed.

^{*} Appeal No. 23 of 1898 under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

(1) 68 L.J. Q.B. 34.

So much for the pleadings. The Assistant Collector of the second class who tried the suit framed three issues: first, "is the mahal a joint mahal and are the plaintiffs competent to sue?" second, "are the defendants the tenants and are they liable to pay rent?" third, "has the rent been paid or is it in arrears?" Upon the second issue the Assistant Collector [249] apparently regarded the mortgage set up by the defendants as not sufficiently proved, saying in his judgment "it does not appear to me to be worth consideration." Relying mainly upon the settlement papers, in which there was no mention of the mortgage and in which the land was entered in the name of the defendants' ancestor as a tenant at fixed rates, and as bearing a rent of Rs. 3-1-10, he held that the defendants' liability to pay rent at that rate was established, and decreed the suit. Against his decision the defendants appealed to the Collector of the District under s. 183 of the Rent Act. In their memorandum of appeal they again relied upon the mortgage, which they described as showing "that the rent of the land in suit, amounting to Rs. 115, has been mortgaged to the appellants in lieu of interest;" and again contended that "under the circumstances, unless a redemption of the mortgage is secured, no claim for arrears of rent can stand." That 1899

FEB. 20.
—
CIVIL APPEL-LATE JURISDIC-TION.
21 A. 247 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 47.

1899
FEB. 20.
—
CIVIL APPEL-LATE JURISDIC-TION.

21 A. 247=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 47.

is how the case came before the Collector. His conclusion was thus stated: "I do not entertain any doubt that this mortgage really does exist, and that no agreement to pay rent, either at all, or at any particular rate, has so far been entered into between the parties." He accordingly allowed the appeal and dismissed the suit. His finding was in substance that the defendants held the land as mortgagees and not as tenants—a view which, whether right or wrong, was not that which the defendants themselves put forward in their pleadings. That is how the case stood when the plaintiffs appealed to the District Judge from the Collector's dismissal of their suit. The District Judge reversed the Collector's decision and decreed the suit on grounds which it is unnecessary to state. The question is, whether he was competent to entertain the appeal.

Under s. 183 of the Rent Act the order of the Collector was, prima facie, final. Notwithstanding that section, however, an appeal lay to the District Judge under s. 189, if the suit was one in which the amount or value of the subject-matter exceeded Rs. 100, or in which the rent payable by the tenant had been a matter in issue and had been determined, or in which [250] the proprietary title to land had been determined between parties making conflicting claims thereto. In the present case, the amount or value of the subject-matter was less than Rs. 100, and there was no question of conflicting claims to the proprietary title to land. Unless, therefore, it can be held that the rent payable by the tenant was a matter in issue and was determined, no appeal lay to the District Judge. The words in s. 189—"the rent payable by the tenant"—were inserted in the Rent Act by s. 5 of Act XIV of 1886, and have been considered in several rulings of this Court. See Radha Prasad Singh v. Pergash Rai (1); Radha Prasad Singh v. Mathura Chaube (2); Mohib Ali Khan v. Martin (3); Sarju Prasad v. Haidar Khan (4). The effect of these rulings is that the words "the rent payable by the tenant" mean the rate of rent, and not merely the actual amount of money which is due at any given time by the tenant to the landlord as rent. Whether the rent payable by the tenant in this sense has been a matter in issue and has been determined, depends upon whether the determination of the question of rent is one which would affect and be binding on the parties as res judicata, not merely for a particular year, but for all succeeding years, so long as no change in their relations was made either by their own agreement or by the Act of a Court. The principle would exclude an appeal where the issue had been whether the whole or part of the rent payable had been paid or not. If, then, the defendants here had pleaded that they had paid the rent payable either in whole or in part, the ruling would obviously be applicable and would exclude an appeal under s. 189. If their plea had been not payment but accord and satisfaction, the result would be the same. If it had been neither payment nor accord and satisfaction, but that, by virtue of an agreement between the parties, the defendants had set off against the rent otherwise payable by them, a sum payable to them by the plaintiffs, the same result would follow, as the rate of rent [251] would not have been in issue. The issue in fact raised by the defendants was closely similar to this. They raised no question as to the rate of rent payable. Their plea was, in substance, that, whatever the rent payable might be, it was by virtue of a particular contract not to be paid in to the plaintiffs' hands, but

(1) 13 A. 193

(2) 14 A. 50.

(3) 16 A. 51.

(4) 16 A.W.N. (1896) 148.

appropriated in a special manner, namely, the discharge of the plaintiffs' liability to pay interest due under the mortgage. If the mortgagee had been a third person, the plea would obviously have been one of payment. As the mortgagee alleged to be entitled to interest was also the tenant from whom rent was claimed, it was in the nature of a set off of the interest due against the rent repayable, and it impliedly admitted that whenever the rent payable ceased to be applicable by the defendants in satisfaction of the interest, the zamindars would be entitled to recover it. It is difficult to distinguish in principle such a plea from a plea that the rent payable in respect of the years in suit had been in effect paid or otherwise satisfied in full, and in this view of the case we think, having regard to the ruling, that the rent payable by the tenant was not a matter in issue, that the decision of Mr. Justice Dillon was right, and that this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

219A. 251 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 50.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

DONDH BAHADUR RAI AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. TEK NARAIN RAI OTHERS (Defendants).^{*} [[20th February, 1899.]

Mortgage—Usufructuary mortgage—Suit for redemption—Non-payment at proper time of the whole mortgage-money—Dismissal of suit—Second suit for redemption accompanied by payment in full—Res judicata—Act No IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), ss. 92, 93.

Held that a decree in a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage, not being a conditional decree for redemption under s. 92 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, but simply dismissing the suit on the ground that the mortgagor had not, prior to its institution, paid or tendered the whole of the mortgage-money at a time authorized by the deed, did not have the effect of foreclosure or of res judicata so as to bar a second suit for redemption, the [252] deed expressly authorizing redemption on payment of the mortgage-money in a particular month in any future year after due date, and the plaintiff having tendered the whole in that month between the dismissal on the first suit and the institution of the second. Inman v. Wearing (1), Marshall v. Shrewsbury (2), Curtis v. Holcombe (3), Collinson v. Jeffery (4), Karuthasami v. Jaganatha (5), Nainappa Chetti v. Chidambaram Chetti (6), Roy Dinkur Doyal v. Sheo Golam (7), Muhammad Sami-ud-din Khan v. Mannu Lal (8) and Sheikh Golam Hoosein v. Musummat Alla Rukhee Beebee (9) referred to. Hay v. Raziuddin (10) distinguished.

[R., 24 A. 44 = 21 A.W.N. (1901) 194 ; 32 A. 215 = 7 A.L.J. 185 = 5 Ind. Cas. 269 ; 19 Ind. Cas. 393 (394) = 6 S.L.R. 140 (142) ; 3 O.C. 371 (381) ; U.B.R. (1897—1901) 582 ; D., 25 M. 300 (310).]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of the Court.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the appellants.

Munshi Haribans Sahai, for the respondents.

* Appeal No. 43 of 1898 under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

(1) (1850) 3 De. G. and S. 729 (734).

(2) (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. A. 250.

(3) (1897) 6 L.J. (N.S.) Ch. 156 = 34 R. R. 305.

(4) L.R. 1896, 1 Ch. 644.

(5) 8 M. 478.

(6) 21 M. 18.

(7) 22 W.R.C.R. 172.

(8) 11 A. 386.

(9) 3 N.W.P.H.C.R. (1871) 62.

(10) 19 A. 202.

1899

JUDGMENT.

FEB. 20.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

21 A. 251=

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 50.

STRACHEY, C.J. (KNOX, J., concurring).—The question raised by this appeal is whether a decree in a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage, not being a conditional decree for redemption under s. 92 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, but simply dismissing the suit on the ground that the mortgagor had not prior to its institution paid or tendered the whole of the mortgage-money at a time authorized by the deed, has the effect of foreclosure or of res judicata so as to bar a second suit for redemption, the deed expressly authorizing redemption on payment of the mortgage-money in a particular month in any future year after due date, and the plaintiff having tendered the whole in that month between the dismissal of the first suit and the institution of the second.

The mortgage of which redemption was sought was a usufructuary mortgage of a fixed rate holding, and was executed by the tenants on the 25th May, 1872, to secure the sum of Rs. 200. It provided that the principal money with interest should be paid in the month of Jeth, 1280 Fasli, and that if after that date the mortgagors should pay the whole amount due in any future month of Jeth in any year, they would be entitled to get redemption of the property. It also provided that the mortgagors were to pay to [253] the zamindar the rent due in respect of the holding, but did not provide for the event of their making default in such payment. In 1894, the mortgagors brought a suit for redemption, alleging that Rs. 200 only was due, and that the mortgagee had refused to accept their tender of that amount. The defendant mortgagee did not contest the right of the plaintiffs to redeem, but claimed to be entitled to add to the mortgage debt, sums exceeding Rs. 700, which he alleged that he had paid to the zamindar as arrears of rent for the holding in default of payment by the mortgagors, and that as this part of the mortgage-money has not been paid or tendered in accordance with the deed in the month of Jeth, the suit should be dismissed. The Court of first instance found that all that remained due on the mortgage, besides the Rs. 200 principal tendered by the plaintiffs, was Rs. 25, interest for one year, and on the 9th March, 1895, it passed a decree for redemption conditional upon the plaintiffs paying this further Rs. 25 in the next month of Jeth, which ended on the 7th June 1895. From this decree the defendant mortgagee appealed, and the appellate Court reversed the decree and dismissed the suit, on the ground that the plaintiffs had not paid or tendered the whole Rs. 225 due in the Jeth preceding the suit. Considering that the whole of the principal had been tendered; that only a trifling sum representing one year's interest remained; and that the defence pleaded by the mortgagee was clearly unfounded, it was, to say the least, taking a very strong course to dismiss the suit outright instead of allowing the plaintiffs, as the first Court had done, to redeem conditionally on their making good the deficiency in Jeth in accordance with the deed. However, the plaintiffs did not appeal, so that on the 18th May 1896, the suit for redemption stood finally dismissed. A week later, on the 25th May, which fell within the month of Jeth, the plaintiffs tendered to the defendant the whole sum of Rs. 225, which in the previous suit had been found due on the mortgage. The defendant again refused to accept the tender, and the plaintiffs having, on the 27th May, deposited the Rs. 225 in Court under s. 83 of the [254] Transfer of Property Act, brought the present suit for redemption on the 30th July. In their plaint they set forth the proceedings in the former suit. In his written statement the defendant again pleaded that the plaintiffs were not entitled to redeem except on payment of Rs. 737, which he had paid as arrears of rent to the zamindar, in addition to the Rs. 225 deposited. He did not plead that the suit was barred by the dismissal of the former suit. The Court of first instance, holding that the defendant was not entitled to add any part of the Rs. 737 to the mortgage money, and that the Rs. 225 which had been deposited was all that was due on the mortgage, passed a decree for redemption. The defendant appealed from the decree, but confined his appeal to the matter on which he had failed in the first Court, and did not suggest that the claim was barred by the dismissal of the former suit. The lower appellate Court agree with the Court of first instance and dismissed the appeal; and the defendant then brought a second appeal to this Court in which he for the first time raised the plea of res judicata, upon which his appeal has been allowed and the suit for redemption dismissed. Against that dismissal the plaintiffs have now appealed under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

It is obvious that the defendant has no defence on the merits; that his only plea in the Courts below was wholly unsustainable; and that he has succeeded only upon a technical ground taken for the first time in second appeal in this Court. The plaintiffs have done all that their deed required as the condition of redemption, and their chief mistake appears to have been their not appealing against the appellate decree in the former suit. The question is whether, not having done so, they are in consequence for ever barred from redeeming the property. The right to redeem belonging to every mortgagor, including usufructuary mortgagors like the plaintiffs, is conferred by s. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. It exists "at any time after the principal money has become payable." It arises "on payment or tender at a proper time and place of the mortgage money." What is a proper time for payment or tender depends upon the [255] terms of the mortgage deed. Here the mortgage deed expressly authorized the mortgagors to redeem on payment in the month of Jeth in any year after the mortgage money became payable. The plaintiffs are found to have tendered to the defendant in the month of Jeth prior to the institution of the suit the full amount due upon the mortgage. They are therefore prima facie entitled to a decree for redemption. But their right to redeem is, of course, subject to the proviso to s. 60: "provided that the right conferred by this section has not been extinguished by act of the parties or by order of a Court." So long as there has been no such act or order, so long as the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee exists, the right to redeem is inseparable from that relation, and may be enforced by suit. There is no suggestion that the right has here been extinguished by act of the parties. The only order of a Court which, it is suggested, has extinguished the right is the dismissal of the previous suit for redemption. If the dismissal of that suit has had that effect, it can only be by virtue of some provision of the Transfer of Property Act, or of some other enactment. It has been suggested that the dismissal of the previous suit has extinguished the right to redeem, first, because it operates as a foreclosure of the mortgage, and, secondly because it operates as res judicata by virtue of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. As regards the first point, it is necessary to see what are the orders of a Court which, under the Transfer of Property Act, extinguish the right to redeem and under what circumstances, if any, a usufructuary mortgage is foreclosed. The only orders to which the Act expressly gives the effect of extinguishing the right to redeem are orders absolute for foreclosure under s. 87 in a mortgagee's suit for foreclosure under s. 86, orders absolute for 1899

FEB. 20.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 251=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 50.

1899
FEB. 20.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 251=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 50.

sale under s. 89, in a mortgagee's suit for sale under s. 88 and orders for foreclosure or sale under s. 93 in a mortgagor's suit for redemption under s. 92. As under s. 67 a usufructuary mortgagee as such cannot sue for either foreclosure or sale, and as under ss. 92 and 93 no order for foreclosure of a usufructuary [256] mortgage can be made in a redemption suit, it is obvious that in the case of a usufructuary mortgage, the right to redeem cannot be extinguished by any express order for foreclosure. The reason of this, as Mr. Justice Shephard points out in his commentary on the Act, is that the usufructuary mortgage does not effect a transfer to the mortgagee of the legal ownership of the land: "foreclosure implies that the property is vested in the mortgagee subject to a condition, and that an equity only remains to the mortgagor." The only order which under the Act expressly extinguishes a usufructuary mortgagor's right to redeem is the order for sale which under ss. 92 and 93 may be made in a redemption suit, though the usufructuary mortgagee could not have sued for sale any more than for foreclosure. If, then, the usufructuary mortgagee cannot sue for foreclosure, if on default of payment under a decree for redemption an order for foreclosure is expressly excluded, and if in the case of such default there is no provision for the extinguishment of the right to redeem except on the passing of an order for sale on the mortgagee's application, why should the usufructuary mortgagor's failure to obtain a decree for redemption, put the mortgagee in any better position, or give him a right for which he never bargained? It is true that in England if a mortgagor files his bill for the redemption of a legal mortgage and it is dismissed for any reason except want of prosecution, the dismissal operates as a decree for foreclosure against him: Inman v. Wearing (1), Marshall v. Shrewsbury (2), and other cases cited in Fisher on the Law of Mortgage (4th ed., p. 1002). It is also true that the rule in England has been applied to the case of a Welsh mortgage, the incidents of which closely resemble those of a usufructuary mortgage under the Indian Transfer of Property Act, and in connection with which it has been held that, although the mortgagee has no right to foreclose, the mortgagor, upon failure to pay the amount due under a decree for redemption, will be foreclosed: Curtis v. Holcombe (3). It is to be observed [257] that in that case the bill for redemption was not dismissed in the first instance, but decreed, and the ground of the decision was that the mortgagor "ought not to be allowed to obtain a decree for redemption and afterwards avail himself of the peculiar form of the deed to decline a redemption." There was a decree for redemption in the usual terms, "but in default of the plaintiff so redeeming the said mortgage by the time aforesaid, the plaintiff's bill was from thenceforth to stand dismissed out of this Court, with costs to be taxed by the Master." That has little or no resemblance to the present case where the plaintiffs were not, in the former suit, "allowed to obtain a decree for redemption." It is more analogous to the case of default by a usufructuary mortgagor in payment of the amount due under a decree for redemption, with this difference, that under ss. 92 and 93 of the Transfer of Property Act the consequence of such default is not, as in England, a further order for absolute dismissal of the suit—Collinson v. Jeffery (4), or foreclosure of the mortgage, but,

(1) (1850) 3 De. G. and S. 729 (734).

(2) (1875) L.R. 10 Ch. A. 250.

(3) (1897) 6 L. J. (N. S.) Ch. 156=34 R. R. 305.

(4) L. R. (1896) 1 Ch. 644.

the mortgagee applies for it, an order for sale. However this may be, there is no reported Indian case adopting the broad English rule that the dismissal of a suit for redemption for any reason except want of prosecution operates as a decree for foreclosure. The absence of any such rule from the Transfer of Property Act indicates, we think, that the Legislature did not intend it to be adopted in India. We think that its application to a usufructuary mortgage would be inconsistent with the incidents of such a mortgage and with the provisions of the Act to which we have referred. So far then as the Act is concerned, the dismissal of the former suit for redemption does not, in our opinion, bar the present.

While in the only reported case in which the English rule was applied to a Welsh mortgage the decision was put on the ground that the plaintiff could not get a decree for redemption without the usual penalty in case of default, the decisions applying it to other kinds of mortgage are based on the same principle as the rule of res judicata. "The mortgagor," said Lord Justice James in [258] Marshall v. Shrewsbury, "by filing the bill admits the title of the mortgagee and admits the mortgage debt, and the dismissal of the bill operates as a decree for foreclosure because he cannot afterwards file another bill for the same purpose; he is not allowed thus to harass the mortgagee." In this country the question of res judicata depends on s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Was the matter directly and substantially in issue in the present suit directly and substantially in issue and heard and finally decided in the former suit? To see what was directly and substantially in issue in both suits, one must look at the contentions of the parties and the judgments and decrees of the Courts. The existence of the plaintiff's right to redeem on payment of the mortgage money in Jeth of any year was not a matter in issue in the former suit. The matter in issue in the first Court was what the mortgage money must be considered to include, whether it included the arrears of rent paid by the mortgagee, whether the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem on payment of Rs. 200, as they alleged, or of over Rs. 700, as the defendant contended. The matter decided by that Court was that the mortgage money was Rs. 225 only, and did not include the arrears of rent, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to redeem on payment of Rs. 25, the unpaid balance, in the following Jeth. The only matter decided by the appellate Court was that the plaintiffs were not entitled to get a decree for redemption in that suit, as they had not prior to its institution paid or tendered the Rs. 225 in the month of Jeth. So far as this decided the fact that the mortgage was unpaid, and the principle that it could only be redeemed on payment or tender in a Jeth prior to a suit for redemption, it had, no doubt, the effect of res judicata. But it did not decide that there could under no circumstances be any redemption except on payment or tender in some Jeth prior to that particular suit, or in any other particular Jeth. It decided nothing inconsistent with the continuance of the mortgage relation or with the mortgagor's right to sue again for redemption, provided that before doing so they paid or tendered the full amount due in a Jeth. In the present suit the matter then heard and [259] decided is not again in issue. The suit is based on a tender and deposit of the whole Rs. 225 found to be due in a Jeth prior to its institution, as the former judgment decided was necessary. The only matter directly and substantially in issue in the Courts below was whether the Rs. 225 alone or the Rs. 225 plus the arrears of rent constituted the mortgage money. That matter was in the former suit decided by the first Court adversely to the defendant: the appellate Court did not decide

1899
FEB. 20.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 251—
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 50.

1899
FEB. 20.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 251 =
19 A.W.N
(1899) 50.

it at all, but dismissed the suit on another ground. It appears to us that in this state of the facts s. 13 of the Code does not bar the present suit. The plaintiffs admittedly have a right to redeem in a Jeth of any year. The dismissal of the former suit appears to us to be equivalent to a decision that that particular suit was prematurely brought, and does not affect the plaintiff's right to sue for redemption upon tender prior to suit of the full amount due in a Jeth subsequent to the dismissal. This view is supported by the judgment of the Privy Council in Nawab Azimut Ali Khan v. Jowahir Singh (1). That was a suit, prior to the Transfer of Property Act, for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage; and their Lordships said of a decree in a previous suit for redemption, "that decree in fact did nothing but dismiss the then pending suit for redemption, on the ground that the full and entire amount of the mortgage money had not been deposited. According to the course and practice of the Courts in India, the only point to be determined in such a suit is whether the mortgage-debt has been fully satisfied after taking into account the sum tendered or deposited; nor is the finding of any particular amount as still due conclusive against the mortgagee in a subsequent suit." Nothing has happened to terminate the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee, and hence the right to redeem, which is an essential part of that relation, has not been extinguished by any order within the proviso to s. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act and this suit to enforce it is not barred.

[260] We were much pressed by the pleader for the respondent with the judgment of Sir John Edge, C. J., and Mr. Justice Burkitt in Hay v. Raziuddin (2). That case is obviously distinguishable from the present. There the first suit for redemption, instead of being, as here, wholly dismissed, was decreed, though the decree did not comply with s. 92 of the Transfer of Property Act, in that it did not specify what should take place in case the mortgage money was not paid within the prescribed period. The terms of the usufructuary mortgage are not fully stated in the report. No payment of the mortgage money was made, the decree was allowed to lapse, and it was held that the mortgagor could not again sue for redemption. The principle of that decision, when read with the Full Bench ruling of this Court which it follows, and with the Bombay ruling which it approves, is that the mortgage is merged in the decree for redemption and the original cause of action thus extinguished; that the mortgagor's failure to comply within time with his decree for redemption cannot give him a fresh cause of action; that the decree thenceforth alone regulates the relations of the parties, and the mortgagor's sole remedy is by execution, a second suit on the same cause of action and for substantially the same relief being barred by ss. 13 and 244 of the Code; and that consequently if by his own neglect he allows execution of the decree to become barred by limitation, no remedy by redemption is left, and the mortgage is thus virtually foreclosed. That decision can have no application to a case where there has been no decree for redemption merging the mortgage, extinguishing the cause of action, or substituting a remedy by execution which by the mortgagor's neglect has become barred by limitation, where therefore s. 244 does not apply, and where the cause of action upon which the second suit is based is not the mortgagor's failure to comply with any decree in his favour, but his right under the deed to redeem in a Jeth subsequent, as well as in one prior, to the dismissal of the first suit. The observation in the judgment

(1) 13 M. I.A. 404 (412).

(2) 19 A. 202.

cited that "it was the intention of the Legislature as [261] expressed in ss. 92 and 93 of the Transfer of Property Act that there should be one suit only for redemption," when read with the preceding and following sentences, must, we think, be construed as meaning one suit for redemption in which a decree for redemption is passed. It cannot indeed be said that, even thus understood, the proposition is absolutely settled law. Apart from the Madras decisions to the contrary mentioned in the judgment to which may be added Karuthasami v. Jaganatha (1), and Nainappa Chetty v. Chidambaram Chetti (2), and the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Roy Dinkur Doyal v. Sheo Golam (3), the judgment is admittedly in conflict with Muhammad Samiuddin Khan v. Mannu Lal (4), where it was held that the ruling of the Full Bench in Sheikh Golam Hoosein v. Musumat Alla Rukhee Beebee (5), was not binding since the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, and that as in a decree for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage foreclosure could not be directed, such decree could not operate to deprive the mortgagor of the right to redeem. It is, however, unnecessary for us to express any opinion upon this conflict of authority. It is sufficient to say that, in our opinion, the principle of Hay v. Raziuddin, assuming it to be good law, does not apply and should not be extended to a case where no decree for redemption has been passed prior to the suit before the Court. In the judgment now under appeal it is observed that if the present suit could be maintained, "the plaintiffs might institute a fresh suit for redemption upon every Jeth for the whole period for which the mortgage might subsist, and upon their failure to pay into Court the full amount due, might have their suit dismissed, and then be in a position in the following year to commence another suit." Even if the liability to pay costs were not an effectual deterrent, the provisions of ss. 92 and 93 of the Transfer of Property Act would probably be sufficient to prevent the course supposed. The proper course for the Court to [262] take in that case would be not to dismiss the suit,—for, as pointed out by Mr. Justice Shephard, the usual practice is not now, as it appears to have once been, to dismiss a redemption suit outright because the money has not been paid or even tendered,—but to pass a conditional decree for redemption in the terms of s. 92, and then in the event of default of payment within the time fixed, the mortgagee could under s. 93 obtain an order for sale extinguishing the right to redeem and preventing any future suit of the kind. The danger of repeated suits for redemption is thus hardly a practical one. In any case we think that there was nothing to bar the present suit.

The only other point relates to an objection which the present respondent raised in his memorandum of appeal to this Court, and which Mr. Justice Blair decided against him. One of the provisions of the mortgage deed was, as we have mentioned, that the mortgagors should pay the rent of the fixed rate holding to the zamindar. That is the construction placed upon the deed by the defendant mortgagee both in his written statement and in his memorandum of appeal to the lower appellate Court. The mortgagors did not pay the rent, and the mortgagee consequently did so. In both suits for redemption the defendant claimed to add the Rs. 700 odd so paid to the mortgage debt. Upon this point the lower appellate Court found in effect that the payments of rent were

1899
FEB. 20.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 251 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 50.

(1) 8 M. 478.
(4) 11 A. 386.

(2) 21 M. 18.

(5) N. W. P. H. C. R. (1871) 62.

(3) 22 W. R. 172.

1899
FEB. 20.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 251=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 50.

made by the mortgagee voluntarily and were not necessary to preserve the mortgaged property from forfeiture or sale. We agree with Mr. Justice Blair that this finding of fact is a conclusive answer to the objection in second appeal. The respondent relies on s. 76 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act. As it is his own case that there was in the mortgage-deed "a contract to the contrary" providing that the mortgagors and not the mortgagee should pay the rent, it is obvious, without going any further, that s. 76 cannot help him. The only other ground upon which he could claim to add the amount of these payments to the mortgage-debt is s. 72 (b), which authorizes a mortgagee in possession to spend such money as is necessary for the preservation [263] of the mortgaged property from destruction, forfeiture or sale. That ground, however, is disposed of by the lower appellate Court's finding of fact that the payments were not necessary for any such purpose..

The result is that we must allow this appeal, set aside the decision of the learned Judge of this Court, and restore that of the lower appellate Court with costs.

Appeal decreed.

21 A. 263 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 76.

APPELLATE CRIMINAL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MAHABIR TIWARI.* [23rd March, 1899.]

Act No. XLV of 1860 (Indian Penal Code), ss. 34, 397—Dacoity—Commission of grievous hurt in the course of a dacoity—Person liable under s. 34, liable also under s. 397.

Held, that the words "such offender" in s. 397 of the Indian Penal Code include any person taking part in the dacoity who, though he may not himself have struck the blow causing the grievous hurt, is nevertheless liable for the act by reason of s. 34 of the Code.

[Overruled, 28 A. 404 = A.W.N. (1906) 61 = 3 Cr. L.J. 322; A.W.N. (1899) 186 (187); R., 1 L.B.R. 232 (235); D., 3 L.B.R. 121 (122).]

THE material facts of this case are as follows :—On the night of the 24th of February, 1898, one Gajraj was sleeping at his threshing floor. He was awakened by a noise and saw some five or six thieves going off with loads from his threshing floor, while some others were engaged in picking up loads for themselves. Gajraj at once caught one of them, the appellant Mahabir. The other men then attacked him and beat him with lathis until he was forced to let Mahabir go, whereupon Mahabir also beat him. Meanwhile the other men at the threshing floor had been aroused and approached near enough to see and recognize the thieves. Two of these men also received lathi blows and they ran off and hid themselves among the stacks on the threshing floor. Two men then came running up from their fields close by, and on their approach the thieves ran away. Gajraj was carried away from the threshing floor insensible, and on examination it was found that one of his arms was broken, but [264] it did not appear from the evidence which of the dacoits had caused that particular injury. On these facts the Sessions Judge convicted Mahabir under s. 397 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced him to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. Mahabir appealed to the High Court.

* Criminal Appeal, No. 126 of 1899.

Mr. B. E. O'Connor, for the appellant.

The Government Pleader (Munshi Ram Prasad), for the Crown.

1899

MARCH 23.

JUDGMENT.

APPEL-

LATE

CRIMINAL.

21 A. 263 =

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 76.

STRACHEY, C. J.—Mr. O'Connor, who holds Mr. Colvin's brief for the appellant, states that he does not propose to press this appeal except upon the question of sentence. The appellant has been convicted of an offence punishable under s. 397 of the Indian Penal Code, and has received the minimum sentence under that section, namely, seven years' rigorous imprisonment. Unless therefore that section is inapplicable, I have no power to reduce the sentence. Mr. O'Connor has contended that the section does not apply, because, according to the evidence for the Crown, and in particular that of the complainant Gajraj, the blow which caused grievous hurt by breaking Gajraj's arm, and which was struck during the commission of the dacoity, was struck, not by the appellant, but by another of the dacoits. He supports this argument by reference to the case in the Madras High Court (Weir 99) cited in Mr. Mayne's note to s. 397, and to the use of the expression "such offender," which implies that the liability to enhanced punishment under the section is limited to the offender who actually causes grievous hurt. There can be no doubt, however, that the appellant was one of the persons committing the dacoity; and the evidence shows, that upon Gajraj seizing the appellant while the dacoits were engaged in plundering the threshing floor, all the dacoits attacked and beat him with lathis, and that the appellant similarly joined the rest in so beating him. It is thus clear that the attack on Gajraj was made by the dacoits, including the appellant, in furtherance of the common intention of all, and therefore each of them was liable under s. 34 of the Code in the same [265] manner as if he were the sole assailant. If without any dacoity the persons concerned had together attacked Gajraj, and in that attack his arm had been broken, but with no evidence as to who struck that particular blow, or even if the evidence showed that one of them other than the accused had struck it, there can be no doubt that all would, by reason of s. 34, have been guilty of causing grievous hurt to him. That principle cannot cease to be applicable because the assault happened to be committed in the course of a dacoity, or because the evidence shows that it was not the appellant's hand which in that dacoity struck the blow causing the grievous hurt. The words "such offender" in s. 397 therefore include any person taking part in the dacoity who, though he may not have himself struck the blow causing the grievous hurt, is nevertheless liable for the act by reason of s. 34, and I am therefore of opinion that this appellant caused grievous hurt to Gajraj at the time of committing the dacoity; that the case falls within s. 397, and that I have therefore no power to reduce the sentence. I dismiss the appeal.

1899
FEB. 21.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 265 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 61.

21 A. 265 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 61.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair.In re THE PETITION OF KALYAN SINGH.* [21st February, 1899.]Criminal Procedure Code, s. 253—Discharge—Evidence—Duty of Magistrate in dealing with the evidence produced in a case triable by a Court of Session.

Held, that a Magistrate inquiring into a case triable by the Court of Session is not bound to commit simply because the evidence for the prosecution, if believed, discloses a case against the accused, but he is competent to consider the reliability of such evidence and to discharge the accused if he find it untrustworthy.

[F., 11 Cr. L.J. 18 (19) = 4 Ind. Cas. 612 (613) = 10 P.R. 1909 = 32 P.W.R. (1909) ; R., 6 C.L.J. 760 (762) = 12 C.W.N. 117 = 6 Cr. L.J. 406.]

THE facts of this case are as follows :—

Six persons were brought before the District Magistrate of Etah who held an inquiry into an alleged offence of dacoity said to have been committed by them. The fact of the dacoity was [266] testified to by two men, a sowar and an ekka-driver, who represented themselves to have been the victims of the alleged dacoity, and who profess to identify some of the accused as their assailants. A hospital assistant proved that the sowar arrived at the hospital with a broken arm and other marks of lathi blows. One of the accused made a full confession. The Magistrate discharged all the accused, finding that the stories of the ekka-driver and the sowar were "extraordinarily discrepant," though that of the sowar was "in some respects" supported by the confession, and that the proceedings of the police, which led up to the arrest of the accused, were "bogus." After examination and criticism of the evidence the Magistrate came to the conclusion that "every bit of the evidence bears intrinsic traces of falseness," and that "the evidence in the case could not stand the slightest criticism," and that the confession itself was open to the "greatest suspicion."

Alston, for the applicant (complainant), contended that the Magistrate's order of discharge was, under the circumstances, illegal. A prima facie case of dacoity against the accused had been disclosed. The dacoity itself was proved, and there was evidence connecting the accused with the said dacoity, which evidence, if believed, was sufficient for a conviction. Dacoity was an offence exclusively triable by the Court of Session, and in discussing and criticizing the evidence on its merits, and in taking upon himself the responsibility of discrediting the confession of one of the accused, the Magistrate had "tried" the case as fully and completely as the Court of Session would have done. It was contended that where the evidence sufficed for a conviction and the offence was one exclusively triable by the Court of Session, a Magistrate was bound to commit. A Magistrate had to see that there were "sufficient" grounds for committing the accused for trial, but this did not mean that he was to take it upon himself to reject evidence and confessions according as he thought them true or not. To do so was to "try" the case, which the Sessions Court alone was entitled to do.

JUDGMENT.

[267] BLAIR, J.—This is a petition for revision. I am invited to lay down the general proposition that a Magistrate having before him formally and categorically evidence which discloses a case for trial in some Court to which such Magistrate might in his discretion commit, is bound so to commit, and that he is wrong in point of law in exercising a discretion and considering the sufficiency of the evidence. The proposition is dangerously large. It is not the practice of Magistrates within the range of my experience, nor I have heard the law so laid down in England. That is the only question I have to answer, for it is not in this case suggested that the Magistrate who refused to commit did not exercise a judicial discretion when he found that there were not sufficient grounds for commitment. The petition is dismissed.

* Criminal Revision, No. 14 of 1899.

1899
FEB. 21.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
21 A. 268 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 61.

21 A. 267 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 55.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

BHOLAI KHAN (Defendant) v. ABU JAFAR (Plaintiff).^{*}
[1st March, 1899.]

Jurisdiction—Civil and Revenue Courts—Appeal—Suit not tried on the merits in the Court of first instance—Act No. XII of 1881 (N.W.P. Rent Act), s. 208.

Held, that the application by an appellate Court of the provisions of s. 208 of Act No. XII of 1881, is not precluded by the fact that the Court of first instance has dismissed the suit on a preliminary point without any trial of it on its merits.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Mr. W. M. Colvin, for the appellant.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Maulvi Muhammad Ishaq, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—The appellant, who is a tenant at fixed rates, erected a building on land held by him for agricultural purposes. Thereupon the plaintiff, one of the zamindars of the village, brought the suit, out of which this appeal has [268] arisen, for the demolition of the building, and for the restoration of the land to its former condition. The Court of first instance was of opinion that the suit was one which came within the purview of cl. (cc) of s. 93 of Act No. XII of 1881, and held that it was not cognizable by the Civil Court. In this view the Munsif ought to have returned the plaint for presentation in the proper Court, but instead of doing so he dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge and the learned District Judge was asked to apply s. 208 of Act No. XII of 1881 to the case, and to remand it for trial to the Court of first instance. The learned Judge was of opinion that as the suit had not been tried by the Court of first instance on the merits, s. 208 was not applicable. He then proceeded to consider whether the suit was or was not cognizable by a Civil Court, and, coming to the conclusion that it was cognizable by a Civil Court, remanded the case to the Court of first instance under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. From this order of remand this appeal has been preferred, and the contention on behalf of the appellant ^{*} First Appeal, No. 125 of 1898, from an order of L. Marshall, Esq., District Judge of Jaunpur, dated the 16th August 1898.

1899
MARCH 1.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 267 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 55.

is that the suit is cognizable by a Court of Revenue. If s. 208 of Act No. XII of 1881 is applicable to the case, the last paragraph of that section precludes the appellant from raising the contention urged on his behalf. We have therefore to determine whether s. 208 is or is not applicable. We are clearly of opinion that the learned Judge of the lower appellate Court is wrong in thinking that ss. 206, 207 and 208 would not apply to a case which has not been tried on the merits. The policy of those sections was to protect a suitor from being bandied about from Court to Court. If the question of jurisdiction was raised in the Court of first instance, ss. 207 and 208 would, in our opinion, undoubtedly apply. S. 207 applies to a case in which all the materials necessary for the determination of the suit are before the appellate Court. If such materials are not before the appellate Court, or if the materials before that Court are so imperfect that the appellate Court is not in a position to [269] determine the suit, s. 208 empowers the appellate Court either to remand the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure or to frame and refer issues for trial under s. 566, or require additional evidence under s. 568. As in this case there were no materials before the Court for the trial of the suit, the Court was justified in remanding the case under s. 562. We shall treat the order of remand of the lower appellate Court as an order under s. 208, and, that being so, we cannot entertain the contention that the Court of first instance, to which the case has been remanded, was not competent to entertain the suit. We therefore uphold the order of remand. We deem it necessary, however, to observe that when the case goes to the Court of first instance, that Court will have to determine, in trying the question of limitation raised by the defendant, whether the limitation applicable to the suit is that provided by the Indian Limitation Act of 1877, or the limitation provided by Act No. XII of 1881. It may be necessary for the determination of that question to consider whether the suit was one of the nature cognizable by a Civil Court or a Court of Revenue, but in doing so the Court of first instance should keep out of view the conclusion arrived at by the learned District Judge upon the question of jurisdiction. In our opinion it was not necessary for the learned District Judge, having regard to the view we have taken of the case, to consider that question at all.

We dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 269 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 56.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

NARAIN DAS (Defendant) v. LALTA PRASAD AND OTHERS
(Plaintiffs).^{*} [9th March, 1899.]

Execution of decree—Civil Procedure Code, s. 319—Possession—Formal possession—Effect of formal possession as against a third person other than the judgment-debtor—Limitation.

Held, that whatever might be the effect of the delivery of formal possession under s. 319 of the Code of Civil Procedure as against the judgment-[270] debtor himself, such formal delivery of possession will not take effect as actual possession as against a purchaser of the rights of the judgment-debtor who has previously obtained actual possession. Mangli Prasad v. Debi Din (1) referred to.

^{*} First Appeal, No. 107 of 1898, from an order of Maulvi Syed Muhammad Tajam-ul Husain, Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 7th September 1898.

[F., 7 C.L.J. 640; Appr., 6 C.L.J. 472 (483); R., 5 C.L.J. 35 (N); 16 C.P.L.R. 107; 5 Ind. Cas. 273 (275); 15 Ind. Cas. 146 (155) = (1912) M.W.N. 669.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellant.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—The suit out of which this appeal has arisen, was one for possession of mortgage rights in certain zamindari properties. Those rights originally belonged to one Shankar Lal. He mortgaged them to the father of the present plaintiffs, and the father of the plaintiffs obtained a decree on his mortgage in September 1883. In execution of that decree he purchased Shankar Lal's rights on the 20th August 1884. On the 4th of May 1885, formal possession was delivered to him, apparently under s. 319 of the Code of Civil Procedure. At that time, it is admitted, the present appellant, Narain Das, was in possession by virtue of an auction-purchase in execution of a decree held by him against Shankar Lal. His purchase was made on the 21st of April 1884, and he obtained delivery of possession in January, 1885. It was found by the Court of first instance, and that finding was not questioned in the lower appellate Court, that the plaintiffs never obtained actual possession, that their allegation of an ouster in 1886 was untrue, and that since January 1885, the defendant has been in possession. The present suit was brought on the 27th of April 1897, that is a week before the expiry of twelve years from the date of the delivery of possession to the plaintiffs' father. The Court of first instance held the claim to be barred by limitation, applying art. 138 of the second schedule of Act No. XV of 1877, and dismissed the suit. The lower appellate Court has set aside that decree. It was of opinion that the delivery of possession to the plaintiffs' father on the 4th of May 1885, gave a fresh start to the plaintiffs for the computation of limitation. It accordingly remanded the case to the Court of first instance, under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. From that order of remand the present appeal has been preferred, and the only question which we have to determine is whether the claim was brought within time. The question is not by any means free from difficulty. There can be no doubt that had the suit been brought against the plaintiff's judgment-debtor, it would have been within time, as held in Mangli Prasad v. Debi Din (1). But here we have the case of another person, namely, the purchaser of the rights of the judgment-debtor, who is in possession. Had the judgment-debtor been in possession, the delivery of formal possession, whether under s. 318 or 319 of the Code of Civil Procedure, would have amounted to an ouster of the judgment-debtor and an entry into possession by the purchaser. If subsequently to this delivery of possession the judgment-debtor remained in possession, his possession would amount to an ouster of the purchaser, and would be adverse possession from the date of the ouster; but in the case of a third person who had already purchased the property and 1899

MARCH 9.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 269 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 56.

(1) 19 A. 499.

1899
MARCH 9.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 269 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 56.

obtained actual possession, delivery of possession, as against the judgment-debtor alone, cannot amount to an ouster of the person in possession. Therefore it cannot be said that such delivery of possession gave the subsequent auction purchaser a new cause of action, so as to make the possession of the person other than the debtor, who was already in possession, adverse possession from the date of delivery of possession to the auction purchaser. The possession of such person commenced on the date on which he obtained possession, and from that date must be regarded as adverse to the debtor or to the auction purchaser. As in the present case the defendant was in possession for more than twelve years anterior to the institution of the suit, the claim was barred by limitation, either under art. 138 or 144. Mr. Baldeo Ram on behalf of the respondents relied on the doctrine of lis pendens. There can be [272] no doubt that the title of the plaintiffs is superior to that of the defendant, but the question is whether the plaintiffs have come into Court in time to assert and enforce that title. In the view which we have taken of the case, their claim was beyond time and was rightly dismissed by the Court of first instance. The plaintiffs are themselves to blame for having lost through their own laches the title which they acquired under their auction purchase. We allow the appeal, set aside the order of the lower appellate Court, and dismiss the appeal to that Court with costs. The appellant will get his costs of this appeal.

Appeal decreed.

21 A. 272 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 62.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

MUHAMMAD NIAMAT ALI KHAN (Plaintiff) v. GHAFFAR
MUHAMMAD KHAN AND OTHERS (Defendants.)*
[13th March, 1899.]

Mortgage—Suit for sale—Pleadings—Purchaser of mortgaged property paying off prior incumbrances.

The purchaser of a portion of certain mortgaged property paid off certain prior mortgages on the property. The subsequent mortgagee brought a suit for sale on his mortgage and made the purchaser a defendant, but did not offer to redeem the prior mortgages. Held, that the suit would not for that reason necessarily fail, but the plaintiff ought to be given an opportunity of redeeming the defendant's prior mortgages. Salig Ram v. Har Charan Lal (1), distinguished. Kali-Charan v. Ahmad Shah Khan (2), followed.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Mr. Abdul Raoof and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.
The respondents were not represented.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—The plaintiff-appellant brought the suit, which has given rise to this appeal, for sale upon a mortgage, dated the 1st of November 1890, made in his favour by the first defendant Ghaffar

* First Appeal, No. 137 of 1897, from a decree of Rai Shankar Lal, Subordinate Judge of Saharanpur, dated the 4th March 1897.

(1) 12 A. 548.

(2) 17 A. 48.

Muhammad Khan. The second defendant Maulvi Nazir Hasan purchased a part of the mortgaged property, which he sold to the third defendant, his wife. The [273] other defendants are purchasers of different other portions of the mortgaged property. The third defendant opposed the claim, among other grounds, upon the plea that she had discharged some mortgages which were prior in date to the mortgage of the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for the sale of the property purchased by her without paying to her the amount which she had paid in discharge of the prior mortgages, or a proportionate share thereof. The Court below has totally dismissed the suit on the single ground that the plaintiff had not offered in his plaint to redeem the prior mortgages which the third defendant had discharged, and in support of this opinion the learned Subordinate Judge has referred to the ruling of this Court in Salig Ram v. Har Charan Lal (1). We cannot agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that that case is not distinguishable from the present case. That was a case in which the purchasers were themselves prior mortgagees, the consideration for their purchase being the amount of the prior mortgage. That case, in our opinion, cannot be regarded as a basis upon which every suit for sale, in which the plaintiff impleads as defendant a subsequent purchaser, but owing to ignorance or some similar cause does not mention in his plaint the fact of the purchaser having discharged a prior mortgage, should be dismissed. In the judgment in Kali Charan v. Ahmad Shah Khan (2), the learned Judges who decided that case observed:—"We are unable to lay down as a rule of universal application the principle that a plaintiff who claims too much or fails to admit reasonable deductions from his claim is therefore to be deprived of that to which he is legally entitled." With that observation we concur. This case more nearly resembles the case to which we have just referred, and which should have been followed by the lower Court. As we have said above, the third defendant or her husband from whom she purchased a portion of the mortgaged property was not a prior mortgagee of that property; it is only by reason of her having [274] paid off a prior mortgage that she can use that mortgage as a shield against the plaintiff's claim to the extent of the amount paid by her. The fact that the plaintiff made no mention in his plaint of the alleged payment, was not, in our opinion, a valid reason for totally dismissing the suit. The amendment which the plaintiff asked for should have been granted, and the suit decided on the merits and a proper decree passed. We allow the appeal, and, setting aside the decree of the Court below, remand the case to that Court under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, with directions to readmit it under its original number in the register and decide it on the merits. The appellant will get his costs of this appeal; other costs heretofore incurred will abide the event.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

1899
MARCH 13.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 272=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 62.

(1) 12 A. 548.

(2) 17 A. 48.

1899

21 A. 274 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 58.

MARCH 14.

REVISIONAL CIVIL.

REVI-
SIONAL
CIVIL.*Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.*JANKI PRASAD AND ANOTHER (Applicants) v. SUKHRANI
(Opposite Party).^{*} [14th March, 1899.]21 A. 274 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 58.Civil Procedure Code, s. 103—Decree ex parte—Death of judgment-debtor—Application by legal representative to have the decree set aside.Held, that where a defendant, against whom a decree has been passed ex parte for default of appearance, dies, his legal representative is not competent to apply under s. 103 of the Code of Civil Procedure for an order to set the ex parte decree aside.[Diss., 29 C. 33; 36 P.R. 1903 = 88 P.L.R. 1903; R., 6 O.C. 34 (37); D., 29 A. 574 = 4 A.L.J. 480 = A.W.N. (1907) 176.]

THIS was a reference made by the District Judge of Jhansi under s. 617 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The facts of the case are thus stated in the order of reference. "The appellants in this case are the sons of one Jhalkan, deceased, against whom the respondent got an ex parte decree on the 26th November 1897. There was no decree against the two appellants. On the 1st of July 1898, the respondent executed the ex parte decree by issuing a notice to the appellants under s. 248 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The appellants at once filed an application under s. 108 of the Code to restore the original [275] suit to the file, presumably that they might defend it. They alleged that their father could not attend through illness on the date the suit was disposed of ex parte."

The Munsif dismissed the application on the merits, and against this order the applicants appealed to the District Judge. The District Judge being of opinion that it was not competent to the appellants to make the application at all referred that question to the High Court.

Babu Badri Das, for the appellants.

Babu Ratan Chand, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C.J. (KNOX, J., concurring).—In this case the District Judge of Jhansi has referred to this Court, under s. 617 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the question whether the legal representative of a deceased defendant against whom an ex parte decree was passed, can apply to the Court under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have the ex parte decree set aside.

Section 108 provides that "in any case in which a decree is passed ex parte against a defendant, he may apply to the Court by which the decree was made for an order to set it aside; and if he satisfies the Court that the summons was not duly served, or that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall pass an order to set aside the decree upon such terms as to costs, payment into Court, or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit."

Now, the remedy created by this section is in terms limited to the defendant against whom the decree has been passed ex parte. In such a case the section says "he may apply to the Court for an order to set it aside," and the applicant has to satisfy the Court that the summons was not duly served, or that he himself was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing.

^{*} Miscellaneous No. 34 of 1899.

In order to make this remedy available to the legal representative, some general principle of law would be necessary by which the word defendant should be construed as including the legal [276] representative of a deceased defendant. No authority has been cited to us, and we are aware of none, which establishes any such general principle.

The summary remedy of an application to set aside an ex parte decree is created by the section, and in determining to whom that remedy is available, we cannot look beyond the terms of the section itself. It is true that where a party against whom a decree has been passed dies, his legal representative is entitled to appeal against the decree if his interest is affected by it. S. 540 of the Code gives a right of appeal from an original decree, including a decree passed ex parte, in terms widely, different from those of s. 108, and which do not necessarily confine the right of appeal to the person against whom the decree was passed, or exclude the legal representative whose interest is affected by the decree from appealing against it. The same observations apply to s. 584, which gives a right of second appeal.

Where the Legislature intended to allow the legal representative of a deceased defendant to have himself substituted for the defendant, or to allow a person claiming to be the legal representative to apply to set aside an order, it has expressly provided for such an application to be made by the legal representative or the person claiming to be such. Instances of such provisions will be found in ss. 368 and 371 of the Act. There is nothing of the kind in s. 108. The result is that, in our opinion, the Code gives no right to the legal representative of the defendant, or to any person except the defendant himself, to apply to the Court under s. 108 to set aside a decree passed ex parte. That is our answer to the reference.

21 A. 277 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 64.

[277] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

LILADHAR AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. CHATURBHUI AND OTHERS
(Defendants.)* [15th March, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 244—Execution of decree—Jurisdiction of Court executing the decree.

Held, that when a decree for the sale of specific mortgaged property is being executed, it is not open to persons made parties to the execution proceedings as legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor to contend in those proceedings that the mortgagor was not competent to make the mortgage, and that the decree was one which ought not to have been passed. Maluji v. Fakir Chand (1), Seth Chand Mal v. Durga Dei (2), Sanwal Das v. Bismillah Begam (3) and Lochan Singh v. Sant Chandar Mukerji (4) referred to.

[F., 31 A. 45 = 5 A.L.J. 745 = A.W.N. (1908) 288 = 1 Ind. Cas. 704; 32 C. 265; Appr., 21 A. 356. 30 M. 26 = 16 M.L.J. 545; R., 30 A. 231 = 5 A.L.J. 547 (548) = A.W.N. (1908) 93; 32 M. 429 = 2 Ind. Cas. 18 = 19 M.L.J. 417; 6 Bom. L.R. 1048]

*First Appeal No 161 of 1897, from a decree of Maulvi Siraj-ud-din Ahmad, Subordinate Judge of Agra, dated the 2nd April 1897.

(1) 22 B. 225.

(2) 12 A. 313.

(3) 19 A. 480.

(4) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 24.

1899
MARCH 15.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 277 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 54.

(1049) ; 2 Ind. Cas. 19 (24) ; 105 P.R. 1900 ; D., 5 A.L.J. 550 = A.W.N. (1908) 92.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Babu Dhurga Charan Banerji, for the appellants.

Pandit Moti Lal and Munshi Gokul Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is an appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Agra dismissing the suit of the plaintiffs appellants on the ground that it is barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The facts are these:—One Mussammat Jhuna, the widow of Kishore Chand, executed a mortgage in favour of the predecessor in title of the respondents on the 13th of January, 1881, in respect of property to which she had succeeded as Kishore Chand's widow. The respondents obtained a decree for sale upon the said mortgage against Jhuna Kunwar on the 28th of June, 1893, and they obtained an order absolute for sale on the 23rd of March, 1895. On the 29th of August, 1895, Jhuna Kunwar died, and on the 13th of June, 1896, application was made for execution of the decree dated the 28th of June, 1893. The plaintiffs, who are [278] the sons of Kishore Chand's brother Salig, were made parties to the execution proceedings as the legal representatives of Jhuna Kunwar. They raised several objections in regard to the application for execution, the first of which was to the effect that the decree was a decree for the sale of the life interest of Jhuna Kunwar only, and that that estate having determined on her death, the decree was no longer capable of execution. They also contended that Jhuna Kunwar was not competent to effect a mortgage of the property to enure beyond her lifetime, and that there was no justifying necessity for such a mortgage.

The Court executing the decree considered the first objection only, and, being of opinion that the decree ordered the sale of the mortgaged property itself and not of the life interest of Jhuna Kunwar only, dismissed the objection. Thereupon the present suit was instituted, and the relief sought is a declaration that the decree dated 28th of June, 1893, which was obtained by the defendants against Musammat Jhuna Kunwar became void and inoperative at her death, and that the property mentioned in the plaint, which is in the possession of the plaintiffs, and which the defendants have caused to be advertised for sale, is not liable for the amount of the said decree. Among the grounds upon which the above declaration is sought, is the ground which was raised in the objections in execution proceedings, and which was decided adversely to the plaintiffs: we refer to the objection that what Jhuna Kunwar had mortgaged was her life interest only, and that the decree was for the sale of that interest alone. The learned counsel for the plaintiffs admits that the claim cannot be sustained on that ground, and that the decision on that point of the Court executing the decree was a decision properly falling within the meaning of s. 244, and has become final between the parties. There are other grounds, however, upon which the validity of the decree as a decree which can operate against the estate of Kishore Chand is challenged. The suit is in substance a suit for a declaration that there was no necessity which justified the widow of Kishore Chand in making a mortgage of the property which could take effect even [279] after her death. The ground upon which this claim is based is that she did not in reality incur a loan, and that there were no debts left by Kishore Chand, for the payment of which it was necessary to incumber his property. In order to determine whether the present suit is maintainable, we have to consider whether the questions raised in the suit are questions which could have been determined by the Court executing the decree, under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Clause (c) of that section is the clause which, it is contended, is applicable to the case. If the matter now in controversy between the parties could be decided under that clause, then there can be no doubt that the present claim is not maintainable. We are of opinion that under clause (c) of s. 244, the Court executing a decree could not consider the question of the validity of the decree. A Court executing a decree is bound to give effect to it as it finds it, and it is not in the province of that Court to consider whether the decree was or was not rightly passed. The decree in this case was a decree for the sale of the property; the plaintiffs, who were parties to the execution proceedings in the character of legal representatives of Musammat Jhuna Kunwar, could only raise objections relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, or to the stay of execution thereof, starting with the assumption that the decree was a valid one. That a judgment-debtor cannot dispute the validity of a decree, is a proposition for which we have abundant authority. We may refer to the recent case of Maluji v. Fakir Chand (1). It is clear that a person claiming title through the original judgment-debtor cannot dispute the validity of the decree, and where a decree directs the sale of particular property, a person who does not claim through the mortgagor cannot in execution contend that the mortgagor was not competent to make the mortgage, and that the decree was one which ought not to have been passed. Such questions would, in our opinion, be outside the province of the Court executing the decree; for instance, in the present case, if we assume that the present plaintiffs could properly raise the objection upon which they mainly rely, the Court executing the decree would have to determine, after taking evidence, whether the mortgage was effected by Jhuna Kunwar, i.e., whether the mortgage bond was executed by her, whether there was consideration for the mortgage, and whether there was valid necessity for it. Such an inquiry is certainly not contemplated by s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The case of a decree for money in which, after the death of the debtor, property is attached as the assets of the debtor, and in which the legal representatives of the deceased debtor object to the attachment on the ground that the property attached is no part of the assets of the deceased debtor, is different from the case of a decree which orders sale of specific property: a case of the former class is contemplated by the ruling of the Full Bench in Seth Chand Mal v. Durga Dei (2). But when a decree specifically orders the sale of particular property no question of assets can arise, and the Court executing the decree is bound to execute it as it stands. Any question relating to the validity of that decree must, in our opinion, be decided in a separate suit. This was the view taken by this Court in Sanwal Das v. Bismillah Begam (3), which is entirely in support of the contention of the learned advocate for the appellants. For the respondents our ruling in Lochan Singh v. Sant Chandar Mukerji (4), was pressed upon us. Some of the observations contained in that judgment may probably have to be reconsidered

1899
MARCH 15.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 277=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 64.

(1) 22 B. 225.

(2) 12 A. 313.

(3) 19 A. 480.

(4) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 24.

1899 when a proper occasion arises, but we do not think that that ruling
MARCH 15. governs the present case.

— We are of opinion that the Court below was wrong in holding that APPEL- the suit was barred by s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. We allow LATE the appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below, and remand the case
CIVIL. to that Court under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, with directions — to readmit it under its original number in the register, and try it on the 21 A. 277 = merits. The appellants will have their costs of this appeal. Other costs 19 A.W.N. heretofore will abide the event.
(1899) 64.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

21 A. 281 (F.B.) = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 59.

[281] FULL BENCH.

*Before Mr. Justice Blair, Mr. Justice Burkitt
and Mr. Justice Aikman.*

KESHO DEO AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs) v. HARI DAS AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [18th March, 1899.]

Joint Hindu family—Mortgage—Mortgage executed and registered by major son and by the father for himself and for a minor son—Registration—Act No. III of 1877 (Registration Act), s. 35.

A joint Hindu family consisted of the father and two sons, the one of full age, the other a minor. The father and the major son executed a mortgage of the joint family property, the father describing himself in the bond as acting for himself and as guardian and next friend of the minor son. The bond was registered on the admission of the father and the major son.

Held, on suit by the mortgagees for sale, that there being no dispute as to the fact of the debt for which the mortgage was executed, and it not being alleged that such debt was incurred for any purpose which would exempt the son from the pious obligation of paying it, that there was no defect in the registration of the bond in suit which would prevent its affecting the share of the minor son. Shankar Das v. Jograj Singh (1) overruled. Muhammad Ewaz v. Birj Lal (2). In the matter of Ram Chunder Biswas (3) and Badri Prasad v. Madan Lal (4) referred to.

THIS was a suit to recover the balance of a debt alleged to be due on a hypothecation bond dated the 1st February 1889. The defendants were Hari Das, and his two sons Babu Ram and Mannu Lal, the three defendants forming a joint Hindu family. At the time of the execution of the bond Mannu Lal was a minor and the bond purported to be executed by Babu Ram for himself, and by Hari Das "for self and as guardian and next friend of Mannu Lal, minor, my son." The bond was registered by Hari Das and Babu Ram, but did not purport to be registered on behalf of Mannu Lal. At the time of suit the defendant Mannu Lal was of full age, and in his written statement he took the plea that the bond sued on not having been registered at his instance was inoperative as against him. On the issue raised by this plea the Court of first instance [282] (Subordinate Judge of Agra), relying on the ruling in the case of Shankar Das v. Jograj Singh (1), held that the person and property of Mannu Lal must be exempted from liability in respect to the bond in suit. The Court gave the plaintiffs a decree against the two other defendants.

^{*} First Appeal No. 270 of 1896, from a decree of Syed Siraj-ud-din, Subordinate Judge of Agra, dated the 6th June 1896.

(1) 5 A. 599.

(2) 1 A. 465.

(3) 16 W.R.C.R. 180.

(4) 15 A. 75.

Against this decree the plaintiffs appealed urging that the Court of first instance was in error in holding that Mannu Lal was not liable to the plaintiffs' claim.

Pandit Moti Lal and Kunwar Parmanand, for the appellants.

Mr. E. A. Howard, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

AIKMAN, J. (BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ., concurring).—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiffs, who are appellants here, on a mortgage bond, dated 1st February 1889. The defendants are a Hindu father Hari Das, and his two sons, Babu Ram and Mannu Lal. The executants of the bond are Hari Das and Babu Ram. In the bond, Hari Das describes himself as acting for himself and "as guardian and next friend of Mannu Lal, minor, my son." The bond was registered on the admission of the two executants, Hari Das and Babu Ram.

The learned Subordinate Judge gave the plaintiffs a decree, but only as against the shares of Hari Das and Babu Ram, exempting the one-third share of Mannu Lal, on the sole ground that the bond had not been registered on his behalf.

The judgment of the lower Court is based on, and is supported by, the decision of the Court in Shankar Das v. Jograj Singh (1). The facts of that case were similar to those of the case before us. The bond in suit had been executed by one Harbans Singh for himself and as guardian of his minor son Jograj Singh, and by an adult son named Balbir Singh. It was registered on the admission of Harbans Singh and Balbir Singh. The learned Judges observe:—"There is no question but that Jograj Singh was an executing party to the bond by representation of his father. But he was not represented in the [283] registration of the instrument. Now, under s. 35 of the Indian Registration Act, as explained and applied by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Muhammad Ewaz v. Birj Lal (2), this document was unregistered quoad Jograj Singh, disabled from executing or registering it by reason of minority and not represented for the purpose of registration by any person, far less by such a person as alone is capable of representation under part VI of the Registration Act. This being so, the instrument on which the suit is founded shall not affect any immovable property comprised therein, in so far as Jograj Singh is interested in the same." In the result the learned Judges affirmed the decree of the lower Court which had dismissed the suit as regards Jograj Singh and his share of the property.

When the present appeal came on for hearing before a Division Bench of this Court, the Judges composing that Bench, finding themselves unable to concur with the judgment in Shankar Das v. Jograj Singh, referred the appeal for hearing by a Full Bench, and it has now come before us for decision.

With all deference to the learned Judges who decided the case of Shankar Das v. Jograj Singh, we find ourselves unable to agree with them in the view they took of the provisions of the Registration Act. What s. 35 of that Act requires is that "the persons executing the document" presented for registration should appear before the registering officer, either in person or by a duly qualified representative, assign or agent. When they so appear and admit execution, the registering officer must register the document, unless it appears to him that any of the persons by whom 1899

MARCH 18.

FULL BENCH.

21 A. 281
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 59.

(1) 5 A. 599.

(2) 1 A. 465.

1899
MARCH 18.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 281
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 59.

it purports to have been executed is a minor, an idiot, or a lunatic. It is the actual executants of the document who are required to appear. The law nowhere requires for the purposes of registration the appearance of the person on behalf of whom a document purports to have been executed. The learned Judges who decided the case of Shankar Das v. Jograj Singh have, it appears to us, misapprehended the scope of the decision of the [284] Privy Council in Muhammad Ewaz v. Birj Lal (1) on which they rely. The document in that case was a deed of sale which, on the face of it, purported to have been executed by three persons, namely, Mubarak Jan, a Muhammadan lady, and her two sons Hyat Muhammad and Salamat-ulla. There was an admission of execution by the two sons before the registering officer, but not by third executant, Mubarak Jan. Under these circumstances their Lordships sustained the decree of the Court of first instance which had held the deed of sale to be valid as regards the sons' shares, but invalid as regards the share of the mother.

In the judgment in the case In the matter of Ram Chunder Biswas, petitioner (2), the following passage occurs:—"As all the parties to the deed in question by whom it purports to have been executed had appeared before the Registrar and admitted the execution of the deed, the Registrar to whom the same was presented for registration had nothing whatever to do with the recitals of that deed or with its possible operation as regards parties who do not purport to execute it, and who must therefore be considered as third parties. If the Registrar finds that all the executants of the deed admit the execution, his duty is clear, that is, he must register the deed." We concur in these observations.

For the above reasons we dissent from and overrule the judgment of this Court in Shankar Das v. Jograj Singh (3), and hold that there is no defect in the registration of the bond in suit which would prevent it affecting the share of the defendant Mannu Lal. The fact of the debt is not disputed, and it is not alleged that it was incurred for any purpose which would exempt the son from the pious obligation of paying it. On the authority of the decision of the Full Bench of this Court in Badri Prasad v. Madan Lal (4), the plaintiffs are therefore entitled to a decree, against the whole of the joint family property hypothecated in the bond.

[285] We accordingly allow the appeal, and, modifying the decree of the Court below, order that the defendants pay to the plaintiff or into Court the sum of Rs. 7,255-8-0 within three months from the date of this decree, in default whereof the hypothecated property or a sufficient portion thereof shall be sold, and the proceeds of the sale shall be applied in payment of what has been found due to the plaintiffs, and the balance, if any, shall be paid to the persons entitled to the same. The plaintiffs will get future interest on the sum decreed up to the date of realization and proportionate costs from the mortgaged property as well as from the person of the defendant Har Dass Mal. The persons of Babu Ram and Mannu Lal are exempted. The costs will include the costs of this appeal.

In the decree as modified we have left untouched that portion of the decree of the lower Court which awarded future interest as to which no appeal was preferred.

Decree modified.

(1) 1 A. 465.
(3) 5 A. 599.

(2) 16 W.R.C.R. 180.
(4) 15 A. 75.

21 A. 285 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 66.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Aikman.

JAGWANT SINGH AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. SILAN SINGH
AND OTHERS (Defendants).^{*} [25th March, 1899.]Act No. I of 1872 (Indian Evidence Act), s. 115—Admission—Estoppel—Admission of point of law no estoppel.

An admission on a point of law is not an admission of a "thing" so as to make the admission matter of estoppel within the meaning of s. 115 of the Evidence Act. Juttendro Mohun Tagore v. Ganendro Mohun Tagore (1) and Gopee Loll v. Mussamut Sree Chundraolee Buhoojee (2) referred to.

[Appr., 3 A.L.J. 534 = A.W.N. (1906) 182; 3 N.L.R. 72 (79).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Maulvi Muhammad Ishaq, for the appellants.

Mr. Abdul Raoof, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

[286] AIKMAN, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff in the suit out of which S.A. No. 402 of 1898, decided this day, arose. As stated in my judgment in that appeal, one Salig Singh died possessed of shares in three villages. The plaintiff sued to recover possession of those shares as Salig Singh's heir. The learned Judge of the lower appellate Court decreed the plaintiff's claim in respect of two of the villages, and dismissed his claim to the share in the third village, Banbhirpur.

It is in respect of this dismissal that the present appeal is brought.

Salig Singh died on the 2nd of October 1894.

On 31st of October 1894 the parties to this suit presented a joint application to the Revenue Court, setting forth the fact of Salig Singh's death, stating that they owned and possessed his share in Banbhirpur in the following way, namely, that the plaintiff owned and possessed one-third, the defendants Babu Lal and Silan Singh one-third, and the defendants Bechu Singh and Ram Karam Singh the remaining third, and praying for mutation of names in accordance with this division. The application was granted. It has been found by the lower Courts that the plaintiff and the two sets of defendants discharged a debt due from the estate of Salig Singh, the plaintiff paying one-third and each set of defendants one-third. The learned District Judge held that the plaintiff was bound by his admission in the mutation proceedings in regard to the share in Banbhirpur, and on this ground dismissed his claim to that share. In appeal here it is contended by the learned vakil for the appellants, who has argued the case very ably, that the plaintiff's admission in the mutation proceedings forms no bar to the assertion of his legal rights in the present suit. I am of opinion that this contention must be sustained. When, in the mutation proceedings, the plaintiff stated that he and the two sets of defendants were, on Salig Singh's death, the owners of his property in Banbhirpur, in equal sharers, he made, no doubt under ^{*} Second Appeal No. 403 of 1898, from a decree of H. D. Griffin, Esq., District Judge of Azamgarh, dated the 22nd February 1898, modifying a decree of Babu Raj Nath Prasad, Munsif of Azamgarh, dated the 13th December, 1897.

(1) (1872) L.R. Sup. I.A. 47.

(2) 11 B.L.R. 891.

1899
MARCH 25.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 285 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 66.

1899
MARCH 25.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 285=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 66.

a misapprehension as to what were his legal rights, a mistaken statement of law. By law the plaintiff was the sole owner.

[287] Now, it has been held that an admission on a point of law is not an admission of a "thing," so as to make the admission matter of estoppel within the meaning of s. 115 of the Evidence Act. In the case of Juttendro Mohun Tagore v. Ganendro Mohun Tagore (1) their Lordships of the Privy Council observed at p. 71 of the judgment:—"The plaintiff is not bound by an admission of a point of law nor precluded from asserting the contrary in order to obtain the relief to which, upon a true construction of the law, he may appear to be entitled." In the case Gopee Lall v. Mussamut Sree Chundralee Buhoojee (2) the validity of an adoption was in question. The plaintiff who maintained the validity of the adoption contended that the defendant was estopped by her previous admissions and conduct from disputing either the fact or the validity of the adoption. As to this plea their Lordships of the Privy Council remark at p. 395 of the judgment:—"It appears to their Lordships there is no estoppel in the case. There has been no misrepresentation on the part of the defendant on any matter of fact. She is alleged to have represented that Luchmunjee was adopted. The plaintiff's case is that Luchmunjee was in fact adopted. So far as the fact is concerned, there is no misrepresentation. It comes to no more than this, that she has arrived at a conclusion that the adoption, which is admitted in fact, was valid in law—a conclusion which, in their Lordships' judgment, is erroneous; but that creates no estoppel whatever between the parties."

So in this case, when the plaintiff stated in the mutation proceedings that the share of Salig Singh in Banbhirpur was in the possession of himself and the defendants, he stated what was a fact. But in stating that on Salig Singh's death he and the defendants became owners of the share, he gave expression to a mistaken proposition of law which, on the authorities quoted above, creates no estoppel as between him and the defendants.

[288] There is another ground also on which I should be prepared to hold that there is no estoppel here. This is not the case of a person who knows or must be deemed to know the real state of things creating by his representation a belief in the mind of a person who does not know the real state of things. For, quite apart from any representation made by the plaintiff, the defendants must be deemed to have known what their legal rights were.

The learned counsel for the respondents endeavoured to support the decree of the lower Court by a plea based on s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It appears that the plaintiff brought a suit on the allegation that in July 1896 the defendants ousted him from land in Banbhirpur of which he was in joint possession with them, and it is argued that as he did not then claim the whole share in Banbhirpur the provisions of the second paragraph of s. 43 preclude the maintenance of the present suit. I cannot sustain this contention. The cause of action in this suit arose on the death of Salig Singh, and is different from the cause of action in the previous suit, which was the ouster by the defendants in July 1896.

As stated in my judgment in the connected appeal, the learned vakil for the plaintiffs-appellants admits that his clients are not entitled to an unconditional decree, and that the decree in their favour should be made subject to their repaying to the defendants the amounts which they disbursed towards defraying the debt due from Salig Singh's estate.

(1) (1872) L. R. Sup. I. A. 47.

(2) 11 B. L. R. 391.

With reference to the above findings I allow the appeal and decree the plaintiff's claim subject to the condition that within three months from the date of this decree being certified to the lower appellate Court, they pay into Court the sum of Rs. 112, out of which Rs. 28 will be paid to each of the four defendants. If the plaintiffs fail to pay the above amount within the time fixed their suit will stand dismissed.

Under the circumstances of the case I direct that the parties bear their own costs throughout.

Appeal decreed.

1899
MARCH 25.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL,
—
21 A. 285 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 66.

21 A. 289 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 67.

[289] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

DWARKA PRASAD (Defendant) v. LACHHOMAN DAS (Plaintiff).
[4th April, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 108—Decree ex parte—Suit to set aside as fraudulently obtained a decree ex parte—Application to set aside ex parte decree.

An ex parte decree was passed against a defendant. The defendant judgment-debtor applied under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have such ex parte decree set aside, but his application was dismissed as barred by limitation. Held that the defendant was not thereafter precluded from bringing a suit to set aside the ex parte decree as having been obtained by fraud. Pran Nath Roy v. Mohesh Chandra Moitra (1) followed.

[Rel., 7 Ind. Cas. 163; R., 22 A.W.N. 187 (189).]

THE facts of this case are as follows :—An ex parte decree was passed against the plaintiff respondent on the 27th March 1895. The plaintiff applies under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have that decree set aside, on the ground that he had never received notice of the suit. The Court (Munsif of Ghazipur) without taking any evidence dismissed the application as barred by limitation. From this order an appeal was preferred which was ultimately dismissed. Subsequently an application for review of the judgment was made under s. 623 of the Code of Civil Procedure; but that application was rejected. The plaintiff then instituted a regular suit in which he prayed that the decree of the 27th March 1895 and all proceedings subsequent thereto might be set aside and declared null and void on the ground that the said decree had been obtained fraudulently by the defendant, (plaintiff in the former suit) without the plaintiff's knowledge on the basis of a fictitious bond, dated the 23rd May 1891. The Court of first instance (Munsif of Ghazipur) dismissed the suit on the ground that it was precluded by the plaintiff's former application under s. 108 of the Code. The plaintiff appealed. The lower appellate Court (Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur) holding with reference to the case of Pran Nath Roy v. Mohesh Chandra Moitra (1) that the suit was not barred, set aside the decision of the Munsif and remanded the case, [290] under s. 562 of the Code. From this order of remand the defendant appealed to the High Court.

* First Appeal No. 134 of 1898, from an order of Maulvi Zain-ul-abdin, Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur, dated the 19th October 1898.

(1) 24 C. 546.

1899
APRIL 4. Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the appellant.
Babu Bishnu Chandar Moitra, for the respondent.

—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

JUDGMENT.

21 A. 289 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 67.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—The defendant-appellant obtained an ex parte decree against the plaintiff-respondent on the 27th March, 1895. The plaintiff made an application under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have that decree set aside. That application was dismissed on the ground of limitation. He thereupon brought the present suit for a declaration that the ex parte decree and all the proceedings relating to it were null and void.

The ground upon which this suit was brought was that the defendant had fraudulently and collusively fabricated a bond purporting to be a bond executed by the plaintiff; that in furtherance of that fraud he had obtained an ex parte decree without the plaintiff's knowledge, and had secretly and without the knowledge of the plaintiff caused attachment orders to be issued in execution of that decree. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, being of opinion that it was not maintainable.

The lower appellate Court has set aside the decree of the Court of first instance and remanded the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. From that order of remand this appeal has been brought. The view of the Court below is supported by the ruling in Pran Nath Roy v. Mohesh Chandra Moitra (1). The application under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure was never heard on the merits, and the ground upon which the present suit has been brought was never considered by the Court.

We are of opinion that no sufficient ground has been made out for interfering with the lower Court's order. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 291 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 68.

[291] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

JHANDAY LAL (Plaintiff) v. SARMAN LAL (Defendant).
[5th April, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 588 (24)—Appeal from order made under s. 485—Remand—Such order of remand not appealable—Civil Procedure Code, s. 562.

Held that no appeal would lie from an order of remand made under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure when such order was itself made in an appeal under s. 588 from an order under s. 485 of the Code. Mathura Nath Ghose v. Nobin Chandra Kunau Biswas (2) followed.

[R., 3 M.L.T. 249.]

THE plaintiff in this case applied for attachment before judgment of certain property of the defendant, namely, a decree obtained by him in another suit. A conditional attachment order was issued on this application, and notice was sent to the defendant to appear within a week and show cause against the attachment or furnish security to the amount of Rs. 1,200. The defendant appeared within a week from the date when

* First Appeal No. 2 of 1899, from an order of W. F. Wells, Esq., District Judge of Agra, dated the 1st December 1898.

(1) 24 C. 546.

(2) 24 C. 774.

notice of the abovementioned order was served on him to show cause, but the Court (Munsif of Agra) held that the time was to be counted from the date of the order, and disallowed the defendant's objections. The defendant appealed, and the lower appellate Court (District Judge of Agra) remanded the case to the Munsif under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, on the ground that the Munsif was wrong in finding the defendant's objections to be barred. Against this order of remand the plaintiff appealed to the High Court.

Babu Parbati Charan Chatterji, for the appellant.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—The preliminary objection raised by Mr. Ghulam Mujtaba that no appeal lies, must prevail. An order was made against the respondent for attachment before judgment under s. 485 of the Code of Civil Procedure. An appeal was preferred from that order under cl. (24) of s. 588 of the Code, and the lower appellate Court made an order of remand under s. 562. This order of remand is the subject-matter of the appeal before us. The last clause of s. 588 provides that orders passed in appeal under that section shall be final. The order appealed from is an order passed under s. 588, and therefore it is final according to the provision referred to above. It is true that s. 588 allows an appeal from an order passed under s. 562. But the order of remand from which an appeal is allowable must be an order which was not passed under s. 588. The last paragraph of the section must be read as controlling the whole section and as barring a second appeal, where an appellate Court has made an order, whether for dismissing the appeal or decreeing the appeal or remanding the case before it. This view is supported by the ruling of the Calcutta High Court in Mathura Nith Ghose v. Nobin Chandra Kundu Biswas (1), with which we entirely agree. We dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 292=19 A.W.N. (1899) 82.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

ABDULLAH (Defendant) v. AMANAT-ULLAH AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs).^{*}
[6th April, 1899.]

Muhammadan law—Pre-emption—Suit by pre-emptor not entitled to claim the whole of the property sold—Plaintiff not obliged to frame his suit as a suit for the whole.

Held, that where a pre-emptor by reason of the claim of other persons entitled equally with himself to claim pre-emption is only entitled to a certain portion of the property in respect of which he claims pre-emption, and not to the whole of it, he is not bound to frame his suit as a suit for the whole of the property sold, but only for so much as he would be entitled to having regard to the claims of the other pre-emptors. Amir Hasan v. Rahim Bakhsh (2), and Durga Prasad v. Munsif (3) referred to. Kashi Nath v. Mukhta Prasad (4) and Hulasi v. Sheo Prasad (5) distinguished.

^{*} First Appeal No. 7 of 1899, from an order of Babu Jai Lal, Subordinate Judge of Azamgarh, dated the 22nd December 1898.

(1) 24 C. 774.
(4) 6 A. 370.

(2) 19 A. 466.
(5) 6 A. 455.

(3) 6 A. 423.

1899
APRIL 6.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A 292=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 82.

THE plaintiffs, five in number, claimed to pre-empt five-sixths of certain property which had been sold to the defendant by one Balua. They did not sue for the whole of the property, [293] because, as stated in the plaint, the defendant vendee was himself possessed of equal rights of pre-emption with the plaintiff. The Court of first instance (Munsif of Azamgarh) dismissed the suit upon the ground that the plaintiffs were bound to have sued for the whole. The plaintiffs appealed. The lower appellate Court (Subordinate Judge of Azamgarh) decreed the appeal and remanded the case to the Munsif under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That Court held that as the plaintiffs were not entitled to pre-emption in respect of more than five-sixths of the property sold, they were under no obligation to claim the whole in their plaint. Against this order of remand the defendant appealed to the High Court.

Mr. Abdul Raoof and Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the appellant.

Mr. Abdul Majid, Mr. Karamat Husain and Maulvi Muhammad Ishaq, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is an appeal from an order of remand under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure in a suit for pre-emption based on Muhammadan law. The appellant before us is the vendee and the respondents are the claimants for pre-emption. The vendee is admittedly a person who has the right of pre-emption as against a stranger. The plaintiffs, who are five in number, claimed five-sixths of the property sold to the defendant. The contention before us is that such a claim is opposed to Muhammadan law and should have been dismissed, that the plaintiffs were bound to claim the whole of the property sold, and that not having done so, they were not entitled to the decree which has been granted to them. It is not disputed that according to Muhammadan law, as explained in the ruling of this Court in Amir Hasan v. Rahim Bakhsh (1), when the purchaser is a person who would as against a stranger have the right of pre-emption, other persons entitled to pre-emption are entitled to get the property divided per capita between all the persons possessing the right of pre-emption and claiming such right. Upon this [294] authority, which is not questioned on behalf of the appellant, it is conceded that the plaintiffs could not obtain a decree for more than a five-sixths share of the property sold. It is, however, contended that the plaintiffs were nevertheless bound to claim the whole of the property, although the Court could not decree to them more than a five-sixths share. In support of this contention the learned counsel for the appellant has referred us to the rule of Muhammadan law, which requires that a claimant for pre-emption should not split up the bargain and claim a portion only of the property sold, but should claim the whole of it. He relies on the rulings of this Court in Kashi Nath v. Mukhta Prasad (2) and Hulasi v. Sheo Prasad (3). In our opinion these rulings do not support the contention of the learned counsel that in a suit like the present the whole of the property ought to have been claimed. They go no further than to lay down that a plaintiff claiming pre-emption must in his suit include the whole of that portion of the property sold to which his right of pre-emption extends. That this was the intention of the learned Judges who decided the two cases to which we have referred, is evident from the case of Durga Prasad v. Munsif (4). In his judgment in that case Mr. Justice Mahmood, who was a party

(1) 19 A. 466.

(2) 6 A. 370.

(3) 6 A. 455.

(4) 6 A. 423.

to the decisions relied on, observes :—" I have no hesitation in laying down the general rule that every suit for pre-emption must include the whole of the property subject to the plaintiff's pre-emption, conveyed by one bargain of sale to one stranger, and that a suit by a plaintiff pre-emptor, which does not include within its scope the whole of such pre-emptional property, is unmaintainable as being inconsistent with the very nature and essence of the pre-emptive right." As we have said above, it is conceded in the present case that even if the plaintiffs had claimed the whole of the property they could not have obtained a decree for a larger share than the five-sixths which they claimed in the plaint.

[295] On the authority of the ruling in Amir Hasan v. Rahim Bakhsh referred to above, their right of pre-emption extended to a five-sixths share only, and as they have claimed that share we are unable to hold that in doing so they have transgressed any rule of Muhammadan law. The learned counsel on both sides have referred us to original authorities of Muhammadan law which have been translated and laid before us, and we are indebted to the learned counsel for the help they have thereby rendered to us. But we are unable to find anything in the authorities cited which requires that, whatever may be the extent of the share to which the pre-emptor may be entitled by virtue of his right of pre-emption, he is bound in his suit to claim the whole of the property sold to the vendee when the vendee is himself a pre-emptor. It is true that every person having the right of pre-emption is entitled to pre-empt the whole property sold, but when more persons than one have equal rights of pre-emption, there exists what the authorities of the Muhammadan law call an impediment to pre-emption, and unless the impediment is removed by the rival pre-emptor "relinquishing the right before the establishment of his ownership," the remaining pre-emptor is not entitled to the whole. "It is mentioned in Nihaya that when one of them surrenders his right the only alternative for the other is either to take the whole or relinquish it." (Radd-ul-Muhtar, Egyptian edition, p. 216.) It follows that where the purchaser is himself a pre-emptor, one of several pre-emptors is entitled to the whole only when the purchaser surrenders the purchase. Where no such surrender has been made the several persons entitled to pre-emption who claim their right of pre-emption have only the right to get the property equally divided per capita. The passage from the Fatawa Alamgiri cited on page 472 of I. L. R., 19 All., establishes this proposition. That passage is as follows:—"If a person purchases a house of which he is a pre-emptor, and then appears another pre-emptor having an equal right with him, the Qazi (Judge) will pass a decree for one half." It is urged that [296] as a purchaser has the option of surrendering the property at any time before decree, it is the duty of a person claiming pre-emption to claim the whole property. The authorities on this point are somewhat conflicting, but we think that the conflict has been well reconciled by the author of the Radd-ul-Muhtar in the work called Tankih Hamidia, Vol. ii, Egyptian edition, page 182, in the following passage, which has been translated for us :—"It seems that the meaning is this, that when he (pre-emptor) wishes to take a portion after having made the immediate demand and the demand with invocation of witnesses, the right is not extinguished, but if he demands a portion in the beginning, his right of pre-emption falls to the ground." This passage shows that what the Muhammadan law requires is that the immediate demand and the demand by invocation of witnesses should be made in respect of the whole property

1899
APRIL 6.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 292 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 82.

1899
APRIL 6.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 292 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 82.

sold which the pre-emptor would have been entitled to claim had it been sold to a stranger instead of to one having an equal right of pre-emption with him. But this does not require that when a claimant for pre-emption who has complied with the above rule has to resort to a Court to enforce his right against a purchaser who is himself a pre-emptor within the meaning of the Muhammadan law, he is bound to claim anything beyond what he is entitled to obtain. We have not been referred to any authority which goes the length of directing that in such a case the suit must relate to the whole of the property sold, although the plaintiffs might be entitled to a decree for a portion of it only. The purchaser, who is himself a pre-emptor, is given the option of surrendering the whole upon the immediate demand and the demand by invocation of witnesses being made. When he makes such a surrender there is no occasion for resorting to a Court to enforce any right. When, however, a surrender has not been made, but, as in this case, the plaintiff's right of pre-emption is denied before suit, and his demand is resisted, there is no obligation upon the plaintiff to claim anything in excess of what he is legally entitled to. This is consistent with the rule of [297] justice, equity and good conscience which is the rule applicable to cases of pre-emption, and there is nothing in the Muhammadan law, as far as we are aware, which militates against it. This appeal must fail. We dismiss it with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 297 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 72.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

KAUSALIA AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. GULAB KUAR AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs).^{*} [7th April, 1899.]

Landholder and tenants—Trees—Property in trees growing on tenant's holding—Burden of proof—Civil Procedure Code, s. 561—Appeal—Objections by respondents—Letters Patent, s. 10.

Held, that the property in trees growing on a tenant's holding is, by the general law, vested in the zamindar, and a tenant is not entitled, in the absence of special custom, the burden of proving which is on him, to cut down and sell such trees. Imdad Khatun v. Bhagirath (1), Nafar Chandra Pal Chowdhuri v. Ram Lal Pal (2) and Ruttonji Edulji Shet v. The Collector of Tanna (3) referred to.

Held also that s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not applicable to appeals under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

[F., 23 A. 211; Appr., 4 N.L.R. 104 (111); R., 37 C. 322 = 11 C.L.J. 209 = 14 C.W.N. 487 (491) = 5 Ind. Cas. 243; 3 A.L.J. 385 = A.W.N. (1906) 140; 18 M.L.J. 157 = 3 M.L.T. 248; D., 29 A. 484 = 4 A.L.J. 452 = A.W.N. (1907) 150.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellants.
Babu Devendro Nath Ohdedar, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, J. (STRACHEY, C.J., concurring).—The respondents to this appeal (plaintiffs in the Court of first instance) came into Court as zamindars or landholders of certain land, situate within which was a grove of ^{*} Appeal No. 24 of 1898, under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

(1) 10 A. 159.

(2) 22 C. 742.

(3) 11 M. I.A. 295.

trees. Their position as zamindars was expressly admitted by all the defendants who now appear as appellants in the appeal before us. Their claim was for an injunction to restrain the defendants from cutting and selling the trees in this grove and for the recovery of damages or compensation on account of certain trees, which, according to them, some of the [298] defendants had illegally sold to other of the defendants, and which trees the last named defendants had illegally sold. The plaintiffs in a replication filed by them on the 21st of March 1896, admitted that they were not the owners of these trees, but only of the ground on which the trees stood. The District Judge of Allahabad upon hearing the appeal from the Court of the Munsif, who had dismissed the claim, held that the burden of proving that they had a right to the relief they sought lay upon the plaintiffs. He held it was for them to prove the custom set up by them, viz., that they were empowered to interfere with the defendants and to prevent them from cutting and selling the trees standing in the grove in dispute, and that, as they had failed to prove it, their claim was rightly dismissed, and he accordingly dismissed the appeal before him.

The plaintiffs then came to this Court and impugned the judgment of the District Judge, first, upon the ground that the burden of proof had been wrongly laid upon them; and, secondly, upon the ground that, if it did lie upon them, the entries in the wajib-ul-arz, which they had proved and which were in their favour, sufficed to shift the burden of proof on to the respondents. The appeal was heard by Mr. Justice Burkitt. That learned Judge, following the precedent laid down in Imdad Khatun v. Bhagirath (1) held that the property in trees growing on land in agricultural villages and on occupancy holdings vests in the zamindar subject to any customary right which may be established by tenants to cut down and to remove or take the produce of the trees. The entries in the village record-of-rights, he considered, did not in any way affect the question. He called for a finding upon the issue:—Have the defendants established by evidence any legal binding custom authorizing them to cut down and sell or otherwise dispose of the trees standing in the disputed grove? The finding on this issue was against the respondents, and the appellants' (plaintiffs') claim, so far as regards the injunction asked for by them, was granted.

[299] The defendants have now come under the Letters Patent, s. 10, and ask us to reconsider the question of burden of proof. They made no attempt to deal with the precedents cited in the judgment now appealed from. Their case was that upon the pleadings the issue remitted did not arise. It had been admitted that they were owners, and their contention was that so long as they continued to occupy the grove they had a perfect right to deal with the trees as they chose.

On referring to Imdad Khatun v. Bhagirath (1) we find that in that case, as in the present, the trees were the property of occupancy tenants, and the suit was a suit brought by the zamindar for cancelment of a deed of sale under which the tenants, relying on their right as owners of the trees, had purported to sell them to others. Upon a review of earlier cases decided by this Court the learned Judge who decided that appeal found that the trees upon an occupancy holding, whether planted by the tenant himself or not, belong and attach to such occupancy holding, and like it are not susceptible of transfer by the occupancy holder. It does not appear in the case before us what was the precise

1899
APRIL 7.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 297 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 72.

(1) 10 A. 159.

1899
APRIL 7.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 297=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 72.

nature of the appellants' holding, but unless it were the holding of an exproprietary tenant, it could not be a holding susceptible of transfer. It it nowhere pleaded, and it certainly would have been pleaded had there been any ground for it, that the tenancy was an exproprietary tenancy.

The case of Nafar Chandra Pal Chowdhuri v. Ram Lal Pal (1) was a similar case. There two Judges of the Calcutta High Court, after considering a number of cases on the point, held that the property in trees on a tenant's holding is by the general law vested in the zamindar. In Ruttonji Edulji Shet v. The Collector of Tanna (2) the Privy Council decided that the trees are part of the land on which they stand, and the right to cut them down and sell them is incident to the proprietorship of the land. Much was made of the admission by the respondents [300] that they were not the owners of the trees on the grove, but of the ground under the trees and of the claim being based on custom and usage as recorded in the village administration paper. But this admission must be read with paragraph 3 of the plaint. The two read together satisfy us that the admission was intended to be that while the defendants (appellants) were in possession, and the respondents were not owners in the sense of full and unlimited ownership, still they were owners of the ground on which the trees stood, and by virtue of this claimed the right to restrain the appellants from cutting down and selling the trees at the free will and pleasure of the latter.

In this view of the case we think the burden of proof was rightly laid and that the appellants did not prove any custom derogating from the general law.

The respondents have filed a paper which they term objections under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Section 561 is a section which applies to appeals from original decrees. It is true that s. 590 of the Code makes the provisions of this section applicable, so far as may be, to appeals from orders, and s. 587 similarly makes them applicable to second appeals, but no statute or rules have been pointed out to us making the terms of this section applicable to Letters Patent appeals. Nor can it be pointed out that the section has ever been made use of in Letters Patent appeals.

We dismiss the appeal with costs to be borne by the appellants and we also disallow the objections with costs. The costs of the appellants, so far as the objections are concerned, will be borne by the respondents.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 22 C. 742.

(2) 11 M.I.A. 295.

21 A. 301 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 78.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

[301] Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

DHARAM SINGH AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. ANGAN LAL AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs).^{*} [8th April, 1899.]

Hindu Law—Joint Hindu family—Liability of sons to pay debts incurred by father—Creditors remedy against sons not barred by reason of his having sued the father separately—Mortgage—Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 85.

1899
APRIL 8.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 301 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 78.

Although a decree may have been obtained against the father of a joint Hindu family for a debt incurred by him, a subsequent suit is maintainable against the son in respect of the same debt for the enforcement of the son's liability for it, such debt being one which the son is legally bound to pay.

The creditor may in his original suit implead the son, but his omitting to do so will not deprive him of his subsequent remedy against the son.

There is no difference in principle as regards the subsequent remedy of the creditor against the son between the case of a debt secured by a mortgage and a simple money debt.

Lachmi Narain v. Kunji Lal (1); Balmakund v. Sangari (2); Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu (3); Ramasami Nidan v. Ulaganatha Goundan (4); Ariabudra v. Dorasami (5) and Nanomi Baburain v. Modhun Mohun (6) referred to.

The obligation of a Hindu son to pay his father's debt is not an obligation which he has incurred jointly with his father, and the creditor's cause of action is not a single cause of action which is exhausted upon a decree being obtained against one of them only. Hemendro Coomar Mullick v. Rajendro Lall Moonshiee (7); Dhunput Sing v. Sham Soonder Mitter (8) and Hoare v. Niblett (9) referred to.

[F., 23 A. 355 (359); 29 A. 544 (549, 550) = 4 A.L.J. 424 = A.W.N. (1907) 159; R., 22 A. 307 (311, 318); 22 A. 304 (393); 25 A. 57 (59); 25 A. 162 (164); 11 A.L.J. 402 (406) = 18 Ind. Cas. 904 (906); 5 C.L.J. 315 = 11 C.W.N. 403 (406); 6 C.L.J. 612 = 12 C.W.N. 107; 9 O.C. 350 (352); 11 O.C. 334 (336); D., 7 O.C. 137 (140, 141).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of BANERJI, J.

Munshi Ram Prasad and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellants.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Babu Durga Charan Banerji, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—For a proper understanding of the questions raised in this appeal it is necessary to state the following facts. [302] One Lekhraj, whose sons and grandsons are the appellants before us, executed two mortgages in respect of the same property, which was ancestral property, in favour of Bhawani Prasad, the deceased father of the plaintiff-respondents, on the 29th of June, 1879, and the 30th of July, 1880. Bhawani Prasad sued Lekhraj upon the mortgages and obtained a decree for sale on the 18th of August, 1887. He did not make the present appellants parties to his suit. The mortgaged property was sold by auction on the 23rd of July, 1889, in execution of the decree, and the present plaintiffs (Bhawani Prasad having in the meantime died) purchased it. Lekhraj had mortgaged the same property to one Chandan Singh on ^{*} First Appeal No 267 of 1896, from a decree of Rai Anant Ram, Additional Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 30th June 1896.

(1) 16 A. 449.
(4) 22 M. 49.
(7) 3 C. 353.

(2) 19 A. 379.
(5) 11 M. 413.
(8) 5 C. 292.

(3) 17 A. 537.
(6) 13 C. 21.
(9) L.R. (1891) 1. Q.B. 781.

1899
APRIL 8.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 301=
19 A. W. N.
(1899) 78.

the 30th of November, 1874. Sobha Ram and Ganesh Lal, the sons of Chandan Singh, brought a suit upon that mortgage, obtained a decree, and in execution of it caused the mortgaged property to be advertised for sale. Thereupon the present plaintiffs who, as stated above, had already purchased the property, satisfied the decree on the 21st of December, 1889, by payment of Rs. 1,612-14-5, the amount due upon it, and remained in possession of the property. On the 26th of November, 1895, Dharam Singh, Bhawani Singh, Jiwa Ram and Ram Charan, the four sons of Lekhraj, sued the present plaintiffs for recovery of possession of a four-fifths share of the property, on the ground that the property was ancestral, that they had not been joined as parties to the suit brought by Bhawani Prasad upon his mortgages, and that the decree obtained by Bhawani Prasad could not consequently affect their interests in the property. On the 11th of March, 1896, a decree was passed in their favour on the strength of the ruling of the majority of the Full Bench in Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu (1). Thereupon the present suit was instituted on the 25th of March, 1896, against the sons and grandsons of Lekhraj, to recover four-fifths of the amount due under the mortgages in favour of Bhawani Prasad, and of the amount paid by the plaintiffs on account of Chandan's mortgage by sale of the four-fifths share of [303] the mortgaged property for which the sons of Lekhraj had obtained their decree.

The Court below has decreed the greater portion of the claim. The defendants have preferred this appeal, and the plaintiffs have taken objections under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

In order to clear the ground it may be stated that it is not contended in this appeal that the debts incurred by Lekhraj, in respect of which decrees for sale were obtained, were tainted with immorality, nor is it suggested that they were not in fact incurred, or that at the time when the suits for sale were instituted against Lekhraj the claims of the mortgagees were time-barred. It may also be observed that, although in the memorandum of appeal to this Court pleas were taken to the effect that ss. 13 and 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure barred the claim, the learned advocate for the appellants did not press those pleas. Having regard to the fact that the present defendants were not parties to the suits brought against Lekhraj those pleas could not be sustained. The only contention of the learned counsel in the argument before us was, that the original mortgagees having sued their mortgagor, Lekhraj, upon the mortgages executed by him, and obtained decrees which were enforced, it was not open to the plaintiffs who stand in the shoes of the mortgagees to maintain the present suit in respect of the same debts. He does not urge that s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, stands in the way of the plaintiffs and precludes them from bringing this suit. He concedes that, although the sons of the mortgagor, of whose interests in the mortgaged property the mortgagees had notice, were necessary parties to the mortgagees' suits, and the result of the omission to join them in the suits was, according to the rulings of this Court, that the suits were liable to dismissal, there is nothing in s. 85 which forbids the institution of a second suit against persons who were not parties to the former suits. This is what was practically held by the Full Bench in Balmakund v. Sangari (2).

[304] Mr. Ram Prasad, however, argues that on general principles

(1) 17 A. 537.

(2) 19 A. 379.

a second suit is not maintainable after judgment has been obtained and recovered upon the original debt. He refers to the case of joint obligors of a bond and to the rule which obtains in England that "a judgment recovered against one of joint obligors of a bond merges the joint liability on the bond, and is a bar to an action against the others." (See Leake on Contracts, 3rd edition, page 808) and the cases cited therein. See also Hoare v. Niblett (1). Whether the law in this country is the same or not, it is not necessary in this case to decide, as I am of opinion that the analogy of the liability of joint debtors under the same contract does not apply to the case of the pious liability of a Hindu son for the debt of his father not tainted with immorality. Such liability arises, not from the contract entered into by the father, but from the fact that he is the son of the father and that the debt incurred by the father is of such a nature that it is the duty of the son to pay it. It is a liability which the Hindu law imposes on the son, and is independent of the contract made by his father. Whether the debt of the father has merged in a decree, or whether it subsists as a debt in respect of which no decree has been passed, the son is liable for it, provided that it was not incurred for immoral or impious purposes. The question we have to determine is whether the creditor's remedy against the son for the enforcement of the latter's liability is lost to the creditor by reason of his omitting to make the son also a party to the suit against the father. Their Lordships of the Privy Council have held in several well known cases, to which it is unnecessary to refer in detail, that the son's liability for his father's debt is unaffected by the procedure to which the creditor may have resorted against the father alone for the recovery of the debt. In Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun (2) their Lordships said:—"The decisions have for some time established the principle that the sons cannot set up their rights against their father's alienation for an antecedent debt, or against the creditor's remedies for their debts, if not [305] tainted with immorality." "If the father's debt was of a nature to support a sale of the entirety, he might legally have sold it without suit, or the creditor might legally procure a sale of it by suit. All the sons can claim is that, not being parties to the sale or execution proceedings, they ought not to be barred from trying the fact or the nature of the debt in a suit of their own." From these observations of their Lordships it is clear that, despite the passing of a decree against the father alone, the son may bring a suit to try the fact and the nature of the debt of the father. Upon the same principle on which a suit is allowable to the son, it seems to me it is open to the father's creditor to bring a suit against the son to establish the latter's obligation to pay his father's debt. In the case of a debt not secured by a mortgage it was held by this Court in Lachmi Narain v. Kunji Lal (3) that "if the creditor desires to obtain a remedy against the ancestral property, or any part of it, in the hands of the son, he must seek that remedy in suit against the son." That ruling was approved of in the Full Bench case of Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu (4), and is an authority, so far as this Court is concerned, for the proposition that, although a decree may have been obtained against the father, a subsequent suit is maintainable against the son, in respect of the same debt, for the enforcement of the son's liability for it. In the case of a simple debt the creditor could, if he had so chosen, have made the son a party to 1899

APRIL 8.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 301=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 78.

(1) L.R. (1891) 1 Q.B. 781.
(3) 16 A. 449.

(2) 13 C. 21.
(4) 17 A. 537.

1899
APRIL 8.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 301=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 78.

his suit against the father [see Ramasami Nadan v. Ulaganatha Goundan (1)]. The fact of his omitting to implead the son in his first suit has been held not to preclude him from suing the son afterwards. In my opinion there is no difference in principle, so far as the present question is concerned, between the case of a debt secured by a mortgage and a simple money-debt. In the case of a mortgage-debt the creditor was bound under s. 85 of Act No. IV of 1882, as interpreted by this Court, to make the son a party to his suit, if he had notice of the son's interests. [306] The effect of his omission to do so is that the decree obtained against the father alone is not enforceable as such against the son's interests in the mortgaged property, and this is what was held by the majority of the Full Bench in Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu, referred to above. I am unable to hold that in the case of a mortgage-debt the creditor is in a worse position than the holder of an unsecured debt. As regards debts of both descriptions the liability of the son to pay them is the same. If in the one case the creditor is not precluded from bringing a subsequent suit against the son to enforce the latter's liability, I can see no principle or rule of law which bars a similar suit in the other. It is conceded that s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, is no bar to it. In Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu the argument proceeded on the assumption that such a suit would be maintainable. In my dissentient judgment in that case I said, at p. 549 :—"It is said that the creditor will not be without his remedy, and that he will still be able to bring a suit against the sons to enforce his mortgage against their interests in the ancestral estate on the ground of their pious obligation to pay their father's debts. It cannot possibly be held that no remedy will be open to the creditor, as such a decision will render the rulings of their Lordships of the Privy Council on the question of the liability of Hindu sons in respect of their father's debts wholly nugatory." To this view I still adhere, and I do not find from the report that on this point my learned colleagues expressed a different opinion. In Ariabudra v. Dorasami (2) it was held by the Madras High Court that "an execution-creditor is not precluded from instituting an independent suit against the appellants [sons] to recover from them the balance of the judgment-debt which remained unsatisfied, to the extent of the value of the ancestral property which had come to their hands." That was a case in which a mortgagee, who had obtained a decree for sale against the father without joining the sons as parties, brought a suit against the sons to recover the [307] balance of the judgment-debt from their interests in the mortgaged property, the Court executing the decree having allowed the objections of the sons respecting the sale of those interests. That case is therefore very similar to the present case, and supports the respondent's contention that a suit like the present is maintainable. The learned Judges who decided that case repelled the plea that s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure was a bar to it, and held that the limitation applicable to it was that prescribed for a suit to enforce a mortgage. I agree with the view of the learned Judges, and hold that a suit like the present, in which it is sought to enforce against Hindu sons their pious obligation in respect of their father's debts not tainted with immorality, is maintainable, whether the debts were or were not secured by a mortgage, and whether a decree in respect thereof has or has not been obtained against the father alone. We have not been referred to any ruling in which a contrary view has been held,

(1) 22 M. 49.

(2) 11 M. 413.

and I think the principle of the unreported judgment of my brothers Blair and Burkitt in second appeal No. 426 of 1898, decided on 20th July, 1898, to which the learned vakil for the respondents has invited our attention, to some extent favours the respondents' case.

As I have already said, the analogy of a decree against one of several joint promisors does not apply to a case of this description. The obligation of joint contractors has been held to be single and undivided, and the cause of action against them to be one and the same. It was observed by Garth, C. J., in Hamendro Coomar Mullick v. Rajendro Lall Moonshee (1), "that the cause of action is exhausted and satisfied by a judgment being obtained by the plaintiff against all or any of the joint contractors whom he chooses to sue. If a plaintiff under such circumstances were allowed to sue each of his co-debtors severally in different suits, he would be practically changing a joint into a several liability." It has been held that where the obligation is joint and several "a decree obtained against one of the promisors [308] without satisfaction is no bar to a suit against another."—(Dhunput Singh v. Sham Soonder Mitter (2)). The obligation of a Hindu son to pay his father's debt is not an obligation which he has incurred jointly with his father; and the creditor's cause of action against the father and the son is not a single cause of action which is exhausted upon a decree being obtained against one of them only. A judgment recovered against the father only does not therefore bar a suit against the son. The fact of the mortgaged property having been once sold by auction in execution proceedings against the father alone does not amount to a satisfaction of the decree, where, as in this case, a large part of the property sold has been taken out of the hands of the creditor, purchaser, by the sons on the ground that they were not joined as parties to the creditor's suit. As four-fifths of the property which the creditor purchased at auction in satisfaction of his debt has been decreed to the sons, and the creditor has thus been deprived of that portion of the property, his debt must be held to have remained pro tanto unsatisfied. And as it has not been established that the debt was tainted with immorality, the sons, defendants in this case, are liable for it. There may, it is true, be instances in which the interests of the father alone fetched at auction-sale a price sufficient for the complete satisfaction of the debt. In such a case, there would be no debt of the father due to the creditor for which the latter might proceed against the sons. But it has not even been hinted that this is a case of that description. The plaintiffs were therefore entitled to claim the amount decreed to them. No objection was taken in the argument before us as to the form of the decree passed by the Court below. As no other point was argued before us, this appeal must fail and be dismissed with costs.

The objections under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure are not pressed and are dismissed with costs.

AIKMAN, J.—I concur.

Appeal dismissed.

1899
APRIL 8.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 301 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 78.

(1) 3 C. 353.

(2) 5 C. 291.

1899

21 A. 309 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 87.

APRIL 26.

[309] APPELLATE CIVIL.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

MUHAMMAD HAMID-UD-DIN (Plaintiff) v. SHIB SAHAI AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [26th April, 1899.]

21 A. 309 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 87.

Mortgage—Sale of mortgaged property under a decree other than a decree on the mortgage—Mortgage not disclosed—Effect of such non-disclosure on mortgagee's rights under his mortgage—Estoppel.

Held that a mortgagee who causes the mortgaged property to be sold in execution of a decree other than a decree obtained upon his mortgage, without notifying to intending purchasers the existence of his mortgage lien is estopped for ever from setting up that lien against the title of a bona fide purchaser. Agar Chand Guman Chand v. Rakhma Hinmant (1) and Dullab Sirkar v. Krishna Kumar Bakshi (2), followed.

[R., 35 C. 61 = 6 C.L.J. 320 = 11 C.W.N. 1011; 15 C.W.N. 748 (752) = 9 Ind. Cas. 1034 (1037); 14 C.P.L.R. 17 (20); 2 N.L.R. 106.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Mr. Amiruddin, for the appellant.
Pandit Sundar Lal and Mr. J. Simeon, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—This first appeal arises out of a suit in which one Hamid-ud-din claims possession of a $2\frac{1}{2}$ biswa share in certain muafi land and two sihams out of 40 sihams of mauza Mahesra. He also claims a declaration of his right and title to three sihams of the same milk in the possession of mortgagees. In 1871, Harsahai, the ancestor of the present defendants, brought a suit upon a hypothecation bond of 1865 and got a decree in 1871. In the year 1872, he obtained decrees upon two other hypothecation bonds. The decree of 1871 was a decree upon a bond given by one of two brothers in which he hypothecated a 5 biswa share in mauza Mahesra. The bonds upon which the decrees were obtained in 1872 were bonds executed by both brothers hypothecating the same shares. The decrees of 1872 were first put into execution and one-half of the hypothecated property was sold, the price of that half satisfying the two decrees. In 1879 Harsahai attached and sold in execution of a money-decree, the $2\frac{1}{2}$ biswas which remained unsold upon the execution of the previous [310] decrees and purchased them himself in the name of his son. He then proceeded to put into execution the decree of 1871, and in execution of that decree a proclamation of sale was made, and he put up for sale and himself purchased the one-half of the property which had been sold under the decree of 1872. The purchaser under the decree of 1872 is the plaintiff here. He now seeks to recover possession of that two-and-a-half biswas. It has been contended on behalf of the appellant that the Subordinate Judge has wrongly found against him upon two issues fatal to his case. He has found first of all, that his claim is barred by limitation, the defendant having been in possession of the property for more than twelve years. He has also found that the plaintiff, when he purchased the shares at the sale of 1872, had notice of the decree of 1871 held by Harsahai.

^{*} First Appeal No. 52 of 1897, from a decree of Pandit Raj Nath Sahib, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated 11th December, 1896.

(1) 12 B. 678.

(2) 3 B.L.R. 407.

The finding of limitation is apparently based upon no evidence, and such evidence as we have before us shows that within the period of twelve years the defendants have filed a suit in which they allege dispossession of themselves. That suit was filed against the present plaintiff for the profits he had, as was alleged, received during the period of such dispossession. Upon the question of notice, we find that the Judge relies upon evidence of certain payments made at a period years after the sale for satisfaction of some lien. It has been shown to us to demonstration by documents on the record that such payments did not refer to the lien of Harsahai, the right to enforce which is disputed in the present suit; and indeed proof of knowledge at any time subsequent to the sale will be no proof of knowledge at the time of sale. Our attention has been called to two cases which seem to us accurately in point. The case of Agar Chand Guman Chand v. Rakhma Hanmant (1) and the case of Dullab Sirkar v. Krishna Kumar Bakshi (2). In those cases it was held that a decree-holder who, having a prior incumbrance, puts up for sale in execution of another decree such property without notifying that he has such a lien, is estopped for ever from setting up that lien against the title of a bona fide purchaser. Those rulings are not [311] merely an authority, but they are founded upon elementary principles of equity. It is manifest in this case that the sale of the property as unincumbered was a mala fide sale and fraud upon all intending purchasers.

For these reasons we allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below, and decree the suit of the plaintiff in terms of the prayer in the plaint, with costs.

Appeal decreed.

21 A. 311=19 A W.N. (1899) 84.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

SHEODHYAN AND ANOTHER (Objectors) v. BHOLANATH AND OTHERS (Opposite Parties).^{*} [27th April, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 311--Execution of decree—Sale in execution—Sale without previous attachment—Material irregularity.

Held that the absence of an attachment prior to the sale of immoveable property in execution of a decree amounts to no more than a material irregularity, but is not sufficient, unless substantial injury is caused thereby, to vitiate the sale. Ram Chand v. Pitam Mal (3); Ganga Prasad v. Jag Lal Rai (4); Harbans Lal v. Kundan Lal (5) and Tasadduk Rasul Khan v. Ahmad Husain (6), referred to; Mahadeo Dubey v. Bholanath Dichit (7), distinguished.

[R., 34 C. 811=5 C.L.J. 696=11 C.W.N. 756; 5 C.L.J. 687 (690); 13 C.L.J. 243 (249)=9 Ind. Cas. 918 (922); 24 M.L.J. 70=13 M.L.T. 207=M.W.N. (1913) 136=18 Ind. Cas. 498 (499); 6 Ind. Cas. 713 (714)=40 P.R. 1910=211 P.L.R. 1910=63 P.W.R. 1910; 18 Ind. Cas. 715 (717); 13 O.C. 43 (47)=5 Ind. Cas. 798.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Munshi Gokul Prasad, for the appellants.

Munshi Ram Prasad, for the respondents.

^{*} First Appeal No. 6 of 1899, from an order of Maulvi Muhammad Mazhar Husain, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 7th January 1899.

(1) 12 B. 678.

(2) 3 B.L.R. 407.

(3) 10 A. 506.

(4) 11 A. 333.

(5) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 212.

(6) 21 C. 66.

(7) 5 A. 86.

1899
APRIL 26.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 309 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 87.

1899

JUDGMENT.

APRIL 27.

APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.21 A. 311=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 84.

BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is an appeal from an order refusing to set aside an auction-sale of the property of the appellants, held in execution of a decree obtained by the respondents against the appellants. It appears that a portion of the said property had been attached before judgment, that after the decree was passed an application for execution was made, and that thereupon the remainder was also attached in the manner provided by law. The property was then sold, but the sale was set aside on the ground of material irregularity in publishing and conducting it. This was on the 23rd of April 1898. On that date the Court made [312] a further order that the decree-holders should take further steps on the 25th of that month. On the 25th the decree-holders do not appear to have made any further application, and thereupon the case was removed from the file of pending cases. On the 6th of May following the decree-holders presented another application for execution and prayed for the sale of the six villages which have now been sold. The property was not attached a second time, but the usual proclamations of sale were issued, and the sale actually took place on the 20th of August 1898. We notice that, during the pendency of the execution proceedings and before sale, the judgment-debtors filed an application on the 11th of August 1898, in which they stated that the property had been attached. This application was made in connection with the decree-holders' prayer for the arrest of the judgment-debtors. After the auction-sale of the property on 20th of August 1898, the judgment-debtors applied to have the sale set aside on various grounds, one of which was that after the case had been struck off the file on the 25th of April 1898, the attachment of the property had come to an end; that the sale of the 20th of August 1898 was effected without a fresh attachment; and that the sale was consequently illegal and void. The Court below overruled the objections and confirmed the sale. It found that the judgment-debtors had not sustained any injury in consequence of the irregularities alleged by them. This finding has not been questioned in the appeal before us, so that we may take it that the judgment-debtors have not suffered any substantial loss within the meaning of s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It is urged before us that, by the striking off of the execution case on the 25th of April 1898, the attachment which had been placed upon the property had determined, and that by reason of the property not being attached a second time there was an illegality in the sale which vitiated the sale. On the question of the effect which the striking off of an execution case has upon an attachment of property made in the case, there is a conflict of authority, but in the view which we take of this case we do not think it necessary to enter into a consideration of that question. In our opinion the [313] absence of attachment, assuming in this case that the property was sold without a previous attachment which subsisted at the date of sale, did not amount to anything more than a material irregularity in the publishing of the sale. An attachment is a step towards the sale of the judgment-debtor's property. The object of an attachment is to bring the property under the control of the Court, with a view to prevent the judgment-debtor alienating it, and thereby preventing its sale in execution of the decree. In the case of immoveable property, one of the requirements of the law for perfecting an attachment is that the order of attachment should be publicly proclaimed. The main object of the proclamation of the order is to give publicity to the fact that the sale of the particular property attached is in contemplation, and to warn all persons against taking a transfer of it from the judgment-debtor to the prejudice of the rights of the decree-holder enforceable under the decree. The publication of the attachment is thus a step leading up to the publication of the sale, the actual proclamation of sale being a notice to the public that the sale is to take place upon a particular date. The absence of attachment may therefore be deemed to be a material irregularity in the publishing of the sale. That was the view taken in the case of Ram Chand v. Pitam Mal (1). We were much pressed with the Full Bench decision in Mahadeo Dubey v. Bholanath Dichit (2); but it seems to us that the principle of the ruling of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Tasadduk Rasul Khan v. Ahmad Husain (3) makes the decision in Mahadeo Dubey v. Bholanath Dichit inapplicable to the present question. In that case their Lordships of the Privy Council held, with reference to a proclamation of sale issued in violation of the provisions of s. 290 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that that was nothing more than a material irregularity, and did not ipso facto vitiate the sale, as had been held by this Court in Ganga Prasad v. Jag Lal Rai (4). The same principle applies [314] to the question before us, and this seems to have been the opinion of the learned Judges who decided the case of Harbans Lal v. Kundan Lal and others (5). In this view it is not necessary to consider the effect of s. 490 of the Code of Civil Procedure or of the striking off of the execution case on the 25th of April 1898 upon the question of attachment. As the absence of attachment was in our opinion, a material irregularity in publishing the sale, and as it has not been proved in this case that such irregularity resulted in substantial injury to the judgment-debtors, the Court below was right in refusing to set aside the sale. We dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 314 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 86.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair, and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

CHETAN CHARAN DAS AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. BALBHADRA DAS (Plaintiff).^{*} [28th April, 1899.]

Parties to a suit—Death of plaintiff after hearing but before judgment—Judgment given by Court in ignorance of plaintiff's death—Judgment and decree valid—Doctrine of nunc pro tunc.

The successful plaintiff in a suit died a few days after the hearing of the suit had been concluded and judgment reserved. Unaware of the death of the plaintiff, the Court proceeded to deliver judgment and pass a decree in favour of the deceased plaintiff. Held, that, nothing remaining to be done by the parties on the day when judgment was reserved, the judgment should read as from that date, and the decree was a valid decree. Cumber v. Wane (6), Ramacharya v. Anantacharya (7) and Surendro Keshub Roy v. Doorgasoondery Doossee (8), followed.

[F., 6 C.L.J. 547 = 12 C.W.N. 590; 9 C.W.N. 710 (719); R., 30 A. 505 = 5 A.L.J. 658 (659) = A.W.N. (1908) 228; 26 M. 101 (102); 14 C.W.N. 759 (764); 4 Ind. Cas. 137 = 11 Bom. L.R. 1070.]

^{*} First appeal No. 50 of 1897, from a decree of Maulvi Saiyid Muhammad Sirajuddin, Subordinate Judge of Agra, dated the 15th September 1896.

(1) 10 A. 506.

(4) 11 A. 333.

(6) 1 Smith L.C. 10th Ed. 325.

(2) 5 A. 86.

(5) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 212.

(7) 21 B. 314.

(3) 21 C. 66.

(8) 19 C. 513.

1899
APRIL 27.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 311 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 84.

1899
APRIL 28.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Mr. E. A. Howard and Munshi Rām Prasad, for the appellants.
Mr. D. N. Banerji, Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Babu Satya Chandar Mukerji, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

21 A. 314=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 86.

[315] BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—The first of the long list of the grounds of appeal in this case which was argued before us was the 11th. It is couched in the following words:—"Because the decree in the suit was illegally passed after the death of the plaintiff without any person being brought on the record as his representative." The facts are, that the trial was concluded, arguments were heard, and the judgment was reserved on the 5th of September 1896. The plaintiff died on the 9th of September 1896. He was then absent in Orissa, and his death was unknown to any of the parties or to the Court. Judgment was delivered, and the decree was passed on the 15th of September 1896. It was argued on behalf of the appellants that the suit abated from the moment of the death of the plaintiff, and that the Court was incompetent to pass a decree, no representative of the deceased having been put on the record. This is a matter which has long been disposed of in England by the application of a large general principle of law actus curiæ nemini facit injuriam. That principle was applied in the leading case of Cumber v. Wane (1). A defendant in error died after the time when the Court took time to consider. It was prayed that the judgment might be entered nunc pro tunc; in other words, that the judgment should be dated as of the day when the Court reserved its decision, and to that prayer the Court acceded. Such has been the invariable practice in England; and that practice finds expression in the rules framed under the Judicature Act of 1875. It seems to us that the decision to which we have referred and the subsequent practice of the Courts are consistent with justice and good sense. Nothing was left to be done by the parties from the moment the judgment was reserved. Any delay which took place was the delay of the Court, and we are not surprised to find that the English practice has been followed by the Courts in this country, notably in the case of Ramacharya v. Anantacharya (2). No case to the contrary has been cited before us. A similar view has been taken by the [316] Privy Council in the case of Surendro Keshub Roy v. Doorgasoondery Dossee (3). We think that that decision amounts to an authority which this Court is bound to follow. We follow it accordingly. Our ruling in this case must be taken to be strictly limited to its facts, namely, that everything to be done by the parties had been done, and nothing remained except the delivery of judgment, which had been reserved by the Court. We, therefore, overrule this ground of appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 1 Smith L.C. 10th Ed. 325.

(2) 21 B. 314.

(3) 19 C. 513.

21 A. 316 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 101.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.*BENI PRASAD KUNWAR (Defendant) v. MUKHTESAR RAI AND OTHERS
(Plaintiffs).^{*} [29th April, 1899.]*Civil Procedure Code, s. 244—Execution of decree—Representatives of judgment-debtor—Death of party to suit before final decree in appeal—Subsequent proceedings in execution taken against representatives of such party—Sale in execution—Suit to set aside sale—Estoppel.*1899
APRIL 29.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.21 A. 316 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 101.

A decree was given to the defendant (then plaintiff) in 1856 for possession of land and mesne profits against numerous defendants, including one Dawan Rai. Some of the judgment-debtors, including Dawan Rai, appealed to the Sadr Diwani Adalat, but before the decree of the Sadr Diwani Adalat was passed, Dawan Singh died. No application was made to put any representative of Dawan Rai on the record; but in 1881 (the amount of the mesne profits payable under the decree having been finally determined in 1877), certain persons were made parties, as representatives of Dawan Rai, to various proceedings in execution of the decree for mesne profits, which ended in the sale of certain property which had been of Dawan Rai in his lifetime. Subsequently the said representatives of Dawan Rai brought a suit to recover the property sold as above described on the ground that they were no parties to the decree under execution.

Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to bring such a suit, and it was not barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Radha Prasad Singh v. Lal Sahab Rai (1), referred to.

Held, also, that as it had not been shown that by reason of the plaintiffs not objecting that they had been improperly brought on to the record of the [317] execution proceedings, the defendant had been induced to accept less favourable arrangement for the satisfaction of the decree than he might otherwise have done, there was no estoppel against the plaintiffs.

[R., 2 N.L.R. 34 (39).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court and the judgment referred to therein.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan, Munshi Ram Prasad and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—The suit out of which this appeal arises was brought by the plaintiffs to recover possession of certain immoveable property which was sold by public auction on August 20th, 1889, in execution of a decree held by the respondent as representative of her deceased husband Maharaja Radha Prasad Singh. There were originally three plaintiffs to the suit, namely, Mata Dayal Rai, Musammatt Prayagi Kunwar and Musammatt Bartana Kunwar. The suit of the third was dismissed by the lower Court. She is not concerned in this appeal. A decree was given in favour of Mata Dayal and of Musammatt Prayagi. The present appeal is against that decree, the sons of Mata Dayal who died after decree having been substituted for him as respondents. The early history of this litigation, which has now lasted since 1855, will be found fully reported in the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Radha Prasad Singh v. Lal Sahab Rai (1). The subsequent facts are, that the decree of ^{*} First Appeal No. 81 of 1896, from a decree of Rai Kishan Lal, Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur, dated the 21st September 1895.

(1) 13 A. 53 = 17 I.A. 150.

1899
APRIL 29.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 316=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 101.

March 1st, 1877, by which the mesne profits due to the Maharaja were for the first time ascertained was, after many interlocutory proceedings arising out of objections taken by the parties whom it was sought to make liable under the decree of March 1st, 1877, transferred to the Collector of Ghazipur for execution under the provisions of s. 320 and the following sections of the Code of Civil Procedure in August, 1884. The Collector, with the consent of the parties against whom the decree was being executed, sold some 13 villages to the Maharaja for Rs. 75,000 in reduction of the decree, and the Maharaja consenting to accept Rs. 6,50,000 (about [318] one half of the amount due) in full discharge of the decree to him, the Collector made, with the consent of the parties against whom the decree was being executed, arrangements for paying off the Rs. 6,50,000 by instalments during a term of twenty years. This arrangement was fairly successful for a couple of years; but eventually the persons against whom the decree was being executed interfered with the collections, themselves refused to pay and instigated their tenants to withhold their rents from the official appointed by the Collector to manage the estate. The result was, that by order of the Commissioner the attempt to save the attached property from sale was abandoned, and a sale under the decree of March 1st, 1877, took place on August 20th, 1889. The sale produced only Rs. 6,02,500 — less than half the amount of the decree with interest.

Among the parties whose property was sold and purchased by the decree-holder, the Maharaja, were the plaintiff Mata Dyal Rai now represented by his three sons (respondents) and Musammat Prayagi Kunwar now also represented since her death by the sons of her co-plaintiff Mata Dyal. The object of their suit has already been set forth. At the hearing of the suit several matters were argued and adjudicated on with which we have no concern now. The plea on which this appeal has been fought is that the plaintiffs had no concern whatever with the litigation till they were brought in during 1881 as parties who were liable under the ascertainment of mesne profits decree of March 1st, 1877.

They were brought in then as representatives of Dawan Rai. Now there can be no doubt that Dawan Rai was one of those impleaded in 1855, and that he was one of the 54 defendants who appealed to the Sadr Diwani Adalat against the decree of the District Judge of April 1856.

But it is alleged for the plaintiffs, and is now admitted by the respondents' learned counsel to be the fact, that Dawan died in 1862. The final decree of the Sadr Diwani Adalat on review was passed on April 7th, 1866, four years after Dawan's death. No one was brought on the record of the case before the Sadr [319] Diwani Adalat as his representative, and it is admitted that no one representing Dawan was impleaded in the proceedings which terminated in the mesne profits decree of March 1st, 1877. The plaintiffs here were brought on as Dawan's representatives some time in 1881, some four years after the decree of 1877. Now on the above state of facts, it seems to me to be hardly possible to distinguish the case of these respondents from that of the defendant Lal Sahab Rai in the case before their Lordships of the Privy Council mentioned above. Indeed the case of these respondents seems stronger, for though their ancestor Dawan Rai was a party to the decree in favour of the Maharaja, passed in 1856, and to the Sadr Diwani Adalat's decree in appeal in 1859, he was dead before the final decree of the Sadr Court (the decree on review) was passed in April 1866, and no one was brought on to represent him in the mesne profits ascertainment proceedings. These plaintiffs accordingly are prima facie, not bound by either the decree of April 1866 or the decree of March 1877, neither they nor any person whom they represent having been parties to either of those decrees. It was on that ground that the lower Court gave plaintiffs a decree.

For the appellant it was contended that the suit was not maintainable, that it was forbidden by the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and Mr. Conlan also, with great earnestness contended that the respondents had estopped themselves from instituting such a suit.

Now as to s. 244 the argument is that these plaintiffs when brought in in 1881 as representative judgment-debtors, liable under the decree of 1877, should at once have raised the objection that they were not then brought on the record to represent any one who had been a party to the decree of 1877. Had they raised the plea then it may be they could have been successful; but it is contended they are too late now, and cannot raise it in a separate suit. Reliance is placed for appellant on the last clause of s. 244. It seems to me, however, that that clause is not in point. It clearly refers to a case where there is a [320] dispute between two or more persons as to which of them is the representative of a person who had been a party to the suit. It cannot, I think, be held to include a case in which there could be no representative, as there was no party to be represented, and therefore no question as to who was the representative. Sections 367 and 368 of the Code were also referred to by the learned counsel, but I cannot see how they affect the question.

The Chief argument of the learned counsel was that the respondents had estopped themselves by their conduct from instituting the suit. He pointed out that they had submitted in silence from 1881 to 1889 to being treated as judgment-debtors liable under the decree of March 1st, 1877, that they had never taken any objection to the position assigned to them, that they jointly with hundreds of other judgment-debtors had put in many petitions in the execution proceedings after 1881, in the Shahabad and the Ghazipur Courts, making such objections as are usual in the case of judgment-debtors liable under the decree then being executed, e.g., as to the amount calculated to be due on the decree and the like, but that these plaintiffs had never, in any of those numerous petitions, given the slightest hint that they really were not the representatives of any judgment-debtor and were consequently not liable under the decree of 1877; that they similarly joined in other petitions to the Collector when the execution proceedings were transferred to him, and joined in the proposal to the Collector that he should take over and manage the judgment-debtor's property holding it till the decree was paid off, and that in all these petitions and proceedings the plaintiffs remained silent as to their real position, and forebore to allege that they did not represent any defendant judgment-debtor liable under the decree of March 1st, 1877. The estoppel is then put in this way, that by the continuous silence of the plaintiffs from 1881 to 1889, and their submission without objection to the execution proceedings taken against them as representatives of Dawan (a person who was not a judgment-debtor), they had permitted the decree-holder [321] to believe a thing to be true, which was not true, namely, that these plaintiffs were judgment-debtors liable under the decree of 1877 as representatives of Dawan Rai, and to act upon that belief. The act which the decree-holder is said to have done in consequence of that belief is that he consented to forego his claim to about half the amount due to him under the decree of March 1st, 1877, amounting to more than 15 lakhs,

1899
APRIL 29.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 316 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 101.

1899
APRIL 29.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 316=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 101.

and to accept a transfer of villages valued at the sum of Rs. 75,000 and a payment of 6½ lakhs of rupees to be paid by annual instalments of Rs. 34,240 in nineteen years, the property of the judgment-debtors to be placed under the Collector's management.

It is contended that if the decree-holder had known that these plaintiffs were not liable to him under the decree of 1877, he would not have accepted this arrangement. In support of this argument it is pointed out that these plaintiffs joined with some hundreds of other persons liable under the decree in praying the Collector to take action to save the property from sale by taking it under his management. It is also said that had he known of the true position of these plaintiffs, the decree-holder would have insisted on immediate sale. Neither of these matters appears to me to have any weight. The assent of the person against whom the decree was being executed to the Collector taking their properties into his hands, was unnecessary and superfluous, such assent not being necessary, and as to the decree-holder not insisting on an immediate sale, it is sufficient to say that it was not in his power so to insist, everything depending on the discretion of the Collector. As to the abandonment of half his claim by the decree-holder, I am unable to see that his action in that matter was in any way influenced by the belief that these plaintiffs (who are only two among some hundreds) were liable to him under the decree of March, 1877. Indeed it appears that it was pressure from the Collector, and not any such belief that induced the decree-holder to forego half his claim. For I find it recorded by [322] the Collector in the preamble to the conveyance by which he sold 13 villages to the Maharaja for Rs. 75,000 that on inquiry it was found that the profits were not sufficient for the satisfaction of the decree, and the sale of the whole property must take place, the amount due exceeding 15 lakhs of rupees. The document then proceeds:—"After discussion I induced the decree-holder to consent to agree to a transfer in his favour of the under-mentioned mahals belonging to the judgment-debtors in consideration of Rs. 75,000 and to payment to him in 19 years or earlier of Rs. 6,50,000 out of the profits of their other property, which should be placed under the Collector's superintendence, by annual instalments of Rs. 34,210-8-5 from 1293 Fasli." This deed is dated February 22nd, 1886, and is record No. 409 in First Appeal No. 103 of 1896. So it seems to me that that which really induced the decree-holder to abandon half his claim was pressure put on him by the Collector and the knowledge that it was not possible to obtain full satisfaction of the decree, and not the fact that these plaintiffs had not disclosed their true position. That it was impossible to satisfy the decree in full is shown by the fact that at the sale on August 20th, 1896, the attached property, when put up to auction, fetched little more than six lakhs. The relinquishment of nearly half his claim under the decree of course was no longer effectual when the management of the estate by the Collector had to be abandoned owing to the contumacious resistance offered to the collection of rents by the judgment-debtor.

Further, I would add that our attention was not invited to any evidence on the record tending to show that the decree-holder as a matter of fact temporarily abandoned half his rights under the decree because he believed that these two respondents were liable to him under that decree. We were asked to infer that such was the case. I am not prepared to draw such an inference. I see no sufficient materials for it anywhere on the record. I do not believe that if the decree-holder had known of the true position of these plaintiffs he would [323] for that reason have refused to abate his demands under the decree. The reason why he did so was, I believe, (1) because the Collector pressed him to do so, and (2) because he saw no chance of his ever being able to get 15 lakhs out of the judgment-debtor's property. And I would add that even if these respondents were aware of their true position during the execution proceedings (which, in my opinion, is most improbable), I fail to see that it was incumbent on them to have informed the Maharaja of it. They owed him no such duty. It was he who had improperly forced them into Court as representatives of a non-existent judgment-debtor for the purpose of compelling them by seizure of their property to discharge a non-existent debt.

I do not think it necessary to enter into the question as to whether by law an estoppel could arise under the above circumstances. I find as a matter of fact that there was no estoppel.

For the above reason I am of opinion that this appeal fails. I would dismiss it with costs.

BLAIR, J.—I concur.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 323 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 104.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

BENI PRASAD KUNWAR (Defendant) v. LUKHNA KUNWAR AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs).^{*} [29th April, 1899.]

Execution of decree—Sale in execution—Suit to recover property sold on grounds which might have been made grounds for appeal against the original decree—Representative of judgment-debtors—Civil Procedure Code, s. 244.

When a party to a decree and subsequent proceedings in execution thereof has suffered execution to proceed and property to be sold without appealing, he cannot sue to recover the property so sold on grounds which might have been taken in appeal from the decree or from orders in execution.

Held also, that the question whether a person alleged to be a representative of a deceased party to a suit is such representative and also the question whether property against which execution is sought in the hands of the [324] representative of a deceased party was in fact the property of such deceased party and not the separate property of the representative, are questions to be decided under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure and not by separate suit. Rajrup Singh v. Ramgolam Roy (1), Chowdry Wahed Ali v. Mussamat Jumae (2) and Seth Chand Mal v. Durga Dei (3) referred to.

THE facts of this case appear from the judgment in this case and in F.A. No. 81 of 1896, supra p. 316.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan, Munshi Ram Prasad and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—This is one of the many cases now pending in appeal before us between the Maharani of Dumraon on the one side and the Narhi

^{*} First Appeal No. 76 of 1896, from a decree of Rai Kishan Lal, Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur, dated 7th December 1895.

(1) 16 C. 1.

(2) 11 B.L.R. 149.

(3) 12 A. 313.

1899
APRIL 29.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 323=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 104.

taluka people on the other. The history of the litigation will be found in the judgment in F. A. No. 81 of 1896.*

This suit was instituted by a large number of plaintiffs to recover possession of their interest in the property which was sold by public auction on August 20th, 1896, and also to recover their shares in the 13 villages sold by the Collector to the decree-holder on February 22nd, 1896.

The claims of a large number of the plaintiffs were dismissed by the lower Court. This appeal is against the decrees given to some of them. The learned counsel for the appellant abandons the appeal as to Nos. 23, Musammatt Lukhna Kunwar, and 25, Din Dyal, but supports it against the others. The first case is that of No. 24, Swarath Rai. This man, it appears, was not a party to the litigation up to 1866, though his elder brother, Ahlad, was a party to it. It is admitted, however, that Swarath was impleaded in the proceedings for ascertainment of mesne profits which terminated in the decree of March 1st, 1877, that he was one of the parties against whom that decree was passed, and that he continued to take part in all the execution proceedings subsequent to the decree of March 1st, 1877. But it is contended that that decree was wrongly passed against him, in that he was impleaded [325] personally, and not as representing any of the parties to the decree of 1866, in the proceeding for ascertainment of mesne profits which culminated in the decree of March 1st, 1877. Further it is alleged that that decree was passed ex parte against him, as no notice of the proceedings for ascertainment of mesne profits has been served on him. It is contended that for this reason the decree of March, 1877, is bad and can be set aside by a regular suit. Further it is contended that all the execution proceedings taken on the decree of March 1st, 1877, are bad under the following circumstances.

When the amount due for mesne profits was finally ascertained on March 1st, 1877, the Court ordered the decree-holder to pay in the sum of Rs. 2,000 deficient Court-fee duty payable on the ascertained amount of mesne profits for which execution was about to issue, to be paid into Court within three days. The decree-holder failed so to pay, and the case was struck off on March 15th, but was reinstated a few days afterwards on payment of the deficient Court fees, and execution then proceeded. It is contended for the respondent that the Court had no power to reinstate the execution proceedings, and that under s. 11 of the Court Fees Act, No. VII of 1870, the Court had no option in the matter, the deficient duty not being paid within the time limited by its order, and was bound to have dismissed the suit, i.e., to have rejected the execution application. As an authority for this contention the case of Kewal Kishan Singh v. Sookhari (1), is relied on.

I am of opinion that none of the points set forth above can be raised in a separate suit. It is admitted that the decree of March 1st, 1877, was passed against Swarath among a host of others. If he were improperly made a defendant in the case in which that decree was given, his remedy was by an appeal against the decree, an appeal which must have been successful if, as he says, he was not one of the parties whose liability to contribute to the mesne profits had been declared by the decree of 1866. Again, if it be, as he says, that the decree was passed against him ex parte without

* 21 A. 316 supra.

(1) 24 C. 173.

[326] notice, then the law provides machinery by which the decree could be set aside. But this respondent Swarath neither appealed from the decree against him which now has become final, nor has he made any attempt to have it set aside as being ex parte. In my opinion a suit to set aside the decree of March, 1877, which is really the object of the present suit, cannot be maintained, the proper procedure being by appeal against that decree. The plea raised on s. 11 of the Court Fees Act is open to the same objection. It is one which Swarath should have taken in appeal. If that plea, and also the plea as to want of notice of the proceedings be well founded, they would have lent most valuable support to an appeal against the decree of March 1st, 1877, but they are pleas which should have been taken in appeal against that decree and not by separate suit against proceedings taken in execution of that decree years after it had become final. The case cited from 24 Calc., 173, in no way can be considered an authority in favour of the respondent, for though the judgment does hold that the suit ought, under the circumstances, to have been dismissed, it must be noticed that the appeal which the High Court was hearing was an execution appeal against an order passed in the course of the execution of the decree. Had the respondent here instituted an appeal from the order of the Court reinstating the proceedings on payment of the deficient Court fees duty, very probably he would have been successful. But as he did not institute such an appeal, I am of opinion that he cannot now urge that matter in a suit brought practically to set aside the decree of March 1st, 1877, a decree which he might have disputed, and probably with success, by appealing. In my opinion for the above reason, the decree of the lower Court is wrong as to this respondent Swarath. I would allow the appeal as against him with costs and direct his suit to stand dismissed.

Pargas No. 46.—This respondent was brought into the execution proceedings in 1884, as representative of one Ram Hit, deceased, who admittedly was a party to all the litigation including the decrees of 1856 and 1877. It is contended that he was improperly [327] made a representative of Ram Hit. That probably is so, as Ram Hit left male issue, and Pargas is only a distant relative. But the question as to whether he was or was not properly impleaded as Ram Hit's representative is one which cannot be raised by a separate suit. It is a question which must be decided under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure in the manner laid down by the last clause of that section. It is perfectly clear that Pargas, when he was impleaded as representative of Ram Hit, did not raise any question as to the propriety of the order impleading him as such. There was therefore no occasion for the execution Court either to decide any question itself or to stay the execution pending its decision in a separate suit. This suit is not the separate suit referred to in s. 244, as it has not been instituted to decide the question as to who is Ram Hit's legal representative, but has been instituted after execution had been exhausted to set aside the decree on which that execution was had. It is urged on behalf of Pargas that he is liable only at most for any assets of Ram Hit which he may have received (s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure), and that the property which has been attached and sold is his own individual property, and that he did not obtain it as heir of Ram Hit. To this plea the answer is that the question as to whether Pargas held the property in dispute as his own property, and so not liable to be taken in execution to satisfy a decree against Ram Hit, or whether he held it as assets belonging to Ram Hit's estate, and 1899

APRIL 29.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 323—
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 104.

1899
APRIL 29.
—

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—

21 A. 323=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 104.

therefore liable to be taken under the decree, is a question which must be decided under s. 244 by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit.

The law on this point has been very clearly and unmistakeably laid down by the Calcutta High Court in the case of Rajrup Singh v. Ramgolam Roy (1), which is founded on the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Chowdry Wahed Ali v. Mussamut Jumae (2), and in a Full Bench decision of this Court in Seth Chand Mal v. Durga Dei (3), [328] which follows and approves of the case in 16 Calc. 1, and overrules certain cases to the contrary in this Court. In those cases it is laid down that it has been settled by a series of cases that questions arising between the decree-holder and the representative as to whether the attached property has come to the representative as such, and so liable to be taken in execution, or is the representative's own property derived from some other source, and therefore not liable to be taken in execution, must (under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure) be decided in the execution proceedings and not by a separate suit. I must therefore hold that Pargas cannot be allowed in this suit to plead that the property sold as against him as representative of Ram Hit was his own property and not derived from Ram Hit. I would for the above reasons allow this appeal against Pargas with costs and would direct that his suit be dismissed.

I next take up the case of No. 52, Aprup Rai, No. 53, Nanku Rai, No. 54, Deoki Rai, and No. 55, Musammât Ghurbasi Kunwar. These persons are exactly in the same position as the respondents in F. A. No. 81 of 1896. They were brought on in the execution proceedings as representatives of one Radha Rai. The latter was a party to the decree of 1866, but not to the decree of March 1st, 1877. No one representing him was a party to the latter decree. Therefore for the reasons given by me in F. A. No. 81 of 1896, I would dismiss the appeal with costs against these respondents as far as their interest in the property sold at the auction sale of August 20th, 1896, is concerned as to their interest in the 13 villages transferred to the decree-holder by the conveyance of February 13th, 1886, executed by the Collector on their behalf with their consent, the appeal must be allowed, and that portion of their claim dismissed. Before they could succeed in this matter it is necessary that these respondents should have obtained a decree, formally setting aside the conveyance to which they had assented.

BLAIR, J.—I concur.

Decree modified.

(1) 16 C. 1.

(2) 11 B.L.R. 149.

(3) 12 A. 313.

21 A. 329=19 A.W.N. (1899) 106.

[329] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

MUHAMMAD MUNAWAR ALI (Defendant) v. RASULAN BIBI
(Plaintiff).^{*} [3rd May, 1899.]

Mahomedan Law—Waqf—Illusory dedication—Settlement for benefit of descendants of the settlors.

Held, that a mere charge for some charitable purposes on the profits of an estate strictly settled on the family of the settlors in perpetuity and not dedicated in substance to charitable uses is not sufficient to constitute a good and valid waqf. Abul Fata Mahomed Ishak v. Russomoy Dhur Chowdhry (1), Kaleloola Sahib v. Naseeruddeen Sahib (2), and Sheik Mahomed Ahsanulla Chowdhry v. Amarchand Kundu (3) referred to.

[Affr., 27 A. 320 (P.C.)=2 A.L.J. 513=2 C.L.J. 179=9 C.W.N. 625=15 M.L.J. 261=32 I.A. 86; F., 8 O.C. 379 (383); R., 33 A. 400 (412)=8 A.L.J. 162=9 Ind. Cas 753; 7 A.L.J. 1095 (1103); 13 Bom. L.R. 717=12 Ind. Cas. 225; D., 31 A. 136=6 A.L.J. 115=1 Ind. Cas. 763.]

THE facts of this case are fully stated in the judgment of Burkitt, J. The Hon'ble Mr. T. Conlan, Mr. B. E. O'Connor and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba and Babu Satya Chandar Mukerji, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—This is an appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur in favour of the respondent for recovery of her share according to Muhammadan law in the properties left by her father and her mother. The defendant-appellant is her elder brother. The facts out of which this case arose are as follows:—

Syed Muhammad Kaim Ali, father of the parties; and Musammat Aliyat-un-nissa Bibi, their mother, executed on March 9th, 1881, an instrument called a waqf-namah, the nature and effect of which will be considered further on. The mother died on April 19th, 1881, leaving her surviving as her heirs her husband, her two sons and four daughters. Her husband survived till February 9th, 1895, when he died leaving the same heirs, except one daughter, Musammat Asma, who predeceased him. On the death of Syed Kaim Ali, his elder son, the appellant, took possession as mutawalli of all the properties mentioned in the waqf-namah [330] and of other small properties not included in it. The present suit instituted on February 14th, 1896, is one of several suits instituted against him by his younger brother, by his sisters, and by a purchaser from the husband of the deceased sister to recover the shares in that property to which the Muhammadan law entitles them. In her plaint the plaintiff in this suit, Musammat Rasulan, denied that the waqf-namah was a valid deed of endowment, and described it as "a deed of arrangement which he (Syed Kaim Ali) had executed to preserve his reputation and dignity to prevent a partition of the property among the persons entitled, and to reserve to himself his personal interest." The plaint further alleges that during the lifetime of the settlors "there was no indication of any real charitable

* First Appeal No. 30 of 1897, from a decree of Babu Brijpal Das, Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur, dated the 16th September 1896.

(1) 22 I.A. 76 (87).

(2) 18 M. 201.

(3) 17 I.A. 28 (37).

1899

MAY 8.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 329=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 106.

1899
MAY 3.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 329=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 106.

endowment." These contentions are explained in detail in the 5th and 6th paragraphs of the plaint. The defendant in reply set up the waqf-namah as a bar to the suit. He also pleaded that the suit for a share in Musammât Aliyat-un-nissâ's property was barred by limitation, she having died more than twelve years before the suit, and also that before such a suit could be maintained the waqf-namah must be formally set aside. He also raised a plea of estoppel.

The Subordinate Judge gave the plaintiff a decree, holding that no valid and legal waqf of the entire corpus of the property had been executed so as to prevent its being inherited by the heirs according to their legal shares. Hence this appeal. Several pleas were taken in the written memorandum of appeal. At the hearing the only matters contended for were that the waqf-namah was a good and effectual endowment of the property mentioned in it, and that a suit to recover a share of the property which had been of Musammât Aliyat-un-nissâ in her lifetime was barred by the limitation rule contained in art. 144 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act. The plea that s. 91 of the Limitation Act barred the suit was expressly abandoned at the hearing by the appellant's learned counsel, and it was also stated for the appellant that no question of estoppel was pressed in the [331] appeal. There was also a plea as to the moveable property, but that matter, though not expressly abandoned, was but feebly pressed. There is really nothing in it, the evidence being quite worthless. We overrule it.

I take up first the principal question, namely, is the document on which the defendant relies a good and valid waqf-namah? It will be necessary to set out in some detail the objects and provisions of that instrument. It commences with an invocation of God, and then sets out the names of the waqifs or settlors. The object aimed at is next declared in the clearest and most unequivocal language. The settlors, after reciting that they are cousins as well as husband and wife, and that they are advanced in age, proceed as follows:—"It is absolutely necessary in order to secure the love of each individual among friends in this world and to earn merit in the next world that sufficient provision be made for the thorough management of the entire property and of the imlaks belonging to the executants and the income and the profits therefrom (which, taken as a whole, form a small estate), so that the property itself and the principal wealth of the estate may always be preserved from all manner of partition, division, transfer, and succession, and the management thereof in whole and in part should remain for ever in the hands of one person, whereby (our) name and memory and the pomp and dignity of the estate may continue." Now these words cannot be taken to have any meaning other than that the intention of the settlors was to establish a perpetuity, so that their estate should not be divided among their heirs but should always remain unimpaired. But Syed Karim Ali being a practising vakil of some reputation, probably knew that that object could not be effected under the ordinary law. This is frankly admitted in the next sentence which runs as follows:—"Whereas the attainment of the above object is impossible except by a waqf as directed by the Mubammadan law, we the executants, of our free will and consent, without coercion or pique, and while in a sound state of body and mind, execute this deed of waqf or endowment as follows." Then comes a detail [332] of the property belonging to the two waqifs, from which it appears that the great bulk of it belonged to the wife and very little to the husband. Next we come to the endowment clause in paragraph 4, which provides:—

"Out of the entire milk and property mentioned above we, both the executants,—make waqf of the whole of the immoveable property owned by us the executants specified in clauses 1 and 2 of the first paragraph of this document—in favour of our respective selves and after the death of one of us the executants, in favour of the surviving executant alone and thereafter in favour of our descendants generation after generation, so long as they exist, and in favour of the servants and dependents of the riasat aforesaid, in favour of the poor, the beggars, of the needy, for ever in the manner detailed below." This paragraph ends with an intimation that the settlors' direction as to the appointment of a mutawalli and as to the manner in which the disbursements of the income of the "waqf" are to be made will be found recorded further on, evidently referring to the words "in the manner detailed below" of the preceding sentence.

The next paragraph 5 provides in clause (a) that the executants shall remain in possession of the endowed property during their joint lives "simply as persons in whose favour a waqf or endowment is made, and appropriate in every way the income and profits thereof." The effect of this provision is that though the settlors purport to divest themselves of their proprietary character, they nevertheless put all the "income and profits" of the waqf property into their own pockets, to be used at their own will and pleasure. Clause (b) of the same paragraph is important. In it the female executant, Musammât Aliyat-un-nissa, after singing her husband's praises at great length and reciting that she has remitted her dower-debt to him, goes on to provide that in addition to being a person in whose favour the endowment is made, the husband shall also be the "mutawalli of the property, the entire management in every respect being in his hands according to his choice and pleasure." The lady [333] then goes on to provide that the profits remaining after the disbursements have been provided for shall during her lifetime "be appropriated by both of us, the executants, according to the discretion of the said mutawalli. If he survive me, he will continue to appropriate the entire income and profits from the whole of the property aforementioned, without the interference of any person in the way he thinks proper as long as he lives." The effect of this provision is that on the death of his wife, her children who by law would be entitled to three quarters of her property are entirely excluded, and the whole of her property goes to the husband to be appropriated by him and used by him at his own uncontrolled discretion. Clause (c) of the same paragraph provides that during their joint lives the names of both the settlors are to be used in litigation as long as the mutawalli wishes, and sets forth the name which is to be given to the estate.

Clause (d) of this paragraph empowers the husband as mutawalli to appoint a successor in office and to fix his remuneration with a provision restricting that office to a lineal descendant of Musammât Aliyat-un-nissa, and the next clause provides for the appointment of future mutawallis. In the next clause (f) the lady carefully provides for her own interests in case if she should survive her husband. In that event it is provided that one of the sons shall act as mutawalli, but shall hand over to his mother the entire income and profits from the waqf estate, to be appropriated by her and to be disbursed under her orders. The following clause (g) is unimportant.

So far this instrument deals with what is to happen during the lifetime of the waqfs and of the survivor of them, it is noteworthy that, though under paragraph 5 (a) the settlors profess to hold the property in future as 1899

MAY 8.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 329 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 106.

1899
MAY 3.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 329=
19 A. W. N.
(1899) 106.

trustees of an endowment, there is not the slightest change made in their position. They (and especially Kaim Ali, the husband), remain in complete uncontrolled possession of the endowed property without any obligation on them to devote one rupee to religious or charitable purposes, or even to continue their usual contribution to such objects. They do not [334] even deprive themselves of the power of selling or otherwise alienating any portion of the property, and had they thought fit to sell the whole and put the proceeds in their pockets it is difficult to see how they could have been prevented. In short, the first five paragraphs of this document leave the husband and wife absolute uncontrolled masters of the so-called endowment to deal with it as they please. They are not called on to exercise any self-denial, and, in the language of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Abul Fata Mahomed Ishaq v. Russomoy Dhur Chowdhry (1), they take back with one hand what they appear to put away with the other. There is no dedication of the property to charitable or to religious uses. The only dedication is in favour of the settlors and their descendants generation after generation so long as they exist; and in favour of an undefined class called the "servants and dependents of the estate" and "in favour of the poor, the beggars, and the needy for ever." Strictly construed, these words amount to an immediate settlement of the property on all classes of the beneficiaries simultaneously in the manner and to the extent subsequently declared. But if it were intended by the settlors that the whole estate should devolve on "the poor, the beggars and the needy," that event could not happen till after the failure of all descendants of the settlors' two sons and four daughters, and till after the failure of the "servants and dependants" of the estate. There being nothing to indicate that "by servants and dependents" were meant only those in existence at the date of the waqf, this class, a varying uncertain class, changing from time to time, would effectually exclude the last class "the poor, the beggars and the needy." The deed, moreover, as to this last class does not provide for the poor of any particular locality, e.g., Sarai Khera, where the settlors lived, thus leaving it uncertain who were the persons whom the settlors intended to benefit. And especially it is to be borne in mind that clause 4, the so-called endowment clause, provided that the benefits of the waqf were to be enjoyed by the [335] beneficiary "in the manner detailed below." I have already shown what that manner was to be during the joint and several lives of the settlors. I now turn to the provisions to be observed after their death. First of all, the mutawalli is directed to pay annuities amounting in all to Rs. 2,400 to the six children of the settlors. The annuitants were to have a power of appointment among their descendants, and in the absence of such appointment the annuities were to descend to their heirs according to the rules of Muhammadan law for ever. The most extensive and arbitrary powers are given to the mutawalli in the matter of granting and of withholding these annuities at his discretion and any one of the beneficiaries who, like the plaintiff-respondent, in this appeal, repudiated the waqf or questioned the authority of the mutawalli, was ipso facto to forfeit his annuity. It was next provided that a sum of Rs. 1,100 per annum should be spent for purposes which the learned counsel for the appellant earnestly contended were religious and charitable uses. Several of the objects enumerated, however, would not be considered religious or charitable objects within the meaning of the rule laid down by the Madras High Court in the case of Kaleelool Sahib v. Naseer-ud-deen Sahib.(1)

(1) 22 I. A. 76 (87).

The mutawalli is directed to devote a sum of Rs. 600 per annum to the support of a hospital at Sarai Kheta which the female settlor had established in March 1875, and which had since then been regularly supported by her and her husband. Then Rs. 20 per annum are provided for bringing water from the well Zamzam at Mecca, and a list is given of the persons who are to obtain spiritual benefit from this act. Rs. 36 per annum is to be spent in having the Koran recited for the benefit of the souls of the father and mother of the female settlor, the person who does the recitation being bound to transfer to those persons the spiritual benefit he had acquired from the recitation. Another reciter of the Koran was to be appointed on similar pay, and he was to transfer the spiritual benefit of his recitations to the benefit [336] of the souls of the settlers. The mutawalli is then directed to devote Rs. 150 per annum to charitable doles to be given to the poor every day at the principal gate. This is a continuance of the practice previously observed by the settlers. Then provision is made for the repair of the mosque at an annual cost of Rs. 50 and of the tomb of the settlor's ancestors at Sarai Kheta at a cost of Rs. 24. These matters again only perpetuate an existing custom. The next two clauses provide for the continuance of the existing customs of holding a meeting at an annual cost of Rs. 40 to commemorate the birth of the Apostle and of distributing at a cost of Rs. 60 in the Muharram food and sharbat for the benefit of the souls of the two imams. Finally, provision is made for the appointment of a person to teach the Koran and the principles of jurisprudence at Sarai Kheta. With one small exception which will be noticed further on these are all the provisions made for religious or charitable purposes, and the amount devoted to those purposes is certainly less than Rs. 1,000 per annum. The net income of the estate is between Rs. 9,000 and Rs. 10,000 per annum. But although charitable and religious objects do not benefit by quite Rs. 1,000, we find the waqfs providing for the pomp and dignity of the family by allotting Rs. 1,200 per annum for ringing the bell and maintaining the guard attached to the estate. A subsequent paragraph provides for the occupation of the houses on the estate and for the mutwalli's powers therein, while paragraph 8 deprives the beneficiaries of all the power of alienation of their annuities and puts the latter out of the power of the law by declaring that they shall not be saleable in execution of a decree against the annuitant. From paragraphs 9 and 10 it would seem that the settlers were apprehensive that the beneficiaries had no power of enforcing payment of their annuities, and so all the descendants of the settlers and well-conducted and learned Muhammadans of the Hanafi sect are prayed for "God's sake" to see that the payments be made even by having recourse to the help of the authorities. Paragraph 11 refers to the appointment of mutawallis after the death of the settlers and "provides for a [337] perpetual succession of some of the male members of the family as mutawallis."

The last paragraph, which it is necessary to notice, is No. 13. This provides that when any one of the beneficiaries is appointed mutawalli, his annuity is to lapse and fall into the income of the endowment, that such mutawalli is to hold possession of the estate and make collections,

1899
MAY 3.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 329 =
19 A.W N.
(1899) 106.

1899
MAY 3.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 329 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 106.

and that after paying the Government revenue and the annuities and other expenses, he is to take the surplus (minus one tenth) for himself, his family and his dependents. The one-tenth is to accumulate till it reaches the sum of Rs. 1,000. when it is to be invested in immoveable property or in some profitable business, and the annual income of that property or business is to be spent by the mutawalli in relieving the poor.

It is contended for the appellant that this last mentioned provision, coupled with those set forth in an earlier portion of this judgment, amount to a dedication of a substantial portion of the income of the estate to charitable purposes, and that therefore the waqf is good.

I am unable to concur in that contention. The first question to be considered is what was the real object of the settlers when they executed the waqf-namah. Did they intend to dedicate the property to religious and charitable uses with a charge for the support of the members of the family engrafted on it, or did they use the form of a waqf as a veil, under cover of which they attempted to do that which the law would not permit them to do openly? As to that matter the settlers leave no room for doubt. They state in the frankest manner that their object was to preserve the estate from diminution by partition, transfer or the like, and to keep it always in the hands of one person so that thereby their name and memory, "and the pomp and dignity of the estate, may continue." Not one word is said as to any desire to benefit the poor, as to any intention to constitute them the ultimate beneficiaries. The only object avowed is the preservation of the estate intact that its pomp and dignity may continue. The settlers admit [338] that they cannot attain that object except by the device of a waqf "as directed by the Muhammadan law," and then proceed to settle the estate on themselves and on their descendants so long as any exist, on the servants and dependents of the estate, and on the poor and needy. As to the last mentioned class there is nothing within the four corners of the waqf-namah to indicate that the settlers intended that that class should obtain any benefit beyond that given by paragraph 4 and 13. I cannot but consider a document containing such a settlement to be but the mere simulation of an endowment for charitable or religious purposes. Its object is not to benefit the poor, but to preserve the name and estate of the settlers. The gift to the poor, if, as a fact, there is any dedication or gift over to them, which I very much doubt, most probably would not take effect for hundreds of years, and even then it would probably be void for uncertainty, there being nothing to show who were the poor, the beggars, and the needy intended to be benefited. In my opinion the settlers did not suppose that any gift or ultimate dedication of the estate to charitable or religious uses was necessary to validate a waqf. I cannot but think that they were under the impression that a family settlement entailing the family property in perpetuity on its members and their descendants was a good waqf under Muhammadan law, a view which found some support a few years ago, but which has now been disapproved of by their Lordships of the Privy Council.

As to the charitable gifts mentioned in paragraphs 6 and 13 of the waqf-namah, I think the opinion of the Court below is right. No specified part of the waqf property has been charged with their payment. The second clause of the 6th paragraph does no more than direct the mutawalli to make certain payments "out of the profits of the waqf," and the same may be said as to the 13th paragraph with reference to the one-tenth of the surplus. No means are provided for compelling the mutawalli to make any of those payments. In fact the present mutawalli as to that matter is in the same position as his father Syed Kaim Ali was. [339] The latter of his own free will subscribed to the charitable objects to which he directed his son to continue the same amount of subscriptions, and they are no more than a devout and wealthy Muhammadan gentleman might find it becoming to spend in that way. This case can by no conceivable argument be brought within the rule of which their Lordships of the Privy Council approved in Sheik Mahomed Ahsanullah Chowdhry v. Amarchand Kundu (1). In fact it is to some extent the converse of the case therein cited with approval, as in this case I am asked to hold that a mere charge for some charitable purposes (which probably could not be enforced), on the profits of an estate strictly settled on the family of the settlors in perpetuity and not dedicated in substance to charitable uses is sufficient to constitute a good and valid waqf. To that contention I cannot accede. I fully concur in the opinion of the Subordinate Judge that "the little expenditure on religion and charity provided by the deed was no more than a charge on the property; it did not create a legal and valid waqf of the entire corpus of the property so as to prevent it being inherited by the heirs according to their legal shares." I would therefore affirm the decision of the lower Court that this is not a valid waqf.

There is one other point remaining for decision in this appeal. The plaintiff-respondent claims her legal share in the property left by her mother Musammât Aliyat-un-nissa, which, under the terms of the waqf-namah, was handed over to the husband Syed Kaim Ali, as mutawalli, and which remained in his possession up to the day of his death. The defendant-appellant pleads that that claim is barred by limitation, as he alleges that Kaim Ali, and the defendant after him, held adverse possession of that property from the lady's death in 1881 up to date of suit in 1896. Appellant relies on art. 144 of the second schedule to the Limitation Act No. XV of 1877. This matter is not really one of much importance to this plaintiff-respondent. On the finding that the waqf is bad there can be no doubt that Musammât Aliyat-un-nissa's property [340] formed in one way or another part of the property left by Syed Kaim Ali at his death. The plaintiff therefore, even assuming that property was the absolute property of Kaim Ali to which he had acquired a prescriptive title, would, as daughter of Kaim Ali, admittedly be entitled to her legal share in it by Muhammadan law.

In my opinion the respondent has failed to prove any adverse possession in Syed Kaim Ali. It is admitted for the appellant that no question of estoppel arises. But it is contended that the waqf being bad, Syed Kaim Ali held possession of his wife's estate after her death as a trespasser and so by adverse possession had acquired a prescriptive title to it before his death in 1895. Now there can be no doubt that his possession of that estate in the interval between the execution of the waqf-namah and his wife's death was permissive, and he professed to take it, not in any personal right, but as mutawalli under the terms of the waqf-namah, and for the purposes set forth in that instrument. I fail to see any change in the nature of his possession from that time up to his death. By the terms of the waqf-namah on the abandonment of their proprietary rights by his wife and himself he took possession as mutawalli or trustee to carry out the terms of the waqf-namah. He did not at any time profess

1899

MAY 3.

—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 329 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 106.

(1) 17 I. A. 28 (37).

1899
MAY 3.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 329 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 106.

to have nor did he set up any personal title in himself. The fact that the waqf is not valid in law does not, in my opinion make any difference in the nature of his possession. That fact did not clothe him with any adverse title to possession, but left him as trustee for the rightful owners of the property, namely, his wife and her heirs after her. In all his acts in the administration of the waqf he professed to act as trustee or mutawalli of the endowed property. In my opinion the waqf having failed he held the property as trustee for those entitled, under a legal obligation to hand it over to them on demand. Had such a demand been made and refused there would be good ground for holding his subsequent possession was adverse to the true heirs. Nothing of the kind is alleged, there is not an atom of evidence to show any change in the nature of Syed Kaim Ali's possession from the day [341] when he assumed possession of his own and his wife's property as mutawalli in 1881 down to his death in 1895. I am therefore of opinion that the appeal on this point fails and that the decree of the Subordinate Judge is right. I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

BLAIR, J.—I concur.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 341 (F.B.) = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 151.

FULL BENCH.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey. Kt. Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL
(Defendant) v. SUKHDEO (Plaintiff).* [25th April, 1899.]

Cause of action—Pleadings—Plaint disclosing no cause of action—Discovery at the stage of an appeal under the Letters Patent of defect in the plaint—Dismissal of suit—Practice.

Where in an appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent it was brought to the notice of the Court that the plaint in the suit disclosed no cause of action against the defendant named therein, the Court entertained the plea and dismissed the suit.

[F., 8 A.L.J. 922 (924) = 12 Ind. Cas. 111 (112) ; D., 31 P.W.R. 1907.]

THIS was a suit brought by one Sukhdeo against the Secretary of State for India in Council to recover certain property, which had been seized by a Magistrate in satisfaction of a fine imposed on his son, Natthe, or in the event of such property having been sold, its value, Rs. 10.

The facts of the case, briefly stated, were that Natthe had been convicted by a Magistrate of the 1st class of an offence under s. 417 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 200. In satisfaction of the fine certain articles were seized by the Police as being the property of Natthe. Sukhdeo raised an objection before the Magistrate who had succeeded the Magistrate by whom the fine had been imposed, but his objection was rejected, and the articles in question were sold. Sukhdeo thereupon preferred the present suit.

[342] The Court of first instance decreed the claim. On appeal the lower appellate Court modified the first Court's decree. The defendant appealed to the High Court. The appeal coming on for hearing before a

* Appeal No. 50 of 1898, under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

Division Bench, the Judges composing the Bench differed in opinion, and the decree of the lower appellate Court was accordingly upheld.* The defendant thereupon filed the present appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

Babu Satya Chandra Mukerji (with whom were Munshi Gulzari Lal and Munshi Jai Bihari Lal) for the respondent raised a preliminary objection that no appeal lay in this case under s. 586 of the Code of Civil Procedure nor under s. 10 of the Letters Patent. The plaintiff's suit was a suit of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, as it was a suit for the recovery of moveable property or the value thereof, and the amount sought to be recovered was below five hundred rupees. There was no doubt that the suit as framed was one of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, and exemption from such cognizance was sought by seeking to include it within the description of suits mentioned in clauses (2), (21) or (23) of the second schedule of Act No. IX of 1887.

[STRACHEY, C. J.—Clauses (21) and (23) do not seem to me to be in point; but what do you say to clause (2)? You will observe that the wording of clause (2) is very wide. Is not the present suit one concerning an act purporting to be done by a Judicial Officer acting in the execution of his office?]

Clause (2) does not apply. This suit is not a suit concerning an act of a public officer. For a case exactly in point see Bunwari Lal Mookerjee v. The Secretary of State for India (1). What has to be looked to in this connection is the relief that is asked for. It may be that the granting of that relief would have the effect of setting aside some order of some other public officer; but if that order is not sought to be cancelled in so many words, the suit would not be taken out of the category of Small Cause Court suits.—Vide the observations of Farran, C.J. and Strachey, J. in Raghunath Mukund v. Sarosti K. R. Kama (2); also the case of Makund Ram v. Bodh Kishan (3).

[STRACHEY, C. J.—Before we decide your preliminary objection will you show us from your plaint how you establish your cause of action against the defendant? You do not even allege in your plaint how the Secretary of State is liable in this matter.]

The defendant has not taken that objection in his written statement nor in his grounds of appeal to the lower appellate Court, and it is too late to take that objection now.

[BURKITT, J.—The defendant put you to the proof of your claim. He did not admit it. You must show that you have a cause of action against him.]

The plaint is no doubt defective in that respect, but that defect should be overlooked at this late stage.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J.—This is a suit in which the plaintiff claims to recover from the Secretary of State for India in Council certain articles, or, in the event of their having been sold, the sum of Rs. 10 as their value.

Now the allegations of the plaint, with reference to the cause of action against the Secretary of State, are as follows:—"On the 21st April, 1894, Natthe was found guilty by Mr. O. G. Arthur, Magistrate, 1st class, * See 18 A.W.N. (1898) 173.

(1) 17 C. 290.

(2) 23 B. 266.

(3) 17 A.W.N. (1897) 198.

1899
APRIL 25.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 341
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 151.

in the case of Queen-Empress v. Natthe under s. 417 of the Indian Penal Code, and was ordered to pay a fine of Rs. 200 to Government. In order to realize the aforesaid fine the following articles were seized through the police of Muttra, and the said articles were estimated by the police to be worth Rs. 10-5-0. The aforesaid articles belong to the plaintiff. He raised an objection before Munshi Narain Singh, who succeeded Mr. Arthur, that the aforesaid articles might be released. But the said officer rejected the said objection without taking any evidence on 16th June 1894. The cause of action accrued on 16th June, the day the objection was rejected, within the limits of the jurisdic- [344] tion of this Court. Although the aforesaid convict is the son of the plaintiff, he has been living separate from him for a long time. He had no right and interest in the seized articles detailed below. The plaintiff is therefore entitled to receive back the said articles, or if they have been sold by auction, Rs. 10 may be awarded, no matter for what price they were sold." That is all the substantial part of the plaint.

The Court of first instance decreed the claim. On appeal the lower appellate Court modified the first Court's decree. There was hence a Second Appeal by the appellant to this Court. The learned Judges who heard that appeal differed in opinion. Mr. Justice Blair was of opinion that the suit was not maintainable against the Secretary of State, and that the suit should be dismissed. Mr. Justice Aikman, on the other hand, was of opinion that the decree of the lower Court was right. Under s. 575 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the judgment of Mr. Justice Aikman prevailed, and this appeal against his decision has been brought by the defendant under the Letters Patent.

One of the grounds taken in the memorandum of the Second Appeal to this Court was that the plaintiff had shown no cause of action. That point was not raised in the defendant's written statement, but that written statement did not admit any cause of action by the plaintiff and thereby put the plaintiff to the proof of his whole case. The learned Judges of this Court stated that in consideration of the importance of the point at issue they would allow the appellant to support his appeal by any argument which lay within the scope on his grounds of appeal. The whole of both judgments is substantially occupied with the discussion of the question whether the plaintiff had shown any cause of action against the Secretary of State in Council. Considering that that question lay at the root of the whole suit, we think there can be no doubt that the learned Judges were right in allowing it to be raised and argued. The same ground of appeal is stated in the memorandum of appeal to us under the Letters Patent.

[345] To our minds, however, the question whether any cause of action is shown presents itself in a somewhat different form from that in which it appeared to the learned Judges. What they discussed was rather the question whether any cause of action had been established in the sense of a liability in the Secretary of State in respect of such acts as the seizure and sale of the goods claimed by the plaintiff. But in our view there is a preliminary question, that is, whether, on the face of the plaint, any cause of action against the Secretary of State is even alleged by the plaintiff. We have come to the conclusion that the plaint discloses no such cause of action. What it discloses is that in order to realize a fine imposed upon a third person, certain goods belonging to the plaintiff were wrongfully seized by the police, and that, while these articles were in the custody of the Court, the Magistrate rejected an application by the plaintiff for their release. That is the whole of what the plaint describes as the cause of action. The plaint stops with the Magistrate's rejection of the application, and consequently with the retention of the articles in the hands of the Court. There is nothing more. No action by the Secretary of State or by any person for whom he could be deemed responsible is referred to or even hinted at. After stating these facts the plaintiff goes on to claim the articles, or, if they have been sold, Rs. 10 as their value, from the Secretary of State, who is not alleged ever to have been in possession of them, or to have any connection with them in any way whatever. In this state of the case it appears to us wholly unnecessary to consider any of the questions which were so elaborately discussed in the judgments on the appeal. Upon the short ground which I have mentioned, namely, that the plaint discloses no cause of action against the Secretary of State in Council, we are of opinion that this appeal must be allowed and the suit dismissed. As regards costs we order that, having regard to the fact that the plaintiff had no notice until a late stage of the case of the objection which is fatal to his suit, each party pay his own costs in each of the Courts.

Appeal decreed.

21 A. 346 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 123.

[346] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Aikman.

GANESHA SINGH (Plaintiff) v. MUNDI FOREST COMPANY
(Defendant).^{*} [5th May, 1899.]

Company—Suit against unregistered company—Form of suit.

Where a company is not registered under Act No. VI of 1832, a plaintiff bringing a suit against such company must make each individual member of the company a defendant to the suit, and he cannot escape from this obligation by stating in his plaint that he has been unable to discover who the individual members of the company are. Koylash Chunder Roy v. Mr. Edward Ellis, Manager on behalf of the Bengal Indigo Company of Khalbolia Factory (1) considered. The N.W.P. Club v. Sadullah (2) followed.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Durga Charan Banerji, for the appellant.

Mr. W. Wallach, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX and AIKMAN, JJ.—The suit out of which this appeal has arisen was a suit brought by one Ganesha Singh against a defendant whom he describes as the Mundi Forest Company through W. Martin Towell, partner and agent, resident of camp Umballa. A written statement was put in signed by one E. W. Graham Roe, who describes himself as agent, Mundi Forest Company, Aligarh. That written statement was filed on the 10th of September 1897. It is admitted on both sides that before that date W. Martin Towell had died and there has been no application even up to the present date to bring any person on the record in ^{*} First Appeal No. 19 of 1898, from a decree of Maulvi Ahmad Ali Khan, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 13th of September 1897.

(1) (1867) 8 W. R. C. R. 45.

(2) 20 A. 497.

1899
MAY 5.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 346 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 123.

his place. The written statement put in sets out that the Mundi Forest Company is not a legal corporation, and it has not been registered under Act No. VI of 1882, and on that ground it was pleaded that the suit would not lie. The learned Subordinate Judge sustained the plea and dismissed the suit. In appeal before us it is contended that the learned Subordinate Judge should before dismissing the suit have given the appellant an opportunity to amend the plaint. [347] The amendment, which, it is contended, should have been allowed, is the addition of a statement that the plaintiff was unable to discover the names and addresses of the individual members of the Mundi Forest Company. The object of inserting this amendment is to rely upon an expression of opinion contained in the case of Koylash Chunder Roy v. Mr. Edward Ellis, Manager on behalf of the Bengal Indigo Company of Khalbolia Factory (1). In that case Sir Barnes Peacock held "that in case of unregistered companies the proper course would be to sue the individual members in the same way as the individual members of any other firm, not being incorporated or registered, would have to be sued, but where it appeared that the plaintiff did not know of what persons the company in question is composed, he was of opinion that the plaintiff might sue the company in the name under which they were carrying on their business and contracted with him, provided he had stated in the plaint that he was unable to give any better description of the defendants than that." This view, so far as we can ascertain, does not appear to have been acted upon in any reported case, and it is opposed to what was said by this Court in the case of N.W.P. Club through G. B. Goyder v. Sadulla (2). We quote the following words from the judgment:—"The question remains as to whether the action can rightly be said to have been brought against the North-Western Provinces Club; that is what the case mentioned above calls an abstract entity unknown to the law. To hold that an action lay against it and to give judgment in such action would be to hold that an action lay against a great number of individuals who had not been cited in the action, who had no opportunity of appearing, but who should have been so cited, and who should have had such opportunity given to them to appear and contest the action." We cannot therefore sustain the contention raised. The learned vakil went on to ask that he might be granted permission to amend by adding the names of such of the partners as he could ascertain. Even if [348] we were disposed to grant the prayer, there would still be a fatal objection that the suit as against every person who might now be added, even if he were added to-day, would be barred by limitation. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) (1867) 8 W.R.C.R. 45.

(2) 20 A. 497.

21 A. 348=19 A.W.N. (1899) 97.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.*T. E. STRACHEY (Plaintiff) v. THE MUNICIPAL BOARD OF CAWNPORE (Defendant).^{*} [5th May, 1899.]

Act No. XV of 1873 (N.W.P. and Oudh Municipalities Act), s. 15—Act No. XV of 1883 (N.W.P. and Oudh Municipalities Act), ss. 29, 42, 41—Municipal Board—Powers of taxation—Procedure—Consideration of objections to proposed tax—Final imposition of tax—Special meeting—Act No. I of 1877 (Specific Relief Act), chapter VIII—Injunction.

1899
MAY 5.
—
APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.21 A. 348=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 97.

The N. W. P. and Oudh Municipalities Act, 1883, not conferring the powers given by Act No. XV of 1873 to "cancel or vary" a tax imposed, the procedure to be adopted for the enhancement of an existing tax must be the same as that prescribed for the imposition of a new tax.

In imposing a new tax the procedure laid down in s. 42 of Act No. XV of 1883 must be strictly followed. Where therefore neither the special meeting of the Board at which an assessor's objections to a proposed tax were considered, nor the special meeting at which the tax was finally imposed, were properly constituted within the meaning of s. 29 of Act No. XV of 1883, it was held that the imposition of the tax was invalid. The Municipality of the City of Poona v. Mohan Lal (1) approved.

Held also that there is nothing in Chapter VIII of the Specific Relief Act to prevent the High Court from granting an injunction against a Municipality as part of the remedy in a regular suit. Moran v. The Chairman of Motihari Municipality (2), considered. Ganga Narain v. The Municipality of Cawnpore (3), referred to.

[R., 16 Ind. Cas. 449=8 N.L.R. 107; 21 M.L.J. 878=12 Ind. Cas. 311=10 M.L.T. 219=1911 M.W.N. 233.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Messrs. W. K. Porter and W. Wallach, for the appellant.

The Officiating Government Advocate (Mr. E. A. Ryves), and afterwards the Government Advocate (Mr. E. Chamier), for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

[349] BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—This appeal and the connected First Appeal No. 291 of 1896 have arisen out of a suit brought by Theodore Edward Strachey, a Barrister practising in Cawnpore, against the Municipal Board of Cawnpore, in which he seeks to recover the sum of Rs. 200, which, he alleges, was illegally levied from him by the Municipal Board as license tax, with Rs. 8 interest thereon, and also prays for an injunction restraining the defendant Board from levying or recovering any assessment from him by virtue of the resolution and notice under which the tax was assessed. The learned District Judge has given the plaintiff a decree for the money claimed, but has refused the prayer for the injunction. Both parties have appealed to this Court. This is the appeal of the plaintiff against that part of the decree of the lower Court which refused the injunction. It appears that under the provisions of s. 15 of Act No. XV of 1873 a tax upon trades and professions in the Cawnpore Municipality was imposed by the Municipal Committee. The rules made by the * First Appeal No. 192 of 1896 from a decree of J. E. Gill, Esq., District Judge of Cawnpore, dated the 8th June 1896.

(1) 9 B. 51.

(2) 17 C. 349.

(3) 19 A. 313.

1899 Committee for the collection of the said tax and confirmed by the Lieutenant-Governor are contained in Government Notification No. 160 A, dated the 2nd
MAY 5. May 1876, to be found at page 575 of the Government Gazette of that year.
APPEL- For the purpose of the tax all professions, trades and callings were LATE arranged under three classes. Class I specifies bankers and several other CIVIL. professions and trades. Class II sets forth a still longer list of callings.
21 A. 348 = Under Class III are included all dealers or persons practising any trade
19 A.W.N. or profession not mentioned in the above classes or in a list of explana-(1899) 97. tions appended. As the profession of barrister-at-law was not specified either in Class I, Class II, or the list of explanations, it is clear that barristers-at-law fell under Class III. According to the rules the highest tax which could be imposed upon persons falling under Class III was Rs. 12 per annum.

Up to the year 1887 no tax had been levied from barristers-at-law practising at Cawnpore. At a special meeting of the Municipal Board held on the 27th of June 1887, it was resolved [350] that persons practising as barristers should be included under Class I, thereby rendering them liable to a maximum tax of Rs. 200 per annum. At the time this resolution was passed Act No. XV of 1883 was in force. S. 42 of that Act prescribes the procedure which has to be followed in imposing taxes for the purpose of the Act. S. 44 of the Act gives the Municipal Board the power to abolish or reduce any tax imposed under the preceding sections. It is noticeable that this section confers no power upon the Municipal Board to enhance a tax already imposed, and in this respect it differs from the former Act, No. XV of 1873, which, by s. 15, gave the Committee the power to "cancel or vary" any tax which it had imposed. As the existing Act gave the Municipal Board no power to enhance an existing tax which was the object they had in view when they determined that barristers should be included in Class I, they adopted the only course which appears to have been open to them, that is, they treated the matter as if it were the imposition of a new tax.

Assuming that the procedure was under s. 42 of the Act, as it purports to be, the plaintiff contends that there were in the procedure of the Board such defects as rendered the imposition of the tax upon him illegal. When a Board wishes to impose a tax for the purpose of the Act, it is required by sub-s (1) of s. 42 that the resolution to impose the tax should be passed at a special meeting, the necessary quorum for which must, according to s. 29, sub-section 1, be one-half of the whole Board. In order to enable us to determine the questions raised before us, we found it necessary to ask the lower Court for a finding as to the number of members constituting the whole Board between the 27th of June 1887 and the 25th of August 1887. The finding of the Court below is that between those dates the Municipal Board of Cawnpore consisted of twenty-one members, i.e., 18 elected and 3 appointed. We find that the meeting at which the preliminary resolution under s. 42 for the inclusion of barristers in Class I was passed, was a [351] properly constituted special meeting. After the passing of this resolution, the next thing required of the Board is the publication of "a notice defining the persons or property proposed to be taxed, the amount or rate of tax to be imposed and the system of assessment to be adopted." It was objected on behalf of the plaintiff that the notification published on the 30th of June 1887 under this sub-section was defective, inasmuch as it failed to define the amount or rate of the tax to be imposed and the system of assessment to be adopted. This contention is not devoid of force. It is impossible to say that the notification complies with the strict letter of the law, but it may be, as contended by the learned counsel for the respondent, a mere defect in form which would be covered by the provisions contained in s. 43 of the Act. To proceed: sub-section (3) provides that any inhabitant of the Municipality objecting to a proposed tax may within a time fixed submit his objection in writing to the Board, which is bound to take the objection into consideration at a special meeting. The plaintiff did submit an objection, which was taken into consideration on the 27th of July 1887, at a meeting which is described as an "adjourned special meeting." The number of members present at the meeting was 7, which was only one-third of the whole Board. It is true that under the proviso to s. 29 no quorum is necessary for an adjourned special meeting, but the proviso requires that at such adjourned meeting only such business should be brought before and transacted at the adjourned meeting which would have been brought before the original meeting if there had been a quorum present.

The question we have to consider is whether the objection to the imposition of a tax on barristers could legally be considered at the adjourned meeting held on the 27th July 1887. We must answer that question in the negative. The so-called adjourned special meeting held on the 27th of July 1887, had been adjourned from the 19th of July 1887, which again had been adjourned from a meeting of the 11th of July 1887, which last [352] meeting had been adjourned from the 27th of June 1887. At none of these meetings was a consideration of objections to the imposition of taxes on barristers a business to be brought forward. Consequently the adjourned special meeting of the 27th July, 1887, was not competent to consider the plaintiff's objection to the imposition of the tax. In the case of The Municipality of the City of Poona v. Mohan Lal (1), it was held that the consideration by the Municipality of objections to a tax was an essential part of the machinery provided by the corresponding section of the Bombay District Municipality Act for the legal imposition of the tax and a decree of the lower Court awarding to the plaintiffs whose objections had not been duly considered the amount of the tax which had been levied from them was sustained. The Court declined to accept the contention on behalf of the Municipality that the consideration of objections of the inhabitants was merely a formal act, the omission of which did not invalidate the tax. But there remains a more formidable objection to the procedure of the respondent Municipal Board. S. 42, sub-s. (7), provides that when the proposals of a Municipal Board for the imposition of a tax have been sanctioned by the Local Government, the Board may at a special meeting direct the imposition of the tax in accordance with those proposals. The Cawnpore Municipal Board, in order to comply with the provisions of this sub-section, held what purports to have been a special meeting on the 25th of August 1887, at which it was formally resolved that barristers should be assessed in accordance with the proposals set forth above, which had received the sanction of Government. At this meeting only ten members were present, so that according to the finding on the issue referred by us, there was not present at that meeting the quorum required by law for a special meeting. We are constrained to hold that this defect entirely invalidates the resolution for the imposition of the tax under which the amount claimed was levied from the plaintiff. To hold otherwise would 1899

MAY 5.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

21 A. 348=

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 97.

(1) 9 B. 51.

1899
MAY 5.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 348=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 97.

[353] lead to the result that one or two members of a Municipal Board (not being an adjourned special meeting) could by calling themselves a special meeting direct the imposition of a tax upon the whole of the inhabitants. The learned Judge did not decide the case on the ground of the defects to which we have referred above, but made a decree for the amount claimed on the ground that there had been a breach of rule 6 of the rules for the imposition of license tax, inasmuch as the sub-committee by which the tax on the plaintiff was assessed was not duly constituted. This is an additional ground for sustaining the decree which has been granted to the plaintiff.

As we said at the outset, this is the plaintiff's appeal against the part of the decree dismissing his prayer for an injunction. The learned District Judge, although he framed an issue as to whether he had jurisdiction to grant the injunction asked for, did not decide that issue, but contented himself by decreeing the money part of the claim. For the respondent it was contended that this Court was not competent to make a decree for an injunction, and the case of Moran v. Chairman of Motihari Municipality (1), was relied on. It is true that the learned Judges who decided that case were of opinion that the power to compel corporations to do their duties and to restrain them from doing that which it is not within their province to do had been reserved to the High Court in its ordinary original jurisdiction with respect to the presidency towns, but had been withheld in respect of any of the Municipalities in the mufassil. What was apparently in the minds of the learned Judges when they expressed the above opinion was Chapter VIII of the Specific Relief Act. That chapter, it is true, does by implication withhold from High Courts the power to make orders save as to corporations within the local limits of their ordinary original civil jurisdiction. But a consideration of the terms of the chapter will render it clear that the orders referred to therein are orders passed upon applications, and not decrees in suits. The order referred to in [354] that chapter may be made ex parte on a mere application supported by an affidavit. There is nothing in that chapter to take away from Courts the power to grant injunctions in a suit when a sufficient ground is made out for doing so. Injunctions against Municipalities have been granted by this Court, vide Ganga Narain v. The Municipality of Cawnpore (2). We therefore overrule the respondent's plea and allow the appeal. We vary the decree of the Court below by granting an injunction restraining the defendant Board from levying or recovering any tax from the plaintiff by virtue of the resolution of the 25th August 1887. The appellant will get his costs of this appeal, and such costs as were refused him in the Court below.

Appeal decreed.

(1) 17 C. 329.

(2) 19 A. 313.

21 A. 354=19 A.W.N. (1899) 96.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

SHEO RATTAN RAI AND OTHERS (Objectors) v. MOHRI (Applicant).^{*}
[8th May, 1899.]

Act No. I of 1894 (Land Acquisition Act), ss. 18, 19, 32 and 54—Reference by Collector to Judge—Appeal from Judge's order—Court-fee—Decree or order.

Held, that an appeal will lie to the High Court from an order of the District Judge made upon a reference by the Collector under ss. 18 and 19 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, as to the disposal of compensation awarded for land taken up by Government under the Act. Balaram Bhramaratar Ray v. Sham Sunder Narendra (1), followed.

Held, also, that in an appeal from the order of the District Judge above referred to the memorandum of appeal must be stamped as an appeal from an original decree.

[F., 24 A. 189; R., 36 B. 360=14 Bom.L.R. 325 (328)=15 Ind. Cas. 512 (513); 31 C. 214 (216); 39 C. 906 (912)=14 Ind. Cas. 724 (725); 11 C.L.J. 533=14 C.W.N. 1024=6 Ind. Cas. 508 (510); 6 Ind. Cas. 157; 17 Ind. Cas. 117 (119); 53 P.R. 1906=103 P.L.R. 1906; D., 32 C. 921 (926)=2 C.L.J. 595; 26 M. 287 (288).]

IN this case certain land, which was in the possession of the respondent, holding a life estate as a Hindu widow or daughter, was taken up under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894. There appears to have been no objection to the amount of the compensation awarded, but certain reversioners to the estate came before the Collector with an objection that the whole of the compensation ought not to be made over [355] directly to the respondent, inasmuch as she was only entitled to a life interest in the property taken up, and there was danger of their reversionary rights being lost. The Collector thereupon, under ss. 18 and 19 of the Act, referred the disposal of the compensation to the District Judge. The District Judge, disallowing the objections of the reversioners, ordered the compensation money to be paid to the respondent. From this order the objectors appealed to the High Court. At the hearing of the appeal two preliminary objections were taken, which were disposed of by the following order:—

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—Two preliminary objections have been raised to the hearing of this appeal. The first is as to whether s. 54 of the Land Acquisition Act, No. I of 1894, gives an appeal to this Court. Upon that matter we see no reason to differ from the reasoning and conclusion of the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court in Balaram Bhramaratar Ray v. Sham Sunder Narendra (1).

The second point is, whether the appellants here ought to stamp their memorandum of appeal as an appeal from an order or an appeal from an original decree. We are of opinion that it is an appeal from an original decree and must be stamped as such.

We therefore refer this case to the Taxing Officer for his decision and report as to what stamp should be paid on this appeal, if it be considered as an appeal from an original decree.

[The report called for having been supplied and the deficiency in the ^{*} First Appeal No. 104 of 1893 from an order of Kunwar Bharat Singh, District Judge of Ghazipur, dated the 5th August 1898.

(1) 23 C. 526.

1899
MAY 8.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 354=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 96.

1899
MAY 8.

APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

Court-fee stamp having been made good, the appeal was put up for final disposal.]

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba and Babu Jiwan Chandar, for the appellants.

Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

21 A. 354=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 96.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—This case arises under the Land Acquisition Act, No. I of 1894. Land had been taken in which the respondent here had a life estate. Whether that of a [356] Hindu widow or a daughter we are not informed. In neither case had she the power to alienate except for legal necessity. The District Judge, in the face of an objection by the reversioners, has ordered the purchase-money to be paid to the Musammat. This order cannot stand. The case is manifestly one provided for by s. 32 of Act No. I of 1894. We set aside the order of the Court below, and direct that, under the provisions of s. 32, the money shall be invested in the purchase of other lands, to be held under the like title and conditions of ownership as the land in respect of which such money shall have been deposited was held, or, if such purchase cannot be effected forthwith, then in such Government or other approved securities as the Court shall think fit. Payment of the rent or other proceeds of such investment will be made to Musammat Mohri as the person for the time being entitled to the possession of such land. The Judge will further strictly comply with the other provisions of s. 32. We make no order as to costs.

Appeal decreed.

21 A. 356 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 100.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Banerji.

HIRA LAL SAHU (Decree-holder) v. PARMESHWAR RAI (Objector).^{*}
[9th May, 1899.]

Execution of decree—Decree for sale on mortgage—Powers of Court executing decree—Hindu law—Joint Hindu family—Objection by son that his interest in the property mortgaged is not saleable in execution of a decree obtained against his father.

Held, that it is not open to a son in a joint Hindu family, who has been made a party as the legal representative of his father to proceedings in execution of a mortgage decree against the father, to raise an objection in those execution proceedings that the decree against the father is not binding on him in his personal capacity by reason of his not having been made a party to the suit in which the decree was passed. Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu (1) referred to. Sanwal Das v. Bismillah Begam (2) and Liladhar v. Chatarbhuj (3), approved; Lochan Singh v. Sant Chandar (4) not followed.

[F., 32 C. 265 (267).]

[357] THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of BANERJI, J.

^{*}Second Appeal No. 910 of 1896, from a decree of H.D. Griffin, Esq., District Judge of Azamgarh, dated the 25th August 1896, modifying a decree of Munshi Ahmad Ali Khan, Subordinate Judge of Azamgarh, dated the 15th May 1896.

(1) 17 A. 537.

(3) 21 A. 277.

(2) 19 A. 480.

(4) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 24.

Messrs. W. M. Colvin and D. N. Banerji, for the appellant.
Maulvi Ghulam Muftaba, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—The appellant obtained a decree for sale under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, against the father of the respondent. The decree directed the sale of the property comprised in the mortgage. This appeal arises out of an application made by the decree-holder for an order absolute for sale under s. 89 of the Act. That application was made against the respondent by reason of the mortgagor having in the meantime died. The respondent objected to the order under s. 89 being passed in respect of the whole property, on the ground that it was ancestral property, and that as he, the respondent, was not joined as a party to the suit in which the mortgagee decree-holder had obtained his decree, that decree could not affect his interests, and those interests were not liable to sale in execution of that decree. Both the Courts below have allowed the objection and exempted a one-third share of the mortgaged property, which they have declared to be the share of the respondents, from liability under the decree. The decree-holder mortgagee has preferred this appeal, and the question which we have to determine is whether the Courts below were competent to consider the objection raised by the respondent, the decree being one for sale under a mortgage, and directing that the whole of the mortgaged property should be sold. It is urged, and with reference to the rulings of this Court, rightly, that an application under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act is an application in execution of the decree for sale. The Court which dealt with that application was therefore dealing with a matter which must be taken to have arisen in connection with the execution of a decree. There can be no doubt that a Court executing a decree is bound to give effect to the decree as it finds it, and is not competent to vary or alter it in any way. The decree in this case directs, as stated above, the sale of the whole of the mortgaged [358] property. That being so, could the Court executing the decree consider the question whether any portion of that property was exempt from liability under the decree? No doubt according to the ruling of the Full Bench in Bhawani Prasad v. Kallu (1) the son of a Hindu mortgagor who had not been joined as a party to the mortgagee's suit for sale, is competent to sue for the exemption of his interests in the mortgaged property from sale on the single ground that he was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed; but that is not a question which, it seems to me, can be raised in execution proceedings by the son of the mortgagor, if he happens to be made a party to those proceedings in his character of legal representative of his father. The determination of such a question would lead to a determination of the question of the validity of the decree passed against the father. Such a question is beyond the scope of the powers of a Court executing a decree. This was the principle of the ruling in the case of Sanwal Das v. Bismillah Begam (2), and the same view was apparently taken in the case of Lilladhar v. Chatarbhuj (3). No doubt in the case of Lochan Singh v. Sant Chandar (4) sitting with my brother Aikman, I held that it was open to a son who had been made a party to the execution proceedings as the legal representative of his father to raise an objection on the ground that the decree against the father was not binding on him in his personal 1899

MAY 9.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

21 A. 356=

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 100.

(1) 17 A. 537. (2) 19 A. 480. (3) 21 A. 277. (4) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 24.

1899
MAY 9.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 356 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 100.

capacity by reason of his not having been made a party to the suit in which the decree was passed; but on reconsideration that view seems to me to be erroneous. I may observe that in a later case a doubt was expressed by my brother Aikman and myself as to the correctness of the view taken in the case of Lochan Singh v. Sant Chandar. A Court executing a decree, as I have said, is bound to give effect to the decree as it stands. If the decree orders the whole of the property mortgaged by the father to be sold, the Court executing the decree cannot consider the question whether the decree was validly made against the [359] interests of the son. If a son, although a party to the execution proceedings, in his capacity as legal representative of his father, could be allowed to raise the question of the binding effect of the decree on his interests, and if the Court executing the decree be permitted to give effect to such objection, the result would be that such Court might be in a position to vary the decree. This certainly a Court, in exercise of its powers relating to the execution of decrees, is not competent to do. Upon reconsideration, I think that the view which was taken in the case of Sanwal Das v. Bismillah Begam was the right view. I would allow the appeal, and, setting aside the orders of both the Courts below, remand the case to the Court of first instance, with directions to make an order under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act in respect of the whole of the property comprised in the decree under s. 88, and then to proceed with the application for execution. I would allow the appellant his costs here and in the Courts below.

STRACHEY, C. J.—I am of the same opinion.

Appeal decreed, and cause remanded.

21 A. 359 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 123.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice,
and Mr. Justice Banerji.*

NARAIN SINGH AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs) v. JASWANT SINGH
(Defendant).^{*} [9th May, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 43—Application for leave to sue in forma pauperis—Application rejected—Subsequent suit not barred—Civil Procedure Code, s. 413.

Held, that s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure would not apply so as to bar a subsequent suit where the so called previous suit was not a regular suit but an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis, which was rejected.

THIS was a suit to enforce as against the property of the defendant a lien for contribution arising out of a mortgage entered into by the plaintiff Narain Singh and the defendant jointly, on the allegation that the plaintiff's property had been sold in [360] execution of a decree obtained by the mortgagee on the mortgage, while the property of the defendant co-mortgagor had been exempted from sale. The principal plea raised by the defendant was that the suit was barred by the operation of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure inasmuch as the plaintiff had formerly made an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis for contribution in respect of the same cause of action. This application related merely to the claim for money, that is, it was not a claim for enforcement lien, and was rejected.

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 887 of 1896, from a decree of G. A. Tweedy, Esq., District Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 27th June 1896, confirming a decree of Maulvi Anwar Husain Khan, Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 20th December 1895.

The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad) dismissed the suit holding it to be barred by the provisions of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The plaintiff appealed, and the lower appellate Court (District Judge), taking the same view of the law, dismissed the appeal. The plaintiff thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellants.

Munshi Ram Prasad, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C.J., and BANERJI, J.—We think that the learned Judge was wrong in holding that s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure barred the present suit. S. 43 only applies where there has been a suit, and the plaintiff omits in that suit to make a particular claim which he is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action. Now prior to this suit the plaintiff did not bring any suit having reference to the cause of action alleged in the present suit. What he did was to make an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis, but that application was rejected. S. 410 of the Code clearly shows that it is only when such an application is granted that it becomes the plaint in a suit, and therefore if the application is rejected, it never becomes a suit, and s. 43, which is limited to suits, cannot apply so as to bar any subsequent suit. There is nothing in this view inconsistent with s. 413. All that s. 413 shows is that an order of refusal to allow the applicant to sue as a pauper bars any subsequent application for leave so as to sue in respect of the same right. It does not bar any suit brought in the ordinary way. The [361] words "but the applicant shall be at liberty to institute a suit in the ordinary manner in respect of such right," do not imply that the applicant is not at liberty to institute a suit in the ordinary manner in respect of any other right than that to which the application related. In the present case the application for leave to sue as a pauper was merely in respect of the personal remedy of contribution, and there was no claim to enforce the charge created by s. 95 of the Transfer of Property Act. The present suit is a suit to enforce that charge, and there is nothing in s. 413 which could be held to bar it. That is all that is necessary to say about s. 43 of the Code. As to the question of limitation the learned Judge is right in holding that art. 132 is applicable. As we disagree with the learned Judge's view of the effect of s. 43 on which his decree is based, we must allow this appeal. We set aside the decrees of both the lower Courts and remand the suit to the Court of first instance for disposal on the merits. Costs of the appeal in the lower appellate Court and in this Court will be paid by the respondent. The costs of the first Court will abide the event.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

1899

MAY 9.

—
APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

21 A. 359=

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 123.

1899
MAY 15.

FULL BENCH.

21 A. 361
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 91.

21 A. 361 (F.B.)=19 A.W.N. (1899) 91.

FULL BENCH.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Knox, Mr. Justice Blair, Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

BAKAR SAJJAD (Judgment-debtor) v. UDIT NARAIN SINGH (Decree-holder).^{*} [15th May, 1899.]

Execution of decree—Construction of decree—Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), ss. 86, 88, 89—Decree for sale on a mortgage—Interest allowable after date fixed by decree for payment of the mortgage money.

A Court executing a decree the terms of which are ambiguous should, where it is possible, put such a construction upon the decree as would make it in accordance with law. Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (1), Pirbhu, [362] Narain Singh v. Rup Singh (2) and The Maharaja of Bharatpur v. Rani Kanno Dei (3) quoad hoc approved.

But in construing a decree for sale upon a mortgage, the terms which are susceptible of being construed either as allowing interest only up to the date fixed by the decree for payment of the mortgage-debt or as allowing interest also after that date until realization, the proper construction, to make the decree in accordance with law, is that interest is allowed up to the date of realization and not merely up to the date fixed by the decree for payment of the mortgage-debt. Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (1), Nain Dat v. Harihar Dat (4) and The Maharaja of Bharatpur v. Rani Kanno Dei (3) as to this point overruled.

Achalabala Bose v. Surendra Nath Dey (5) and Subbaraya Ravuthaminda Nainar v. Ponnusami Nadar (6) referred to. Rameswar Koer v. Mahomed Mehdi Hossein Khan (7) followed.

[Diss., 17 C.P.L.R. 164 (166-168); Appr., 23 A. 181 (192) (P.C.)=3 Bom L.R. 51=5 C.W.N. 137=28 I.A. 35; R., 22 A. 79 (82); 29 C. 43 (51); 23 M. 637 (641); 6 C.W.N. 769 (771); 16 Ind. Cas. 374; D., 1 N.L.R. 43 (44).]

THIS was an appeal arising out of an application for execution of a decree under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act. The facts of the case will be found set forth in detail in the judgment of the Chief Justice, and it is only necessary to state here that the question before the Full Bench was whether the lower Court was right in allowing the decree-holder respondent's claim for interest up to the date of the application, that is to say, interest after the date fixed by the decree for payment of the mortgage-money, and in disallowing the judgment-debtor appellant's objection that interest was only payable under the decree up to the said date.

Munshi Gulzari Lal, for the appellant.

The decree in this case under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act only provides for payment of the sum found due with interest at the rate mentioned therein on 31st December, 1892, the date fixed by the Court for payment. The decree is silent as to payment of any interest after that date. A Court executing the decree cannot by a mere process of interpretation add to the terms of the decree—Forester v. Secretary of State for India (8).

The terms of the order absolute, dated 29th June 1873, awarding interest after the date fixed for payment are immaterial because the decree

^{*} First Appeal, No. 96 of 1898, from an order of Rai Pandit Indar Narayan, Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 15th January 1898.

(1) 19 A. 174.

(2) 20 A. 397.

(3) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 164.

(4) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 57.

(5) 24 C. 766.

(6) 21 M. 364.

(7) 26 C. 39.

(8) 4 I.A. 137.

to be executed is still the decree under s. 88 of [363] the Transfer of Property Act—Raj Kumar v. Bisheshar Nath (1); Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (2); Kashi Prasad v. Sheo Sahai (3); Oudh Bihari Lal v. Nageshar Lal (4). A Court in passing an order absolute for sale has only to see whether the amount payable under the decree has been paid or not, and to order sale. Interpretation of the terms of the decree is beyond its scope, especially in a case like the present, where no payment has been made. Anything contained in the order absolute for sale cannot have the effect of res judicata in future execution proceedings Shib Charan v. Raghu Nath (5). The point now raised was never raised and determined by the Court directly between the parties after due notice—Sheik Budan v. Ramchandra Bhunjgaya (6); Ram Lal v. Narain (7); Shafaat Begam v. Hurmat Sultan Begam (8); Madho Prasad v. Daryai Bibi (9); Nathu Ram v. Muhommad Ali Khan (10).

Mr. E. Chamier, for the respondent.

The decree nisi provides for future interest, but does not state clearly up to what date such interest shall be paid. The decree nisi should, if possible, be construed as a decree prepared in accordance with law, see Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (2) and Pirbhu Narain v. Rup Singh (11). As to what interest a decree under s. 88, Act IV, 1882, should provide for, see the decision of the Privy Council in Rameswar Koer v. Mahomed Mehdi Hossein Khan (12), also Achalabala Bose v. Surendra Nath Dey (13) and Subbaraya Ravuthamina Nainar v. Ponnusami Nadar (14). The decision of this Court in Amolak Ram's case is no longer of authority in view of the decision of the Privy Council. The decree nisi now in question is capable of being construed as making provision for interest up to the date of realization and should be so construed.

[364] Next it is the duty of the Court which prepares the order absolute under s. 89 of Act No. IV of 1882 to construe the decree nisi and from the order absolute accordingly—the order absolute cannot be challenged at any later stage of the proceedings in execution, see Badshah Begam v. Musammatt Hardei (15) and Perbhu Narain Singh v. Rup Singh (11). The order absolute in this case clearly provides for future interest and was never challenged till the publication of the decision in Amolak Ram's case. The principle of explanation II to s. 13, Civil Procedure Code, applies.

The order absolute was prepared after notice to the judgment-debtors; notice was again issued to them under s. 287, Civil Procedure Code, previous to the preparation of the proclamation, see cl. (d) of that section. The matter is now res judicata. Ram Kirpal Shukul v. Rup Kuari (16) Mungul Pershad Dichit v. Grija Kant Lahiri Chowdhry (17). The case of Sheikh Budan v. Ram Chandra (6) is distinguishable.

Lastly, the judgment-debtor, appellant, has obtained adjournment of the sale, at the same time agreeing that the proclamation shall stand and has filed petitions admitting evidently that the amount due includes interest up to the date of realization. He is now estopped from raising the question of interest. He cannot rip open the proceedings of six

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 361
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 91.

(1) 16 A. 270.

(4) 13 A. 278.

(7) 12 A. 539.

(10) 15 A.W.N. (1895) 119.

(12) 26 C. 39.

(15) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 17.

(17) 8 I.A. 123.

(2) 19 A. 174.

(5) 17 A. 174.

(8) 15 A.W.N. (1895) 15.

(13) 24 C. 766.

(3) 17 A.W.N. (1897) 12.

(6) 11 B. 537.

(9) 15 A.W.N. (1895) 108.

(11) 20 A. 397.

(14) 21 M. 364.

(16) 11 I.A. 87.

1899
MAY 15.

FULL BENCH.

21 A. 361
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 91.

years. See Girdhari Singh v. Hurdeo Narain Singh (1) and Arunachellam v. Arunachellam (2).

Munshi Gulzari Lal in reply. In Rameswar Koer v. Mahomed Mehdi Hossein Khan (3) their Lordships of the Privy Council never meant to decide the point which is now under discussion. The question before their Lordships simply related to the rate of interest to be allowed in a mortgage-decree between the date of the institution of the suit and the date fixed for payment. They held that interest at the contractual rate was [365] to be allowed. "Date of realization" in the judgment of the Privy Council must mean the "date fixed for realization" as put in the head note to the ruling as reported in the Indian Law Reports. In saying that, "if the High Court has allowed something less the mortgagee makes no complaint" their Lordships evidently referred to "rate of interest" in the previous sentence, and not to the period for which it was to be allowed, which was not in question in the case. The rate of interest was 12 per cent. compound interest and not simple interest as awarded by the High Court. It was to this that the Privy Council alluded and to nothing else. It is thus that the Privy Council ruling has been interpreted by the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh in a very recent case—Allahabad Bank v. Syed Mohamad Jawad (4). The terms of ss. 86, 88 and 89 of the Act clearly support this view. Form No. 128 in sch. IV of the Code of Civil Procedure makes no mention of any interest after the date fixed for payment. Compare the form for an order for sale in Seton on Decrees and Orders, Vol. III, page 1587. As far as a decree for foreclosure or sale under the Transfer of Property Act is concerned, the Court can calculate interest on the mortgage debt as such only up to the date fixed for payment. It was so held even by the Calcutta High Court in Surya Narain Singh v. Jogendra Narain Roy Chowdhury (5). The recent ruling in Achalabala Bose v. Surendra Nath Dey (6) apparently overlooks the old practice of the Calcutta High Court. The interest at 4 or 6 per cent. which is generally allowed by the Calcutta High Court after the date fixed for payment is not under the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. S. 209, Civil Procedure Code, has nothing to do with the matter as it cannot apply to a mortgage decree. The ruling of Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain does not stand alone in this Court. The same view was held in Tarachand v. Dina Nath (7).

JUDGMENT.

[366] STRACHEY, C.J.—This was an application for execution of a decree for sale of mortgaged property under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The question is whether the Court below was right in allowing the decree-holder's claim for interest up to the date of the application and disallowing the judgment-debtor's objections that interest was payable under the decree only up to the 31st December 1892. The decree was passed on the 30th June 1892. It recites the relief claimed in the plaint, that the defendants may be ordered to pay to the plaintiff Rs. 13,771-8, principal and interest, together with interest accruing during the pendency of the suit and future interest on the date to be named by the Court, and that, in case of default, the mortgaged property might be sold in satisfaction of the debt, with relief against the person and other property of the defendants. The operative part of the decree is as follows :—

(1) 3 I.A. 230.

(4) Oudh Cases (1899) 37 (= 2 O.C. 37).

(6) 24 C. 766.

(2) 15 I.A. 171.

(7) 15 A. W. N. (1895) 76.

(3) 26 C. 39.

(5) 20 C. 360.

"It is decreed and hereby declared that on the 31st December, 1892, the sum of Rs. 14,848-6 will be payable to the plaintiff, viz., Rs. 13,817-6 for principal and interest on the mortgage, dated the 21st day of March 1883, i. e., Rs. 13,771-8, the amount claimed and Rs. 45-14 pendente lite interest, and Rs. 1,031 for his costs of this suit, and it is hereby ordered that upon the defendants paying to the plaintiff or into Court on the 31st December, 1892, aforesaid the said sum with interest at annas 8 per cent. per mensem, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendants, or to such person as they appoint, all documents in his possession or power relating to the property specified below, and shall transfer the property to the defendants free from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff, or any person claiming under him, or by those under whom he claimed and shall put the defendants in possession of the property. But if such payment be not made as aforesaid on or before the aforesaid 31st day of December, 1892, then it is ordered that the said property, or a sufficient part thereof, be sold, and that the proceeds of the sale (after defraying thereout the expenses of the sale) be paid into Court and applied in payment of the sum [367] found due to the plaintiff, and that the balance, if any, be paid to the defendants or other persons entitled to receive the same. And it is further ordered that each of the mortgagors, Ahmad Sajjad and Bakar Sajjad, can redeem 5 biswas of mauza Babapur Patti on payment of the amount decreed in equal shares."

The judgment-debtors not having paid the amount decreed, an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged property under s. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act was passed on the 29th June, 1893, after notice to them. They did not appear on the date fixed by the notice, and the order absolute for sale was therefore passed ex parte. The material part of the order was as follows:—"It is decreed and ordered that the property detailed below be sold on a date to be fixed hereafter and the sale proceeds, after defraying the expenses of sale, be paid into Court and applied in paying Rs. 16,046 with usual future interest, which has been found to be due to Raja Udit Narain Singh, decree-holder." This Rs. 16,046 included interest calculated up to the 29th June, 1893. As the property to be sold was ancestral property, the Court proceeded to order, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the Local Government under s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that the record should be transmitted to the Collector for execution of the decree. It does not appear whether any proceedings in execution were taken by the Collector before the 20th September, 1894. On that date the property was proclaimed for sale, the amount due under the decree being notified in the proclamation as Rs. 16,046, that is, the amount stated in the order absolute. No sale, however, took place. The sale was first adjourned by the Collector upon an application by the judgment-debtors, who represented that they were making arrangements with the decree-holder for a private disposal of the property. After this it was adjourned several times pending an application made by one of the judgment-debtors, the present appellant, to the Court of the Subordinate Judge, on the 10th December 1894, dismissed by that Court in September, 1895 and finally dismissed by the High Court in appeal on 8th December, [368] 1896. In that application, the object of which was to have satisfaction of the decree recorded by reason of an alleged compromise, the appellant stated the "amount due by the judgment-debtor" to be Rs. 8,642, which is half the Rs. 16,046 mentioned in the order absolute and interest thereon at 6 per cent. from the date of that order. On the 11th January,

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 361
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 91.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 361
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 91.

1896, the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree, claiming interest up to the date of the application, but as the judgment-debtor's appeal to the High Court from the order dismissing his application of the 10th December, 1894, was then pending, the application for execution was not proceeded with. On the 1st November 1897, the present application for execution was made. In it the decree-holder claimed interest up to the 30th October. Notice was issued under s. 248 of the Code to the judgment-debtor, who then for the first time objected that the decree-holder was not entitled to interest beyond the 31st December 1892, the date fixed by the decree for payment. The Court below disallowed the objection, and ordered execution to issue for the full amount claimed. In this appeal by the judgment-debtor we have to decide whether the lower Court's order was right.

It is clear from the order absolute, the Collector's proclamation, and the appellant's application of the 10th December 1894, that until the appellant raised his objection to the present application, both the Court and the parties thought that the decree-holder was entitled to interest after the 31st December 1892. In the argument before us there has been much discussion of the questions whether, and in what sense, the Court, when passing the order absolute, was competent to construe the decree of the 30th June 1892, or to add to its provisions as to interest; whether, having regard to the terms of the notice to the judgment-debtors upon which that order was passed, the order had the effect of making the question of interest until realization res judicata and whether the appellant is estopped from raising his present contention by any thing else which occurred in the execution proceedings. In the view which we take of the case, it is not necessary to [369] decide any of these questions. The only question which we need consider is up to what date the decree upon its true construction awards interest. Now the decree begins by reciting the claim in the plaint for interest after decree as well as interest before suit and interest pendente lite, and then fixes the 31st December 1892, as the date for payment of (i) Rs. 14,848-6 made up of (a) the principal sum and interest claimed in the plaint as due up to the date of suit, (b) interest from the date of suit to the date of the decree, (c) costs, and (ii) future interest on the Rs. 14,848-6 at annas 8 per mensem. Then it directs, in accordance with s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, that if payment is not made on or before the 31st December 1892, the property or a sufficient part of it is to be sold and that the proceeds after defraying the expenses of sale are to be paid into Court and applied in payment of the sum found due to the plaintiff. Thus the decree clearly makes future interest payable, and the only question is until when? It does not expressly state when the interest thus set running is to stop. The only possible dates at which the Court passing the decree can have intended it to stop are the 31st December 1892, the date fixed for payment, and the date of actual payment or realization. To which of these dates does the decree awarding interest impliedly refer? Upon principle, and apart from authority, statutory or otherwise, it is difficult to see why the mortgagee should not have interest on his money so long as the debt remains unpaid. The 31st December, 1892, is only named in the decree as the date on which payment is to be made, and after which, if payment is not made, the property is to be sold. It is not named with any special reference to interest. However, in the absence of any express direction as to the date to which interest is payable, the decree is certainly not free from ambiguity on the point.

In Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (1), Pirbhu Narain Singh v. Rup Singh (2) and The Maharaja of Bhartpur v. Rani [370] Kanno Dei (3) this Court has laid down the principle that a Court executing a decree, the terms of which are ambiguous, should, where it is possible, put such a construction upon the decree as would make it in accordance with law. The principle is, I think, undoubtedly sound: the only question is as to its application. The decree of the 30th June 1892 is, as just shown, capable of two different constructions. Which of the two would make the decree in accordance with law. The construction that it awards interest only up to the date fixed for payment or the construction that it awards interest up to realization? The question depends upon the interpretation of ss. 86, 88 and 89 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, read with ss. 90, 94 and 97 of the same Act, and with s. 209 and forms 109 and 128 of the fourth schedule of the Civil Procedure Code. Upon this point there is a conflict of authority. On the one hand it was held by this Court in Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (1), Nain Dat v. Harihar Dat Singh (4) and The Maharaja of Bhartpur v. Rani Kanno Dei (3), that in a decree for sale of mortgaged property the Court has no power, under s. 88 read with s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, to allow interest beyond the date fixed by the decree for payment of the mortgaged money. On the other hand, the Calcutta High Court in Achalabala Bose v. Surendra Nath Dey (5), and the Madras High Court in Subbaraya Ravuthaminda Nainar v. Ponnusami Nadar (6), have dissented from the decision in Amolak Ram's case, and held that the Court has power in a decree under s. 88 to award interest subsequent to the decree and the date fixed by the decree for payment, until realization. It is not necessary for us to examine these decisions or to consider which of them we should have followed in the absence of superior authority. Since the latest of them was given, the question has been considered by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Rameswar Koer v. Mahomed Mehdi Hossein Khan (7), in [371] a judgment which appears to us to settle it in the sense of the Calcutta and Madras rulings. There the Subordinate Judge passed a decree for sale of mortgaged property awarding interest at the mortgage rate of 12 per cent. down to the date of the institution of the suit, and thereafter at 4 per cent. until realization, with directions for sale in case of non-payment in six months. On an appeal by the defendants to the High Court, the plaintiff mortgagee filed objections to the decree under s. 561 of the Code, one of which was that "the Subordinate Judge is wrong in making up the accounts in directing that the amount due should, from date of suit to date of payment, bear only 4 per cent. interest instead of the rate of interest stipulated for in the bond." The decree of the High Court as regards this point is incompletely stated at page 41 of the report. We have been favoured by the Registrar of the Calcutta High Court with a copy of the printed book of appeal to the Privy Council, from page 105 of which it appears that the decree was as follows:—"It is ordered and decreed that the decree of the lower Court, so far as it directs that the amount due should, from the 7th August, 1891, to 15th March, 1893, being the date of payment fixed by the lower Court, bear interest at 4 per cent. be set aside, and in lieu thereof, this Court doth direct that interest do run on the amount due at 12 per cent. from 1899

MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 361
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 91.

(1) 19 A. 174.

(2) 20 A. 397.

(3) 18 A. W. N. (1898) 164.

(4) 18 A. W. N. (1898) 57.

(5) 24 C. 766.

(6) 21 M. 364.

(7) 26 C. 39.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 361
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 91.

the 7th August, 1891, up to the 15th March, 1893, the date fixed by the lower Court for the payment of principal and interest, and thereafter at the rate of 4 per cent. until realization, and it is further ordered and decreed that, save and except as aforesaid the said decree be and it hereby is dismissed, and it is further ordered and decreed that the appellant do pay to the respondent Rs. 1,454 6-0 (as per details at foot) being the amount of costs incurred by them in this Court, with interest thereon at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum from this date to the date of realization." That is to say, the High Court, while agreeing with the Subordinate Judge in awarding interest until realization, thought that the mortgage rate of 12 per cent. should be paid not only to the date of the institution of the suit, but to the date [372] fixed by the decree for payment, and that only from that date onwards until realization should the rate be reduced to 4 per cent. From the decision of the High Court the defendants appealed to the Privy Council, one of the grounds of appeal being that the High Court "was wrong in allowing interest at 12 per cent. per annum (the stipulated rate) from the date of the suit till the date fixed for payment by the Subordinate Judge." No objection was taken that the Courts should not have allowed interest beyond the date fixed for payment. In the argument as reported it was apparently common ground that, whether the case was governed by the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, or not, interest until realization was properly awarded, and no question appears to have been raised as to the rate of interest awarded from date fixed for payment until realization. The only questions regarding interest were whether the Act applied, and whether the rate of interest from the date of the suit to the date fixed for payment should be the stipulated rate or something less. The judgment of the Privy Council, after stating the effect of the Subordinate Judge's decree, goes on to say, "the High Court varied the decree by ordering 12 per cent. interest instead of 4, and with that exception affirmed it." The terms of the High Court's decree above quoted show that it would have been exactly correct to say that the High Court varied the decree by ordering 12 per cent. interest instead of 4 up to the date fixed by the Subordinate Judge for payment instead of up to the date of suit, and with that exception affirmed it. Upon the general question their Lordships say:—"The High Court founded their order on ss. 86 and 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, which indicate clearly enough that the ordinary decree in a suit of this kind should direct accounts allowing the rate of interest provided by the mortgage up to the date of realization. No peculiarity has been shown to exist in this case for cutting down the mortgage rate of interest. If the High Court has allowed something less, the mortgagee makes no complaint. The mortgagor cannot complain if he is made to pay no more than he contracted to pay." The appeal was accordingly [373] dismissed. The words "if the High Court has allowed something less," that is, less than the mortgage rate of 12 per cent. can only refer to the period from the date fixed for payment until realization. It is thus obvious that the question whether a decree under s. 88 read with s. 86 of the Transfer of Property Act should allow interest beyond the date fixed for payment and until realization was considered by the Privy Council and answered in the affirmative.

While therefore we must, in accordance with the principle stated in Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (1) and the later decisions of the Court construe the decree of the 30th June, 1892, so as to make it in conformity with ss. 86 and 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, we cannot follow those decisions in their application of the principle. To be in conformity with those sections as interpreted by the Privy Council the decree must be construed as awarding interest, not merely until the 31st December, 1892, but until realization of the mortgage money, and in this view of the decree the Court below was right in disallowing the judgment-debtor's objection and in allowing execution for the full amount claimed by the decree-holder. The appeal must be dismissed with costs.

(1) 19 A. 174.

KNOX, J.—I concur.

BANERJI, J.—I am of the same opinion, and have nothing to add.

AIKMAN, J.—I concur in the judgment of the learned Chief Justice, and have nothing to add.

BLAIR, J.—As one of the Judges who was responsible for the decision in Amolak Ram v. Lachmi Narain (1), and as one of the Bench which referred this case with a view to its consideration by a Full Bench, I desire to say that I entirely concur with the view of the Chief Justice that the question is authoritatively decided for us by the ruling of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case of Rameswar Koer v. Mahomed Mehdi Hossein Khan (2). I agree that the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 374 (F.B.) = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 126.

[374] FULL BENCH.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice,

Mr. Justice Knox, Mr. Justice Banerji, Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Aikman.

JANKI PRASAD AND ANOTHER (Defendants) v. ISHAR DAS (Plaintiff),
[15th May, 1899.]

Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz—Partition—Effect of partition on pre-emptive rights, no new wajib-ul-arz being framed—Cause of action—Extinction of cause of action before suit brought.

In order that a suit for pre-emption may be successfully maintained, it is necessary not only that a cause of action should arise in favour of the pre-emptor at the time of the sale on which the suit is based, but that such cause of action should subsist at the time when the suit is brought. Dalganjan Singh v. Kolka Singh (3) referred to.

[Diss., 4 Ind. Cas. 337 (340) = 91 P.R. 1909 = 148 P.L.R. 1909 = 161 P.W.R. 1909; Appl., 26 A. 389 = 1 A.L.J. 209 = 24 A.W.N. (1904) 68; 23 A. 247 (248); CONS., 21 A. 441 (442); R., 31 A. 530 (532) = 6 A.L.J. 699 = 2 Ind. Cas. 42; 32 A. 45 = 6 A.L.J. 966 = 3 Ind. Cas. 782; 1 Ind. Cas. 528; 3 Ind. Cas. 923 (925) = 5 N.L.R. 136 (140); 3 Ind. Cas. 546 = 12 O.C. 229; 4 Ind. Cas. 179 (187) = 90 P.R. 1909 (F.B.) = 147 P.L.R. 1909 = 159 P.W.R. 1909; 2 N.L.R. 150 (152, 153); 7 O.C. 61 (63); 11 O.C. 290 (291); 30 P.L.R. 1902 = 32 P.R. 1902; 3 P.L.R. 1907 = 124 P.R. 1907 = 48 P.W.R. 1907; 163 P.L.R. 1908 (F.B.) = 17 P.R. 1908 = 18 P.W.R. 1908; 24 P.W.R. 1908; D., 31 A. 111 = 6 A.L.J. 51 = 1 Ind. Cas. 819.]

THIS was a suit for pre-emption of a 4 biswansi 12 kachwansi 10 nanwansi share in mauza Rajora. The defendants were Kalyan, Kuar Sen and Naik Rai, the vendors, Janki Prasad and Raghubar Dial, the * Second Appeal No. 860 of 1896, from a decree of H. W. Lyle, Esq., Officiating District Judge of Mainpuri, dated the 7th July 1896, confirming a decree of Babu Jagat Narain, Munsif of Shikohabad, dated the 30th March 1896.

(1) 19 A. 174.

(2) 26 C. 39.

(3) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 111.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 361
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 91.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
19 A. 374
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 126.

vendees, and Musammat Jai Debi, the plaintiff in an earlier suit for pre-emption arising out of the same sale. The suit was brought on the basis of the wajib-ul-arz, the plaintiff alleging that the vendors being owners of a share in patti No. 2 of the plaintiff's thoke had sold the same to strangers. The plaintiff also alleged that the price (Rs. 500) entered in the sale deed was fictitious, and that the true price was Rs. 375. Both vendors and vendees pleaded that by reason of a partition which had taken place in 1894-5 the plaintiff was not a sharer in the patti in which the share in question was sold and therefore had no right of pre-emption. Musammat Jai Debi pleaded a pre-emptive right superior to that of the plaintiff. The sale out of which the suit arose was effected by a deed executed on the 28th of February 1895. By virtue of proceedings which were completed on the 15th August 1895, the mahal in which originally both the plaintiff and the defendants-vendors were sharers was broken up, so that the plaintiff ceased to be a sharer in the mahal in which the share sold was situated. No new wajib-ul-arzes were prepared for the new mahals which were formed on partition. The suit was filed on the 25th of February 1896.

[375] The Court of first instance (Munsif of Shikohabad) decreed the plaintiff's claim for half the share sold, having regard to the pre-emptive rights of Jai Debi, and found the true sale price to be Rs. 400.

The defendants-vendees appealed, and the lower appellate Court (District Judge of Mainpuri) dismissed the appeal and upheld the decree of the Munsif on the grounds upon which that decree was based.

The defendants-vendees appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellants. The plaintiff cannot maintain the suit for pre-emption unless he can show that he continued a co-sharer at least until the day when he instituted his suit for pre-emption. The object of a suit for pre-emption is to exclude strangers and to prevent them from intruding into a co-parcenary body. It would be defeating the object of pre-emption if a person who himself has ceased to be a co-sharer at the date of suit and has thus become a stranger is permitted to pre-empt. That would be permitting one stranger to step into the place of another.

The Muhammadan law requires that the pre-emptor's interest in the tenement, the ownership of which gives him a right of pre-emption, should be subsisting up to the time when the Qazi pronounces his decree for pre-emption—Sakina Bibi v. Amiran (1), Baillie's Digest of Moohumudan Law, Hanifeea, p. 505, Tagore Law Lectures, 1873, p. 535. The principle upon which this rule of Muhammadan law is based is applicable equally to pre-emption cases based on the wajib-ul-arz.

The wajib-ul-arz conferred a right of pre-emption on co-sharers of four classes. The plaintiff does not come within the first three of these classes. The fourth class within which he fell on the date of sale (viz., that of co-sharers in the thok) had ceased to exist on the date of suit by reason of the thoke itself having ceased to exist.

Babu Satya Chandra Mukerji (for Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri) for the respondent.—This case differs in a material respect from Dalganjan Singh v. Kalka Singh (2) which has [376] just been argued before this Bench. In this case the plaintiff was a co-sharer with the vendor at the date of sale, but, by reason of partition proceedings having been completed in the meanwhile, he had ceased to be a co-sharer at the date of suit. The question to be determined here is whether under such circumstances the suit is maintainable. It is submitted that it is. The crucial date to be looked at is the date on which the cause of action arose, which was here the date of sale. A complete cause of action which has once accrued can be enforced by a suit brought according to law and within the statutory period.

(1) 10 A. 472.

(2) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 111.

The plaintiff may waive his right to relief or defendant may discharge the cause of action which had accrued to the plaintiff by performance; but the plaintiff cannot lose his right to relief by something independent of his will. Here the plaintiff did not apply for partition and he cannot lose his right by some act of a third person which he was powerless to prevent. The principle contended for is supported by the decision of Mr. Justice Burkitt in Second Appeal 649 of 1895*. If the argument for the appellant were correct, a man has only to sell his share to a stranger and the stranger has the next day to apply for partition and get the property sold partitioned into a separate mahal. Would such a course defeat all rights of pre-emption? It is not an essential element of the plaintiff's cause of action that he was a co sharer at the date of suit. He need only show that he was a co-sharer at the date when the cause of action arose.

[STRACHEY, C. J.—Supposing there had been a compulsory sale by process of law of the share of the plaintiff between the date of sale and the date of suit, would he still be entitled to bring his suit?]

No. Sale in execution of a decree stands on the same footing as a private sale. The compulsory sale by process of law follows some preceding act of the person against whom execution is enforced, and would be included in the principle of losing one's cause of action by waiver.

[377] [STRACHEY, C. J.—Supposing in a suit for an easement the dominant tenement is destroyed by lightning or earthquake before the suit is instituted, would the suit lie still?]

Yes, it would; the Court might not be able to grant relief by reason of the destruction of the dominant tenement; but it might grant other reliefs, such as for damages.

JUDGMENT.

[O122] STRACHEY, C. J.—This case raises a question similar to that considered by this Full Bench in Dalganjan Singh v. Kalka Singh (1). It relates to the effect of a perfect partition upon the right of pre-emption recorded in the wajib-ul-arz of an undivided mahal, where no new wajib-ul-arz has been framed for the new mahals created by the partition. The village Rajora originally consisted of several thokes, one of which was shown as "thoke Ishar Das." That thoke was an undivided 3 biswas 16 biswansis 10 kachwansis share of the village. The wajib-ul-arz prepared at the last settlement contained a chapter, headed "Chapter II, about the right of co-sharers (hissadars) among themselves based on custom or covenant." Clause 4 was as follows:—Custom (dastur) relating to pre-emption (shafa).—If any co-sharer (hissadar) wishes to transfer his share (hissa), then, having regard to the right of pre-emption, he should transfer his estate (haqiyat), that is, the claim to pre-emption shall accrue to, first, own brothers' and brothers' sons, next * (Unreported.) This case has however been dissented from by Edge, C. J., and Banerji, J. in Serh Mal v. Hukam Singh, (1897) I. L. R. 20 All. 100 —ED.

(1) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 111.

1896
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 374
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 126.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 374
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 126.

to cousins, next to co-owners in the parcel sold (sharik-i-haqiyat), after them to co-sharers in the patti (sharkian patti), after them to co-sharers in the thoke (sharkian thoke).

In February 1895 the defendants Nos. 3 to 5 sold a share in thoke Ishar Das to the defendant-appellant Janki Prasad, a stranger to the village. The plaintiff-respondent was at that time a co-sharer with the vendors in thoke Ishar Das. At the time of the sale, proceedings for perfect partition of the village had been commenced and were still pending. After the sale the perfect partition was completed, and it became operative on the [378] 1st July 1895, when the sanction of the Collector was given. By the partition thoke Ishar Das was divided into several separate mahals. The property sold fell within one of the mahals shown as mahal Ganga Prasad. In that mahal neither the plaintiff nor the vendees owned any share. No new wajib-ul-arz was framed for any of the now mahals. The present suit for pre-emption was brought in 1896. It was based on the pre-emption clause of the old wajib-ul-arz. In this appeal two questions have been discussed. The first is whether, after the perfect partition, the plaintiff was still entitled to pre-emption under the old wajib-ul-arz. The second is, whether it makes any difference that the sale took place before the completion of the partition: in other words, whether, granting that the plaintiff at the time of the sale obtained a good cause of action, he was deprived of it by the completion of the partition before the institution of the suit.

The principles upon which the first question must be decided have been fully considered in Dalganjan Singh v. Kalka Singh (1). The wajib-ul-arz was not in my opinion abrogated by the perfect partition. The question is whether, upon the true construction of its provisions, the plaintiff is entitled to pre-emption. The pre-emption clause gives the right (1) to certain relatives of the vendor, (2) to sharik-i-haqiyat or co-owners in the parcel sold, (3) to co-sharers in the patti, (4) to co-sharers in the thoke. "Co-sharers in the thoke" means co-sharers in the thoke which contains the property sold. No right is given to co-sharers in any other thoke or in any part of the village other than the thoke in which the vendor is a co-sharer. The plaintiff claims as one of this fourth class of pre-emptors, as a co-sharer in thoke Ishar Das. If he is a member of that class he is entitled to pre-emption: if he is not, his claim must fail. The effect of the perfect partition was to destroy the thokes into which the village Rajora had been divided, and thoke Ishar Das had, at the date when the suit was brought, ceased to exist. Neither the plaintiff nor any one else has, since the partition, been a co-sharer in thoke Ishar [379] Das, and no one, therefore, can now claim pre-emption as a member of the fourth class of pre-emptors mentioned in the wajib-ul-arz. That disposes of the first question.

Next, does it make any difference that, at the date of the sale, though not at the date of the suit, thoke Ishar Das still existed, and that the plaintiff could, before the partition, have successfully sued for pre-emption as one of the co-sharers in the thoke? In my opinion, it makes none. No case exactly in point has been cited, but the principle appears to me to be clear. To maintain a suit for pre-emption, the plaintiff must, I think, show not only that the sale gave him a cause of action, but that the cause of action still subsisted at the date of the institution of the suit. It is not necessary to consider what would have been the effect of the partition, if it had been completed after the institution of the suit but before decree. To hold that the plaintiff is entitled to a decree if he merely proves that he had a right of pre-emption and a good cause of action at the time of sale, and that it is unnecessary to show that the right and the cause of action still subsisted when the suit was brought, should result in all sorts of anomalies. Suppose, for instance, that the plaintiff, after the sale, ceased to be a co-sharer in the thoke, not by reason of a partition but in any other way, such as by selling his share, could he still sue as a co-sharer? The learned pleader for the respondent admitted that he could not, but suggested that in such a case there would be a waiver or relinquishment of the right by the pre-emptor's voluntary act. But suppose that the sale was not a voluntary one: suppose that it was in execution of a decree against him? The learned pleader could suggest no answer to that question. Again, suppose that, after the sale, the vendee sold the property to a co-sharer having an equal right with the plaintiff to pre-emption under the waji-ul-arz. Could the plaintiff deprive the new purchaser of the benefit of his purchase, although the rights of the two were equal? In Serh Mal v. Hukam Singh (1) that question was [380] answered in the negative. The argument that "at the moment when the sale to the stranger was made, the plaintiffs obtained their cause of action." was not allowed to prevail.

(1) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 111.

For these reasons I am of opinion that the suit ought to have been dismissed by the Courts below, and that we ought to allow the defendants' second appeal and dismiss the suit with costs in all Courts.

KNOX, BANERJI, BURKITT and AIKMAN. JJ., concurred.

Appeal decreed.

21 A. 380 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 130.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Knight, Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

YAD RAM (Plaintiff) v. UMRAO SINGH AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [16th May, 1899.]

Mortgage—Suit for sale on a mortgage—Benamidar—Right of benamidar mortgagee to sue.

Held, that the mortgagee named in a deed of mortgage is competent to sue in his own name for sale on the mortgage, though he is admittedly only a benamidar for some third person. Nand Kishore Lal v. Ahmad Ali (2) followed. Gopinath Chobey v. Bhugwat Pershad (3); Bhola Pershad v. Ram Lall (4); Sachitananda Mohapatra v. Baloram Gorain (5); Shangara v. Krishnan (6); Ravji Appaji Kulkarni v. Mahadev Bapuji Kulkarni (7) and Dagdu v. Balvant Ramchandra Natu (8) referred to; Hari Gobind Adhikari v. Akhoy Kumar Mozumdar (9); Issur Chandra Dutt v. Gopal Chandra Das, (10) and Baroda Sundari Ghose v. Dino Bandhu Khan (11) dissented from.

[Diss., 30 C. 265 (273); F., 28 A. 44 = 2 A.L.J. 702 = A.W.N. (1905) 173; 12 C.L.J. 357 = 7 Ind. Cas. 166 (170); R., 13 C.P.L.R. 83; 10 O.C. 263.]

^{*} Second appeal No. 21 of 1897, from a decree of T. C. Piggott, Esq., Additional District Judge of Aligarh, dated the 2nd October 1896, reversing a decree of Babu Bepin Behari Mukerji, Officiating Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 24th March 1896.

(1) 20 A. 100.

(2) 18 A. 69.

(3) 10 C. 697.

(4) 24 C. 84.

(5) 24 C. 644.

(6) 15 M. 267.

(7) 22 B. 672.

(8) 22 B. 820.

(9) 16 C. 364.

(10) 25 C. 98.

(11) 25 C. 874.

1899

MAY 16.

FULL BENCH.

21 A. 374

(F.B.) =

19 A.W.N.
(1899) 126.

1899
MAY 16.

—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21A. 380=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 130.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Chief Justice.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri (for whom Babu Harendra Krishna Mukerji) for the appellant.

Mr. D. N. Banerji and Munshi Ram Prasad, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

[381] STRACHEY, C.J.—This is a suit for sale of mortgaged property brought by a second mortgagee offering to redeem the first mortgagees, who are parties to the suit. The first mortgage was a usufructuary mortgage. The only defendants who resisted the suit were the purchasers, subsequent to the plaintiff's mortgage, of the equity of redemption of part of the mortgaged property. Their main defence was that the plaintiff had no right to maintain the suit, as he was only a benamidar, the mortgage money having been advanced by the defendants, first mortgagees. The Court of first instance decreed the suit. The lower appellate Court, without going into the merits, dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff was merely a benamidar of the first mortgagees, and therefore was not competent to maintain the suit. That is the only question which we have to consider in this appeal. We must take it that the plaintiff, in whose favour the mortgage sued on was executed, was only a benamidar for the first mortgagees.

Now the question whether, and in what circumstances, a benamidar is competent to maintain a suit in his own name and without the beneficial owner being a party to the suit, has been discussed in a number of rulings in the various High Courts, and in regard to it a considerable conflict of authority prevails. In those cases which affirm the right of the benamidar so to sue the right has been based partly on the fact that he is the transferee named in the registered instrument constituting the transfer, and on the principle that the contract can be enforced by the parties who have entered into it, and partly on the view that the benamidar must be presumed to be suing on behalf of the beneficial owner, or, to put the same idea into other words, that the suit is really brought by the beneficial owner through, and in the name of, the benamidar. On the other hand, those rulings which are adverse to the right of the benamidar to sue are mainly based on the ground that a suit cannot be maintained by any person who fails to prove, if his title is challenged, that he has a real interest of his own in the subject-matter of the suit.

[382] Now I do not propose to discuss on principle which of these conflicting views I should follow if the question were res integra. I propose to deal with it simply on the authorities. In this Court the authority is all one way. In Nand Kishore Lal v. Ahmad Ata (1), it was held that a benamidar was competent to sue in his own name to recover possession of immoveable property, and that such a suit must be deemed to have been instituted with the consent and approval of the beneficial owner. I think that we are bound to follow that decision, unless we entertain so strong a view that it is wrong that we consider it our duty to refer the matter to a Full Bench. When the cases subsequent to that case are examined, I think that they show a very decided preponderance of authority in its favour. The decision expressly dissents from that in Hari Gobind Adhikari v. Akhoy Kumar Mozumdar (2) in which, it has laid down that a benamidar cannot maintain a suit for recovery of land on title, even if the real owner disclaims or is a party to the suit. This Court's decision has again been dissented from, and the case reported in 16 Calc., p. 364, followed, in two recent decisions of the Calcutta High Court. In the first of these—Issur Chandra Dutt v. Gopal Chandra Das (1), it was held that a mere benamidar cannot maintain a suit for ejectment. The same was held in the case of Baroda Sundari Ghose v. Dino Bundhu Khan (2). Now these two decisions of the Calcutta High Court merely follow as correct certain previous decisions of that Court. They are not consistent either with the recent rulings of the Calcutta High Court itself, or with the rulings, not only of this Court, but of the Madras and Bombay High Courts. Taking first the decisions of the Calcutta High Court itself, in Gopi Nath Chobey v. Bhugwat Pershad (3), the principle was laid down generally that in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it is to be presumed that the benamidar has instituted the suit with the full authority of the beneficial owner; and if so, any decision would bind the [383] real owner as if the suit had been brought by the real owner himself. The suit there was a suit for malikana, but the principle is laid down in all its generality. In the 24th volume of the Calcutta Series of the Indian Law Reports, there are two cases not referred to in the most recent decisions of that Court, but wholly inconsistent with the view that the benamidar cannot maintain a suit. In Bhola Pershad v. Ram Lal (4), the suit was for enforcement of a mortgage bond. In the judgment it is observed:—"We are unable to say that a benamidar cannot under any circumstances sue. * * * Unless an objection be taken, a decree can be made in his favour. There is authority to show that the real owner is bound by a suit by the benamidar." In Sachitananda Mohapatra v. Baloram Gorain (5), the suit most closely resembled the present. It was a suit for foreclosure. It was held that a suit for foreclosure may be brought by the person named in the mortgage-deed, though he is only a benamidar, and that the suit should not be dismissed because the beneficial owner is not a party. The ground of that judgment which refers to another decision in a very similar case, was that the contract could be enforced by the parties who had entered into it, and that, whoever supplied the money, the transfer of the mortgaged property was by the deed made to the plaintiff. There is therefore strong authority in the Calcutta High Court itself, not referred to in the decisions which dissent from the ruling of this Court in Nand Kishore Lal v. Ahmad Ata, that a benamidar is competent to sue in his own name for enforcement of a mortgage without the beneficial owner or the person supplying the funds being made a party.

(1) 18 A. 69.

(2) 16 C. 364.

Turning next to the decisions of the other High Courts, the authorities are to the same effect. In Shangara v. Krishnan (6) the suit was to recover possession of land. It was held, citing the case reported in 10 Calc., p. 697, that the beneficial owner was bound by a decree passed in a previous suit brought by the benamidar and which must be presumed to have been brought with the true owner's authority and consent, and the decision [384] implies that the benamidar was competent to maintain that suit. The most recent rulings are two decisions of the Bombay High Court. The first is the case of Ravji Appaji Kulkarni v. Mahadev Bapuji Kulkarni (7). In that case Mr. Justice Ranade referred to all the principal rulings on the subject, and observed that the Allahabad

1899

MAY 16.

—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 380 =

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 130.

(1) 25 C. 98.

(5) 24 C. 644.

(2) 25 C. 874.

(6) 15 M. 267.

(3) 10 C. 697.

(7) 22 B. 672.

(4) 24 C. 34.

1899
MAY 16.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 380=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 130.

High Court in Nand Kishore Lal v. Ahmad Ata (1) had shown good reasons for its dissent from the ruling of the Calcutta High Court in Hari Gobind Adhikari v. Akhoy Kumar Mozumdar. He adds,—here speaking apparently for Mr. Justice Parsons as well as himself,—that they are inclined to agree with the Allahabad and Madras High Courts, and to hold that a benami certified purchaser can sue in his own name, even when the true owner's name is disclosed. That decision was followed in Dagdu v. Balvant Ramchandra Natu (2). The suit in that case was for redemption of mortgage; it was held that a benamidar may maintain a suit in his own name, but that the Court will put the defendant in the same position as if the real owner were the actual plaintiff. It was found in that case that the beneficial owner, who was not an agriculturist, was using the benamidar plaintiff, who was an agriculturist, for the purpose of suing without payment of the usual stamp fee, and of obtaining the benefit resulting from the provisions of the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act in favour of agriculturists. The Court, while allowing the suit by the benamidar to proceed, imposed, for the purpose of defeating the contemplated fraud on the public revenue, the condition that it should only be allowed to proceed "on payment of the usual stamp fees as though Kelkar was the nominal as well as the real plaintiff."

This review of the cases shows, I think, that, treating the matter purely as one of authority, the balance of authority is most distinctly in favour of the decision of this Court in Nand Kishore Lal v. Ahmad Ata. I think, therefore, that we ought to follow that ruling. The result of this view is that the decree of the lower appellate Court must be set aside and the case remanded [385] to that Court, and the Court directed to dispose of the case on the merits.

In so disposing of the case I think the Court should have regard to the principle laid down by the Bombay High Court in Dagdu v. Balvant Ramchandra Natu. It is alleged or suggested that the object of this benami transaction and of the suit brought by the benamidar is to obtain a decree for sale for the benefit of the second set of defendants, who, as usufructuary mortgagees, would not themselves be entitled to obtain a decree for sale in respect of their usufructuary mortgage. As to whether this is the object of the suit we of course express no opinion; but in considering the question the lower appellate Court should, I think, bear in mind the observations of Sir Charles Farran in the case I have just mentioned.

The plaintiff will have the costs of this appeal. The other costs will abide the result.

BANERJI, J.—I agree that the decree of the Court below should be set aside and the case remanded to that Court. The suit is one for sale upon a mortgage in which the plaintiff is named as the mortgagee. It has been found by the lower appellate Court, and that finding must be accepted in this second appeal, that the plaintiff is only a benamidar for certain other persons. The question therefore which has to be determined in this appeal is whether a benamidar is entitled to maintain a suit like this in his own name. The question, so far as this Court is concerned, is covered by the authority of the ruling in Nand Kishore Lal v. Ahmad Ata (1). That ruling has been approved by the Bombay High Court in the cases to which the learned Chief Justice has referred. It is in consonance with the decision of the Madras High Court in Shangara v. Krishnan (3) and it is supported by at least one of the cases decided by the Calcutta

(1) 18 A. 69.

(2) 22 B. 820.

(3) 15 M. 267.

High Court—I mean the case of Sachitananda Mohapatra v. Baloram Gorain (1). The weight of authority is thus in favour of the view [386] taken by this Court, and I do not feel myself justified in departing from that view. On this short ground I would decree the appeal and remand the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

21 A. 386 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 133.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and
Mr. Justice Banerji.*

DHARAMRAJ KUNWAR (Plaintiff) v. SUMERAN SINGH
AND ANOTHER (Defendants).^{*} [18th May, 1899.]

Act No. XII of 1881 (N.W.P. Rent Act), s. 44—Landholder and tenant—Improvements—Wells—Power of tenants to construct wells without consent of landholder.

Held, that having regard to s. 44 of the N.W.P. Rent Act, 1881, an occupancy tenant may, if such well be an improvement within the meaning of the section, construct either a kachcha or pacca well on his holding without any reference to the consent of the zamindar. Raj Bihadur v. Birmha Singh (2) and Muhammad Raza Khan v. Dalip (3) referred to.

[R., 13 Ind. Cas. 554 = 15 O.C. 170 (175).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Chief Justice.

Mr. B. E. O'Connor, for the appellant.

Mr. J. Simeon, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C.J.—The plaintiff in this case claimed an injunction involving the demolition of a pacca well constructed by the defendants on land which the plaintiff claimed as his own. He claimed a right, as owner of the land, to have the well demolished. The defendants pleaded that they had constructed the well on land belonging to themselves. It has been found as a fact that the defendants are occupancy tenants of the land on which they constructed the well. It is common ground that they constructed it without the consent of the plaintiff, who is the zamindar. That is how the case stood in the Court of first instance. The question as stated by that Court is:—"Can an occupancy tenant construct a well on his holding without the permission of [387] his landlord?" The answer given to that question by the first Court is, that an occupancy tenant can do so. The Court, in support of that view, referred to the case of Muhammad Raza Khan v. Dalip (3). The Munsif says, first, with regard to that case that "the facts of the two cases are exactly alike." I understand him to mean that the suits in that case and the present were of exactly the same character; that the wells sought to be demolished were both masonry wells; that in ^{*} Second Appeal No. 170 of 1897, from a decree of J. J. McLean, Esq., District Judge of Jaunpur, dated the 7th December 1896, confirming a decree of Babu Bhawani Chander Chakarvarti, Munsif of Jaunpur, dated the 25th August 1896.

(1) 24 C. 644.

(2) 3 A. 85.

(3) 12 A.W.N. (1892) 103.

1899
MAY 18.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 386 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 133.

each case the parties stood in the relation of landholder and occupancy tenant, and that in each the well was constructed by the occupancy tenant without the landholder's permission. Then the Munsif goes on to say that in the precedent cited, "in spite of the condition in the wajib-ul-arz that it can be done with the zamindar's permission, the ruling has laid it down that such permission need not be sought and obtained." I understand him to mean that the precedent is an a fortiori case, and shows that the landholder's permission for the building of the well is immaterial, even where there is a clause in wajib-ul-arz prohibiting the construction of wells without the landholders' consent. I do not think that the Munsif was referring to any wajib-ul-rarz produced in the case before him. Certainly no wajib-ul-arz is mentioned or relied on in the plaint, which bases the claim, not on any instrument of the kind, but on the plaintiff's right as owner to remove a construction improperly placed on his land. No wajib-ul-arz, and no evidence referring to any wajib-ul-arz, is to be found anywhere on the record. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, and in his second ground of appeal there is what appears to be the first reference to any wajib-ul-arz as applicable to this case. That plea in the memorandum of appeal referring to the wajib-ul-arz appears to have been suggested by the Munsif's allusion to the ruling reported in the Weekly Notes and to the wajib-ul-arz therein referred to, and the plea is that the ruling "is not applicable to the present case with reference to the conditions of the wajib-ul-arz." With reference to this plea the lower appellate [388] Court appears to have taken it for granted that there was a wajib-ul-arz in the present suit, the terms of which were exactly similar to those of the wajib-ul-arz in the case reported in the Weekly Notes, and that Court concurred with the first Court in dismissing the suit on the authority of that ruling. Now the plaintiff has presented a second appeal to this Court. The learned Judge before whom that appeal came has referred it to a Division Bench because he disagrees with the judgment of Mr. Justice Mahmood in the case cited. His view is that Mr. Justice Mahmood treated the occupancy tenant's power to make wells as being larger than the law allows or than would be reasonable. He expresses the opinion that so far from its being unreasonable and opposed to public policy, that an occupancy tenant should not be able to build a pacca well without the consent of the zamindar, it would be throwing an unreasonable burden on the zamindar if the occupancy tenant's rights were not conditional on the zamindar's consent being obtained. Now it is quite clear that s. 44 of the N. W. P. Rent Act does recognize the right of an occupancy tenant to construct wells without the landholder's consent. The last paragraph of that section shows by necessary implication that an occupancy tenant is entitled to compensation in respect of improvements, including wells, made without the consent of the landholder, and can resist ejectment from the land without payment of such compensation. It is not a question of reasonableness or of public policy; the occupancy tenant's right is distinctly conferred by statute. Even under s. 44 of the N.W.P. Rent Act, 1873, which contained no such provision as the last paragraph of s. 44 of the present Act, the Full Bench of this Court in Raj Bahadur v. Birmha Singh (1) gave effect to the same right by dismissing a suit brought by a landholder against an occupancy tenant for an injunction restraining the defendant from constructing a well on his occupancy holding. Mr. Justice Pearson, with whom the rest of the Court concurred, said:—"I am of opinion that s. 44 [389] of the Rent Act implicitly authorizes tenants of all classes to construct wells for the improvement of the land held by them." In this case, as in that, "it is not pretended that the well constructed by the defendant is not calculated to benefit the land." The effect of the last paragraph of s. 44 of the present Act is to confirm the view taken by the Full Bench, and to make it clear that, in the case of tenants at fixed rates and occupancy tenants, the well, if an improvement, as defined by the section, may be made without the landholder's consent. The learned Judge remarks that Mr. Justice Mahmood's decision would throw an intolerable and enormous burden on a zamindar in compelling him to make compensation for so-called improvements. I think, with all respect, that he has overlooked the explanation to s. 44, which shows that for a merely "so-called" improvement the landlord would not be liable to pay compensation. Unless the well or other work fulfils the definition of "works by which the annual letting value of the land has been and at the time of demanding compensation continues to be increased," it is not an improvement within the meaning of the section at all, and the landlord can eject the tenant without paying compensation for it. The section only compels compensation where the landlord has received a real quid pro quo, and only prevents the landlord from appropriating the land without compensating the tenant for the real and permanent improvements in it which he owes to the tenant's industry. Now in the case decided by Mr. Justice Mahmood, that learned Judge held that the right conferred by s. 44 on the occupancy tenant would not be taken away by a clause in the wajib-ul-arz of the village recording a custom which required the zamindar's consent,—which the section itself dispenses with,—on the ground that such a custom would be unreasonable and opposed to public policy. On the facts of this case it is not necessary for us to express any opinion on that portion of Mr. Justice Mahmood's judgment, though I entirely agree with his view of s. 44 and of the Full Bench ruling of this Court. We have been asked to send [390] down an issue in this case with reference to the wajib-ul-arz to which the lower appellate Court refers in its judgment. On consideration I think that we ought not to do so. The plaintiff's claim, as I have shown, was not, as brought, in any way based on any wajib-ul-arz, and to allow him now to take his stand on any custom or contract recorded in the wajib-ul-arz apart from the general rights of the zamindar would, in my opinion, be allowing him to change the whole foundation of his suit. I think that the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

(1) 3 A. 85.

BANERJI, J.—I am of the same opinion. Section 44 of the Rent Act recognizes the right of an occupancy tenant to make improvements, including the construction of a pacca well, without the consent of the landlord. The last paragraph of the section clearly implies that it is only in the case of a tenant other than a tenant at fixed rates or an occupancy tenant that the consent of the landlord to the making of the improvement is necessary so as to entitle the tenant to compensation on ejection. The section therefore confers on an occupancy tenant an unlimited right to make improvements in the shape of pacca wells. What the effect of a condition in the wajib-ul-arz making the right of an occupancy tenant to build a well dependent on the consent of the landlord will be on the provisions of s. 44 it is not necessary, in my opinion, to consider in this case. The case as set up in the plaint had no reference to any 1899

MAY 18.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 386 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 133.

1899
MAY 18.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 386 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 133.

provisions of the wajib-ul-arz. The case alleged in the plaint was that the land on which the well had been built belonged to the plaintiff: that the defendants had no concern with that land, and that they had therefore no right to construct the well. It was not alleged by the plaintiff that by reason of the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz the defendants were precluded from building a well without the plaintiff's consent. It was upon this case that the parties went to trial in the Court of first instance, and it was this case which the Court of first instance decided against the plaintiff. It was for the first time in the appeal before the lower appellate Court that the plaintiff urged that, having regard [391] to the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz, the defendants were incompetent to build the well. In my opinion the lower appellate Court ought not to have allowed the plaintiff to put forward a case in appeal which she had not set up in the Court of first instance. The consideration of any question having reference to the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz does not therefore arise in the appeal before us. As the learned Chief Justice has pointed out, the fact of an occupancy tenant being allowed to construct a well without the consent of the landlord would not, having regard to the provisions of s. 44, impose on the landlord any "intolerable or enormous burden." The decree of the Court below is, in my opinion, right, and I agree in dismissing the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 391 (F.B.) = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 138.

FULL BENCH.

*Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Knox
and Mr. Justice Banerji.*

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. HORI.* [27th May, 1899.]

Act No. VIII of 1897 (Reformatory Schools Act), s. 16—Rules of the Local Government framed under s. 8, sub-s. (3) of the Act—Order sending a boy of the Dalera caste to a Reformatory School—Jurisdiction of High Court to interfere with orders under s. 16—Interpretation of statutes.

Held, that the High Court has power to interfere in appeal or revision with an order for detention in a reformatory school passed in substitution for transportation or imprisonment when such order is made without jurisdiction and is not an order warranted by Act No. VIII of 1897.

Section 16 of Act No. VIII of 1897 only precludes the interference of a superior Court with the original Court's order so far as it (1) determines the age of a youthful offender or (2) directs the substitution of detention in a reformatory school for transportation or imprisonment, where such substitution is not made without jurisdiction and is not otherwise illegal, having regard to the provisions of the Act. Queen-Empress v. Himai (1), and Queen-Empress v. Gobinda (2) [392] overruled. Queen-Empress v. Billar (3), Queen-Empress v. Kaidya Husain (4), Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Ahmad Ali (5), Queen-Empress v. Ramalingam (6), Roop Lall Das v. Manook (7), Queen-Empress v. Partap Chunder Ghose (8), Ex parte Bradlaugh (9) and The Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Wilan (10) referred to.

In interpreting statutes the more literal construction ought not to prevail if it is opposed to the intention of the Legislature as apparent by the statute,

* Criminal Revision No. 117 of 1899.

(1) 20 A. 158.

(4) 1 Bom. L.R. 162.

(7) 2 C.W.N. 572.

(9) L.R. 3 Q.B.D. 509.

(2) 20 A. 159.

(5) 25 C. 333.

(8) 25 C. 852.

(10) L.R. 5 P.C. 417 (442).

(3) 20 A. 160.

(6) 21 M. 430.

and if the words are sufficiently flexible to admit of some other construction by which that intention will be better effectuated. Caledonian Railway Company v. North British Railway Company (1) referred to.

IN this case a boy named Hori, about the age of 12 years, had been convicted by a Magistrate of the first class of the offence of theft, under s. 379 of the Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment; but in view of the boy's age the Magistrate directed that, instead of undergoing the sentence, he should be sent to a reformatory school for five years. The accused appealed against the conviction to the Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad, who dismissed the appeal. An application was thereupon filed by the Local Government for revision of this order on the ground that "the order of detention in a reformatory school of a Dalera", to which caste the boy Hori was said to belong, "is illegal, being opposed to the rules framed by the Local Government under the Reformatory Schools Act."

The Government Advocate (Mr. E. Chamier), in support of the application.

Section 16 of the Reformatory Schools Act should be construed, if possible, in such a manner as to give effect to the intention of the Legislature. Construed literally, as in Queen-Empress v. Himai (2) and Queen-Empress v. Gobinda (3), this section would oust the jurisdiction of the High Court in every case in which detention in a reformatory had been substituted for transportation or imprisonment whether the Court passing the order had jurisdiction or not.

[393] It is submitted that s. 16 of the Act can, without doing violence to its language, be construed as barring interference in two matters only, i.e., a finding as to the age of the offender and the lawful exercise by a lower Court of its discretion in substituting detention in a reformatory for transportation or imprisonment. Various illegal orders in cases under the Act have been set aside by the Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras High Courts—see Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Ahmad Ali (4), Queen-Empress v. Ramaligam (5), and Imperatrix v. Bhan Singh, decided by Parsons and Ranade, JJ. (unreported).

An order passed by a Magistrate without jurisdiction or in violation of the rules made by the Local Government not being justified by the Act is not protected by s. 16.

Similarly orders purporting to have been passed under s. 143, Code of Criminal Procedure, but not warranted thereby have been held to be liable to revision, notwithstanding the terms of s. 435 (3) of the same Code—Queen-Empress v. Partab Chandar Ghose (6).

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J.—The object of this application by the Local Government is to obtain a reconsideration of the decisions of this Court in Queen-Empress v. Himai (2), and Queen-Empress v. Gobinda (3), in which it was held that by reason of s. 16 of the Reformatory Schools Act (VIII of 1897), this Court is in no case competent to interfere in appeal or revision with an order for detention in a reformatory school passed in substitution for transportation or imprisonment, even though the order is made without jurisdiction or is otherwise illegal. In the present case, a Magistrate of the first class convicted the accused, Hori, a boy about 12 years old, of theft under s. 379

(1) L.R. 6 App. Cas. 114 (122).

(4) 25 O. 393.

(2) 20 A. 158.

(5) 21 M. 490.

(3) 20 A. 159.

(6) 25 O. 852.

1899
MAY 27.

FULL BENCH.

21 A. 391
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 138.

1899
MAY 27.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 391
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 138.

of the Penal Code, and sentenced him to six months' rigorous imprisonment, but in view of the boy's age directed that instead of undergoing the sentence, he should be sent to a reformatory school for five years. The accused appealed against the conviction [394] to the Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad, who dismissed the appeal. The present application by the Local Government is for revision of the orders of the Courts below on the ground that "the order of detention in a reformatory school of a Dalera is illegal, being opposed to the rules framed by the Local Government under the Reformatory Schools Act." The rule referred to is rule 4 of the rules made by the Local Government and published at pages 167, 168 of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Government Gazette, Part VI, 3rd July, 1897. It provides that "no boy belonging to any of the undermentioned tribes, whether such tribe has or has not been formally proclaimed in these Provinces under the Criminal Tribes Act, 1871, should be sent to a reformatory school." Among the tribes mentioned are the Daleras, to which tribe the accused is said to belong. The rule was made under s. 8, sub-s. (3) of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, which authorizes the Local Government to make rules for defining what youthful offenders should be sent to reformatory schools, having regard to the nature of their offences or other considerations; and sub-s. (1) shows that the power given to certain Courts to direct youthful offenders to be sent to and detained in reformatory schools instead of undergoing their sentences is subject to any rules so made. If therefore the accused Hori was a Dalera, the order of the Magistrate directing that instead of undergoing his sentence he should be sent to a reformatory school was illegal. There is on the record no evidence that the accused is a Dalera. He did not before either of the Courts below state that he was one, and the fact does not appear to have been discovered by the Local Government until after the decision of the Sessions Judge. In a petition to this Court, acknowledging notice of the present application, the accused prays that he may be released from the reformatory school "because I am a Dalera by caste, and none of my caste fellows is here." Assuming that he is a Dalera, the question is whether this Court is competent in revision to alter or reverse the illegal order for his detention in a reformatory school, having regard to s. 16 of the Reformatory Schools [395] Act, and to the decision in Queen-Empress v. Gobinda, (1) which is exactly in point.

Section 16 is as follows:—"Nothing contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882, shall be construed to authorize any Court of Magistrate to alter or reverse in appeal or revision any order passed with respect to the age of a youthful offender, or the substitution of an order for detention in a reformatory school for transportation or imprisonment."

The section is not well drawn; but apart from obvious verbal criticisms its object is clear enough. It does not exclude the exercise of appellate or revisional jurisdiction under the Code in all cases where a subordinate Court has ordered an offender to be detained in a reformatory school. The exclusion is limited to two specified matters, in regard to which the Legislature considered the Court trying a youthful offender better placed for arriving at a sound conclusion than an appellate or revisional Court could be. The first of these is the age of the youthful offender, a finding on which is, under s. 11, a necessary condition precedent to every order for detention in a reformatory school, which might often be difficult to determine, and in determining which a subordinate Court which saw the offender would have a considerable advantage over a superior Court which did not. The second is "the substitution of an order for detention in a reformatory school for transportation or imprisonment." These words are no doubt very general, and, if read with absolute literalness, would protect the most illegal orders substituting detention for imprisonment from any sort of interference. So to read them would, I think, defeat the plain intention of the Legislature. It appears to me that they only refer to the propriety or suitableness of such a substitution in the particular case, having regard to all the circumstances. They do not include the legality of the substitution directed or the competency of the Court or Magistrate to direct it. The Legislature may well have thought that, upon the question whether a particular [396] offender would benefit by detention in a reformatory school, or whether under the circumstances imprisonment would be more suitable, as well as upon the question of age, the Court having the youthful offender before it, and observing his appearance and demeanour would be more likely to be right than a superior Court not having that advantage. But there the advantage ends. Upon questions as to which the subordinate Court has no advantage at all by reason of personal observation or otherwise, and especially upon questions of jurisdiction or law arising upon the construction of Act VIII of 1897, there could be no more reason than in any other class of cases for making its orders final. Section 16 cannot have been intended to enable the most junior Magistrate in the country to make at pleasure orders substituting detention in a reformatory school for imprisonment in any case whatever, for prisoners of any age, or class or of either sex, for any period of time in absolute disregard of the Act, without possibility of correction. If this view is right, the words in s. 16 protecting from appellate or revisional interference the substitution of an order for detention in a reformatory school for transportation or imprisonment must not be read with absolute literalness. The substituted orders to which the section refers are orders made under s. 8, s. 9, or s. 10, not orders made outside the Act and wholly unauthorized by it. If the order is an order for substitution within the meaning of those sections, then s. 16 applies, and it cannot be altered or reversed in appeal or revision. If it is not an order for substitution within the meaning of those sections, then s. 16 does not apply, and it may be altered or reversed like any other illegal order. I do not think that this construction does violence to the terms of s. 16. It cannot be said that the section is unambiguous, and in such a case we are at liberty to put on it a construction in accordance with the intention of the Legislature. "The more literal construction," said Lord Selborne in Caledonian Railway Company v. North British Railway Company (1), "ought not to prevail if it is opposed [397] to the intention of the Legislature as apparent by the statute, and if the words are sufficiently flexible to admit of some other construction by which that intention will be better effectuated."

(1) 20 A. 159.

The decisions in Queen-Empress v. Himai and Queen-Empress v. Gobinda are based upon the literal construction of s. 16 without reference to the object with the Legislature in passing Act VIII of 1897 had in view. They interpret the section as prohibiting interference in appeal or revision with any order whatever of a subordinate Court substituting detention in a reformatory school for transportation or imprisonment, even if

(1) L.R. 6 App. Cas. 114 (122).

1899
MAY 27.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 391
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 13 8

1899
MAY 27.

—
FULL BENCH.

21 A. 391
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 138.

the order is passed without jurisdiction or violates every provision of the Act. The following are some of the consequences which such a construction involves. A Magistrate having no power whatever to make any order under the Act, directs that a youthful offender, instead of undergoing his sentence of imprisonment, shall be sent to a reformatory school. His order, being the substitution of an order for detention in a reformatory school for imprisonment, cannot be set aside. A Magistrate orders an adult offender or a girl, who cannot legally be sent to a reformatory school at all, to be detained there instead of undergoing his or her sentence of imprisonment for a period of ten years, being more than the maximum period allowed by s. 8. The illegal order cannot be interfered with. A Magistrate in violation of the rules made by the Local Government and having the force of law under s. 8, substitutes detention in a reformatory school, for transportation in the case an offender convicted of murder, or substitutes detention for imprisonment in the case of an offender belonging to a criminal tribe, or convicted of an unnatural offence, "or whose antecedents afford reasonable grounds for assuming habitual immorality." Effect must be given to the illegal order, and the provisions and policy of the whole Act defeated in order to comply with the letter of s. 16. In such cases there would be no remedy. The Local Government [398] could, of course, under s. 14, order any youthful offender to be discharged from a reformatory school. But as the Government has not, under Act VIII of 1897, the power which it possessed under s. II of the repealed Act V of 1876, to order a youthful offender discharged before the expiration of his sentence to undergo the residue of it, such a discharge would not restore the operation of the sentence; and the Government would thus be in the dilemma of allowing an illegal order for detention to be carried out or allowing the offender to escape all punishment. Again, s. 16 itself clearly shows that the legality of an order for detention in a reformatory school may in some cases be questioned, and the order set aside in appeal or revision. For instance, if without first passing any sentence of transportation or imprisonment, a Court or Magistrate makes an order for detention, that order, not being in substitution for transportation or imprisonment, is not protected by the section: Queen-Empress v. Billar (1), Queen-Empress v. Kaidya Husain (2). Can the Legislature have intended that a superior Court should be competent to set aside an illegal order for detention where the illegality merely consisted in an omission by the Magistrate to formally record a sentence of imprisonment which he intended immediately to supersede, but that it should not be competent to interfere where the Magistrate, having gone through that form, proceeded to order detention without having received authority under the Act to pass such orders, or ordered the detention of an adult, a girl, or any other person wholly outside the scope of the Act, or of a youthful offender for a term far in excess of the maximum allowed by the Act? In other words, was it intended that the mere formal record of a sentence of imprisonment for which detention is substituted should absolutely protect from interference every sort of illegality in the order, while in the absence of such formal record the appellate and revisional jurisdiction under the Code might be freely exercised? Again, if the literal construction of the second part of s. 16 is adopted, the earlier part protecting [399] "any order passed with respect to the age of a youthful offender" is superfluous. These words refer to the finding as to age required by s. 11

(1) 20 A. 160.

(2) 1 Bom. L.R. 162.

before any youthful offender can be sent to a reformatory school under the previous sections but that finding is not an independent and substantive order; it is only a necessary preliminary to any substitution of retention for imprisonment; and if, every such substitution, legal or illegal, is protected, the preliminary finding is, of course, protected as part of it, and requires no separate protection. Further, there is nothing in s. 16 which takes away the power of a superior Court to set aside in appeal or revision the conviction and consequently the sentence of imprisonment in substitution of which the order for detention in a reformatory school was made. In such a case the order for detention would necessarily become inoperative. If the superior Court maintained the conviction, but, altered the sentence to one, such as whipping, for which detention in a reformatory school could not, under the Act, be substituted, the same result would follow. This shows that s. 16 cannot be read with absolute literalness, for in such cases the substituted order for detention is undoubtedly altered or reversed.

Section 16 does not appear to have been discussed by any of the other High Courts in any reported case. In practice those Courts do not act on the view that they have no power to alter or reverse in appeal or revision an illegal order substituting detention in a reformatory school for transportation or imprisonment. Thus in Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Ahmad Ali (1), the Calcutta High Court in revision set aside as contrary to law an order of a Magistrate substituting detention in a reformatory school for two years for a sentence of imprisonment, the main grounds being that the least period for which the detention could be ordered under s. 8 of the Act was three years, and that there was no clear finding as to the age of the offender as required by s. 11. In Queen Empress v. Ramalingam (2), the Madras High Court in revision altered an order of a Magistrate [400] substituting detention in a reformatory school for imprisonment so as to make the period of detention in accordance with the rules made by the Local Government under the Act. In an unreported case in the Bombay High Court (Imperatrix v. Bhan Singh, Criminal Reference No. 43 of 1897, decided on the 17th June 1897), Mr. Justice Parsons and Mr. Justice Ranade set aside the Magistrate's order as illegal under Act VIII of 1897, on the ground that it did not appear from the record that the accused was under the age of 15 years. There is some analogy to s. 16 of Act VIII of 1897 in s. 435 (3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which provides that orders made under ss. 143 and 144 are not proceedings the record of which the High Court may call for and examine for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding, sentence or order recorded or passed, and as to the regularity of the proceedings. It has been held that where an order, though purporting to be made under s. 143 or 144, is not authorized by them and is clearly made without jurisdiction, the prohibition does not apply and the High Court can interfere. The reason is that what the Legislature intended to protect from interference in revision was orders legally passed under the sections in question, not any illegal order which a Magistrate might profess to pass under them. "If this were not so Magistrates might by affecting to act under s. 144, when the case was not within that section, oust the jurisdiction of this Court to interfere:"—Roop Lall Das v. Manook (3), and see Queen-Empress v. Partab Chander Ghose (4), and the cases there cited. It is on similar grounds

1899
MAY 27.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 391.
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 138.

(1) 25 C. 333.

(2) 21 M. 430.

(3) 2 C.W.N. 572.

(4) 25 C. 852.

1899
MAY 27.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 391
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 128.

that sections in special Acts of Parliament expressly providing that convictions, orders or other proceedings "shall not be removed into the High Court by certiorari or otherwise," have been construed as not depriving the High Court of power to issue a certiorari where the order has been passed without jurisdiction. Thus in ex parte Bradlaugh (1), the Act provided in [401] the most general terms that no information, conviction or other proceeding before or by any of the said Magistrates shall be quashed, or set aside, or adjudged void or insufficient for want of form, or be removed by certiorari into Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench. It was, however, held that a section in an Act of Parliament taking away the certiorari did not apply in the case of total absence of jurisdiction. Mellor, J., said:—"It is well established that the provision taking away the certiorari does not apply where there was an absence of jurisdiction. The consequence of holding otherwise would be that a metropolitan Magistrate could make any order he pleased without question." See also The Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Willan (2). "The prohibition obviously applied only to cases which have been entrusted to the lower jurisdiction": Maxwell on Statute, p. 180. So here I think that s. 16 of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, does not apply where there was an absence of jurisdiction, and that the consequence of holding it to apply where the order substituting detention for transportation or imprisonment is illegal, would be that a Magistrate could make any such illegal order he pleased without question.

Even if I am wrong in this view, still s. 16 in terms refers only to the interference of the superior Courts under the Code of Criminal Procedure, and the High Court could alter or reverse any such illegal order in the exercise of its powers of superintendence under s. 15 of the High Courts Act, 1861, which is in no way touched. That provision is not referred to in the judgments in Queen-Empress v. Himai, and Queen-Empress v. Gobinda. But for the reasons which I have given, I think that under the Code, as well as under the High Courts Act, this Court is competent to interfere in such a case, and that the decisions to the contrary are wrong and must be overruled. Before passing any order upon the present application we must ask the Sessions Judge for a finding as to whether the accused Hori is a Dalera as alleged both by the accused himself and by the Local Govern-[402]ment. The application will be disposed of after the receipt of the finding.

KNOX, J.—I fully concur with the learned Chief Justice that the policy and object of the Legislature in enacting s. 16 of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, was to exclude the interference of Courts, whether by way of appeal, or by way of revision with (1) any finding by the trying Magistrate under s. 11 of the Act, which states what such Magistrate considers the age of a youthful offender before him to be, and (2) any order passed under s. 8 of the Act, whereby, instead of undergoing a sentence of transportation or imprisonment, such youthful offender is directed to be sent to a reformatory school. The probability is that, as pointed out by the learned Chief Justice in determining these two matters, the Legislature considered the trying Magistrate to have such advantage over a Court of appeal or revision that any interference would be inexpedient. So far we are bound to promote in the fullest manner the policy and object of the Legislature. We are told in the preamble that the object, or one of the objects, of the Act was to make further provision for dealing with youthful offenders, but not with all youthful offenders. The youthful offenders intended were only those boys who had been convicted of any offence punishable with transportation or imprisonment, and who at the time of conviction might be under the age of 15 years. The Legislature further intended and provided that, even in the case of such offenders, all such should not be sent to a reformatory school, but only such of them, whom, by rules made for this purpose, having regard to the nature of their offence or other considerations, the Local Government might consider fit subjects for detention in a reformatory. It was not the intention or policy of the Legislature that any boy whom the Local Government did not, by rule made for the purpose, consider fit should be taken out of the ordinary jurisdiction of Courts of appeal or of revision. The power of superior Courts to question the finding of guilty or not guilty was not removed, and was never intended to be removed, by [403] s. 16, whether the person found guilty or not guilty were a youthful offender as understood by the Act or not a youthful offender. All that was excepted was the order with respect to age and the order of detention substituted. Where a Court found an offender to be at the time of conviction 18 years and still passed an order of detention substituted for imprisonment, we are, I hold, entitled to find that the offender is not a youthful offender, and therefore one to whom the order of detention substituted for imprisonment was never intended to apply, could not apply, and was null and void. So also if the offender in such case be a girl, or, in these Provinces, a Dalera, this Court is entitled to exercise its ordinary power of appeal or revision. It is necessary first to have a determination whether the accused is or is not a Dalera, and I accordingly concur in the order proposed.

(1) (1878) L.R. 3 Q.B.D. 509.

(2) L. R. 5 P.C. 417 (442).

BANERJI, J.—I am of the same opinion as the learned Chief Justice, but out of respect for the learned Judges from whose judgments we are differing, I deem it proper to state briefly my views on the question before us. That question is, whether s. 16 of Act No. VIII of 1897 precludes this Court from altering or reversing in appeal or revision an order for detention in a reformatory school passed in substitution for an order for transportation or imprisonment, however illegal that order may be. It seems to me that the interpretation put on the provisions of that section in Queen-Empress v. Himai (1), and Queen-Empress v. Gobinda (2) is somewhat too narrow, and, as pointed out by the learned Chief Justice, calculated to defeat the intention of the Legislature. According to well known canons of construction, an Act of the Legislature should be so interpreted as consistently with the language used by it to give effect to its intention. I do not think we should be justified in assuming that in placing upon the powers of a Court of appeal or revision the restriction which s. 16 imposes, the Legislature intended to create or overlooked the anomalies referred to by the learned Chief Justice, [404] which must be the inevitable result of the strict and literal interpretation placed upon that section in the two rulings mentioned above. In my opinion the order referred to in s. 16, which a Court or Magistrate has no authority to alter or reverse in appeal or revision, must be an order which the officer who made it was competent to make, and which he made in compliance with the provisions of Act No. VIII of 1897. Where a Court or Magistrate has jurisdiction to make an order for detention in a reformatory school in substitution for an order of 1899

MAY 27.
—
FULL BENCH.

21 A. 391
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 138.

(1) 20 A. 158.

(2) 20 A. 159.

1899
MAY 27.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 391
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 138.

transportation or imprisonment, and in the exercise of that jurisdiction the Court or Magistrate has made an order for detention in consonance with the provisions of s. 8, 9 or 10, such order is not open to interference in appeal or revision and is final. But where the order passed is not one justified by the Act and transgresses the provisions of the Act or the rules framed by the Local Government under the Act, s. 16 does not protect it from interference in appeal or revision. The protection afforded by the section only extends to the lawful exercise of the discretion vested in a Court or Magistrate to substitute in certain cases an order of detention in a reformatory school for an order of transportation or imprisonment. There cannot be any doubt that the order of conviction is open to appeal or revision. If the conviction be set aside, the order of detention must of necessity fall to the ground. But if s. 16 be considered to bar interference with an order of detention in any case, that order will stand good, although the conviction no longer subsists. Such a result could not certainly have been intended by the Legislature in enacting s. 16. I agree with the learned Chief Justice in making the order proposed by him.

BY THE COURT.—Let the record be sent down to the Sessions Judge for a finding as to whether the accused Hori is a Dalera.

[Subsequently, on the return by the Sessions Judge of a finding that Hori was a Dalera, the order under discussion was set aside.]

21 A. 405 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 157.

[405] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Aikman.

AULIA BIBI AND OTHERS (Decree-holders) v. ABU JAFAR
(Judgment-debtor).^{*} [9th June, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, ss. 273, 268—Execution of decree—Attachment—Decree of Revenue Court not capable of attachment and sale under s. 273 in execution of a Civil Court decree.

Held, that though a decree of a Court of Revenue is not liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree of a Civil Court under s. 273 of the Civil Procedure Code, such decree stands in the position of an ordinary debt and may be dealt with under s. 268 of the Code. Onkar Singh v. Bhup Singh (1) and Prince Gholam Mohamed v. Indra Chand Jahuri (2) referred to. Takiya Begam v. Siraj-ud-daula (3) and Sultan Kuar v. Gulzari Lal (4) distinguished.

[R., 22 A. 182 (185).]

CERTAIN decree-holders, holding a decree of a Civil Court, applied for execution of their decree by attachment and sale of a Revenue Court decree which had been passed in favour of their judgment-debtor. The Court executing the decree at first issued an injunction to the Revenue Court which had granted the decree sought to be attached, but, upon argument, dissolved that injunction, holding, with reference to the case of Onkar Singh v. Bhup Singh (1), that as a Civil Court it was not competent to order the attachment and sale of a Revenue Court's decree. The decree-holders appealed to the District Judge, who upheld the order of ^{*} First Appeal No. 261 of 1898. from an order of Maulvi Mubammad Abdul Ghafur, Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur, dated the 20th August 1898.

(1) 16 A. 496.

(3) 5 A.W.N. (1885) 123.

(2) (1871) 7 B.L.R. 318.

(4) 2 A. 290.

the Subordinate Judge. The decree-holders accordingly appealed to the High Court.

Mr. Karamat Husain, for the appellants.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Maulvi Muhammad Ishaq, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX and AIKMAN, JJ.—The question with which we have to deal in this appeal is whether a decree of a Revenue Court is property which is liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree of a Civil Court. The Subordinate Judge [406] of Jaunpur relying on the precedent in the case of Onkar Singh v. Bhup Singh (1) held that the decree of a Revenue Court did not fall within the provisions of s. 273 of the Code of Civil Procedure. He accordingly upheld the objection which had been addressed to him that the decree could not be attached and sold by the Civil Court at all, and discharged an injunction which he had addressed to the Revenue Court of Jaunpur. The learned counsel for the appellants asks us to hold that a decree of a Revenue Court is liable to attachment and sale under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, on the ground that the words in s. 273, namely, a "decree for money passed by any other Court" are wide enough to include decrees of Revenue Courts. We are unable to follow him in this contention. The definition given to the word "decree" in s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure is one which directs that subject to anything repugnant in the subject or context, the word "decree" in the Code means the formal expression of an adjudication upon any right, claim, or defence set up in a Civil Court. It is noticeable that in the corresponding definition in Act No. X of 1877, the word "civil," which is introduced in the Act of 1882, found no place. There is nothing in s. 273 repugnant in the subject or context to the definition of "decree" in s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and it must, therefore, be read as it stands into that section. The learned counsel, however, argued that it did not follow that if s. 273 did not apply, decrees of the Revenue Courts were exempted from the general provision under which property was liable to attachment and sale. He relied upon the provisions of s. 266, and contended that decrees of the Revenue Courts were certainly covered either by the word "debt" or by the words "all other saleable property, moveable or immoveable, belonging to the judgment-debtor, or over which or the profits of which he has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit." In this view he is certainly supported by the precedent in the case of Prince [407] Gholam Mohamed v. Indra Chand Jahuri (2), in which it was held that a decree of a Court falls within the description of "other property." The argument in reply for the other side to the effect that had the Legislature intended decrees to be property liable to attachment and sale it would certainly have mentioned them in s. 266 is met at once by the observation that the provisions of s. 273 and of similar section leave no doubt whatever but that it was intended that decrees should be liable to attachment. It was further argued that it had been held by this Court in Full Bench in the case of Takiya Begam v. Siraj-ud-daula (3) and in an early case Sultan Kuar v. Gulzari Lal (4) that a decree for money could not be sold in execution. On looking into these cases we find that all that was held there was that a special provision had been made by s. 273 for 1899

JUNE 9.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 405=

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 15

(1) 16 A. 496.

(3) 5 A.W.N. (1885) 123.

(2) 7 B.L.R. 318.

(4) 2 A. 290.

1899
JUNE 9
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 405 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 157.

dealing with decrees which had been attached in execution, such decrees could not be sold. We have, however, held that in this case s. 273 does not apply, and therefore the ratio decidendi of the cases relied on has no application here. The learned counsel for the appellants asks us to treat the decree as if it fell within the provisions of s. 272. This section would have been applicable had the decree of the Revenue Court been executed and the proceeds deposited in Court. So far as we know, matters have not reached this stage. The decree, while still a decree, appears to us to stand in the position of an ordinary debt, to be dealt with under the provisions of s. 268 of the Code of Civil Procedure. We decree this appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below, and remand the case to the Court below with directions to restore the application for execution to the file of pending applications, and to deal with it according to law. The appellants will have the costs of this appeal. The costs of the first Court will abide the result.

Appeal decreed and case remanded.

21 A. 408 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 149.

[408] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

PARSOTAM SARAN (Plaintiff) v. SANEHI LAL (Defendant),*
[13th June, 1899.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 52—Lis pendens—Transfer pendente lite—Time when a suit becomes contentious.

Held, that a suit becomes a 'contentious suit' within the meaning of s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, at the time when the summons is served on the defendant. Kadhasyam Mohapatra v. Situ Panda (1); and Abboy v. Annamalai (2) followed.

[Not F., 31 B. 393 = 9 Bom. L.R. 530; Doubtful, 28 A. 196 (198) = A.W.N. (1905) 250; R., 29 A. 339 (345) (P.C.) = 4 A.L.J. 329 = 9 Bom. L.R. 656 = 5 C.L.J. 563 = 11 C.W.N. 561 = 17 M.L.J. 263 = 34 I.A. 102.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri (for whom Babu Harendra Krishna Mukerjee), for the appellant.

Mr. Abdul Majid, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C.J., and BANERJI, J.—This was a suit for sale of mortgaged property. The defendant-respondent was the purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree obtained by him upon a prior unregistered mortgage. The plaintiff's mortgage was a registered one, and it is found that he had no notice of the prior unregistered mortgage of the defendant-respondent. He is therefore prima facie entitled to priority for his mortgage and to enforce it against the property in the hands of the respondent. The respondent resists the claim upon the ground that the * Second Appeal No. 65 of 1897, from a decree of Pandit Raj Nath Shaib, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated 7th December 1896, reversing a decree of Munshi Gokal Prasad, Munsif of Moradabad, dated the 4th September 1896.

(1) 15 C. 647.

(2) 12 M. 180.

plaintiff-appellant's mortgage was executed pending the suit upon the prior unregistered mortgage, and that having regard to s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, the property could not, pending that suit, be dealt with by the mortgagor so as to affect the rights which the respondent obtained under the decree subsequently passed upon his mortgage, and in execution of which he purchased the property. The respondent's suit was instituted on the 17th of April, 1893. The plaintiff's mortgage was executed on the 20th of April, 1893, that is, pending the respondent's suit. It is alleged on behalf of the plaintiff that at the time of the execution of the mortgage of the 20th of April, 1893, no summons had been [409] served in the present respondent's suit upon the mortgagor, the defendant in that suit, and consequently, having regard to the ruling of the Calcutta High Court in Radhasyam Mohapatra v. Sibupanda (1) and of the Madras High Court in Abboy v. Annamalai (2) the mortgage was made before the suit became contentious, and therefore was not affected by the rule contained in s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act. We are prepared to follow the rulings in question, to which there is nothing contrary in any of the decisions of this Court. There is, however, no finding as to the date of the service of summons in the present respondent's suit. We must have such finding before we can dispose of this appeal. We therefore refer the following issue to the lower appellate Court under s. 566 of the Code of Civil Procedure:—On what date was the summons served upon the defendant mortgagor in the suit brought by the present respondent upon his mortgage of the 24th November, 1891? The lower appellate Court may take such evidence as it may deem necessary for determination of this issue. Upon the return of the finding ten days will be allowed for objections.

1899
JUNE 13.
—
APPELLATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 409 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 149.

Issue referred.

21 A. 409 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 150.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Burkitt.

ABDUS SAMAD KHAN AND OTHERS (Applicants) v. ABDUR RAZZAQ KHAN (Opposite Party).^{*} [14th June, 1899.]

Act No. IV of 1893 (Partition Act), s. 10—Partition—Offer by a party to a partition suit of compensation—Decree in partition suit when final—Civil Procedure Code, s. 396.

Held, that s. 10 of Act No. IV of 1893 would apply to a suit for partition in the stage where an interlocutory decree for partition had been made, but that decree had not become final by the Court's acceptance of the lots prepared by the officer appointed for that purpose. Shah Muhammad Khan v. Hanwant Singh (3) and Zubaida Jan v. Muhammad Tareb (4) referred to.

[F., 7 Ind. Cas. 436]

[410] THE plaintiff in this case sued the defendants for partition of certain immoveable property, and obtained an interlocutory decree declaring him to be entitled to possession of a certain share. He applied, framing ^{*} Second Appeal, No. 3 of 1899, from a decree of Babu Nilmadhab Roy, Judge of Small Cause Court, with powers of Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore, dated the 28th September 1898, confirming a decree of Babu Banke Behari Lal, Munsif of Fatehpur, dated the 2nd July 1898.

(1) 15 C. 647.

(3) 20 A. 311.

(2) 12 M. 180.

(4) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 99.

1899
JUNE 14.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 409=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 150.

his application as an application for execution of the decree, to be put into possession of a certain share of the property in suit. To this application the defendants filed several objections and, as regards a portion of the property, consisting of houses, asked that, instead of their being partitioned, he might be allowed to pay compensation to the plaintiff. The plaintiff declined to accept compensation, and the Court (Munsif of Fatehpur) held on this point that Act No. IV of 1893 did not apply where a decree had been passed. The defendants appealed to the Subordinate Judge who dismissed the appeal. The Subordinate Judge as to the defendants' plea under Act No. IV of 1893, recorded the following order:—"In this case a decree for partition has already been passed. A Court executing the decree is bound by its terms. No additions or alterations can be made in it. S. 2 of Act No. IV of 1893 cannot apply to this suit. The suit is no longer pending. A decree has already been passed."

The defendants appealed to the High Court.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the appellants.

Mr. Abdul Majid, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J.—The decision of the Subordinate Judge in this case is entirely wrong, and if the Subordinate Judge had taken the trouble of reading the cases of Shah Muhammad Khan v. Hanwant Singh (1), and the subsequent case of Zubaida Jan v. Muhammad Taieb (2), both of which were published some months before the judgment under appeal, he would have avoided falling into the mistake he has made in this case. The Subordinate Judge evidently is under the impression that a final decree in this partition case has been passed, in that he is wrong. A final decree has not been passed. As explained in the two cases referred to above, a decree declaring the rights of the parties, i. e., a decree declaring that the applicant for partition is entitled on partition, [411] to a specific share in certain immoveable property is all that has been done up to the present. The application now made to the Court has been wrongly made as an application for execution of that decree, and has been treated by the Court as an application for execution. The application ought to have been treated as an application to the Court to go on with and complete the decree declaring the rights of the parties by appointing an amin to prepare a scheme of partition for approval by the Court, as explained in the two cases mentioned above. It is only after a decree has been made by the Court expressing its approval of the partition scheme that there is any decree capable of execution as a partition decree. The Court below was therefore wrong in holding that the proceedings before it were proceedings in execution, and that it could do nothing more in the case. The present appeal is concerned with the refusal of the Courts below to accede to an application made under the provisions of Act No. IV of 1893. Under s. 10 of the Act the application should have been entertained by the Court. This suit no doubt was instituted before the Act came into force, but s. 10 of the Act provides that the Act shall apply to suits instituted before the commencement of the Act in which no scheme for the partition of the property has been finally approved by the Court. In this case no such scheme has been approved, for the very good reason that, the Court not yet having drawn up the second portion of its decree, no such scheme has ever been prepared or submitted for its approval. The decision of the lower appellate Court is wrong, and badly wrong, from beginning to end.

(1) 20 A. 311.

(2) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 99.

I allow this appeal. I set aside with costs, the decree of the lower Court, and I remand the case to that Court for decision on the merits.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

1899
JUNE 14.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 412 (P.C.)=1 Bom. L. R. 311=3 C.W.N. 454=26 I.A. 153=7 Sar. P.C.J. 474· 21 A. 409=

[412] PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT :

Lords Hobhouse, Macnaghten and Morris, and Sir Richard Couch.

[On appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces at Allahabad.]

19 A.W.N.
(1899) 150.

BHAGWAN SINGH AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. BHAGWAN SINGH, MINOR, AND OTHERS (Defendants).

[18th and 22nd November, 1898 and 11th March, 1899.]

Hindu law—Invalidity of the adoption of a sister's son, mother's sister's son, and of a daughter's son.

The adoption of a mother's sister's son by a Hindu of any of the three regenerate classes, Brahman, Kshatriya, and Vaisiya, equally with the adoption of a daughter's son or a sister's son, is contrary to law and void. The ancient texts condemning such adoptions are not only admonitions, but have been judicially decided to be prohibitions of law for such a length of time that it is now not competent to a Court to treat them as open to question in this respect.

The judgment in The Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga Sathupathy (1) gives no countenance to the conclusion that in order to bring a case under any rule of law, laid down by recognised authority for Hindus generally, evidence must be given of actual events to show that in point of fact the people subject to that general law regulate their lives by it.

[F., 24 A. 195 (197)=22 A.W.N. (1902) 10; 28 A. 488 (P.C.)=3 A.L.J. 415=8 Bom. L. R. 402=3 C.L.J. 594=10 C.W.N. 730=1 M.L.T. 171=33 I.A. 97; 7 Ind. Cas. 418; R., 29 A. 495=4 A.L.J. 407=A.W.N. (1907) 121; 32 B. 619=10 Bom. L.R. 948; 34 B. 491 (495)=11 Bom. L.R. 1172=4 Ind. Cas. 277; 4 Bom. L.R. 140; 113 P.L.R. 1908=53 P.W.R. 1908; 1 P.L.R. 1909=68 P.R. 1909=58 P.W.R. 1909=2 Ind. Cas. 975; 88 P.R. 1912=218 P.L.R. 1912=230 P.W.R. 1912=17 Ind. Cas. 36 (37); D., 27 A. 417=2 A.L.J. 36=A.W.N. (1905) 20; 107 P.L. R. 1901]

APPEAL from a decree (27th June 1895) of the High Court, reversing a decree (23rd September 1892) of the Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore, and remanding the suit under s. 562, Civil Procedure, for trial on the merits.

The suit out of which this appeal arose was brought by the appellants, zamindars of zilla Cawnpore, on the 3rd May 1892. They claimed as reversioners entitled to the estate of Madho Singh, who died childless on the 27th July, 1890, leaving the second defendant his widow, and having on the 23rd June of that year adopted the first defendant, a minor. Their claim was for a declaration that the alleged adoption of the appellant by Madho Singh was void and ineffectual on the ground that the boy, first defendant and now first respondent, was the son of the sister of Madho Singh's mother.

The parties were Thakurs, members of the regenerate class of Kshatriyas. It was not alleged that this adoption was valid by any custom

(1) 12 M. I.A. 397 (437).

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 412
(P.C.)=1
Bom. L. R.
311=8
C.W.N. 454=
26 I.A. 153=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
474.

prevailing in the caste or in the locality to which the [413] parties belonged. The question on this appeal was whether with reference to the Hindu law governing adoption it was valid; and it was not disputed, but conceded in the appellate Court below, that the principles which applied to the question of the adoption of a daughter's son, or of a sister's son or of a mother's sister's son, applied equally to the adoption of a son of any of the three. As regarded the above there was no divergence between the Mitakshara school and the other schools of Hindu Law, the rules affecting the present question being alike applicable in the different schools. This was stated in the judgment of Banerji, J.; and also that there was no difference as regarded the application of these rules between Brahmans, Kshatriyas, and Vaisiyas. The material defence was that the prohibition in the Hindu law was "merely directory." Its breach was reprehensible, but it was not such that the adoption would be invalidated when once made.

The Subordinate Judge decreed in favour of the plaintiffs on the ground that the adoption was altogether illegal. He referred to Parbati v. Sundar (1).

In appeal the question was referred by the Division Bench (Tyrrell and Knox, JJ.) for the opinion of the Full Bench (Edge, C. J., Knox, Blair, Banerji, Burkitt, and Aikman, JJ.),—whether the adoption, by a Hindu, a Kshatriya, of one of the three regenerate classes, subject to the law of the Mitakshara, of the son of his mother's sister, was, according to that law, valid or invalid. The referring order stated that it was not alleged that the adoption was valid according to any special custom prevailing in the caste or in the locality, to which the parties belonged.

The Full Bench delivered their judgments on the 27th June 1895. Edge, C.J., and Knox, Blair and Burkitt, JJ., were of opinion that the adoption in question was not shown to be "prohibited or illegal by the law of the Benares school, which applies in these Provinces and to the parties," and held that the adoption was not prohibited in the sense of its being illegal and void.

[414] On the other hand, Banerji and Aikman, JJ., considered that the adoption of a mother's sister's son was contrary to the Hindu law applicable to the case, and had not been shown to be sanctioned by any special usage of the caste to which that son belonged. The two principal judgments were those of the Chief Justice and of Banerji, J., and all the judgments are reported in the Indian Law Reports, 17 All., 294.

All were agreed that amongst Sudras such an adoption was permissible. But that in regard to its prohibition, if that were absolute, Brahmans, Kshatriyas and Vaisiyas, or the three twice-born classes, were subject to it. And that the Dattaka Mimamsa and the Dattaka Chandrika, both contained the injunction against it.

Mr. H. Cowell for the appellant argued that the judgments of the minority of the Full Bench were right. The prohibition of the adoption of a sister's son, and of the sons of other female relations of the adopter admitted to be in the like case had been established, as applicable to three regenerate classes, under early texts in the written Hindu law, repeated by the Commentators, and accepted by the Courts of law. The prohibition was acknowledged by all the different schools. The approval of the Judicial Committee had been intimated. The exceptions were in regard to proved custom to the contrary. The general rule had been enforced ever since 1815, when such an adoption had been contested. In Bengal the first decision to that effect was in Kora Shunko Takoor v. Beebee Munee (1). Afterwards in the North-West came Shib Lall v. Bishumber (2); Musammatt Battas Kuar v. Lachman Singh (3); Parbati v. Sundar (4). The following cases appeared to be contrary, but their effect could be explained away. The first was Ramchunder Chatterjea v. Sumboo Chunder Chatterjea (5), a case in which the doctrine laid down was soon overruled, as shown in Sir F. Macnaghten's Consid. on Hind. L. 166, 168. The next was in 1808, case No. 12 in Sir W. Macnaghten's 2 Hind. L. 85, regarded as a case in which the [415] parties were Sudras. The third was in 1837, the case of an adopted son in the Kritrima form, who was the son of the adopter's sister (6).

In Madras there were Narasammal v. Bala Rama Chariu patia (7); Jivani Bhai v. Jivu Bhai (8); Gopalayyan v. Raghupatiayyan (9); Minakshi v. Ramanada (10); the decision of a Full Bench. Two cases allowing the adoption in question, Eranjoli Illath Vishnu Nambudri v. Eranjoli Illath Krishnan Nambudri (11) and Vayidinada v. Appu (12) were decided upon proof of a special custom in favour of it. The cases in Bombay were Haebut Rao Mankur v. Gobind Rao Mankur (13); Gopal Narhar Safray v. Hanmant Ganesh Safray (14); Bhargirthi Bai v. Radha Bai (15). Afterwards came the Full Bench decision in Waman Raghupati Bova v. Krishnaji Kashiraj Bova (16). Looking to the Calcutta decisions would be found Rajendro Narain Lahoree v. Saroda Soonduree Debee (17); and Uma Sunker Moitro v. Kali Komul Mozumdar (18); showing the two Mimamsas to be highly esteemed.

No judgment upon the question, raised directly on appeal, had been passed by the Judicial Committee yet; but there was a distinct intimation of their opinion upon the point in Sundar v. Parbati (19), where the Committee, had it been necessary to determine it, would have had "probably" little difficulty in accepting the opinion that a Brahman cannot lawfully "adopt his sister's son." This point was treated as settled in Lala Narain Das v. Lala Ramanuj Dayal (20). He showed that in Ramalinga Pillai v. Sadasiva Pillai (21), where the adoption had been admitted, the question had arisen among Sudras, and not, as the report stated, among Vaisiyas, and referred to Jivani Bhai v. Jiva Bhai (22).

[416] Even if the question should be treated as an open one, and his main argument was that it was not, after so many years of decision against such adoptions, the result left was that the whole controversy rested upon the effect of the Dattaka Mimamsa, s. II, paras. 2, 74, 91, 94, 107, 108, and s. V, paras. 16, 20; and of the Dattaka Chandrika, s. I, paras. 11, 17, and s. II, paras. 7, 8. The authority of Sakala was there given. On this there were the writings of Mr. Mandlik, pp. 8, 13 and 15; and of West and Buhler, p. 28. For the text of Saunaka, he referred to

1899

MARCH 11.

—

PRIVY

COUNCIL.

—

21 A. 412

(P.C.) = 1

Bom. L. R.

311 = 3

C.W.N. 454 =

26 I.A. 153 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

474.

(1) (1815) 1 Morley Dig. No. 59, 18.

(3) 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. 117.

(5) (1810) 1 Morley Dig. No. 58, 18.

(7) 1 M. H. C. R. 420.

(9) 7 M. H. C. R. 250.

(11) 7 M. 3.

(13) (1821) 2 Borrodaile Rep. 106.

(15) 3 B. 298.

(17) 15 W. R. 548.

(19) 16 I. A. 186 = 12 A. 51.

(21) 9 M. I. A. 510.

(2) (1866) S.D.A.N.W.P. 25.

(4) 8 A. 1.

(6) (1837) 1 Morley Dig. No. 61, 19.

(8) 2 M. H. C. R. 462.

(10) 11 M. 49.

(12) 9 M. 44.

(14) 3 B. 273.

(16) 14 B. 249.

(18) 6 C. 256.

(20) 25 I. A. 46 (52) = 20 A. 209.

(22) (1822) 3 Select Cas. 144 (150).

1899 Manu, Instit. Chapter III, v. 16. And on this he cited Ooman Dutt v. Kunhaya Singh (1). Sakala's text was conclusive, even applying Jaimini's rule that giving a reason in the text was an indication of an admonition not amounting to law. The text of Saunaka had not been shown to have been misconstrued by the authors of the Mimamsas. In regard to the only authority suggested as supporting the disregard of the rule, that of Yama, he referred to that part of the judgment of Banerji, J., which stated that the alleged text was not found in the Yama Smriti or Sanhita; or other Dharma Shastra. He referred to the Sarasvati Vilasa, translated by Foulkes, edition of 1881, which, he said, did not contain this text. He referred also to Mandlik, p. 483, and to the Tagore law lectures for 1888, p. 334, by the Shastri, Golap Chandra Sircar. Their criticisms, he argued, could not be altogether accepted. The two Mimamsas there criticized were considered in all the Schools of Hindu law, and all over India, to be of great authority although comparatively modern. The general opinion of the Dattaka Mimamsa might be taken to be the same as that expressed in its favour by Sir F.W. and Sir W. H., Macraghten, by Colebrooke, Sutherland and Strange, and by many native Judges in their judgments. Eight treatises written by native authors had been produced in the Court below supporting the opinion that the precept in the Shastras was a complete and legal prohibition against adopting a sister's son. And he referred to Rangama v. Atchama (2); and The Collector [417] of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga Sathupathy (3); as showing that the Dattaka Mimamsa was a work to which weight was attributed.

He submitted that no reason had been assigned for disregarding the text of Sakala: that no valid reason had been given for holding the text of Saunaka to have been misconstrued by Nanda Pandita: that the text of Yama, as to the point, had not been cited by any commentator, or shown to have been adopted by any school of Hindu law: and that no sufficient reason had been given for refusing to accept the authority of the Dattaka Mimamsa and the Dattaka Chandrika, which had been hitherto everywhere recognised.

Afterwards, on the 11th March, 1899, their Lordships' judgment was delivered by :—

JUDGMENT.

LORD HOBHOUSE.—There are no facts in dispute in this case. The plaintiffs now appellants brought the suit to establish their title as reversionary heirs of Madho Singh as against the first defendant, a boy who was adopted by him in the Dattaka form. The boy is the natural son of Madho's mothers' sister. The sole question is whether the adoption of such a relation is allowed by Hindu law. The Subordinate Judge held that it is not allowed. A Full Bench of six Judges of the High Court has decided that it is allowed. Four judges, viz., Chief Justice Edge, and Justices Knox, Blair and Burkitt being of that opinion against Justices Banerji and Aikman who are of the contrary opinion. Their Lordships are under the disadvantage of hearing the case without any help from the respondents who have not appeared. But this disadvantage is much lessened by the elaborate fulness of the reasons assigned by Chief Justice Edge for the conclusion which he reached in favour of the respondent.

(1) (1822) 3 Sel. Rep. 201=6 I. D. (O.S.) 820.

(2) 4 M.I.A. 1.

(3) 12 M.I.A. 397 (437).

The question is of the same nature as that which has just been disposed of in the preceding cases from Madras and Allahabad. But it depends upon a different set of texts and the course of decision in India has been very different. It is agreed [418] on all hands that the prohibition contended for extends only to the three twice-born classes, and not to the most numerous class of all, the Sudras. The parties here are Kshatriyas governed by the Benares school of law. It is also agreed that, as regards capability to be adopted, the sons of sisters, sons of daughters, and sons of maternal aunts, stand on the same footing, and that the authorities which apply to any of these classes apply to all.

The oldest original texts bearing on the point are contained in the Dattaka Chandrika. In s. I, para. 11 of that work the author quotes the ancient sage Sakala to the following effect. After mentioning certain relatives to whom preference should be given in adoption among the regenerate tribes, he says :—" If such exist not, let him adopt one born in another family, except a daughter's son and a sister's son and the son of the mother's sister."

In para. 17 of the same section the same work quotes the sage Saunaka who, after pointing out from what classes adoptions should be made, says :—" But a daughter's son and a sister's son are affiliated by Sudras. For the three superior tribes a sister's son is nowhere mentioned as a son."

In s. II, paras. 7 and 8, after quoting from Saunaka the expression that the adopted boy should bear the reflection of a son, the author adds :—" The resemblance of a son, or in other words the capability to have been begotten by the adopter, through appointment and so forth."

Nanda Pandita, the author of the Dattaka Mimamsa, writing in the early part of the 17th century, some centuries later than the conjectured date of the Dattaka Chandrika, gives the same quotations from Sakala and Saunaka and similar comments upon them. (S. II, arts. 74, 107, 108; s. V, arts. 16 to 20.)

Their Lordships have mentioned in the prior adoption cases the views of Mr. Justice Knox as to the authority of the two Dattaka treatises just quoted. In the present case the learned Chief Justice Edge takes even more disparaging views of their [419] authority; denying, if their Lordships rightly understand him, that these works have been recognised as any authority at all in the Benares school of law. If there were anything to show that in the Benares school of law these works had been excluded or rejected, that would have to be considered. But their authority has been affirmed as part of the general Hindu law, founded on the Smritis as the source from whence all schools of Hindu law derive their precepts. In Doctor Jolly's Tagore Lecture of 1883 that learned writer says :—" The Dattaka Mimamsa and Dattaka Chandrika have furnished almost exclusively the scanty basis on which the modern law of adoption has been based." Both works have been received in Courts of Law including this Board as high authority. In Rangama v. Atchama (1) Lord Kingsdown says: "they enjoy, as we understand, the highest reputation throughout India." In 12 Moore, p. 437, Sir James Colvile quotes, with assent, the opinion of Sir William Macnaghten, that both works are respected all over India, that when they

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 412
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L. R.
311 = 3
C.W.N. 454 =
26 I.A. 153 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
474.

(1) 4 M.I.A. 97.

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 412
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L. R.
311 = 3
C.W.N. 454 =
26 I.A. 153 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
474.

differ the Chandrika is adhered to in Bengal and by the Southern Jurists, while the Mimamsa is held to be an infallible guide in the Provinces of Mithila and Benares. To call it infallible is too strong an expression, and the estimates of Sutherland of West and Buhler seem nearer the true mark; but it is clear that both works must be accepted as bearing high authority for so long a time that they have become embedded in the general law.

The learned Chief Justice then objects that the texts of the two Rishis are detached from their context and so are rendered of no value; and that as regards Sakala there is no information where the writer of the Chandrika obtained his text, and that its genuineness is doubtful. This objection is strengthened by the fact that the greatest of the sages do not mention any such prohibition; neither Manu nor Vashistha nor Yajnavalkya nor Narada; while one ancient sage called the holy Yama, expressly asserts the right to adopt a sister's son. Those objections must [420] receive the same answer. It may be true, though it is impossible now to say, that the Dattaka Chandrika is the sole authority for the texts there quoted and afterwards copied by Nanda Pandita; but it still remains the fact that the texts have been so quoted for several centuries and have so been received into the body of Hindu Law.

Taking then the texts as they are given, and adding to them such weight as the commentators possess, what is enjoined by them? The learned Chief Justice points out that Saunaka may mean a legal prohibition, or a moral admonition, or merely to state a fact, or to indicate a preference for daughters' and sisters' sons among Sudras. Certainly, if the question were new, the learned Judge's argument would have to be very carefully weighed before it could be rejected. Much of the reasoning which has prevailed with their Lordships in the prior cases would apply to this case; and on some points, such as the silence of other great law-givers and the existence of a sacred text in an opposite sense, with greater force. But their Lordships find an antecedent difficulty; for they have to consider whether the present question can be treated as an open one.

It is not necessary to state in detail the course of decisions in India, because there is hardly any conflict in them and they are fully stated in the judgments below.* In 1808 there was a decision on a case from Mirzapur in favour of the validity of these disputed adoptions; but it is probable that the parties were Sudras, as Sir William Macnaghten thought they were. There was a decision in 1810 between Brahmans where an adoption of a sister's son was held valid. But Sir Francis Macnaghten tells us that it was overruled in some subsequent proceeding which is not specified. In every other case that has since occurred, when the question has arisen between members of the three regenerate classes, and the adoption has been in the Dattaka form, the decision has been against its validity. The cases have occurred in all parts of India and all the High Courts have agreed. In making this general statement their Lordships have not overlooked the case decided [421] by the Bombay High Court in 1867 (1). Chief Justice Edge considers that, though the parties really were Sudras, the learned Judges thought they belonged to one of the twice-born classes, and so lent their authority to an adoption of a mother's sister's son among one of those classes.

* 17 A. 294.

(1) 4 B.H.C.R. 130.

But though there was some argument as to the true caste, their Lordships find nothing in the judgment to show that the Judges thought the caste to be other than it really was. Nor was the decision treated as a standing in the way of a subsequent decision in 1879* by the same High Court, which affirmed the invalidity of such marriages in the regenerate classes.

The arguments by which the learned Chief Justice seeks to withdraw this case from so strong a current of decision rest entirely on the peculiarity which in his opinion attaches to the Benares school of law. He does indeed subject the decided cases to a minute and able examination with a view of ascertaining the precise bearing of each and of attenuating its force. But the general result at which he arrives does not substantially vary from that which is arrived at by the minority of the Court, and which is above stated. That being so, he puts the case in this way :—

“The parties in this case are Kshatriyas and are governed by the Benares school of Hindu law. As Kshatriyas they belong to one of the three regenerate classes of Hindus. What we have to ascertain is, does the Hindu law, as accepted by the Benares school, prohibit the adoption by a Kshatriya of the son of his mother's sister, in the sense of making such an adoption illegal and void.

“It has not been suggested that there is any evidence in this suit of any usage in these provinces by which the adoption in the Dattaka form of the son of a sister of the mother of the adopter, or of his sister's son or of his daughter's son, amongst any of the three regenerate classes is either recognised as valid or prohibited as illegal. Neither side in this case has pleaded or relied upon any custom or usage.”

[422] The learned Chief Justice then ties the plaintiffs down to the obligation of showing a custom to prohibit the adoptions in question; and on each decided case he puts the test question whether it is founded on proof of such a custom among the regenerate classes governed by the Benares school of law. In this position he considers that he is supported by a passage in the judgment of this Board delivered by Sir James Colville in the case of the Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga (1). It is as follows :—“The duty, therefore, of a European Judge who is under the obligation to administer Hindu law is not so much to inquire whether a disputed doctrine is fairly deducible from the earliest authorities as whether it has been received by the particular school which governs the district with which he has to deal, and has there been sanctioned by usage. For under the Hindu system of law clear proof of usage will outweigh the written text of the law.” The principle deduced by the learned Chief Justice from this passage and applied to the present case would have very far-reaching consequences; and in their Lordships' opinion it is not a sound principle, nor is it properly deducible from the language of this Board.

In that judgment Sir James Colville was dealing with the question whether a widow could adopt a son to her husband without his express authority. That is a point in the law of adoption on which legal authorities in different parts of India, all starting from the same sacred texts, have branched off into an extraordinary variety of conclusions; each marked enough and prevalent enough in its own sphere to be ascribed to 1899

MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 412
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L. R.
311 = 3
C.W.N. 454 =
26 I.A. 153 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
474.

* 3 B. 273.

(1) 12 M. I. A. 397 (436).

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 412
(P.C.)=1
Bom. L. R.
311=3
C.W.N. 454=
26 I.A. 153=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
474.

some recognised school of law. Sir James Colville addresses himself first to show how these schools came into being, and secondly, to specify books of the highest authority in them. It is in the course of this exposition that the sentences just quoted occur, as also the opinion before quoted with reference to the authority of the Dattaka Chandrika and of the work of Nanda Pandita. The decision of the Board was that the power claimed for the widow was [423] conferred on her by the school of law dominant in the Dravida country from whence the appeal came. But that law was ascertained by the usual methods of ascertaining general law; by reference to authoritative text books, to judicial decisions, and to the opinions of pandits. These authorities were found to be sufficient proof of the general Hindu law prevailing over large tracts of country and populous communities. Anybody living among them must be taken to fall under those general rules of law unless he could show some valid local, tribal, or family custom to the contrary. It was necessary for this Board to refer to the differences of schools of law, because the authorities of the recognised Bengal school denied the power which those of Southern India affirmed. The whole passage is framed with reference to the fact that different schools were found to take different views of the general law on the point before the Board. But their judgment gives no countenance to the conclusion that in order to bring a case under any rule of law laid down by recognised authority for Hindus generally, evidence must be given of actual events to show that in point of fact the people subject to that general law regulate their lives by it. Special customs may be pleaded by way of exception, which it is proper to prove by evidence of what actually is done. In this case the learned Chief Justice tells us that there is no suggestion of a special custom. That being so he seems to have inverted the processes by which law is ascertained.

The rule of law asserted by the plaintiffs in this case is derived in the first place from the sacred texts which underlie all Hindu law; and, secondly, from books of high authority in the Benares school as well as in others. It has been affirmed by Courts of Justice in all parts of India and in many law suits in which the parties were subject to the law of the Mitakshara, which is of the highest authority in the Benares school. It has been so affirmed and applied in general terms, and not as confined to a particular school. It is not shown or even asserted that there is any thing peculiar in the Benares school to make this rule [424] inconsistent with its principles. It seems to their Lordships that to put one who asserts a rule of law under the necessity of proving that in point of fact the community living under the system of which it forms part is acting upon it, or defeat him by assertions that it has not been universally accepted or acted on, would go far to deny the existence of any general Hindu law, and to disregard the broad foundations which are common to all schools, though divergencies have grown out of them.

Their Lordships do not inquire whether the views so earnestly maintained by the learned Chief Justice upon the construction of the disputed texts might have been successfully maintained at the beginning of this century. For 80 or 90 years there has been a steady current of authority one way, in all parts of India. It has been decided that the precepts condemning adoptions such as the one made in this case are not monitory only, but are positive prohibitions, and that their effect is to make such adoptions wholly void. That has been settled in such a way and for such a length of time as to make it incompetent to a Court of Justice to treat the question now as an open one. Their Lordships will humbly advise Her Majesty to reverse the decree appealed from, and to restore that of the Subordinate Judge, with costs in both Courts. The respondents must also pay the costs of this appeal.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the appellants:—Messrs. Ranken, Ford, Ford and Chester.

21 A. 425 (F.B.) = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 153.

[425] FULL BENCH.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

RAM DAYAL (Defendant) v. MADAN MOHAN LAL (Plaintiff).^{*}
[29th May, 1899.]

Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13, Expl. III—Suit for possession of land and mesne profits past and future—Future mesne profits not granted—Subsequent suit for such future mesne profits not barred.

Held that where a suit has been brought for possession of immoveable property and for mesne profits both before and after suit, the mere omission of the Court to adjudicate upon the claim for future mesne profits will not, by reason of s. 13, Expl. III, of the Code of Civil Procedure, operate as a bar to a subsequent suit for mesne profits accruing due after the institution of the former suit. Mon Mohun Sirkar v. The Secretary of State for India in Council (1), followed. Jiban Das Oswal v. Durga Pershad Adhikari (2); Pratab Chandra Burua v. Rani Swarnamayi (3); Julius v. The Bishop of Oxford (4); In re Baker (5); Bhivray v. Sitaram (6) and Thyila Kandi Ummatha v. Thyila Kandi Cheria Kunhamed (7), referred to; Ramabhadra v. Jagannatha (8), discussed, Narain Das v. Khan Singh (9) overruled.

[F., 32 C. 118 (122); R., 2 N.L.R. 91 (92); D., 30 A. 225 = 5 A.L.J. 192 = A.W.N. (1908) 96; 25 B. 115 (125, 126), 34 C. 223 = 5 C.L.J. 192 (200).]

THIS was a suit for the recovery of mesne profits of certain zamindari property for the year 1301 Fasli, i.e., from the 26th of September 1893 to the 14th of September 1894.

The facts of the case are as follows:—

The plaintiff had brought a previous suit against the same defendant on the 5th of December 1893 claiming possession of a share of zamindari property and of a dwelling-house. He also claimed mesne profits as follows,—first, mesne profits for 1298 to 1300 Fasli, both years inclusive, and, secondly, future mesne profits, that is, mesne profits from the date of the institution of the suit up to the date when possession of the property should be [426] delivered to him. The decree in that suit was passed on the 6th of June 1894. It awarded to the plaintiff possession of both the properties claimed, and awarded mesne profits up to the 25th September 1893. Then followed the words:—“The rest of the claim is dismissed.” The plaintiff subsequently filed the present suit claiming mesne profits subsequent to the 25th of September as stated above. The defendant

* Second Appeal No. 920 of 1896, from a decree of Babu Madho Das, Subordinate Judge of Bareilly, dated the 20th August 1896, confirming a decree of Pandit Girraj Kishor Dat, Munsif of Bareilly, dated the 27th June 1896.

(1) 17 C. 968.

(2) 21 C. 252.

(3) 4 B. L. R. 113.

(4) (1880) L. R. 5 App. Cas. 214.

(5) (1890) L. R. 44 Ch. D. 262.

(6) 19 B. 532.

(7) 4 M. 308.

(8) 14 M. 328.

(9) 4 A.W.N. (1884) 159.

1899

MARCH 11.

PRIVY

COUNCIL.

21 A. 412

(P.C.) = 1

Bom. L. R.

311 = 8

C.W.N. 454 =

26 I.A. 153 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

474.

1899
MAY 29.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 425
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 153.

resisted the suit on the ground that the claim for future mesne profits was barred by the operation of s. 13, Expl. III, of the Civil Procedure Code, the claim for future mesne profits in the former suit not having been dealt with, and therefore by implication having been refused. It should be noted, as stated hereafter in the judgment, that the order in the decree above quoted—"The rest of the claim is dismissed"—did not refer to the claim for future mesne profits but to a portion of the mesne profits claimed for a period before suit.

The Court of first instance (Munsif of Bareilly) overruled the defendant's plea of res judicata and gave judgment for the plaintiff, though for a sum less than that which he claimed. On appeal the lower appellate Court (Subordinate Judge) upheld the decree of the Munsif and dismissed the appeal. The defendant thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the appellant, contended that the present suit was barred by the rule of res judicata. In the former suit for possession between the same parties, the mesne profits between the date of suit and the date when possession of the property should be delivered to the plaintiff had been expressly claimed. The decree after giving certain reliefs went on to say:—"The rest of the claim be dismissed." This was an express refusal of the relief relating to future mesne profits. Even if it be not so, Expl. III to s. 13 would bar a claim like the present, because in the former suit it was a relief claimed in the plaint which was not granted by the decree and for the purposes of res judicata must be deemed to have been refused. This position is supported by a ruling of this Court [427] directly in point—Narain Das v. Khan Singh (1)—where the learned Judges held that Expl. III to s. 13, would bar a suit for mesne profits where in a former suit subsequent mesne profits had been asked for in the plaint and nothing was said about them in the decree. S. 211 and the last paragraph but one of s. 244 of the Code in order to make them consistent with Expl. III to s. 13 should be read as applying only to cases where the plaint does not claim mesne profits accruing after the institution of the suit. The same principle is also laid down in the case of Ramabhadra v. Jagannatha (2). When wasilat is claimed without further specification, it means mesne profits up to the date of delivery of possession, see Fakhir-ud-din Mahomed Ahsan Chowdhry v. Official Trustee of Bengal (3) also Puran Chand v. Roy Radha Kishen (4).

A contrary view has been taken in Mon Mohun Sirkar v. The Secretary of State for India in Council (5) and in Jiban Das Oswal v. Durga Pershad Adhikari (6). The latter of these cases has no bearing on the present case as there no future mesne profits were claimed. The ruling in I. L. R., 17 Calcutta, is a doubtful one. On general principles a suit for future mesne profits would lie in cases where the plaintiff simply asks for possession, but in cases where future mesne profits are claimed and the decree expressly refuses them or is silent with reference to them no subsequent suit will lie. See also Anund Chunder Pal v. Panchoo Lal Soobalah (7), Maxwell on the interpretation of statutes (2nd edition) p. 286, and Julius v. The Bishop of Oxford (8).

Mr. S. Sinha, for the respondent.

In the first place the clause in the decree—"the rest of the claim is dismissed,"—if construed in conformity with the judgment, clearly

(1) 4 A.W.N. (1884) 159.

(4) 19 C. 132.

(7) 14 W. R. (F.B.) 33 (36).

(2) 14 M. 328.

(5) 17 C. 968.

(8) (1880) L. R. 5 App. Cas. 214.

(3) 8 I. A. 197.

(6) 21 C. 252.

refers, not to any mesne profits after the date of the suit, [428] but to the mesne profits claimed for the period before suit in excess of the sum to which the Court, in the previous suit, considered the plaintiff to be entitled.

But even supposing that the clause refers, as contended by the other side, to the mesne profits that might have accrued after the date of suit, still the present suit cannot be held to be barred, as Expl. III to s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure can have no reference to a case of this kind. The case of Narain Das v. Khan Singh (1), relied upon by the appellants, does not lay down the law on the point correctly, and is in conflict with the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Mon Mohun Sirkar v. The Secretary of State for India in Council (2) and of the Madras High Court in Ramabhadra v. Jagannatha (3). The learned Judges who decided the case of Narain Das v. Khan Singh seem to have been led to hold as they have done, under the impression that but for their so holding there would be an inconsistency between ss. 211 and 244 (penultimate paragraph), and Expl. III to s. 13. That view, it is submitted, is not correct, on the ground—supported by the Calcutta and Madras cases above referred to—that the mesne profits after the date of the suit could not be said to form part of the plaintiff's cause of action, as he was not entitled to claim as a matter of right what had not accrued due at the date of the institution of the suit. In fact, had it not been for the provisions of s. 211, which enables a plaintiff to claim mesne profits which might accrue in the future, and the object of which is merely to avoid multiplicity of suits, it would not have been open to the plaintiff to claim future mesne profits at all.

Now s. 211 is not mandatory but merely an enabling and permissive section, which gives the Court only a discretionary power which it is free to exercise or not as it thinks fit, regard being had to the circumstances of each particular case. The case of Julius v. The Bishop of Oxford (4), relied upon by the [429] appellants, lays down that the party who contends that the power given to a Court by an enabling provision, such as the word "may" imports, is to be regarded as an imperative obligation should prove that contention. There is nothing to show that in enacting s. 211 the Legislature intended that the courts were not free to exercise their discretion in granting or refusing a relief claimed in the plaint as to future mesne profits. That being so, the dismissal of a claim for future mesne profits cannot be said to be barred by reason of Expl. III to s. 13, as the words "relief claimed" in the explanation can only be taken to apply to what has actually accrued to the plaintiff, that is, what the plaintiff could claim as a matter of right, as included in his cause of action, not to something which he could only claim as an appeal to the discretionary power of the Court, which might be granted or refused.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C.J.—The plaintiff in this case claimed a sum of money in respect of the mesne profits of a zamindari property for the year 1301 Fasli, that is to say, from the 26th September, 1893 to the 14th September, 1894. The suit was instituted in June 1896. In defence to the suit it was pleaded that inasmuch as the mesne profits claimed in the suit had 1899

MAY 29.
—
FULL BENCH.

21 A. 428
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 153.

(1) 4 A.W.N. (1884) 159.
(3) 14 M. 328.

(2) 17 C. 968.
(4) (1880) L. R. 5 App. Cas. 214.

1899
MAY 29.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 425
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 153.

been expressly claimed in a previous suit, and had not been allowed in that suit, the claim was barred as res judicata by virtue of Expl. III to s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That plea was overruled by both the lower Courts. It is again raised by the defendant in his Second Appeal to this Court. The only question which we have to decide is whether the Courts ought to have held the suit to be barred by s. 13 of the Code.

The former suit was brought by the same plaintiff against the same defendant on the 5th December, 1893. In the plaint the plaintiff claimed to recover possession of the same share of zamindari property, and of a dwelling-house. He also claimed mesne profits as follows—first, mesne profits for 1298 to 1300 Fasli both years inclusive; and secondly, future mesne profits that is, [430] mesne profits from the date of the institution of the suit up to the date when possession of the property should be delivered to him.

The decree in that suit was passed on the 6th June, 1894. It awarded possession to the plaintiff of both the properties claimed. As regards mesne profits, it awarded to the plaintiff a sum of Rs. 1,882-9-11, out of Rs. 3,089-10-10 which were claimed in the plaint as mesne profits for the Fasli years prior to the suit. That is, it awarded mesne profits up to the 25th September, 1893. Then followed the words—"The rest of the claim is dismissed." In the present suit the claim is for mesne profits for the year 1301 Fasli, that is, from the 26th September, 1893, to the 14th September, 1894. in other words. from the date up to which the decree in the first suit awarded mesne profits. The contention of the defendant is that as in the former suit the plaint included a prayer for future mesne profits subsequent to the institution of that suit and up to the date of delivery of possession, and as that claim must, in view of Expl. III to s. 13, be deemed to have been refused, the plaintiff cannot now claim any profits subsequent to the institution of that suit.

Before dealing with this contention I must again refer to the terms of the decree of the 6th June, 1894. The expression "the rest of the claim is dismissed" suggests at first sight that the dismissal expressly referred, and was intended to refer, to the claim for mesne profits after the institution of the suit. If it did so, then the prayer for such future profits was of course expressly refused. We are, however, entitled in construing the decree to look at the judgment, and when the judgment is looked at, I think it is clear that the Court in using the expression "the rest of the claim is dismissed" was referring, not to any mesne profits after suit, but to the mesne profits claimed for the period before suit in excess of the Rs. 1,882-9-11, which was all that the Court considered the plaintiff entitled to for that period. The judgment further shows that, for some unexplained reason the Court was not dealing at all with the claim for future mesne profits. It [431] either overlooked that claim or purposely refrained from dealing with it. However, if the argument of the learned advocate for the appellant is correct, the present claim is none the less barred by Expl. III to s. 13, because in the former suit it was a relief claimed in the plaint which was not expressly granted by the decree, and which, therefore, for the purpose of res judicata must be deemed to have been refused.

This case has been referred to a Full Bench for the purpose of considering a ruling of this Court which is directly in point, according to which the argument for the appellant would be correct. That is the case of Narain Das v. Khan Singh (1). In that case the learned Judges undoubtedly held that Expl. III to s. 13 would bar a suit for mesne profits where in a former suit subsequent mesne profits had been asked for in the plaint and nothing was said about them in the decree. They appear to have thought that s. 211 and the last paragraph but one of s. 244 of the Code, in order to make them consistent with Expl. III to s. 13, must be read as limited to cases where there is no prayer in the plaint for mesne profits accruing after the institution of the suit. The question is whether that view is right. The conclusion at which I have arrived is that Expl. III to s. 13 does not apply to a case like this. It is necessary to see what was the nature of the claim in the first suit to the mesne profits asked for accruing due after the institution of that suit. Those mesne profits formed no part of the cause of action on which the plaintiff came into Court. The cause of action on which he came into Court was the trespass committed by the withholding from him of the possession of land to which he was entitled, and the mesne profits corresponding to that cause of action were the profits appropriated by the defendant during the continuance of that trespass, that is to say, mesne profits up to and ending with the institution of the suit. In the absence of any specific provision in the Code, that is where his [432] claim would have had to stop, he could not in that suit have anticipated any cause of action which might subsequently have accrued to him by the continuance of the trespass, or claimed further mesne profits by way of damages for such subsequent trespass. The object of s. 211 was that, in order to avoid multiplicity of suits, a Court in a suit for recovery of possession of immoveable property yielding rent or other profit should be competent to provide in the decree, not only for the mesne profits for which the plaintiff is entitled to sue as forming part of his cause of action, that is, mesne profits prior to the suit, but also mesne profits which, but for s. 211, he could not have claimed in the suit at all, mesne profits from the institution of the suit until the delivery of possession, or until the expiration of three years from the date of the decree, whichever event first occurs.

Now it appears to me that s. 211 is a purely enabling section and gives the Court a discretion to award future mesne profits which it is free to exercise or not according to all the circumstances of the particular case. It was argued that in cases where a plaintiff expressly asks in his plaint for mesne profits after the institution of the suit, the Court, notwithstanding the enabling language of s. 211, has no discretion in the matter, but is bound, if it awards possession of the property, to make a decree for future mesne profits in the terms of the section. I do not agree with this argument. In the decision of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Pratab Chandra Burua v. Rani Swarnamayi (2), the Court had to consider the language of the corresponding section (s. 196) of the Code of 1859, and it was there held that the section was enabling and permissive, and only gave the Court a discretionary power. As shown by the case of Julius v. The Bishop of Oxford (3) and by the case of In re Baker (4), it lies upon the party who contends that the power or authority given to a Court by enabling language such as the [433] word "may" is coupled with an imperative obligation to use it, to prove that contention. There is nothing in my opinion, in s. 211, or in the objects which the Legislature

1899

MAY 29.

—

FULL

BENCH.

—

21 A. 425

(F.B.) =

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 153.

(1) 4 A.W.N. (1884) 159.

(8) (1880) L. R. 5 App. Cas. 214.

(2) 4 B.L.R. 113 (126 and 129).

(4) (1890) L.R. 44 Ch. D. 262.

1899
MAY 29.

FULL BENCH.

21 A. 425
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 153.

in passing that section had in view, to suggest that a Court acting under s. 211 is not free to grant or to refuse a prayer in the plaint for mesne profits accruing after the institution of the suit.

Turning to s. 244 I cannot agree that the penultimate paragraph of that section is limited to cases in which the plaint omits to ask for future mesne profits. The earlier part of s. 244 refers to cases in which the decree deals with mesne profits (a) under s. 212 (b) under s. 211. In those cases, as well as in those falling under (c) the questions referred to can only be dealt with in execution, and a separate suit is expressly barred. The latter portion of the section, on the other hand, refers to cases of mesne profits accruing after the institution of the suit, which the decree does not deal with, and a separate suit is expressly authorized. The learned Judges in Narain Das v. Khan Singh adopted the construction to which I have referred, apparently because they saw no other way of reconciling s. 244 with Expl. III of s. 13. The reconciliation which I suggest is this. The words "relief claimed" in Expl. III apply only to something which forms part of the "claim," strictly so called, that is, something which the plaintiff may claim as of right, something included in his cause of action, and which, if he establishes his cause of action, the Court has no discretion to refuse. The words "relief claimed" do not, in my opinion, include something which the plaintiff cannot in the suit claim as of right, but can only claim in the sense of an appeal to the discretion of the Court, and which the Court may refuse in the exercise of its discretion on grounds of general expediency or otherwise, even if the cause of action is fully established. As was pointed out by Sir Barnes Peacock in the Full Bench case to which I have referred, the future mesne profits accruing after the institution of the suit do not form [434] part of the cause of action, cannot be claimed as of right, could not, but for s. 211, be asked for at all, and may in any case be refused by the Court at its discretion.

There is no other case besides that of Narain Das v. Khan Singh (1) which fully supports the appellant's contention. The case of Mon Mohun Sirkar v. The Secretary of State for India in Council (2) on which the lower Courts have relied, is fully in accord with the views which I have expressed. When that case is compared with the later case of Jiban Das Oswal v. Durga Pershad Adhikari (3) the view of Expl. III of s. 13 becomes, I think, very clear. In the later case the former suit was for recovery of possession and for mesne profits prior to the institution of the suit. The decree awarded possession, but was silent as regards mesne profits. The plaintiff brought a subsequent suit in which he claimed both mesne profits prior to the institution of the first suit and also mesne profits for a period subsequent to that suit. It was held that the claim for mesne profits prior to the institution of the first suit was barred by s. 13 of the Code, but that the claim for subsequent mesne profits was not. The case of Mon Mohun Sirkar v. The Secretary of State for India in Council was distinguished with reference to the essential difference between a claim for mesne profits accrued due before the institution of a suit and subsequent mesne profits asked for in the plaint by reason of s. 211, but not then accrued due. In the former case a refusal or an omission by the decree to grant relief falls within Expl. III, because it is a refusal to grant a relief, which, if the plaintiff had made out his case, the Court would have been bound to grant, which related to matters in respect of which he had a complete cause of action—a claim in the sense of a claim as of right. In the latter case these conditions are not satisfied, and if it is proper to describe the prayer in plaint as “claiming” a relief, it is not a relief “claimed” in the sense of Explanation III.

(1) 4 A. W. N. (1884) 159.

(2) 17 C. 968.

(3) 21 C. 252.

[435] The case of Ramabhadra v. Jagannatha (1) has been referred to. I must say, with all respect, that I find it extremely difficult to understand that decision. There was a suit for partition brought in September, 1883. The plaintiffs in that suit asked for mesne profits for ten years prior to the suit and subsequent profits. The decree in that suit awarded the plaintiffs mesne profits for three years prior to the suit, but was silent as to the subsequent profits. There is nothing in the report which suggests that the subsequent profits claimed were only profits up to the date of the decree, or were not in respect of the whole period up to the time when the plaintiffs should obtain possession. In 1888 the same plaintiffs brought another suit to recover mesne profits for five years from the date of the former suit. The question before the High Court was whether the suit was barred on the ground that the mesne profits claimed must be deemed to have been refused by the decree in the partition suit, having regard to s. 13, Explanation III of the Code. In the earlier part of the judgment the learned Judges came to the conclusion that the decision of the Court below was right “so far as it treats the decree in the partition suit on a construction of Explanation III, s. 13, as if it expressly refused subsequent mesne profits.” So far the judgment is in accord with the view expressed in Narain Das v. Khan Singh. Having then arrived at the conclusion that the first decree must be construed as if there were inserted in it by reason of Explanation III to s. 13 the words “subsequent profits are refused,” the learned Judges proceed to ask, “what is the construction to be placed on the decree as to the period for which mesne profits were refused? Was it the intention to refuse subsequent profits up to the date of decree or for all time to come until partition is effected and separate possession is awarded of appellant’s moiety? In ascertaining the intention two things have to be kept in view, viz., (1) the terms of the latter portion of the decree, so that words inserted with reference to Explanation III may fit into it; and (2) the provisions of [436] s. 211 as to the extent to which subsequent profits accruing after suit may be claimed and adjudged.” They came to the conclusion that the true construction of the first decree was that it refused the subsequent mesne profits claimed only up to the date of the decree, and therefore that the claim before them was only to that extent barred by s. 13. It appears to me that on the principles stated by the learned Judges themselves, what they had to look to was the plaint. If the plaint in asking for subsequent profits only meant profits from the institution of the suit until decree, then, no doubt, the decision would be correct, that the decree refusing subsequent profits refused no more than that. But if as one would gather from the report, and as one would naturally expect, the plaintiffs in asking for subsequent profits meant the subsequent profits referred to in s. 211 of the Code, that is, from the institution of the suit until delivery of possession, then the words inserted in the decree “subsequent profits are refused” must have been a refusal to award profits after the decree as well as profits between the institution of the suit and the passing of the decree. Assuming that for the reasons given by the learned Judges, the decree could otherwise be

1899
MAY 29.
—
FULL BENCH.
21 A. 428
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 153.

(1) 14 M. 328.

1899
MAY 29.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
21 A. 425
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 153.

construed as only refusing mesne profits up to its date, still if the plaintiff asked for mesne profits after that date, it follows that the decree, as to that prayer, was silent, and, if so, then on the principles laid down in the earlier part of the judgment, that silence must itself be treated as a further refusal. Having regard to the nature of the claim in the former suit, I cannot understand the importance attached by the High Court to the date of decree or the distinction between the subsequent profits prior to decree and the subsequent profits after decree. At p. 331 of the report they say:—"It is clear that if subsequent mesne profits were expressly refused by that decree the claim in respect of them up to the date of that decree would clearly be res judicata, the parties and the title under which the claim is made being the same in both suits." I cannot understand why they say "up to the date of that decree." There is an important distinction between the mesne [437] profits before institution of the suit which, but for s. 211, are all that the plaintiff could claim, and the subsequent mesne profits which by reason of s. 211 he can further ask for, but as regards the latter, there is, so far as I am aware, no further distinction in principle between subsequent mesne profits between institution and decree, and subsequently mesne profits between decree and possession. In this respect there is a material difference between s. 211 and s. 209 to which I shall presently refer.

The only other decisions which I need mention are the cases of Bhivray v. Sitaram (1), in which the decision in Mon Mohun Sirkar v. The Secretary of State for India in Council is approved, and the case of Thyila Kandi Ummatha v. Thyila Kandi Cheria Kunhamed (2), where it was held that "Explanation III of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure refers to relief applied for which the Court is bound to grant with reference to the matters directly and substantially in issue."

I think that s. 209 of the Code affords some support to the views which I have expressed with regard to ss. 13, 211 and 244. Section 209 allows the Court in the case of decrees for the payment of money to order interest from the date of the suit to the date of the decree in addition to interest for any period prior to the institution of the suit with further interest on the aggregate sum so adjusted until payment. The second paragraph of the section provided that "where such a decree is silent with respect to the payment of further interest on such aggregate sum as aforesaid from the date of the decree to the date of payment or other earlier date, the Court shall be deemed to have refused such interest, and a separate suit therefor shall not lie." This express provision that the silence of the decree as to further interest on the aggregate sum adjudged is to be deemed a refusal and this express prohibition of a separate suit therefor show that the Legislature did not consider s. 13, Explanation III, applicable to such a case. When this is compared with the absence [438] of any similar provision in s. 211 coupled with the express allowance in s. 244 of a separate suit for future mesne profits not dealt with by the decree, I infer that, as regards a claim for such future mesne profits, the silence of the decree is not to be deemed a refusal, and that a separate suit in respect of such a claim will lie.

On the whole case I think that the lower Courts were right in following the decision in Mon Mohun Sirkar v. The Secretary of State for India in Council (3), that the case of Narain Das v. Khan Singh (4) was

(1) 19 B. 532.
(3) 17 C. 968.

(2) 4 M. 308.
(4) 4 A.W.N. (1884) 159.

decided wrongly and must be overruled, and that this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

BANERJI, J.—I agree with the learned Chief Justice that the plea of res judicata raised in this appeal should be overruled, and the appeal dismissed. It is contended that as in the former suit brought by the present plaintiff he claimed mesne profits, not only for the period prior to the date of the suit, but also for the period subsequent to that date, the present claim, which relates to the period subsequent to the date of the former suit, is not maintainable under the rule of res judicata. It is urged that the relief which was claimed in respect of future mesne profits in the former suit was expressly refused, and that if it be not held to have been expressly refused, it must be deemed to have been refused having regard to the provisions of Explanation III to s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In the former suit the plaintiff must be held to have claimed mesne profits for the period subsequent to the date of the suit, although the 4th relief claimed in the plaint in that suit was not happily worded. In the decree, no doubt, the Court after decreeing a portion of the amount claimed as mesne profits for the period prior to the date of the suit proceeded to declare that the remainder of the suit was dismissed, but, reading the decree by the light of the judgment, it is clear that the dismissal related only to that portion of the mesne profits claimed for the period preceding the date of the suit which the plaintiff had failed [439] to prove. I therefore agree with the learned Chief Justice that the relief sought in the present suit was not expressly refused in the former suit. The next question which arises is—should that relief be deemed to have been refused in the former suit? The contention of the learned counsel for the appellant is no doubt supported by the ruling of this Court in Narain Das v. Khan Singh (1), but with reference to that ruling it may be observed that no other ruling has been cited to us in which the same view was adopted in its entirety. With all deference, I am unable to agree with the view which the learned Judges who decided that case took of the question before us. That view is opposed to the ruling of the Calcutta High Court in Mon Mohun Sirkar v. The Secretary of State for India in Council (2), which was approved by the same Court in Jiban Das Oswal v. Durga Pershad Adhikari (3) and by the Bombay High Court in Bhivray v. Sitaram (4). I agree with the learned Chief Justice in the construction which he would place on the third explanation to s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That explanation refers, as held by the Madras High Court in Thyila Kandi Ummatha v. Thyila Kandi Cheria Kunhamed (5), to a relief applied for by the plaintiff, which it would be the duty of the Court to grant if the cause of action on which the relief was claimed was established. In the present instance the plaintiff was not entitled in his suit for possession to claim as of right mesne profits for the period subsequent to the date of the suit. No cause of action had on that date accrued to him for those mesne profits, and it was only by virtue of the provisions of s. 211 of the Code that he could claim and the Court could award to him such mesne profits in his suit for possession. That section has been repeatedly held to be an enabling section. It was held to be so even by the Madras High Court in Ramabhadra v. Jagannatha (6), which the learned Chief Justice has criticised. As that 1899

MAY 29.

—
FULL BENCH.

21 A. 428

(F.B.) =

19 A.W.N.
(1899) 153.

(1) 4 A. W. N. (1884) 159.
(4) 19 B. 582.

(2) 17 C. 968.
(5) 4 M. 303.

(3) 21 C. 252.
(6) 14 M. 328.

1899
MAY 29.
—
FULL BENCH.
—

21 A. 425
(F. B.) =
19 A.W.N
(1899) 153.

section only vests the Court with a discretion [440] and there was no obligation on the Court to make a decree for mesne profits for the period subsequent to the date of the suit for possession, the omission to grant such mesne profits cannot by virtue of Explanation III to s. 13 preclude a subsequent suit for mesne profits.

AIKMAN, J.—I am of the same opinion and had little to add to what has been said by the learned Chief Justice and my brother Banerji. The question which we have to consider is whether when in a suit for the recovery of immoveable property the plaintiff has claimed future mesne profits, that is mesne profits subsequent to the date of the institution of the suit, and his claim has either been refused or has not been expressly granted, a subsequent suit for those mesne profits is barred by the provisions of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It cannot be said that in the present case the issue as to the plaintiff's right to the mesne profits now claimed was ever heard and finally decided, but reliance is placed on Explanation III to s. 13, and it is contended that as the mesne profits claimed were not granted they must be deemed to have been refused. Whether this is so or not depends upon whether the plaintiff can as of right ask the Court to adjudicate on his claim for future mesne profits. In my opinion he cannot. Section 211 of the Code gives a Court a discretionary power of providing in its decree for the payment of mesne profits which had not accrued due at the date of the suit. If it has refused to exercise this discretion, there is nothing, in my judgment, to bar a subsequent suit. Section 209 of the Code of Civil Procedure, gives the Court a somewhat similar discretionary power where a decree is made for payment of money, to award future interest from the date of the decree to the date of payment. The last paragraph of that section provides that when a Court has not chosen to exercise this power, and when its decree is silent as to the payment of future interest, it shall be deemed to have refused such interest and no separate suit therefor shall lie. The absence of any such provision in s. 211 makes it clear to me that the Legislature did not intend to bar a subsequent suit in cases [441] where a Court had not seen fit to exercise the discretion conferred upon it by that section. For these reasons I am of opinion that the appeal should be dismissed.

BY THE COURT.—The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 441 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 163.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*fore Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice,
and Mr. Justice Banerji.*

RAM GOPAL (Defendant) v. PIARI LAL (Plaintiff).^{*}
[14th June, 1899.]

Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz—Plaintiff's title to sue for pre-emption lost after suit but before decree—Suit to be dismissed.

Where a plaintiff who had filed a suit for pre-emption based on the provisions of a wajib-ul-arz lost during the pendency of the suit, the right to pre-empt by reason of the mahal in which both properties were originally comprised having become the subject of a perfect partition, it was held that the suit for pre-emption should be dismissed. Sakina Bibi v. Amiran (1) distinguished.

^{*} Second Appeal No. 64 of 1897, from a decree of Maulvi Syed Tajammal Husain, Subordinate Judge of Saharanpur, dated the 10th December 1896, confirming a decree of Munshi Sheo Sahai, Munsif of Kairana, dated the 19th September 1895.

[Appl., 26 A. 389=1 A.L.J. 209=24 A.W.N. (1904) 68; R., 24 A. 119 (125, 126); 25 A. 421 (428, 429); 3 Ind. Cas. 546=12 O.C. 229; 4 Ind. Cas. 337=91 P.R. 1909 (F.B.)=148 P.L.R. 1909=161 P.W.R. 1909; 2 N.L.R. 150 (152, 153); 5 N.L.R. 136 (140)=3 Ind. Cas. 923; 7 O.C. 61 (63); 124 P.L.R. 1901; 157 P.L.R. 1901=49 P.R. 1901; 30 P.L.R. 1902=32 P.R. 1902, 3 P.L.R. 1907=124 P.R. 1907=48 P.W.R. 1907; D., 31 A. 111=6 A.L.J. 51; 1 Ind. Cas. 819; 31 A. 530 (532)=6 A.L.J. 699=3 Ind. Cas. 42.]

1899
JUNE 14.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—

21 A. 441=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 163.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Chief Justice.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Mr. E. Chamier, for the appellant.
Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C.J.—This was a suit for pre-emption in respect of a sale of a share in a mahal, the sale having been made on 20th of March, 1894. The suit was based upon a provision of the wajib-ul-arz giving a right of pre-emption to co-sharers in the mahal. At the time of the sale the plaintiff was a co-sharer of the mahal with the vendor. Before the sale, proceedings for perfect partition of the mahal had begun. The suit was instituted on the 19th of March, 1895. On the 1st of July, 1895, while the suit was pending, the partition proceedings were completed and [442] the partition took effect from that date. By that partition the mahal was sub-divided into four mahals and the property sold was included in a mahal in which the plaintiff was not a co-sharer. The suit proceeded, and on the 19th of September, 1895, a decree was passed in the plaintiff's favour by the Court of first instance, which was subsequently affirmed on appeal by the lower appellate Court. The question to be determined in this appeal is whether the decrees in the plaintiff's favour can be maintained, having regard to the fact that at the date of the first Court's decree the plaintiff had ceased to be a co-sharer with the vendor in the mahal in which the property sold is situated and therefore did not fall within the category of persons entitled to pre-emption under the wajib-ul-arz. In the recent Full Bench decision in Janki Prasad v. Ishar Das (2), it was held that the plaintiff in a suit for pre-emption based on a clause in the wajib-ul-arz giving pre-emptive rights to co-sharers, must shew that his right and his status as a co-sharer subsisted not only at the date of the sale, but also at the date of the institution of the suit. The question whether the plaintiff must go farther and show that his right and his status as a co-sharer upon which the right is based still continue up to the date of the decree, or whether the defendant can obtain the dismissal of the suit by showing that the plaintiff's right and status have been lost by partition or otherwise during the pendency of the suit was expressly left open by the judgment of the Full Bench. Upon this question there appears to be no authority, and we must therefore determine it upon principle. The analogy of the Muhammadan law of pre-emption and the case of Sakina Bibi v. Amiran (1), with reference to that law, have been discussed. It appears to me that they afford us little or no guidance. In that case the plaintiff had lost her share by a sale in execution of a decree in another suit pending the Second Appeal in this Court in the pre-emption suit; and it was held that what the Court had to determine was only the

(1) 10 A. 472.

(2) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 126.

1899
JUNE 14.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 441 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 163.

correctness or otherwise of the decree appealed against, and that in determining that question events [443] which had occurred subsequently to the decree could not be taken into account. That of course completely distinguishes that case from the present. Mr. Justice Mahmood in his judgment referred to a passage in the Hedaya which he construed as showing that if by reason of a voluntary sale or other circumstance the pre-emptor before the passing of the decree of the first Court ceases to be the owner of the tenement by virtue of which he claimed pre-emption, then the decree could not be given in his favour. He expressed some doubt as to whether that principle would apply to a compulsory sale, such as a sale in execution of a decree. It appears from Baillie's Digest of Muhammadan Law (2nd edition, p. 505), that "the right of pre-emption is rendered void in two different ways after it has been established. One of these is termed ikhtiyaree, or voluntary, the other zurooree, or necessary." But no instance is given for the loss of the right of pre-emption in the latter way except the death of the pre-emptor, and the result is that we get no light from the Muhammadan law as to the effect upon the right of pre-emption of a pre-emptor parting with the property, by virtue of which he claims the right, by a partition or any mode other than a voluntary sale. In the absence of authority on the subject, and in dealing with claims for pre-emption arising under the wajib-ul-arz, it seems to me that the only safe course is to see what mode of deciding the question would be most in furtherance of the contract or custom of pre-emption, and the principles upon which such a contract or custom is based. There can be no question that the effect of a decree in the plaintiff's favour in this suit would be to enforce the right of pre-emption in favour of a person who does not now form one of the class to whom alone the right of pre-emption is given by the wajib-ul-arz. The custom is one in favour of co-sharers of the undivided mahal, and no others. The object was to give such persons a preference over strangers, that is, over persons not co-sharers of the undivided mahal, and to exclude such strangers as much as possible. The plaintiff is not a co-sharer in the undivided mahal any longer. He is not even a co-sharer with the vendor in the new mahal in which the property sold [444] is situate. He is just as much a stranger in the sense of the wajib-ul-arz as the defendant to whom the property was sold. That seems to be a strong reason for dismissing the suit, unless it can be shown that there is some general principle of law or procedure which compels us in disregard of the custom, and which would compel us in disregard of a contract, if this were a case of contract, to look exclusively to the state of things that existed at the date of the institution of the suit, and to say that because on that date the plaintiff was entitled to pre-emption he is to have a decree for pre-emption, although since that date his right has ceased to exist. It appears to me impossible to maintain that there is any such general principle of law. On the contrary, there are many provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure which clearly show that matters may arise after the institution of the suit which either destroy or materially affect the rights which the plaintiff possessed when the suit was brought, and which may be pleaded successfully by the defendant in answer to the suit. In England the Rules of the Supreme Court provide in detail for grounds of defence which have arisen after action brought, and Order XXIV, which deals with the subject, only embodies a much older principle. In Daniell's Chancery Practice (6th edition, volume I, p. 307), it is said that "if plaintiff has a title to relief at the time of the issue of the writ, the mere fact that, owing to change of circumstances, that title has before trial expired or determined, will not prevent him obtaining a judgment in his favour for some relief, or for costs only, at the trial." The cases cited in the foot-note are cases of suits for an injunction, in which the right to the injunction, or the wrongful act to restrain which it was claimed, had ceased during the pendency of the suit. It was held that although, in consequence of what had happened, an injunction could not be granted, the Court could still order an inquiry as to the damage sustained by the plaintiff, and could, for the purpose of deciding how the costs of the suit were to be borne, decide whether the bill had been properly filed. That does not affect the point before [445] us in this case. There is therefore nothing which compels us to look exclusively to the date of the institution of the suit, to disregard all that has since happened, and to confirm the decree for pre-emption, although at the date of the decree the plaintiff was not entitled to pre-emption according to the terms of the wajib-ul-arz upon which the suit was based. For these reasons I am of opinion that the decrees of the Courts below were wrong, and I would allow this appeal, set aside the decrees of both the Courts below, and dismiss the suit with costs in all Courts.

BANERJI, J.—I am of the same opinion. The object of the pre-emption clause recorded in the wajib-ul-arz was to exclude a stranger from the co-parcenary body. That object would be defeated were we to decree the plaintiff's claim for pre-emption in this suit, for since the sub-division of the mahal into four mahals subsequently to the institution of the suit the plaintiff has ceased to be a co-sharer with the vendor in the mahal to which the property in suit appertains. In order to justify us in maintaining a decree which would defeat the object of pre-emption in a case of this kind, we should be satisfied that a rule of law or procedure exists, which makes it obligatory on us to make such a decree. We have not been referred to any such rule. The analogy of the Muhammadan law is not in favour of the plaintiff. The learned advocate who appeared for the respondent urged upon us to regard the date of the institution of the suit as the date to which we must refer for the purpose of determining the rights of the parties on the date of the decree, but he has not been able to point to any authority in support of that contention. The instances to which the learned Chief Justice has referred, clearly show that the mere fact of the plaintiff's having a right of action on the date of the suit would not entitle him to a decree if he had ceased to have that right subsequently to the institution of the suit and before decree. I concur with the learned Chief Justice in holding that in a suit for pre-emption if after the institution of the suit and before decree the plaintiff has lost the [446] status by virtue of which he could claim pre-emption, his claim must be dismissed. I agree in the order proposed by the learned Chief Justice.

Appeal dismissed.

1899
JUNE 14.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 441=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 163.

1899

21 A. 446 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 164.

JUNE 20.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Aikman.*KANAHAI LAL (Plaintiff) v. SURAJ KUNWAR AND ANOTHER (Defendants).^{*} [20th June, 1899.]21 A. 446 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 164.Res judicata—Appeal—Plea of res judicata taken for the first time in appeal—Court not bound to entertain it if by so doing further findings of fact will be rendered necessary—Practice.

Although the plea of res judicata may be taken at any stage of a suit, including first or second appeal, an appellate Court is not bound to entertain the plea if it cannot be decided upon the record before that Court, and if its consideration involves the reference of fresh issues for determination by the lower Court. Muhammad Ismail v. Chattar Singh (1) and Tek Narain Rai v. Dhondh Bahadur Rai (2) referred to.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of Knox, J.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Mr. D. N. Banerji, for the appellant.

Mr. E. Chamier and Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, J.—The sole plea raised in this Second Appeal is that the matter in issue in the present suit has become res judicata, inasmuch as the issues in the suit now under appeal were also raised and determined in appellant's favour in a connected suit, and the decision in that suit has now become final. The suit before us was a suit for the balance of money due under a bond. That bond was executed by Musammat Suraj Kunwar and Sheo Prasad, both of whom are respondents to this appeal. The suit was instituted on the 6th of March, 1896, against the [447] obligors of the bond. On the 25th of the same month Musammat Suraj Kunwar instituted a suit in another district for the cancelment of the very same bond on the allegation that it had been satisfied. Both suits were eventually, under orders obtained from this Court, heard by one and the same Subordinate Judge, who, on the 13th of August, 1896, decreed the claim brought by Kanahai Lal and dismissed the suit brought by Musammat Suraj Kunwar. Appeals were filed from the decrees in both the suits, both the defendants to the suit brought by Kanahai Lal appealing from the decree passed in that suit. In the appeal filed by the Musammat she was required by the Court, acting under s. 549 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to find security for the respondent's costs. She failed to do so, and on 18th November, 1896, her appeal was rejected. The other appeal, namely, the one filed by the obligors of the bond went to hearing, with the result that the Judge found on the evidence that nothing was due under the bond. He accordingly set aside the decree of the Court of first instance, decreed the appeal, and dismissed the suit. Before the Judge, no allusion was made to, and no plea raised, based upon the order of the 18th November, 1896, whereby the Musammat's appeal was rejected owing to her failure to find security. On the record, as it stands, ^{*} Second Appeal No. 180 of 1897. from a decree of D. F. Addis, Esq., District Judge of Shahjahanpur, dated the 22nd January 1897, reversing the decree of Maulvi Muhammad Abdul Ghafor, Officiating Subordinate Judge of Shahjahanpur, dated the 13th August 1896.

(1) 4 A. 69.

(2) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 104.

there is no paper and no evidence by which the appellant can substantiate the plea which he has now raised in the appeal before us. His learned counsel to remove this difficulty asked us to exercise our powers under s. 568 of the Code of Civil Procedure and to accept in evidence certain papers, namely, (1), plaint; (2), judgment and decree of the Court of first instance in suit No. 46 of 1890; and also 3, the decree of the appellate Court. These are papers in the suit filed by the Musammat praying that the bond be cancelled. The other side objected to the reception of these papers, and we should have had no difficulty whatever in coming to the conclusion at which we have now arrived, but for a judgment of this Court which was laid before us with much earnestness by the learned counsel for the appellant. That judgment is the Full [448] Bench judgment in Muhammad Ismail v. Chattar Singh (1), a judgment which, we are told, has been followed by this Court in Tek Narain Rai v. Dondh Bahadur Rai (2). There are certain passages in some of the judgments of the Judges who composed the Full Bench which would seem at first sight to favour the contention raised by the learned counsel. We do not question, and could not question, the decision of the Bench that the plea of res judicata may be raised for the first time in Second Appeal. This was the only point referred to the Full Bench. Any other passages in the judgments which may seem to go further and to furnish authority for the contention that that plea when so raised must be considered and determined either upon the record, as it stands, or after a remand for findings of fact must be deemed to be obiter dicta. Indeed the present case, if an example were required, would furnish a very good illustration of the danger of accepting any such rule. Here we have a finding of fact which is irreversible to the effect that the bond in suit has been fully discharged and nothing remains due under it. In the Court below when it was arriving at that finding nothing whatever was said as to, nor was the Court allowed an opportunity of considering, the fact that simply because one obligor had not been able to furnish security, the appeal in which the other appellant was indirectly, but vitally, interested had been rejected without any consideration of the merits. Even if we were to accept the contention of the appellant it would not advantage him.

We dismiss the appeal with costs.

AIKMAN, J.—I have also arrived at the same conclusion. In some of the judgments in the Full Bench which has been cited there are expressions which seem to imply that when a plea of res judicata is raised for the first time in Second Appeal, and when, in order to support that plea, findings of fact are necessary, this Court must remand the case for such findings. These expressions of opinion, as has been pointed out by my learned colleague, were unnecessary for the determination of the question [449] referred for the consideration of the Full Bench. They seem to me to lose sight of the opening words of s. 568 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which enacts that the parties to an appeal shall not be entitled to produce additional evidence, whether oral or documentary, in the appellate Court. If they are not entitled to produce additional evidence, I do not see how they can claim as of right to have a case remanded for additional evidence in order to support a plea raised for the first time in Second Appeal. But even if we did admit the additional evidence I do not see how it would advantage the appellant. The plaintiff's suit has been dismissed by the 1899

JUNE 20.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 446 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 164.

(1) 4 A. 69.

(2) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 104.

1899
JUNE 20.
 —
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
 —
21 A. 446 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 164.

lower appellate Court upon a finding of fact, which cannot be disturbed in Second Appeal, namely, that the defendants respondents have discharged the bond upon which the plaintiff appellant came into Court. That finding is in favour of both the respondents. It is true that one of the respondents did bring a suit which entailed a finding upon the issue whether or not the bond had been discharged ; that her suit was dismissed, and that her appeal from the decree dismissing the suit was, owing to her failure to find security of costs, rejected by the lower appellate Court. But I do not see how this can affect her co-obligor Sheo Prasad. He was, it is true, made a pro forma defendant to Musammatt Suraj Kunwar's suit, but he was in no way interested in resisting that suit, and the fact that an appeal from the decree in that suit was rejected owing to the appellant's failure to give security cannot damnify him. We have then a judgment and decree which are valid so far as one of the co-obligors is concerned to the effect that the plaintiff's bond had been discharged. In the face of this valid decree it appears to me futile to allow this appeal to proceed.

For the above reasons I concur in the decree proposed by my brother Knox.

By THE COURT:—

The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 450 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 167.

[450] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

PHUL CHAND AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs) v. GANGA GHULAM
 (Defendant).^{*} [21st June, 1899.]

Act No. XXVI of 1881 (Negotiable Instruments Act), ss. 64, 66—Promissory note not presented for payment at maturity—Effect of non-presentment.

Held, that the non-presentment for payment at maturity of a promissory note, the presentment of which is required by s. 66 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, has not the effect of relieving from liability the maker of the note. Farzand Ali v. The Agra Savings Bank (1) and Ramakristnayya v. Kassim (2), followed.

[R., 39 P.R. 1911 = 10 Ind. Cas. 133 (135).]

THIS was a suit to recover Rs. 2,069-9-6 on a promissory note for Rs. 1,600, dated Sawan badi 5th, 1950 Sambat, corresponding to the 2nd August, 1893, and payable 90 days after date. The principal defences to the suit were, first, that the plaint was not signed and verified as required by law, having been signed and verified, not by the plaintiffs themselves, but by a mukhtar ; and, secondly, that the plaintiffs not having presented the note for payment at due date could not recover on it.

The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore) found that the plaint was properly signed and verified with the permission of the Court, under s. 51 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the plaintiffs being ^{*} Second Appeal No. 132 of 1897, from a decree of J.E. Gill, Esq., District Judge of Cawnpore, dated the 24th November 1896, reversing a decree of Maulvi Syed Zainul-Abdin, Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore, dated the 15th February 1896.

(1) 16 A.W.N. (1896) 201.

(2) 13 M. 172.

residents of another district, namely, Aligarh; and also that the non-presentation of the note was covered by s. 76 of Act No. XXVI of 1881, and gave a decree in favour of the plaintiffs.

The defendant appealed, and the lower appellate Court found both the above issues in favour of the defendant, and, decreeing the appeal, dismissed the plaintiffs' suit.

The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Sundar Lal and Munshi Gobind Prasad, for the appellants.

[451] Munshi Gokul Prasad, (for whom Pandit Tej Bahadur Sapru), for the respondent.

1899
JUNE 20.

APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

21 A. 450 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 167

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J. (BANERJI, J., concurring).—The learned Judge has reversed the decree of the Court of first instance and has dismissed the suit upon two grounds. The first is that, with reference to the ruling in Mahabir Prasad v. Shah Wahid Alam (1), the fact that the plaint was not signed by the plaintiff was fatal to the suit. As to that point no objection was raised in the first Court by the defendant that the plaint was not properly signed, nor was any such objection taken by the defendant in the grounds of appeal to the lower appellate Court. However, the first Court finds that the plaintiffs, who resided at Hathras, were absent from Cawnpore, where the suit was filed, and that the general attorney, Nanhua Mal, who signed and verified the plaint, was duly authorized in that behalf by his power of attorney. We take that to mean that the plaintiffs were by reason of absence unable to sign the plaint, and that the plaint was signed by a person duly authorized by them in that behalf. That being so, the provisions of s. 51 of the Code of Civil Procedure appear to us to have been complied with. The decree, in our opinion, ought not to have been set aside and the suit dismissed upon the first ground stated by the Judge. One of the questions raised by the defendant's written statement, paragraph 9, is in substance, whether the institution of this suit was authorized by the plaintiffs, or whether the suit was instituted by Nanhua Mal without authority from them. As to this the learned Judge merely says that there is nothing in the evidence of Durga Prasad, munib, to show that the plaintiffs had any knowledge of the promissory note or authorized the suit. If it is necessary for the learned Judge to determine whether the suit was or was not instituted by Nanhua Mal with the authority of the plaintiffs, it will be necessary to consider, not only the evidence of Durga Prasad, but the terms of the general power-of-attorney, upon which Nanhua Mal bases his alleged authority to institute the suit on behalf of the plaintiffs.

[452] The second ground upon which the learned Judge has dismissed the suit was based on s. 66 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, No. XXVI of 1881. The suit was brought upon a promissory note against the maker of the note. Section 66 directs that "a promissory note or bill of exchange, made payable at a specified period after date or sight thereof, must be presented for payment at maturity." Here the promissory note, which was made payable ninety days after date, was not presented, the learned Judge finds, at maturity, and he holds that the suit was liable to dismissal on that account. Section 66 does not state what are the consequences of a promissory note such as it describes not being presented for payment at maturity. Section 64 provides that "promissory notes, bills of exchange and cheques must be presented for payment to

(1) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 152.

1899
JUNE 21.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 450 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 167.

the maker, acceptor or drawee thereof, respectively, by or on behalf of the holder as hereinafter provided. In default of such presentment the other parties thereto are not liable thereon to such holder." It is clear that that section only exempts from liability to the holder in default of presentment parties other than the maker, acceptor or drawee of a promissory note, bill of exchange and cheque, respectively. It does not relieve from liability in the case of such default the maker of a promissory note like the present defendant. Therefore no presentment of the note for payment was necessary to make the defendant liable to a decree in this suit. This view is in accordance with the ruling of this Court in Farzand Ali v. The Agra Savings Bank (1), and of the Madras High Court in Ramakistnayya v. Kassim (2). We must allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the lower appellate Court, and remand the case to that Court, for disposal under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The appellant will get the costs of this appeal. Other costs will abide the result.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

21 A. 453 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 166.

[453] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

RAM SARUP AND ANOTHER (Decree-holders) v. GHOURANI AND ANOTHER
(Judgment-debtors).^{*} [23rd June, 1899.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 90—Application for a decree under s. 90—Limitation—Act No. XV of 1877 (Indian Limitation Act), sch. ii, art. 178.

Held, that the limitation governing an application for a decree under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act is that prescribed by art. 178 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.

[Diss., 33 C. 867 = 4 C.L.J. 141; Not F., 1 N.L.R. 143 (145); F., 6 O.C. 114 (116); Appr., 24 A. 542 (546); R., 6 C.L.J. 119 (120) = 11 C.W.N. 674.]

THE decree-holders in this case obtained a decree against the judgment-debtors under s. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, on the 10th of December, 1888, the suit having been instituted on the 15th of August, 1888. The mortgaged property was brought to sale on the 25th of February, 1895, and the sale was confirmed on the 3rd of May, 1895. On the 1st of December, 1898, the decree-holders applied for a decree under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act. The Court to which the application was made Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, dismissed it as barred by limitation under art. 179 of the second schedule to Act No. XV of 1877. From this order the decree-holders appealed to the High Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, for the appellants.

Pandit Moti Lal, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—The only question which arises in this case is, whether an application made by the appellants to obtain the decree

^{*} First Appeal No. 13 of 1899, from an order of Pandit Rai Indar Narain, Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 21st December, 1898.

(1) 16 A.W.N. (1896) 201.

(2) 13 M. 172.

provided for by s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act is or is not barred by limitation. The lower Court has found that it is so barred. The first question which we have to consider is whether an application of this nature is one made in the course of proceedings in execution of a decree passed under s. 88 of that Act. Upon this point we are concluded by the authority of two cases—Durga Dai v. Bhagwat Prasad (1) and Musaheb Zaman Khan v. Inayatullah (2). The latter case has specially laid down that such an application is a proceeding in the [454] execution of the original decree. Then so much being granted the question arises what is the limitation article applicable to such an application? The appellants contend that the article applicable is 179, while for the respondents it is argued that art. 178 applies. Now art. 179 is an article which provides a period of limitation for an application "for the execution of a decree or order of a Civil Court." It seems to us that the application we are considering, namely one to obtain a decree under s. 90, cannot by any straining of language be considered to be an application "for the execution of a decree" under s. 88. Neither in substance nor in form does such an application ask for execution of that decree. What it does ask is that, certain events being ascertained to have occurred, a subsidiary decree for money may be passed, in execution of which the amount still remaining due on the principal decree under s. 88 may be recovered. But as we have before remarked, such an application, though undoubtedly an application in an execution proceeding, is not an application "for the execution" of the principal decree. We hold therefore that this application is not governed by the limitation rule to be found in art. 179. That being so, the only other article of the Indian Limitation Act applicable is art. 178, and there can be no doubt in this case that, that article being applicable, the present application is time-barred. We therefore dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

21 A. 454 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 170.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Knight, Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

HAR LAL (Plaintiff) v. MUHAMDI (Defendant).^{*} [30th June, 1899.]

Act No. IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act), s. 55, sub-s. 4 (b)—Vendor's lien—Suit to enforce charge against the property—Limitation—Act No. XV of 1877 (Indian Limitation Act), sch. II, arts. 132, 111.

Held. that a suit by a vendor of immoveable property to enforce against the property his lien for the unpaid purchase money under s. 55, sub-s. 4 [455] (b) of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, falls within art. 132 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877. Virchand Lalchand v. Kumaji (3) and Chunilal v. Bri Jethi (4) followed. Natesan Chetti v. Soundararaja Ayyangar (5), dissented from. Ramdin v. Kalka Pershad (6), Sutton v. Sutton (7), and Toft v. Stevenson (8) referred to.

^{*} Second Appeal No. 78 of 1897, from a decree of Pandit Rajnath Saheb, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 15th December, 1896, modifying a decree of Babu Sheo Prasad, Munsif of Bijnor, dated the 12th September, 1896.

(1) 13 A. 356.

(2) 14 A. 513 (516).

(3) 18 B. 48.

(4) 22 B. 846.

(5) 21 M. 141.

(6) 12 I. A. 12.

(7) L.R. (1892) 22 Ch. D. 511.

(8) (1854) 5 De. G. M. and G. 735.

1899
JUNE 30.

[Diss., 24 M. 233 (236) = 10 M.L.J. 349; F., 30 A. 172 (173, 174) = 5 A.L.J. 243 = A.W.N. (1908) 71 = 3 M.L.T. 374; 9 O.C. 284; R., 2 A.L.J. 379 = A.W.N. (1905) 144; 3 N.L.R. 81 (82, 83).]

APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Chief Justice.

Pandit Moti Lal, for the appellant.

Mr. Amiruddin, for the respondent.

21 A. 454 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 170.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J.—This was a suit by a vendor of immoveable property to recover the balance of unpaid purchase-money by enforcement of the lien or charge conferred by s. 55, sub-s. 4 (b) of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. The Court of first instance found that only Rs. 149 of the purchase-money remained unpaid. That Court held that the claim, so far as it sought to enforce the lien by sale of the property, was barred by art. 111 of the second schedule of the Limitation Act, 1877. But it also held that the claim for a personal remedy was not barred, as it fell within art. 116, the sale-deed being a registered instrument. It therefore gave the plaintiff a personal decree for Rs. 149. On appeal the lower appellate Court held that art. 111 was equally applicable to the claim for the personal remedy and to the claim to enforce the charge against the land, and accordingly dismissed the whole suit. The plaintiff now appeals against that decision.

The sale-deed was executed on the 7th of June, 1893. The suit was brought on the 17th of July, 1896. The question is whether art. 111 or art. 132 prescribes the limitation applicable to a suit by a vendor to enforce his lien by a sale of the property to which the lien attaches. In the former case the suit is barred, in the latter it is within time. In this Court there appears to be no authority in point. In the case of Baldeo Prasad v. Jit Singh (1), to which the lower appellate Court refers, there is no ruling on the point with which we have to deal, and the Court evidently [456] found it extremely difficult to determine the real nature of the suit. On the question before us there is a conflict of authority between the High Court of Bombay and the High Court of Madras. In Virchand Lalchand v. Kumaji (2) and in Chunilal v. Bai Jethi (3) the Bombay High Court held in effect that a suit by the vendor to enforce his charge against the land falls within art. 132, while his suit for the personal remedy falls within art. 111. I gather from the report of the argument in the latter case that the same view was taken in two unreported cases published in the printed judgments of the Court. On the other hand, the Madras High Court has held in Natesan Chetti v. Soundararaja Ayyangar (4), dissenting from the first of the Bombay cases, that the suit to enforce the charge against the land falls within art. 111 and not art. 132. We have now to decide which of these conflicting views we ought to adopt.

The difficulty arises from the fact that both art. 111 and art. 132 use language sufficiently wide to cover a suit of this description. No doubt the words in art. 111 "to enforce his lien for unpaid purchase-money" would, in the ordinary sense of the expression "enforcement of lien," include a suit to enforce it against the land as well as against the defendant personally; but a suit limited to a claim for the personal remedy would

(1) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 130.
(3) 22 B. 846.

(2) 18 B. 48.
(4) 21 M. 141.

undoubtedly answer the description. Now it is noticeable that art. 111 is placed in Part VI of the schedule among a number of articles, all of which relate exclusively to suits for a personal remedy, and prescribe the same period of limitation, that is a period of three years. In Ramdin v. Kalka Pershad (1) the Privy Council say:—"The second schedule places simple money demands generally under the three years' limitation. The twelve years' period is made applicable principally to suits in respect of immoveable property." And they add that art. 132 has reference only to suits for money charged on immoveable property to raise it out of that property. There can be no doubt (See Darby and [457] Bosanquet's Law of Limitation, 2nd edition, pp. 170—175), that in England a suit to enforce a vendor's lien would come within s. 8 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, which prescribes a period of twelve years for a suit "to recover any sum of money secured by any mortgage, judgment, or lien or otherwise charged upon or payable out of any land or rent at law or in equity." That closely corresponds, both in language and in regard to the period prescribed, to art 132 of the second schedule of the Limitation Act. The difference is, that whereas in England the twelve years' limitation has been held to apply both to suits for the personal remedy and to the remedy against the land—see Sutton v. Sutton (2), in India, art. 132 has been held to apply only to suits for the recovery of the money out of the property charged, while suits for the personal remedy fall within the limitation applicable to simple money demands. As pointed out by Mr. Whitley Stokes and Mr. Mitra, the third column of art. 111 is based on Toft v. Stevenson (3), the effect of which it states almost in the exact terms of a passage at p. 175 of Darby and Bosanquet's work; but the vendor's claim which the first column of art. 111 describes as one "to enforce his lien for unpaid purchase-money," is in the passage in Darby and Bosanquet called the right of a vendor to receive his purchase-money which is secured by his lien on the land sold. It seems probable that the first column of art. 111 was intended to have the same effect as these words, which, however, point rather to a personal claim to receive the purchase-money than to a claim to realize it by sale of the property. On the other hand, it seems improbable that the Legislature should have intended by art. 132 to give all other charges on land the same twelve years' limitation as in England, but to exclude therefrom the vendor's remedy against the land, which in England has been expressly held to fall within the same category and to be covered by the same words. It also seems improbable that a vendor should have a shorter period of limitation than is given to every other charge-holder, while under s. 100 of the [458] Transfer of Property Act, all charge-holders are put as nearly as possible on the same footing as a mortgagee. There can be no doubt, for instance, that the limitation applicable to a suit for enforcement against the land of the purchaser's charge conferred by s. 55, sub-section 6 (b) of the Transfer of Property Act would be governed by art. 132, and so would all other charges on land under the Transfer of Property Act or otherwise. It is difficult to see why the vendor should have a shorter time for suing than the purchaser and the other charge-holders mentioned. Again, in all other cases provided for by the Limitation Act, where there is a charge against land and also a personal remedy, a longer period of limitation is allowed for the claim

1899
JUNE 30.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

21 A. 454=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 170.

(1) 12 I. A. 12.

(8) (1854) 5 De G. M. and G. 735.

(2) L. R. (1882) 22 Ch. D. 511.

1899
JUNE 30.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
21 A. 454=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 170.

against the land than for the merely personal claim. On the construction adopted by the Madras High Court, either both claims stand on the same footing under art. 111, or else a longer period is allowed for the personal remedy, in the case of a registered instrument, for instance, under art. 116. For some reason which does not appear from the report, the Madras High Court, while dismissing the suit before them, so far as regards the charge, as barred by art. 111, confirmed the first Court's personal decree against defendant No. 1, though the suit was brought more than three years from the date mentioned in the third column of art. 111. To apply art. 111 to suits like the present might lead to various difficulties and anomalies. Apart from the difficulty of applying to ordinary sales in the mofassil the second date mentioned in the third column—the date of the acceptance of the title—cases might occur in which the first date, "the time fixed for completing the sale," could not be applied without absurdity or injustice. It must be remembered that under s. 55 (4) (b) of the Transfer of Property Act the vendor's charge does not arise, as in England, as soon as there is a valid contract for sale, though there may be no actual conveyance, and the time for completing the sale has arrived without payment of the purchase-money. It arises only "where the ownership of the property has passed," that is, not until the actual completion of the sale by (where the property is worth Rs. 100 [459] or upwards,) a registered instrument. If, for any reason, the sale were not completed, and if consequently the charge did not arise until more than three years after "the time fixed for completing the sale," the effect of applying art. 111 would be that the remedy was barred before the right had come into existence. In many, if not most, cases the right would not come into existence until some part at least of the prescribed period had elapsed. On the whole, although there are difficulties in the way of either interpretation, I have come to the conclusion that that adopted by the Bombay High Court is supported by stronger reasons and involves fewer anomalies than that of the Madras High Court. In this view of the case I think that the decree of the lower appellate Court dismissing the suit was wrong, that this appeal should be allowed, the decree of the lower appellate Court set aside, and the case remanded to that Court under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure for disposal of the appeal on the merits. The appellant to have his costs of this appeal. Other costs will abide the result.

BANERJI, J.—I concur in the order proposed by the learned Chief Justice and in the reasons by which it is supported. The question is not one free from difficulty; but any other conclusion would create anomalies which we are not justified in assuming the Legislature contemplated.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

21 A. 460 (P.C.)=1 Bom. L.R. 226=3 C.W.N. 427=22 M. 398=9 M.L.J. 67=
26 I.A. 113=7 Sar. P.C.J. 330.

1899
MARCH 11.

[460] PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT AT THE HEARING OF THE APPEAL FROM MADRAS :

Lords Hobhouse and Macnaghten, and Sir Richard Couch.

[On appeal from the High Court at Madras.]

SRI BALUSU GURULINGASWAMI (Appellant) v. SRI BALUSU
RAMALAKSHMAMMA AND OTHERS (Respondents).

[11th, 15th and 16th February, 1898, 11th March, 1899]

PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 460

(P.C.)=1

Bom. L. R.

226=3

C.W.N. 427=

22 M. 398=

9 M.L.J. 67=

26 I.A. 113=

7 Sar. P.C.J.

330.

PRESENT AT THE HEARING OF THE APPEAL FROM THE N.W.P. :

Lords Herschell, Watson, Hobhouse and Macnaghten, and Sir Richard Couch.

[On appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces at Allahabad.]

RADHA MOHAN, REPRESENTATIVE OF BENI PRASAD, DECEASED, (Appellant) v. HARDAI BIBI AND ANOTHER (Respondents).

[6th and 18th July, 1898, and 11th March, 1899.]

Hindu law—Adoption—Validity of the adoption of the only son of his natural father.

On the general question as to the validity by Hindu law of the adoption of the only son of his natural father decided in one judgment upon these two appeals, held that such an adoption is valid by that law.

The authority of a widow, in reference to adoption, not being indetical in different schools of Hindu law, it was held, on a question peculiar to the appeal from Madras, that it is there established in regard to the giving of a boy in adoption by the widow of his natural father that, unless there has been some express prohibition by the husband, the wife's power with the concurrence of sapindas, where the concurrence of sapindas is required, is co-extensive with the power of the husband. The adoption of an only son is not an act so improper but that a widow has power to effect it with the assent of the sapindas in the absence of express power from her husband.

[F., 24 B. 367 (F.B.) ; 25 B. 537 (541) ; Rel., 19 Ind. Cas. 254 (255) ; R., 30 A. 197 = 5 A.L.J. 200 = A.W.N. (1908) 79 ; 23 B. 789 (795) ; 32 B. 619 = 10 Bom. L.R. 948 ; 30 C. 965 (971) ; 26 M. 291 (308) ; 31 M. 446 (450) ; 7 C.W.N. 871 ; 3 Ind. Cas. 207 (219).]

THE first appeal heard on the 11th, 15th and 16th February, 1898, was from a decree (25th September, 1894) of the High Court of Madras affirming a decree (20th September, 1893)* of the District Judge of Godavari.

The decree from which this appeal was preferred, affirmed on appeal the dismissal by the original Court of the suit, which was brought to have set aside an adoption made on the 10th November, 1881, by the first defendant-respondent, Ramalakshammamma, the childless widow of Butchi Sarvarayuda, the last male owner of two villages, now claimed by the plaintiff-appellant as the nearest collateral relation of the deceased's husband.

[461] The adopted son, Pattabhiraya, the second defendant-respondent, was the only son of a kinsman of the deceased. The widow had adopted him with the assent of her late husband's sapindas, several of whom had assented in writing. The natural father of the boy had died

An abridged report is here given of the appeal from Madras. The full report of it will be found in its place in the I.L.R. 22 Mad. 398.

* 18 M. 53.

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 460
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L. R.
226 = 3
C.W.N. 427 =
22 M. 398 =
9 M.L.J. 67 =
26 I.A. 113 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
330.

when the latter was a few months old. It was found below that he had expressed his approval of this adoption.

The first and principal question raised in both the appeals, in which one judgment dealing with both was given by their Lordships, was whether the adoption of an only son was valid by Hindu law. In the first, or Madras appeal, a further question related to the power of the widow respectively to give and take with legal effect.

An appeal from the judgment of the first Court, which had upheld the adoption as valid, was heard by a Division Bench (Muttusami Ayyar and Shephard, JJ.) whose judgments are reported at length in Gurulingaswami v. Ramalakshmana (1). They followed a series of decisions in Madras in favour of the validity of an only son's adoption, but did not examine the judgments of the High Courts elsewhere, some of which were to the contrary.

On this appeal Mr. J. D. Mayne appeared for the appellant.

Mr. J. H. A. Branson and Mr. A. Phillips, for the respondents.

The arguments are reported in I. L. R., 22 Mad., for the year 1899.

Their Lordships' judgment was given after the second appeal had been heard.

The second appeal, heard on the 6th and 18th July, 1898, was from a decree (2) (18th March, 1892) of the High Court of the North-Western Provinces at Allahabad, affirming a decree (21st November, 1887) of the Subordinate Judge of Benares.

The appellant was the son of the original plaintiff Beni Prasad who brought his suit on the 31st March, 1886, to have it declared that Ram Prasad, the second defendant-respondent, was not the [462] adopted son of Chaudhri Jaganath Prasad, the deceased husband of Hardai Bibi, the first defendant-respondent. The ground of the suit was that Ram Prasad having been the only son of his father the adoption was invalid and void.

Chaudhri Jaganath Prasad died without issue in 1858, leaving Hardai Bibi, his childless widow, and heiress, in possession for life of his property.

To her he had given a power to adopt. This power she exercised on the 16th December, 1858, on which date Govind Prasad, the natural father, executed a deed signifying the gift in adoption.

The adoption was in the Dattaka form. The parties were Agarwala Banias of Benares. It was not suggested that there was, apart from the Hindu law, any special custom that would affect the validity of the adoption.

The Subordinate Judge, following the judgment of a majority of the Judges of a Full Bench of the High Court in Hanuman Tiwari v. Chirai (3) upheld the adoption, and, refusing the relief sought, dismissed the suit.

On an appeal to the High Court a Division Bench (Mahmood and Young, JJ.) referred the following questions to the Full Court (Edge, C. J., Straight, Mahmood and Knox, JJ.). The referring order (10th June, 1894) stated that of the Full Bench in 1879 (Stuart, C.J., Spankie, Pearson, Turner and Oldfield, JJ.) Turner, J., had not concurred in the judgment; that there had been no reported case since 1879 to show that this judgment had been followed; that there had been, on the other hand, two unreported cases referred to the Full Court by Division Benches, but these had been disposed of on points other than the question referred, the validity or invalidity of the adoption. The following were the questions now referred.

(1) 18 M. 53.

(2) Beni Prasad v. Hardai Bibi, 14 A. 67.

(3) 2 A. 164.

First, the adoption of an only son having taken place, in fact, is such an adoption null and void? Second, if so, generally, does the subsequent birth of sons to the natural parents of the son given in adoption have retrospective effect to validate it. [463] Third, does the circumstance that the adopted son is Sagotra, or descended from one common ancestor with the adopted father, render his case an exception to the general rule of prohibition against the adoption of only sons?

The unanimous opinion of the Court, delivered on February 4th, 1892, was that the adoption of an only son, which had in fact taken place, was not null or void under the Hindu law applicable. The first question having been so answered it was not necessary that the second or third question should be answered.

This having been returned the appeal was accordingly dismissed by the Division Bench on the 18th March, 1892.

On this appeal, preferred by the son and representative of Beni Prasad, Mr. C. W. Arathoon, for the appellant, argued that the adoption of an only son was altogether void under the Hindu law. The absolute prohibition which had come down from the Smritis had received effect in many modern decisions. For the general principles of adoption he referred to Huradhun Mookurjia v. Muthoranath Mookurjia (1). The religious and legal aspects of adoption were inseparable. In Manu, Chapter IX, vv. 137, 138, 168, although the adoption of an only son was not expressly forbidden, the duties to be performed of a religious character were inconsistent with such an adoption. It was, however, to the texts of Baudhayana, of Vasishtha, and of Saunaka, that the prohibition was mainly to be referred. The adopted son's duty, as that of a son, was to perform rites, which would, according to the Hindu religion, benefit three preceding generations, the father, grandfather, and great-grandfather; Colebrooke's Digest, Vol. III, 242, 296; Baudhayana's texts was against such an adoption. The other text was that of Saunaka; Dattaka Mimamsa, s. IV, cls. 1 to 7. Vasishtha was quoted on the Mitakshara only to the extent that it said: "Let no man give, or accept, an only son;" Mitakshara, ch. 1, ss. 11 and 12, Stokes' Hindu Law Books, 416; Dattaka Chandrika, s. 1, cl. 27; Vyavahara Mayuka, ch. IV, cl. 9.

[464] Taking the European writers, Sir F. W. Macnaghten in his "Considerations on Hindu Law," p. 147; Strange, J., in his Manual, p. 23; Sutherland in his "Synopsis"; Steel in "Laws and Customs of Hindus in the Deccan," p. 183; West and Buhler in their "Hindu Law," pp. 908, 1040, had stated their belief that the adoption of an only son was contrary to the Hindu law. It was submitted that Sir W. H. Macnaghten came to the same conclusion. Sir T. Strange only, at the time when he wrote the comments found in ch. IV of Vol. I of his Hindu Law, seemed to be of the contrary opinion. West and Buhler had added that the Mitakshara did not recognise the distinction that the adoption may be valid, however improper, after having been made. It pronounced against the adoption without reserve. Jaganatha pointed out that, according to the Mithila Shasters, the gift of an only son was illegal. Colebrooke's Digest, Book V, T. 275; 1 Strange Hindu Law 87; 1 W. Macnaghten's Hindu Law 67. The Shastris, expounding the law, had pronounced against this adoption, except in certain cases in which they had been 1899

MARCH 11.

—
PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 460

(P.C.) = 1

Bom. L. R.

226 = 3

C.W.N. 427 =

22 M. 398 =

9 M.L.J. 67 =

26 I.A. 118 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

330.

(1) 4 M.I.A. 414.

1899
MARCH 11. embarrassed by the inapplicable doctrine "factum valet." The Tagore Law Lectures, 1880, p. 534, by Mr. Rajkumar Sarvadhikari, referred to the Dattaka Chandrika III, 17, as to the prohibition "Let not a man give his only son."
—
PRIVY
COUNCIL. The argument for the appellant then was that the Full Bench judgment of the majority of the Judges in the North-Western Provinces High Court in Hanuman Tiwari v. Chirai (1), had been mainly based on a judgment of the Madras High Court in Chinna Gaundan v. Kumara Gaundan (2), where the Chief Justice, Sir C. Scotland, had considered himself bound by previous decisions. That case was afterwards followed by another in Madras, V. Singamma v. Vinjamuri Venkatacharlu (3), with the same result, the support of the adoption. But the true view of the law was afterwards taken in the Bengal case, Raja Upendra Lal Roy v. Srimati Rani Prasannamayee (4), by Dwarkanath [465] Mitter, J. The current of decisions in Madras had commenced with the cases of 1862 and of 1868, having since then been in the direction of upholding the validity of the adoption.

21 A. 460
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L. R. 226 = 3
C.W.N. 427 =
22 M. 398 =
9 M.L.J. 67 =
26 I.A. 113 =
7 Sar. P.C.J. 330.

The last cited Bengal case was followed by Manick Chunder Dutt v. Bhuggobutty Dosee (5), in which the authorities were examined by Markby, J., in a judgment in which Garth, C.J., had concurred against the validity of the adoption. In fact, whilst the Madras and North-West Provinces Courts had, in the majority of cases, supported the adoption of an only son, the Bengal and Bombay Courts had in the main, concluded to the contrary, and had denied its validity.

It was then argued that, in the judgments now under appeal, the High Court had attributed too much to new interpretations of Sanskrit texts by eminent Sanskrit scholars, but who had not hitherto been recognised as of weight equal to that of Sutherland, Colebrooke, and Ellis. Reference was made to Mr. Mandlik's work, and to the Tagore Law Lectures of 1888 by Golap Chandra Sarker Sas'ri. Thakoorain Sahiba v. Mohun Lall (6) was next cited in which the danger of superseding former well-settled authorities was pointed out by Sir J. Colvile. Again, in Waman Raghupati Bova v. Krishnaji Kashiraj Bova (7) the High Court of Bombay declined to be guided by new readings of old texts, at variance with the accepted authority. Also reference was made to Minakshi v. Ramanada (8) in which Muttusami Ayyar, J., had spoken of commentaries generally received as authorities, among which he had reckoned the Dattaka Mimamsa. That treatise, and the Chandrika especially, had been, without sufficient grounds, underrated in the judgment now appealed from. These works had for more than a hundred years been recognised by all the Indian Courts as of great authority on questions of adoption. Reference was then made to Rungama v. Atchama (9), and to The Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga Sathupathy (10). In connection with the estimation in which the two last [466] mentioned treatises, which were, it was true, comparatively modern, were held, the observations of Banerji, J., in his judgment in Bhagwan Singh v. Bhagwan Singh (11), where he sets forth repeated recognitions of their value by the Courts, should be regarded.

Again, a new rule had been applied, or canon of construction, termed Jaimini's rule: to the effect that, in construing the ancient Sanskrit texts,

(1) 2 A. 164.

(2) 1 M. H. C. R. 54.

(3) 4 M. C. H. R. 165.

(4) 1 B.L.R. 221.

(5) 3 C. 443.

(6) 11 M I.A. 386 (403).

(7) 14 B. 249.

(8) 11 M. 49 (52).

(9) 4 M.I.A. 96.

(10) 12 M.I.A. 397.

(11) 17 A. 294.

a precept was to be held only a recommendation, and not to be obligatory as a law, where a reason for the precept was given. This rule had not yet been applied by any Court. 1899 MARCH 11.

The judgment now appealed from could hardly be said to be founded on the same grounds that were taken in the Madras High Court, though the same result had been arrived at. In the Madras cases, at least in those preceding the latter few, support of this adoption had been found in the maxim "factum valet," at all events to some considerable extent. But that maxim could not be applied to give legal effect to such an act as the adoption of a man's only son. It was definitely prohibited in the sacred texts, and was therefore contrary to Hindu law. — PRIVY COUNCIL.

Mr. J. D. Mayne and Mr. G. E. A. Ross, for the respondent. Ram Prasad argued that the Courts below had rightly held that the adoption was valid in law. The following of this precept of the Sanskrit texts depended on the degree of strictness with which the Hindu system prevailed among varying classes. In Bengal where Brahmanism was the guide, this was the basis on which rested the unanimity with which the pandits and the law courts adhered to the rule excluding the only son from being adopted. In connection with this the judgment of Mitter, J., in Raja Upendra Lal Roy v. Srimati Rani Prasannamayee (1) was referred to. In other provinces the precept was more often disregarded, and the terms in which it was expressed were open to the doubt whether it was of the greater or less obligation. It might be that the less strict observance of it corresponded with a more lax degree [467] of Hinduism. In Madras, for instance, the admonition, or prohibition, whichever it might be, was not regarded by the Dravidian races, who were not, in adopting a son, influenced by the purposes of their religion at all. That the father's position in a future existence would be improved by the performance of ceremonies which a son, natural or adopted, alone could perform, was not in their thoughts. The Manual of Madras Administration, p. 71, and the Madras Census of 1891, XIII, p. 128, were referred to. In Bombay the Full Bench decision in Waman Raghupati Bova v. Krishnaji Kashiraj Bova (2) followed a decision upon an application for a certificate of succession, where the parties were Lingayets. A similar question arising in a suit between parties of that caste, it was established that the custom among them was to make no exception of the only son as being one not to be adopted. In the present case the parties were Agarwalas. The majority of that caste appeared to be Jains. Reference was made to Sherring's "Castes of the Hindus," p. 285, and to Golap Chandra Sastri on adoption, p. 452. The Jains performed no ceremonies for the dead. The fact that the admonition against the adoption of an only son, as given by Vasishtha and the other Rishis, was observed by those who in religion were Hindus, did not lead to the inference that the texts were applicable to those who in name only were Hindus. Counsel would not again state the different views of the authorities which had been discussed in the appeal from Madras. They referred again to the Tagore Law Lectures of the Sastri Golap Chandra Sastri and they argued that only admonition was intended as prescribed in the texts. The comparatively recent date of the Mimamsas, 1623 A. D., should be considered, and the apparently modern stress laid on the religious feeling in connection with the law should not be allowed to control every aspect of the question. 21 A. 460 (P.C.) = 1 Bom. L. R. 226 = 3 C.W.N. 427 = 22 M. 398 = 9 M.L.J. 67 = 26 I.A. 113 = 7 Sar. P.C.J. 330.

(1) 1 B.L.R. 221.

(2) 14 B. 249.

1899

MARCH 11.

PRIVY

COUNCIL.

21 A. 460

(P.C.)=1

Bom. L. R.

226=3

C.W.N. 427=

22 M. 398=

9 M.L.J. 67=

26 I.A. 113=

7 Sar. P.C.J.

330.

Mr. C. W. Arathoon replied.

Their Lordships' judgment on both the appeals was delivered on the 11th March, 1899, by Lord Hobhouse.

JUDGMENT.

[468] The first of these two cases, which comes from Madras, was argued in February, 1898, but the judgment was postponed for the hearing of the second, which comes from Allahabad. The reason was that each case raises a question of general importance on which different views have been taken by different High Courts, and it was agreed on all hands to be advantageous that the two litigations should be under consideration at the same time. The Allahabad appeal was argued in the month of July last, and their Lordships are now prepared to state their opinions on both cases.

In the Madras case, the plaintiff sued as one in the line of succession to the last owner of an estate who had died without issue. The principal defendant was a boy who had been adopted by the last owner's widow with the consent of the family gnatis or savindas. The plaintiff claimed a declaration that the adoption was invalid. His main ground was that the adopted boy was the only son of his father. The defendants showed that the natural father of the boy authorized his widow to give him in adoption in the way which was actually effected between the two widows, and that the plaintiff himself in his character of sapinda was a party to the transaction. In addition to asserting the legal validity of the adoption, they pleaded that the plaintiff was estopped by his concurrence in it.

The District Judge gave no opinion on the point of estoppel. He found that the law in Madras was settled, and he gave judgment in the following terms:—

"The case illustrates how the people of this Presidency have settled down under the law as enunciated by the Madras High Court so long ago as 1862, and re-affirmed in 1887, and it is impossible to say how many adoptions of only sons may have been made during the last thirty years on the faith of such enunciation of the law, and what innumerable rights might be disturbed by any contrary decision after such a lapse of time."

The case was heard on appeal before the late Judge, Sir T. Muttusami Ayyar and Mr Justice Shephard, who affirmed the [469] decree below. The learned Judges did not express any original opinion of their own on the main question. They thought that there was no estoppel because at the date of the adoption nobody thought of its being illegal. As to its legal validity they found that all the Madras decisions had been in its favour, and that the Madras Courts were right in following an unbroken current of authority in that Presidency, notwithstanding differences of view in other Courts.

At this Bar two points have been taken: first that the gift or reception of an only son in adoption is invalid in law; and secondly that, if not invalid when the boy is received by the adoptive father or given by the natural father, it is so improper that in the absence of express authority given by a husband his widow has no power to effect it.

In the Allahabad appeal it is not necessary to make any statement of facts because the decree appealed from depends entirely on the answer given to a question referred by a Division Bench of the High Court to a Full Bench. That question is as follows:—

"The adoption of an only son having taken place in fact, is such adoption null and void under the Hindu law?" That abstract question is the only one raised in the case lodged by the appellant and the only one argued at this Bar. The High Court answered it in the negative. Mr. Arathoon has contended in a learned argument that it ought to be answered in the affirmative.

As regards the second question raised in the Madras case, which is peculiar to that case, their Lordships feel no difficulty. The only authority for the argument of the appellants is the opinion of the late Sir Michael Westropp, delivered in the case of Lakshmappa v. Ramava, which was decided in the High Court of Bombay in the year 1875, and a report of which was after long delay inserted in the 12th Bomb. H. C. R., page 364. That learned Judge held that, assuming that a man's only son may be given in adoption by himself, yet if he has not expressly given to his widow an authority to make such a gift, it cannot be implied by law. [470] Now the authority of a widow to give or take in adoption differs in different schools of Hindu law. Their Lordships are not re-trying this Bombay decision. In Madras it is established, as the learned Judge Muttusami Ayyar shows, that, unless there is some express prohibition by the husband, the wife's power, at least with concurrence of sapindas in cases when that is required, is co-extensive with that of the husband. That is certainly the simplest rule, and it seems to their Lordships most consistent with principle. The distinction taken by Westropp, C.J., appears to have been quite novel, and also at variance with a decision by his predecessor, Sir Mathew Sausse. There may be some peculiarity in the school of law which prevails in Bombay to support it, though it has not been brought to their Lordship's notice, but if there is any such it does not apply to these parties in Madras. On this point therefore their Lordships agree with the learned Judges below.

What remains to them is the difficult task of deciding the more general question which is common to both the appeals. The difficulty which first meets the eye is the variety of judicial opinions and of opinions in treatises, which during the last quarter of a century have been gathering into definite opposite channels in the different areas of jurisdiction. There are also other difficulties beyond. Many of the judicial decisions relied upon are embodied in imperfect reports or in mere notes of points. The question is complicated by the use of different modes of adoption not always clearly specified, and by the intrusion of special local or tribal customs. And the original authorities on which all the conflicting opinions alike are based are written in Sanskrit, which for many centuries has been a dead language known only to a few learned people, which hardly any of those who have been called to judgment have understood, the translations of which are more or less disputed, and of which it is averred, probably with truth, that its exact phases of meaning cannot be caught except by those who have studied closely and as a whole the language and the works of the particular writer under consideration. Their Lordships have, [471] however, one advantage over their predecessors in these inquiries. The greater attention paid of late years to the study of Sanskrit has brought with it more translations of the sacred Hindu books and closer examinations of texts previously translated. And in the Allahabad case especially, the appellants' side was argued in the High Court by Mr. Banerji, who is stated by the Court to be familiar with Sanskrit, and it is the subject of a very elaborate judgment by Mr. Justice Knox, who is a student of Sanskrit, and as he tells us has paid special attention to the 1899

MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 460
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L. R.
226 = 3
C.W.N. 427 =
22 M. 398 =
9 M.L.J. 67 =
26 I.A. 113 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
330.

1899
MARCH 11. books of Manu and Vasishttha. Perhaps the most convenient course will be to set out the more important texts which have been brought into discussion, then to see how they have been treated by recent commentators and by judicial decisions, stating finally the conclusions to which their Lordships have with these aids been brought.

PRIVY
COUNCIL. The most revered of all the Rishis or sages is Manu, who, though he says nothing specific on the point now in issue, is referred to as favouring one side or the other. The passages cited are as follows. They are in Ch. IX:—

21 A. 460
(P.C.)=1
Bom. L. R.
226=3
C.W.N. 427= "By the eldest son as soon as born a man becomes the father of 22 M. 398= "male issue, and discharges his debt to his pitris or progenitors. That 9 M.L.J. 67= "son alone by whose birth he discharges his debt to his fore-fathers and 26 I.A. 113= "through whom he attains immortality, was begotten from a sense of 7 Sar. P.C.J. "duty." He adds sentences to affirm the powers, privileges and duties of 330. the first-born, and his great importance in the family."—VV. 106—109.

"By a son a man obtains victory over all people, by a son's son he attains immortality, then by the son of that son he reaches the region of Brabma."—V. 137.

"Since the son delivers the father from the region called Put, he was therefore called Putra by Brahma himself."—V. 128.

"Whom the mother or the father give with water a son in distress similarly endowed with affection he is to be deemed a datrima one brought forth."

In the three last quotations their Lordships have followed the words of Mr. Justice Knox, who says that he has attempted to [472] follow the text word by word without interpolating or taking away any particle, and that on that account his style is rough.—(See Record,* and Golap Chandra, Treatise on Adoption, p. 282.)

Near to Manu in point of antiquity and of authority comes Vasishttha, around whose utterance on the point in issue the greater part of subsequent comments has clustered. His writings have been translated by Dr. Buhler and published in the work entitled "Sacred Books of the East" which has been edited by Professor Max Muller. The passage in that translation is as follows, Ch. XV:—

(1) Man formed of uterine blood and virile seed proceeds from his mother and his father as an effect from its cause.

(2) Therefore the father and the mother have power to give, to sell, and to abandon their son.

(3) But let him not give or receive in adoption an only son.

(4) For he must remain to continue the line of ancestors.

(5) Let a woman neither give or receive a son except with her husband's permission.

On the record † Mr. Justice Knox gives his own translation which does not appear to differ substantially, though it does slightly in form, from that of Dr. Buhler.

Another ancient sage is Saunaka, of whom a text is quoted in the Dattaka Mimamsa of Nanda Pandita as follows:—

Section IV, Para 1. "In reply to the question as to the qualification of the person to be affiliated Saunaka declares: 'By no man having an only son (eka putra) is the gift of a son to be ever made; by a man having several sons (bahu putra) such gift is to be made on account of difficulty (prayab natas).'"

* [IX, 247, 248.—ED.]

† [p. 249.—ED.]

Next in time is Yajnavalkya, whose writings, with comments by Vijnanesvara, constitute the Mitakshara, a work of very high authority all over India. The material passages are as follows in Mr. Colebrooke's translation, Ch. 1, Sec. XI :—

Para. 9. "So Manu declares 'He is called a son given (datrima) whom his father or mother affectionately gives as a son [473] being alike [by class] and in a time of distress, confirming the gift with water.'"

Para. 10. "By specifying distress it is intimated that the son should not be given unless there be distress. This prohibition regards the giver [not the taker]."

Para. 11. "For an only son must not be given [nor accepted] for Vasishtha ordains 'Let no man give or accept an only son.'"

Para. 12. "Nor though a numerous progeny exist should an eldest son be given, for he chiefly fulfils the office of a son, as is shown by the following text 'By the eldest son as soon as born a man becomes the father of male issue.'"

The above mentioned writings are all classed among the Smritis, which are held by orthodox Hindus to have emanated from the Deity, and to have been recorded, not like the Sruti in the very words uttered by that Being, but still in the language of inspired men. They contain precepts whose authority is beyond dispute, but whose meaning is open to various interpretations, and has been, and is, the subject of much dispute, which must be determined by ordinary processes of reason. The Dattaka Mimamsa stands on a different footing. It is not older than the 17th century A.D. and does not claim any but human origin. Indeed its translator, Mr. Sutherland, says that it is, "As its name denotes, an argumentative treatise or disquisition on the subject of adoption; and though from the author's extravagant affectation of logic the work is always tedious, and his arguments often weak and superfluous, and though the style is frequently obscure and not unrarely inaccurate, it is on the whole complied with ability and minute attention to the subject, and seems not unworthy of the celebrity which it has attained." Moreover it was written during Muhammadan rule and cannot be the work of a law-giver or judge. The date of the Dattaka Chandrika is not certain, but it is at all events very much later than the Smritis, and it stands only on the footing of a work by a learned man. Messrs. West and Buhler in their valuable work on Hindu Law (3rd Edition, page 11) [474] speak thus: "The Dattaka Mimamsa and the Dattaka Chandrika, the latter less than the former, are supplementary authorities on the Law of Adoption. Their opinions however are not considered of so great importance but that they may be set aside on general grounds in case they are opposed to the doctrines of the Vyavahara Mayukha or the Dharmasindhu and Nirnayesindhu." This is spoken with special reference to Bombay or Western India. But both works have had a high place in the estimation of Hindu lawyers in all parts of India, and having had the advantage of being translated into English at a comparatively early period,* have increased their authority during the British rule. Their Lordships cannot concur with Mr. Justice Knox in saying that their authority is open to examination, explanation, criticism, adoption or rejection like any scientific treatises on European jurisprudence. Such treatment would not allow for the effect which long acceptance of written opinions has upon social customs, and it would probably disturb recognised law and settled arrangements. But so far as saying that caution is required in accepting their glosses where they

1899

MARCH 11.

—

PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 460

(P. C.) = 1

Bom. L. R.

226 = 3

C.W.N. 427 =

22 M. 398 =

9 M.L.J. 67 =

26 I.A. 113 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

330.

1899 deviate from or add to the Smritis their Lordships are prepared to concur
MARCH 11. with the learned Judge.

— The passages in the Dattaka Mimamsa are as follows: They are PRIVY contained in S. IV, Para. 1, is that which gives the saying of COUNCIL. Saunaka already quoted. Para. 2. — "He, who has one son only, is 'eka-
21 A. 460 "putra' or one having an only son: by such a one the gift of that son
(P.C.) = 1 "must not be made; for a text of Vasishtha declares 'an only son let no
Bom. L. R. "man give &c.'" Para. 6. The writer comments on the word "ever" as 226 = 3 used by Saunaka thus: "In a time of calamity: accordingly, Narada says
C.W.N. 427 = "a deposit, a son, and a wife, the whole estate of a man who has issue 22 M. 398 = "living, the sages have declared unalienable, even by a man oppressed
9 M.L.J. 67 = "by grievous calamities: although the property be solely that of the man 26 I.A. 113 = "'himself.' This text also regards an only son, for it is declaratory of 7 Sar. P.C.J. "the same import as the texts of Saunaka and Vasishtha." Para. 8.—
330. "The writer [475] comments on Saunaka's words:—"By no man having "an only son," thus:—"From this prohibition the gift by one having two "sons being inferrible, this part of the text ('By one having several "sons, &c.') is subjoined, to prohibit the same by one having two sons also."

The Dattaka Chandrika (S. 1, para. 27) only repeats Vasishtha's saying, and couples it with the obligation to adopt a brother's son if there is one.

Their Lordships do not propose to spend much time in a close examination of the recent commentators. They have been very carefully sifted in the Indian Courts, and naturally so, seeing what was the paucity and obscurity of judicial authority until within the last thirty years or so. The principal effect which they have on the mind is to show the great variety and uncertainty of opinion on the question now in issue. The earliest of those referred to is Jagannatha, a learned Hindu lawyer employed by Sir W. Jones to compile a digest. He thought that the prohibition in the Smritis is only moral and not legal. That also is the opinion of the two latest writers, both deeply versed in the Sanskrit language—Mr. Mandlik, who appears to have translated the texts of Saunaka, and Mr. Golab Chandra Sarkar, who has written a treatise on adoption. Sir Thomas Strange writing in the year 1830 expresses an opinion in the body of his treatise that the prohibition is monitory only—Vol. 1, page 87. On the other hand the weighty opinions of Mr. Colebrooke, Sir Francis Macnaghten and Mr. Sutherland are thrown into the scale; and that of Mr. Justice Strange is also cited to the same effect, and is supposed by some to express the latest opinions of his father, Sir Thomas Strange. But it may be observed that Sir Francis Macnaghten and Mr. Justice Strange found their opinions on the wickedness of the act in question, and that the adoption of an eldest son is placed by Mr. Justice Strange on precisely the same footing as that of an only son, and is ranked by Sir F. Macnaghten as a heinous crime, though not so heinous as the adoption of an only son. Their Lordships think that the authority [476] of recent text writers must not be stated more favourably to the present appellants than is stated in the book of Messrs. West and Buhler. Expressing no opinion of their own, those learned writers, say "if he have but one son, the gift of that one" is everywhere reprobated "as a grave spiritual crime. By most the gift is thought invalid." Their Lordships turn now to the more solid ground of judicial decision.

In Madras the course of decision has been very simple. In 1862 the High Court decided that the adoption of an only son, however sinful, was valid in law. It has been shown by Mr. Mayne that a previous decision then relied on was misapprehended by the learned Judges. But that was not the sole ground of their decision; they also relied on learned opinions and they agreed with those opinions. And the same High Court has since that time had the same question brought before it more than once; three times it is stated in one of the judgments below. There has been no fluctuation in their decisions. It must be taken that the law in Madras has ever since been settled in favour of the present respondents.

In Allahabad also the condition of judicial decisions is simple. In 1879 the question was brought before a Full Bench of the High Court consisting of Sir Robert Stuart and Sir Charles Turner, who were English barristers, and three eminent civilians—Justices Pearson, Spankie, and Oldfield. The Court decided in favour of the adoption, Sir C. Turner dissenting. In the year 1889, some doubts were expressed on the point by Justices Straight and Mahmood, and that circumstance, coupled with the delivery of adverse opinions by the High Courts of Calcutta and Bombay, led to the rather unusual course of referring the same question to a Full Bench, of which Mr. Justice Mahmood was one. The result has been a unanimous decision supported by judgments of the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Knox, which are remarkable for research and fullness of treatment.

In Bengal there has been more fluctuation of opinion. The law was quite unsettled in the year 1868. It would be of little [477] use now to examine the earlier decisions in the Sudder Dewani Adalat and the Supreme Court. That has been done with great care by Sir William Markby in a case about to be mentioned. The first case which raised the exact question in the High Court was heard in the year 1868 before Justices Dwarkanath Mitter and Louis Jackson. The judgment was delivered by Mr. Justice Mitter. After quoting passages from the two above-mentioned Dattaka treatises the learned Judge lays the law down thus: "The institution of adoption as it exists among the Hindus is essentially a religious institution. It originated chiefly, if not wholly, from motives of religion; and an act of adoption is to all intents and purposes a religious act, but one of such a nature that its religious and temporal aspects are wholly inseparable. 'By a man destitute of male issue only' says Manu, 'must the substitute for a son of some one description always be anxiously adopted for the sake of the funeral cake, water and solemn rites.' It is clear therefore that the subject of adoption is inseparable from the Hindu religion itself and all distinction between religious and legal injunctions must be inapplicable to it."

There is no doubt that this judgment has exercised very great influence on the controversy; and indeed if the learned Judge's fundamental position were sound there could be no controversy at all. Let us assume for this purpose, though it is matter of grave dispute, that the learned Judge is right in saying that adoption originated in motives of religion and not in the ordinary human desire for perpetuation of family properties and names. Still the question is whether certain precepts have a legal or only a religious bearing. What is there in the subject matter of adoption which makes it clear that all precepts relating to it must bear a legal character? The learned Judge does not discuss that question. He begs it, merely stating that his own inference clearly follows from Manu's text. Their Lordships think that the doctrine propounded by him is equally opposed to a reasonable construction of the books apart from decision, and to decided cases. [478] Indeed

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 460
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L.R.
226 = 3
C.W.N. 427 =
22 M. 398 =
9 M.L.J. 67 =
26 I.A. 113 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
330.

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 460
(P.C.)=1
Bom. L. R.
226=3
C.W.N. 427=
22 M. 398=
9 M.L.J. 67=
26 I.A. 113=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
330.

to show how far the doctrine is from being universally applicable it would not be necessary to go further than the passage which the learned Judge himself cites from Manu, though of course differences may be suggested between prohibitory and mandatory injunctions. Manu prescribes adoption on the score of religion. According to Mr. Justice Mitter this is necessarily a legal injunction, yet nothing is clearer than that there is no legal compulsion upon a Hindu to adopt a son, however irreligious it may be in him not to do it. There is not even any legal compulsion on his widow to do it, when he is dead and cannot have a natural son. But the principle laid down is so important, goes so deep down to the root of these questions, and has exercised such influence, that their Lordships think it necessary to discuss it at length, for which this will be a convenient place.

Their Lordships had occasion in a late case to dwell upon the mixture of morality, religion, and law in the Smritis. Rao Balvant Singh v. Rani Kishori (1). They had to decide whether a prohibition on alienation of property away from a man's family, certainly based on religious grounds, had a purely religious or also a legal bearing. They then said:—"All these old text books and commentaries are apt to mingle religious and moral considerations not being positive laws, with rules intended for positive laws. In the preface to his valuable work on Hindu law Sir William Macnaghten (2) says 'it by no means follows that because an act has been prohibited it should therefore be considered as illegal. The distinction between the "vinculum juris" and the "vinculum pudoris" is not always discernible.'" They now add that the further study of the subject necessary for the decision of these appeals has still more impressed them with the necessity of great caution in interpreting books of mixed religion, morality and law, lest foreign lawyers, accustomed to treat as law what they find in authoritative books, and to administer a fixed legal system, should too hastily take for strict law precepts which are meant to appeal [479] to the moral sense, and should thus fetter individual judgments in private affairs, should introduce restrictions into Hindu society, and impart to it an inflexible rigidity never contemplated by the original law-givers.

The late extension of the study of Sanskrit has apparently resulted not in weakening but in strengthening the cited opinion of Sir William Macnaghten. Of course their Lordships do not presume to form any opinion on questions of Sanskrit grammar, but they observe that Mr. Golap Chandra, who is frequently referred to in the judgments below, contends as a matter of grammar that words (e.g. those of Saunaka) which have been translated in the imperative form of command should take that of recommendation. Mr. Mandlik insists on the same view, and Mr. Justice Knox says that he originally took a contrary view but has been brought round by the authority of Mandlik and another Sanskrit scholar, Mr. Whitney.

Let us see now how Mr. Justice Mitter's principle accords with actual decisions. The controversy respecting eldest sons, whether or not they can be given in adoption, has a strong bearing on the present question. Manu attaches the highest importance to the character of an eldest son. The relevant passages from his Institutes have been quoted above.

(1) 25 I. A. 54 at p. 69.

(2) ["Principles and Precedents of Hindu Law," Volume I, Preliminary Remarks, Page VI.—ED.]

No specific prohibition is contained in these passages, but the reasonable inference from them is given in the Mitakshara in Ch. 1, Sec. XI, Para. 12, which has been already quoted. This express prohibition has been taken by some to be a legal rule, and has been enforced by modern writers of weight as before stated, and in legal decisions. It would certainly fall within Mr. Justice Mitter's principle. But it is quite abandoned; all over India as their Lordships understand; and the prohibition is held to be a matter for religious consideration only. It was the subject of careful examination and express decision by Justices Markby and Romesh Chander Mitter in the case of Janokee Debea v. Gopaul Acharjea (1).

[480] Again it is laid down that the giver of a son ought to have more than two sons. The text of Saunaka quoted above says that the gift is to be made by one having several sons (Bahuputra). The Dattaka Mimansa, Sec. IV. 8 lays it down that the Sanskrit word signifies more than two, and that Saunaka's precept was introduced for the express purpose of excluding the inference that a man with two sons might give one in adoption. The Dattaka Chandrika Sec. 1, 29 and 30, declares the same law. The precepts are precise, and yet their Lordships cannot find that anybody asserts them to be law in any but the religious sense.

Another precept is that a Hindu wishing to adopt a son should adopt the son of his whole brother in preference to any other person. That question came before this Board in the year 1878 in a case in which the Subordinate Judge had held the adoption to be invalid for violation of this precept, and the High Court were of a contrary opinion. This Board held that the terms of the precept were contained in both the Dattaka Mimansa and the Dattaka Chandrika, and they are founded on the Mitakshara. Nevertheless they held that it is not a precept of law. They referred to the opinions of English text-writers to support them. No decision in point was cited, and probably there is none in the books.

One of the conditions for adoption laid down by Manu in the passage first quoted from him is that there must be distress. This is emphasized in the Mitakshara, Chap. 1, s. 11, Para. 10: "The son shall not be given unless there be distress," which appears to mean that the giver must be in distress." "This prohibition," it continues, "regards the giver," and then occur the words "not the taker," apparently interpolated by the learned Benares lady who wrote under the name of Balam Bhatta. The Dattaka Mimansa, s. IV, 20 says: "No distress existing, the giver commits a sin on account of the prohibition." If then the giver commits a sin the taker who enables him to do it cannot be free from sin; and if the commission of a sin makes the transaction void in law there can be no gift and consequently [481] no adoption. And yet nobody contends for the legal force of this prohibition. It does not appear that in cases of adoption any inquiry is ever made about the distress of the natural father.

It is clear that the principle laid down so confidently by Mr. Justice Mitter as paramount in cases of adoption is repeatedly repudiated in practice; and in the Bengal case next to be cited the learned Judges while following the conclusion of their predecessors, dissociated themselves from the fundamental reason assigned for it.

Moreover this sweeping doctrine of Mr. Justice Mitter is not consistent with the prevalence of exceptional customs or other interferences with the law. The extent to which the Smritis admit of special customs has 1899

MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 460
(P.C.)=1
Bom. L.R.
226=3
C.W.N. 427=
22 M. 398=
9 M.L.J. 67=
26 I.A. 113=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
330.

(1) 2 C. 365.

1899
MARCH 11.
PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 460
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L.R.
226 = 3
C.W.N. 427 =
22 M. 398 =
9 M.L.J. 67 =
26 I.A. 113 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
330.

not been argued in these cases and their Lordships cannot easily form any judicial opinion about it. But in a discussion about the sources of Hindu law by Dr. Jolly published in 1883 (see p. 33), that learned Sanskrit scholar states grounds for holding that customs are only recognised by the Smritis when they do not contravene divine laws.

Mr. Arathoon has impressed upon their Lordships more than once during this argument that the texts he relies on are held to emanate from the Divine Power. If then that power has said that certain modes of adoption shall be null and void, how can any human practices lawfully limit its operation? And yet the validity of local or tribal customs to adopt only sons is asserted by every jurist. In the Punjab such a custom is received as the general law of that large area, and it governs the relations of the eight millions or so of the Hindus (Jats, Brahmans, Rajputs, and others) who live there; and that, though the sources of their law are the same Smritis which are followed in other parts of India. The inference is that among numerous Hindu communities the prohibition of the Smritis on this point has not been received as invalidating the transaction.

Again, if the religious and legal injunctions were co-extensive, it would place both Courts of justice and legislatures in a very [482] delicate position when dealing with such matters. Suppose that in this Madras case the Court had upheld the plea of estoppel; it would have set up a judicial rule to bar the working of a divine law. Suppose that the statutory six years had elapsed and that the suit had been barred by time; then the legislature would be interfering to bar the working of a divine law. In each case a separation would have been made between those religious and temporal aspects which Mitter, J., declares to be wholly inseparable. Yet the British rulers of India have in few things been more careful than in avoiding interference with the religious tenets of the Indian peoples. They provide for the peace and stability of families by imposing limits on attempts to disturb the possession of property and the personal legal status of individuals. With the religious side of such matters they do not pretend to interfere. But the position is altered if the validity of temporal arrangements on which temporal courts are asked to decide is to be made subordinate to inquiries into religious beliefs.

No system of law makes the province of legal obligation co-extensive with that of religious or moral obligation. A man may, in his conduct or in the disposition of his property, disregard the plainest dictates of duty. He may prefer an unworthy stranger to those who have the strongest natural claims upon him. He may be ungrateful, selfish, cruel, treacherous to those who have confided in him and whose affection for him have ruined them. And yet he may be within his legal rights. The Hindu sages doubtless saw the distinction as clearly as we do, and the precepts they have given for the guidance of life must be construed with reference to it. If a transaction is declared to be null and void in law, whether on a religious ground or another, it is so; and if its nullity is a necessary implication from a condemnation of it, the law must be so declared. But the mere fact that a transaction is condemned in books like the Smritis does not necessarily prove it to be void. It raises the question what kind of condemnation is meant.

[483] It is true that the learned Judges Mitter and Jackson refer to the texts of the Dattaka Mimamsa and Chandrika. But according to the paramount principle laid down by them those texts could only be read in one way. That principle is in fact the sole ground of the decision, and as it cannot be admitted the decision is deprived of weight.

The next case in Bengal was decided in the year 1878 by Chief Justice Garth and Mr. Justice Markby, Manick Chunder Dutt v. Bhuggobutty Dossee (1). In delivering judgment Sir W. Markby reviews with great care and discrimination the then existing authorities, judicial and non-judicial, and he shows that only in four cases had the point been brought before the Highest Courts of Appeal in India. There had been no decision at that time in Allahabad. The Madras High Court supported the adoption; so apparently did the Bombay High Court, for the judgment of Chief Justice Westropp which threw doubt upon the point, though delivered in 1875, was not reported as early as 1878. The learned Judge states the ground of his decision thus: "It appears to me therefore that the vast preponderance of authority, if not the entire authority in Bengal, is against the validity of the adoption of an only son, and if we were to hold the adoption of the plaintiff in this case to be valid it would be necessary to overrule both the carefully considered decision of Jackson and Dwarkanath Mitter, JJ., and equally careful decision of four Judges of the Sudder Court. This of course could only be done by a Full Bench. But we could only refer the case to a Full Bench if there is a conflict of authority, or if we ourselves differ from these decisions. Having gone through all the cases with great care I do not think it can be said that there is any such conflict of authority in Bengal as to justify us in referring the case to a Full Bench on that ground, and I am not prepared to refer the case to a Full Bench upon the ground that I myself think the adoption of an only son valid. On the contrary, on the best consideration I [484] have been able to give to the authorities, I think such an adoption ought in Bengal to be held to be invalid wherever the effect of holding such adoption to be valid would be to extinguish the lineage of the natural father and so to deprive the ancestors of the adopted son of the means of salvation."

This is a very instructive judgment and entitled on all grounds to great respect; and it is with great respect that their Lordships, being obliged to differ either from it or from other High Courts, proceed to note some points which detract from its weight. As to the vast preponderance of authority in Bengal, there were only two decided cases. One was before the Sudder Dewani Adalat and is reported in 3 Select Reports, p. 232 (2). The report does not show any examination of the question by the learned Judges themselves. Their decision appears to rest wholly upon the opinion of Pandits, who in their turn content themselves with a simple citation of texts. The other decision rests entirely on a principle which is untenable, as Sir W. Markby himself showed the year before in the case of Janokee Debea (3). Moreover the Court in 1878, hardly addressed itself to the question why the injunctions relating to the only son are imperative and legal while those which relate to the eldest son are only monitory or religious. In 1877 Sir W. Markby says that while the latter prohibition is only monitory the former is clear; referring, as their Lordships suppose, to the differences of expressing in Colebrooke's translation of the Mitakshara. In 1878 he intimates that the stronger objection to the adoption of an only son is based on religious grounds, on which their Lordships remark that Manu ascribes a character to the eldest son which affords strong religious 1899

MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 460
(P.C.)=1
Bom. L. R.
226=3
C.W.N. 427=
22 M. 398=
9 M.L.J. 67=
26 I.A. 213=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
330.

(1) 3 C. 443 (460, 461). (2) Nundram v. Kishore Pande, 6 I.D. (O.S.) 906. (3) 2 C. 365.

1899 grounds against his adoption, and that they do not find themselves competent to put such grounds in the balance against one another, so as to decide which is the stronger.

MARCH 11. —

PRIVY On this point they add that there seems to have been a great deal of exaggeration used in urging the religious topic throughout this controversy; especially in later times. Manu says that by the eldest son as soon as born a man discharges his debt to his [485] progenitors; and it is through that son that he attains immortality. According to him the son serves his father's spiritual welfare at the moment of his birth.

COUNCIL. —

21 A. 460 There is no intimation that if the boy dies the next day, or fails to have a son, this service is obliterated. Why then should it be so if the boy is adopted? It is true that Manu attributes additional value to the firstborn son and grandson. It may be that such further benefit is lost by adoption, as it would be by death, but that is a very different thing from depriving the ancestors of the adopted son of the means of salvation, which have been already attained. Vasishtha, whose text is the fundamental one, does not rest his injunction on spiritual benefit at all, but he says that the only son is to continue the line of his ancestors; one of the very commonest of human motives for desiring legitimate issue. Nor does he make any allusion to "Put" here, or, if Mr. Justice Knox is right, elsewhere. If he was really thinking of the spiritual benefits of the son's ancestors as the ruling consideration, it is inexplicable that he should not have said so. Moreover, their Lordships asked during the argument why a man who had given a natural son in adoption could not afterwards, if he was so minded, adopt another; and neither authority nor reason was adduced to show that he could not.

(P.C.)=1

Bom. L. R. 226=3

C.W.N. 427=

22 M. 398=

9 M.L.J. 67=

26 I.A. 113=

7 Sar. P.C.J. 330.

That is the state of authorities in Bengal. The question has never come before a Full Bench, and it seems to their Lordships that there is only one decision, viz., that of 1878, to which great weight is to be attached.

In Bombay, after a Division Bench had decided in favour of validity, the question was discussed before another Division Bench in the year 1875; Lakshmappa v. Ramava (1). The case was decided on another ground, as has been mentioned above. But the Chief Justice, Sir M. Westropp, delivered an elaborate judgment containing his reasons for holding the adoption of an only son to be invalid. Those reasons appear to have been adopted by the Court including Sir M. Westropp himself in [486] a subsequent case which was decided in 1879 but has never been reported. In 1889 the question was referred to a Full Bench, who simply followed the unreported case. See I.L.R. 14 Bom. 249 (2). Sir C. Sargent, then Chief Justice, delivered judgment. He pointed out that prior to Lakshmappa v. Ramava (1) the decisions in Bombay were in favour of validity; that the judgment of Sir M. Westropp in that case was the first that treated the point with due consideration; and that as the opinion there expressed had been adopted by a Full Bench, it was not proper to review it. The decision was necessarily in favour of invalidity. The law in Bombay therefore rests on the authority of the unreported case of 1879, which itself rests on the reasoning contained in the judgment of 1875.

In that judgment the learned Chief Justice makes more elaborate reference to the Smritis than is contained in any judgment earlier than the present Allahabad case. He dwells emphatically on Colebrooke's translation of the Mitakshara, showing that with regard to the only son the expression "must not," and with regard to the eldest the expression "should not," is employed. He adds that the distinction is even more strongly marked in the Mayukha, which is received as a high authority in Bombay. On this point their Lordships interpolate again the remark that they are not re-trying the Bombay decision and that the effect of the Mayukha has not been argued before them. He then examines decisions by Bombay Courts prior to the establishment of the High Court, which certainly exhibit a confusion of legal opinion. The authority of the High Court up to 1875, though not perhaps very decisive, was in favour of validity. From this, and from the decision of the Madras Court, the learned Chief Justice differs. He cites the passages of Smritis and law books and English text-writers with which we have now been made familiar. And his decision apparently is founded on the language of Colebrooke's Mitakshara and on the judgment of Mr. Justice Mitter. Their Lordships have already stated their reasons for thinking that the latter of these foundations is unsound. The value of the former will be examined presently. [487] They have also stated above that the point actually decided in this case is a novel suggestion of the learned Chief Justice, and is unsustainable in principle, and unsupported by authority unless there be something peculiar to Bombay to support it.

(1) 12 B.H.C.R. 364.

(2) Waman Raghupathi Bova v. Krishnaji Kashiraj Bova, 14 B. 249.

Before leaving this judgment their Lordships ought to state their concurrence with the learned Chief Justice in his remarks on the so-called doctrine of factum valet. That unhappily expressed maxim clearly causes trouble in Indian Courts. Sir M. Westropp is quite right in pointing out that if the factum, the external act, is void in law, there is no room for the application of the maxim. The truth is that the two halves of the maxim apply to two different departments of life. Many things which ought not to be done in point of morals or religion are valid in point of law. But it is nonsensical to apply the whole maxim to the same class of actions and to say that what ought not to be done in morals stands good in morals, or what ought not to be done in law stands good in law. Sir M. Westropp has, not without cause, reduced the ambiguous maxim to its proper meaning.

Such was the state of judicial authority in India prior to the present cases. For as regards the Punjab, it is true that in the early days of the Chief Court Judges have pronounced opinions in favour of the adoption under general Hindu law; and in 1874 Melville and Thornton, JJ., pointed out that the turning point of the controversy was Mr. Justice Mitter's judgment of 1868. But after the first reported case in 1867, the decisions there have turned on the popular customs into which the Government had the prudence to inquire immediately after the annexation, and which they made the foundation of law. The Punjab therefore may be omitted in our estimate of judicial authority. The reasons against the validity of the adoption of an only son are contained in the three judgments of the learned Judges Mitter, Markby and Westropp. The point has never come before this Board for decision. It has been alluded to in two cases but in so indirect a way that though the authority of the Board is relied on by both sides, it is not available for either. The foregoing remarks represent all [488] the light which has been thrown on the Smritis to which after all we must recur to decide the question.

In addition to the remarks already made on the bearing of Manu's texts, those of Mr. Justice Knox upon his silence are worthy of attention. Manu mentions three conditions for a good gift of a boy in adoption.

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 460
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L.R.
226 = 3
C.W.N. 427 =
22 M. 398 =
9 M.L.J. 67 =
26 I.A. 113 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
330.

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
21 A. 460
(P C.)=1
Bom. L.R.
226=3
C.W.N. 427=
22 M. 398=
9 M L J. 67=
26 I.A. 113=
7 Sar. P.C J.
330.

The natural father must be in distress; the boy must be "similar," apparently meaning of the same caste with the adoptive father; and he must be affectionate. Nothing is said about his having brothers, which is now represented as a vital condition the breach of which is a sin, a heinous crime as some writers have called it, and as annulling the transaction. It seems very unlikely that Manu should either have viewed it in that light, or with his very high notions of the value of the first-born should have overlooked the point altogether.

The crucial text is that of Vasishtha. He first states the parents' power in the most sweeping terms, and derives it from causes affecting every child that is born into the world. The power is to later ideas, whether Hindu or English, an extravagant one; but it accords with what we know of the early stages of other nations and probably did not shock the contemporaries of Vasishtha, though the sage Apastamba, who is perhaps of equal antiquity, denies the right to give away or sell a child (Prasna II, Patala 6, Khanda 13, paras. 6—11.* A man may sell his son—no restriction of purpose is expressed—or he may even abandon him. But then comes an injunction expressed in terms which may amount to a command or may be only a recommendation, viz., that an only son should not be given or accepted. The first remark to be made upon this is akin to the one just made upon Manu. If Vasishtha intended to except an only son from the father's power to give in adoption why did he not say so? It would have been much more simple. But he first states the power, and far greater powers, in the broadest terms, and then adds a qualification which is, to put it at the highest, in ambiguous terms. That looks much more like an appeal to the moral sense not to exercise the power than a denial [489] of its existence. In this respect the case resembles that of the father's power to alienate family property: which indeed is the light in which Vasishtha seems to regard a son. The power is given, while the action is condemned in terms consistent with actual prohibition. After long controversy it has been settled by a great preponderance of Indian authority culminating in a decision by this Board, that the power exists, and that the prohibition, though a solemn warning as to the spiritual responsibility of exercising it, is not efficacious in law.

In examining this question their Lordships are again at great disadvantage in not knowing Sanskrit. In the absence of agreement among Sanskrit students they cannot adopt the representations made, though by learned men, to the effect that as a matter of grammar Vasishtha's injunction imports admonition rather than command. So with respect to what has been called Jaimini's rule, which is so much relied on by Chief Justice Edge. That author who wrote in the 13th century appears to have been received as a high authority on the interpretation of Smriti texts. He lays down the rule that all precepts supported by the assignment of a reason are to be taken as recommendations only. That, if sound, would be conclusive as to Vasishtha's text. But it is rather startling, and a very intimate acquaintance with the Smritis would be needed before admitting its truth. It has not been brought forward in any case prior to this case from Allahabad. It may, however, fairly be argued that one who, having the power to give an absolute command, gives an injunction not expressed in unambiguous terms of absolute command but resting on a reason, is addressing himself rather to the moral sense of his hearers than to their duty of implicit obedience. So far Vasishtha's reason, founded as it is on temporal and not on religious considerations, gives some, though not every strong, support to the respondent's theory.

* [Sacred Books of the East, Volume II, pages 130, 131.—ED.]

The text of Saunaka is open to two obvious remarks. One is that the injunction not to give an only son is couched in the same terms as the injunction to give a son if there are more than two. The latter of these cannot possibly be [490] obligatory. The other remark is that, as Nanda Pandita in the Dattaka Mimamsa points out, Saunaka in effect prohibits a gift in adoption when there are only two sons; and that is a prohibition which has never been regarded as obligatory. Saunaka does not help the appellants, but rather lends weight against them.

Then comes the Mitakshara. We have seen that Sir M. Westropp emphatically, and Sir W. Markby possibly, rely on the difference of expressions in Colebrooke's translation. The passages from their judgments have been quoted above, and so have the passages from the Mitakshara (Sec. 1, Ch. XI, paras. 10, 11, 12). Now it has been brought out in the arguments that precisely the same expressions of injunction are used by the author in these three paragraphs. To fortify their knowledge their Lordships have inquired of one of the most eminent of Sanskrit scholars, Professor Max Muller, and he has courteously informed them that as a matter of fact the three expressions are identical, and as a matter of grammar are, in his judgment, equally capable of expressing obligation or recommendation. Now paragraphs 10 and 12 have been observed on before. It has been placed beyond dispute in point of law that neither is obligatory. It requires some good reason to show why, when the same expression is used in three consecutive sentences, it should be construed one way in the first and third and another way in the middle one. No such reason has been given. It is an unfortunate thing that in translating a law book Colebrooke should have used different English words to represent the same Sanskrit word. He has certainly misled at least one judge in a leading case. As the matter is now shown to stand, the Mitakshara must be taken to bear strongly against the appellants.

In intimating that Sir M. Westropp was misled by Colebrooke their Lordships have not overlooked the fact that in 1889 Sir C. Sargent thought that Sir M. Westropp was aware of the state of the Sanskrit text. It seems, however, next to impossible that Sir M. Westropp should have known that Colebrooke's variations of expression were not authorised by the original, [491] and should have said nothing about it; seeing that it deprives his emphatic reference to those variations of all meaning. If indeed he knew the state of the Sanskrit text and thought it so immaterial as not to deserve notice, he practically treated Colebrooke as the original authority and his reasoning does not thereby gain but loses in force.

The material passages in the two Dattaka books have been indicated before and remarks have been made on those which quote and comment on Saunaka. It seems to their Lordships that the authors, who bring in the older texts at every turn, did not mean to do more than repeat and enforce them. If they were clearly laying down any additional precepts or authoritative interpretations of ambiguities, then, though, as Mr. Justice Knox points out, such comments should be received with some caution, they should also be received with due regard to the authority which the books have acquired. But on this topic the writers seem anxious to found themselves entirely on the Smritis and to refer their readers back to them. Certainly on the crucial point now in issue they throw no light at all. They do not touch the question whether the injunction not to adopt

1899

MARCH 11.

PRIVY

COUNCIL.

21 A. 460

(P.C.) = 1

Bom. L.R.

226 = 3

C.W.N. 427 =

22 M. 398 =

9 M.L.J. 67 =

26 I.A. 213 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

330.

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 460
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L.R.
226 = 3
C.W.N. 427 =
22 M. 398 =
9 M.L.J. 67 =
26 I.A. 113 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
330.

only sons is a matter of positive law or only addressed to the moral sense. And yet Jaimini's treatise written some centuries earlier than the Dattaka Mimamsa must have made the latter of the writers, if not both, familiar with the importance of that distinction.

It is, however, worth while to observe how Nanda Pandita deals with the consequences of a forbidden adoption. He quotes Manu's requirement that the adopted son should be "similar," and he says (s. II, paras. 22, 23), "Hence it is established that one of a different class cannot be adopted as a son." In s. III, he recurs to that prohibition and asks "should this rule be transgressed what would be the case?" Then he deduces from texts of Saunaka and Katyayana, that the adopted son shall not share in the inheritance, but shall be entitled to food and raiment. So that the adoption is not void, but the son of the wrong class is reduced to a claim for maintenance only. With this exception [492] which favours the appellants' theory, it seems to their Lordships that these two treatises leave the question exactly where it stands on the earlier authorities.

From both the Courts below we learn that there is no resentment excited by this kind of adoption. The District Judge of Godavery says "the people have settled down under the law enunciated in 1862." He can hardly recollect the state of things prior to 1862; but his statement of the present state of things is founded on personal knowledge. Whether the people have settled down under the High Court decisions, a result which is usually of very slow growth if it takes place at all, or whether, as is more probable, that decision was in accordance with the ordinary existing ideas and practice, we are told that in point of fact there is no conflict between the declared law and the feelings of the people. Nor is there any indication that there ever was such a conflict. In Allahabad the parties are Agarwala Banias of Benares, who are, as two of the learned Judges below state, specially careful of caste and religious observance. The adoption was twenty years old and no caste penalties had followed it. These things do not prove a custom, but they do tend to prove that among orthodox Hindus the adoption of only sons has never been so inculcated as a sin by their teachers as to excite abhorrence or social hostility, such as we know to follow some other breaches of their religious laws. That the practice is a frequent one is shown by the frequency of litigated cases, which must be quite insignificant in number as compared with those that actually occur, and from the establishment of customs authorising it in various places. This is not one of the cases in which people are tempted by appetite to break an acknowledged law. It is inconceivable that the choice of an only son for adoption can in any large number of cases proceed from any other cause than a conviction of its suitability to the circumstances. That is a family matter which a wise lawgiver, while warning parties of their spiritual responsibility, would yet leave it possible for them to do. The Hindu sages appear to have taken that course in this and kindred matters.

[493] Their Lordships then have a case before them of which the broad outlines are as follows. Old books, looked on as divine, give to the father plenary powers over his sons. The same books discountenance the giving of an only son in terms which may be construed as a positive command making the gift void or as a warning pointing out the mischief of the act but leaving individual men to do it at their peril. The books contain no express statement which kind of injunction is meant. The practice of such adoption is frequent. Over some substantial portions of Hindu society it is established as a legal custom, whatever may be the general law. In other very large portions it is held to be part of the general Hindu law. Nowhere is it known to be followed by hatred or social penalties. Pausing there, the case is one in which if the authoritative precepts are evenly balanced between the two constructions, the decision should be in favour of that which does not annul transactions acceptable to multitudes of families, and which allows individual freedom of choice.

But what says authority? Private commentators are at variance with one another; judicial tribunals are at variance with one another; and it has come to this, that in one of the five great divisions of India the practice is established as a legal custom, and of the four High Courts which preside over the other four great divisions, two adopt one of the constructions and two the other. So far as mere official authority goes there is as much in favour of the law of free choice as of the law of restriction. The final judicial authority rests with the Queen in Council. In advising Her Majesty their Lordships have to weigh the several judicial utterances. They find three leading ones in favour of the restrictive construction. The earliest of them (in Bengal 1868) is grounded on a palpably unsound principle and loses its weight. The second in time (Bombay 1875) is grounded in part on the first and to that extent shares its infirmity; and in part on texts of the Mitakshara which are found to be misleading. So that it too loses its weight. The third (Bengal 1878) is grounded partly on the first, and to that extent shares its infirmity, but it rests in [494] great measure on more solid ground, viz., an examination of commentators and of decided cases. It fails, however, to meet the difficulty of distinguishing between the injunction not to adopt an only son and other prohibitive injunctions concerning adoptions which are received as only recommendatory; the only discoverable grounds of distinction being the texts of the Mitakshara which are misleading, and the greater amount of religious peril incurred by parting with an only son, which is a very uncertain and unsafe subject of comparison. The judicial reasoning then in favour of the restrictive construction is far from convincing. That the earliest Madras decision rested in part on a misapprehension of previous authority has been pointed out; and the Madras reports do not supply any close examination of the old texts or any additional strength to the reasoning on them. The Allahabad Courts have bestowed the greatest care on the examination of those texts, and the main lines of their arguments, not necessarily all the byways of them, command their Lordships' assent. Upon their own examination of the Smritis their Lordships find them by no means equally balanced between the two constructions, but with a decided preponderance in favour of that which treats the disputed injunctions as only monitory and as leaving individual freedom of choice. They find themselves able to say with as much confidence as is consistent with the consciousness that able and learned men think otherwise, that the High Courts of Allahabad and Madras have rightly interpreted the law and rightly decided the cases under appeal.

Their Lordships have been reminded of the length of time for which the law must have been considered as settled in Bombay and Calcutta. A similar consideration affected the Courts of Madras and Allahabad and is remarked on by both. The time is not very long in any of the four provinces, but it is long enough to increase the gravity of the questions in these appeals. In estimating the weight of reasoning in the various litigated cases their Lordships have not forgotten the weight of the actual decisions; that they represent the opinions of eminent and responsible men,

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 460
(P.C.)=1
Bom. L.R.
226=3
C.W.N. 427=
22 M. 398=
9 M.L.J. 67=
26 I.A. 113=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
330.

1899 [495] arrived at after public and anxious discussion carrying with them
 MARCH 11. an authority not legally disputable in the provinces under their jurisdiction, — and it may be affecting many minds and many titles to property or to PRIVY personal status. Such decisions are not lightly to be set aside. A Court COUNCIL. of Justice, which only declares the law and does not make it, cannot, as — the Legislature can, declare it with a reservation of titles acquired under a 21 A. 460 different view of it. But their Lordships are placed in the position of (P.C.) = 1 being forced to differ with one set of Courts or the other. And so far as Bom. L.R. the fear of disturbance can affect the question, if it can rightly affect it at 226 = 3 all, it inclines in favour of the law which gives freedom of choice. People
 C.W.N. 427 = may be disturbed at finding themselves deprived of a power which they 22 M. 398 = believed themselves to possess and may want to use. But they can 9 M.L.J. 67 = hardly be disturbed at being told that they possess a power which they 26 I.A. 113 = did not suspect and need not exercise unless they choose. And so with 7 Sar. P.C.J. titles. If these appeals were allowed, every adoption made in the North-
 330. West Provinces and in Madras under the views of the law as there laid down may be invalidated, and those cases must be numerous.
 Whereas in Bengal and Bombay the law now pronounced will only tend to invalidate those titles which have been acquired by the setting aside of completed adoptions of only sons, and such cases are probably very few.
 Whether they demand statutory protection is a matter for the Legislature and not for their Lordships to consider. It is a matter of some satisfaction to their Lordships that their interpretation of the law results in that course which causes the least amount of disturbance.

Their Lordships will humbly advise Her Majesty to dismiss both appeals and the appellants must pay the costs.

Solicitors for appellant—in the appeal from the North-West Provinces: Messrs. T. L. Wilson and Co.

Solicitors for respondents: Messrs. Pyke and Parrott.

Solicitor for appellant—in the appeal from Madras: Mr. R. T.
Tasker.

Solicitors for respondents: Messrs. Keen, Rogers, and Co.

21 A. 496 (P.C.) = 1 Bom. L.R. 400 = 3 C.W.N. 502 = 26 I.A. 58 = 7 Sar. P.C.J. 523.

[496] PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT:

Lords Watson and Hobhouse, and Sir Richard Couch.

[On appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces.]

BENI RAM AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs) v. KUNDAN LAL AND OTHERS
 (Defendants). [16th and 20th February and 11th March, 1899.]

Law of landlord and tenant as to building by the tenant on the land—Acquiescence of lessor—Terms of special leave to appeal in this suit.

A lessor is not restrained by any rule of equity from bringing a suit to evict a tenant, the term of whose lease has expired, merely by reason of that tenant's having erected permanent structures on the land leased, such building having been within the knowledge of the lessor, and there not having been any interference on his part to prevent it.

To raise an equitable estoppel against the lessor precluding him from suing, on the determination of the tenancy, for possession, the tenant should show facts sufficient to justify the legal inference that the lessor has by plain implication contracted that the right of tenancy should be changed into a right of permanent occupancy. Acquiescence by the lessor in this case was a legal inference to be drawn from such facts as were found. The onus of establishing sufficient cause for an equitable estoppel had not been discharged by the tenant in this instance.

Ramsden v. Dyson (1), and s. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, referred to.

Special leave to appeal had been granted on terms that the appellants should be liable to pay the respondents' costs in any event, if directed so to do. Costs were, however, directed to be paid by the respondents.

[F., 28 C. 738=5 C.W.N. 858 (862) ; 33 C. 1119=3 C.L.J. 616=10 C.W.N. 765 ; 6 A.L.J. 57=A.W.N. (1908) 282=1 Ind. Cas. 821 ; 4 C.L.J. 198 ; Appl., 29 A. 652 (657, 658)=4 A.L.J. 556=(1907) A.W.N. 231 ; 28 B. 440 (446)=6 Bom. L.R. 440 ; A.W.N. (1904) 70 ; R., 23 B. 789 (795) ; 35 B. 182=13 Bom. L.R. 92 (99)=9 Ind. Cas. 765 ; 27 C. 570 (584) ; 37 C. 662 (665) ; 27 M. 211 (213, 214)=14 M.L.J. 25 ; 4 A.L.J. 252-N ; 19 A.W.N. (1899) 191 ; 20 A.W.N. (1900) 191 ; 24 A.W.N. (1904) 70 ; 5 C.W.N. 846 (857) ; 6 C.W.N. 134 (140) ; 6 C.W.N. 352 (356) ; 8 C.W.N. 235 (237) ; 21 M.L.J. 891=10 M.L.T. 193 (202)=11 Ind. Cas. 745 ; 8 M.L.T. 258=7 Ind. Cas. 202 ; 17 Ind. Cas. 208 (209)=12 P.R. 1912=209 P.L.R. 1912=197 P.W.R. 1912 ; P.L.R. (1900) 303 (308) ; 100 P.L.R. 1908=31 P.W.R. 1908 ; D., 22 A.W.N. (1902) 60.]

APPEAL by special leave, on terms, from a decree (26th January 1894) of the High Court affirming a decree (21st April 1892) of the Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, who affirmed a decree (27th July 1891) of the Munsif of Hathras, dismissing the appellant's suit with costs.

This suit was brought on the 30th August 1890 by the representatives of the original lessors of six bighas of land to dispossess the successors of the original lessees, and to obtain the removal of the houses built on the land. Special leave to appeal had been obtained by the plaintiffs, whose suit had been dismissed on the ground that an equitable estoppel against them caused by their having acquiesced in the building, had been established.

This leave to appeal was granted in regard to the question of law which the case presented. This was whether it was a good [497] ground of defence that predecessors in the tenancy had erected permanent buildings on the land, without the owners having interfered to prevent the building, which was within their knowledge. There was no stipulation that the tenants should have an extended term.

The appellate Courts below had decided in favour of the defendants, on the ground of there having been an equitable estoppel upon the plaintiffs in consequence of their predecessors having acquiesced in the building. The original lease had been made in 1858, for the term of the settlement then current. The successors of the former owners of the land served the defendants with notice to quit possession on the 30th June 1890, with which notice the defendants had not complied.

The facts of the case, the expiration of the original lease, and the bringing of the subsequent tenancy-at-will to an end, appear in their Lordships' judgment, as well as the decisions of the courts below.

Mr. H. Cowell, for the appellants, argued that the lease of 1858 having expired and the subsequent tenancy having been determined by notice, the respondents had no right to resist eviction by the owner of the land. The tenants had built without having any good reason for believing that the land would be subject to their permanent occupancy. The inference drawn by the Courts below that the plaintiffs' predecessors had acquiesced in the acts of the defendants in building on the land was not the well-founded, or legal, inference. The facts found by the two Courts

(1) (1865) L.R. 1 E. and I.A. 129.

1899

MARCH 11.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 496

(P.C.)=1

Bom. L.R.

400=3

C.W.N. 502=

26 I.A. 58=

7 Sar. P.C.J.

523.

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 4: 6
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L R.
400 = 3
C.W.N. 502 =
26 I.A. 58 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
523.

must be accepted, but not the conclusion that the facts amounted to permission or acquiescence. He cited Ramsden v. Dyson (1), where it was decided that if a tenant so builds he does not, in the absence of special circumstances, acquire a right to prevent the landlord from taking possession of the land when the tenancy has been determined. The case was distinctly different from this, where a tenant builds in the belief that he is entitled [498] to claim, afterwards, a lease, and the landlord allows him so to build, knowing that the tenant is acting in that belief, and does not interfere to correct the error. There it might be that the tenant had an equity to claim a lease. But nothing of the kind occurred here.

Mr. W. H. Upjohn, Q. C., and Mr. G. E. A. Ross, for the respondents, referred to the kabuliyat containing the terms of the lease of 1858. Therein was a clause which, they contended, should be read as written in contemplation of a continuance of the relation of landlord and tenant after the time of the settlement then current. The lower appellate Court and the High Court in concurrence had found that the plaintiff's predecessors in interest had acquiesced in the erection of the buildings; and it was argued that the above clause, coming from the lessors had justified the lessees in concluding that they would have some further interest after the expiration of the original term. There were then special circumstances. Again, the finding of acquiescence had been before the Court on a second appeal, which was confined to the question of law, and the High Court had rightly held that under the circumstances the appellants were estopped from suing to eject the respondents. Reference was made to the Transfer of Property Act, IV of 1882, s. 108, cls. (h) and (p), and to Shibdas Bandapadhyaya v. Bamandas Mukhapadhyaya (2).

Mr. H. Cowell, in reply, submitted that the respondents' long resistance to a just claim was a ground for their being required to pay the costs of this appeal, notwithstanding that the special leave to appeal had been obtained on the terms that, if ordered so to do, the appellants would pay those costs.

JUDGMENT.

Their lordships' judgment was afterwards, on the 11th March, given by LORD WATSON.—In November 1858, Bhawain Das, and Dhani Ram, bankers of Hathras, and owners of the mauza Ramanpur, let to five tenants, whose interests are now represented by the respondents in this appeal, six bighas of land, for the term of the current [499] settlement, for the construction thereon of a saltpetre factory, at the annual rent of Rs. 28. The conditions of the lease appear from the kabuliyat executed by the tenants, on the 17th November 1858, which, so far as material, are as follows:—"That, until the lease money is continued to be paid, "the malguzars (persons who pay the revenue) shall not be competent to "dispossess me within the foresaid term, nor shall I be competent within "it to give up the land. After the settlement, the parties shall be bound "to carry out the order of the Government, if any, issued by it. I have "therefore executed these presents, by way of a kabuliyat, in order that "they may serve as evidence, and be of use in time of need."

The appellants having acquired, by purchase, the interest of the original lessors, on the 1st August 1859, served a notice upon the respondents requiring them to quit possession of the lands upon the 30th June 1890. The respondents did not comply with the notice; and the appellants, on the 30th August 1890, brought a suit for their ejectment in the Court of the Munsif of Hathras. The plaint inter alia craves decree for removal of the material of the houses built by the ancestors of the respondents lying on the said lands.

(1) (1865) L. R. 1 E. and I. A. 129.

(2) 8 B.L.R. 237.

The respondents, in their written statement, amongst other defences to the action, pleaded that the predecessors of the appellants, "after the completion of the saltpetre factory for which the lands were taken on lease, saw that from time to time houses were built, and the defendants, and the ancestors of the defendants, spent several thousands of rupees on building, and they instead of objecting, or prohibiting, induced the defendants and their ancestors to build."

The Munsif received evidence on nine issues, but in his judgment, which was given on the 29th June 1886, he only dealt with the first and second of them. Upon the first, which related to an amendment obtained by the appellants, he found in their favor. Upon the second, he found that the notice of removal given by the appellants upon the 1st August 1889 was not according to [500] law. With regard to the remaining issues, from three to nine inclusive, the learned Judge observed:—"There is sufficient material to dispose of all these issues, but since issue No. 2 is decided against the plaintiffs, and it is held that the suit must fail, there is no further necessity to enter into the trial of these issues." Accordingly, in respect of his finding upon his second issue, he dismissed the suit.

An appeal was taken from the Munsif's judgment to the first appellate Court, being that of the Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, who, on the 21st April 1892, affirmed the decree appealed from, although on a different ground. The Subordinate Judge dealt with three issues, the first and third having reference to the validity of the notice upon which the action of ejectment was based, and the second being:—"Was the land in dispute only let for the construction of a saltpetre factory, and what is the effect of the plaintiffs or their predecessors having acquiesced in the defendants or their predecessors having built upon the land after the saltpetre factory had ceased to exist?"

The Subordinate Judge, differing in opinion from the learned Munsif, held that the notice to quit possession, which the appellants had given, was valid in law. Upon the second issue, he found the following facts, upon which the decision of this appeal has come to depend:—"The tenancy, as I have already stated, was originally created for the construction of a saltpetre factory, but we have the evidence of the plaintiffs' own witness Khyali Ram and Chokey Lal, patwari of the village, to show that saltpetre was only manufactured here for four or five years; that since 20 years shops have existed on the land, and that since 12 or 14 years pacca shops have been built. Inside the enclosure, the evidence shows, are rooms (?) erected 18 or 20 years ago, a pacca as well as a katcha well. It is also proved in the most unmistakable manner that the former owner of the land saw the buildings and did not prohibit their construction. The plaintiffs' evidence, moreover, shows that, even on their calculations the buildings cost Rs. 1,000, or Rs. 1,500. [501] The evidence of Gobind Prasad, their witness, is that the buildings cost about Rs. 900. Jugal Kishore makes them worth Rs. 800. Khyali Ram says nothing on the point, while the patwari deposes that the buildings are worth Rs. 1,000 or Rs. 1,500. On the other hand, the defendant Kundan Lal and his witnesses' evidence shows that there are 12 shops, some katcha and some pacca, now standing on this land; that 1899

MARCH 11.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 496
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L. R.
400 = 3
C.W.N. 502 =
26 I.A. 58 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
523.

1899
MARCH 11. " they have been built between Sambat 1918 and 1935 ; that in addition — " to the shops are dalans and kothas, two wells, the one katcha and the PRIVY " other pacca, and a temple, all costing between three and four thousand COUNCIL. " rupees. The evidence also shows in the most unmistakeable manner, — " that not only did the original lessee not object to the enclosing of these 21 A. 496 " buildings when they were being erected, and stood by, but that by (P.C.)=1 " continuing to receive rents from the lessees, even after the erection of Bom. L.R. " the buildings, and even though the saltpetre factory, for which the land 400=3 " was let, had ceased to exist, he sanctioned the lessees doing so. His C.W.N. 502= " successors are therefore equitably estopped from now suing for the 6 I.A. 58= " lessee's ejectment. The case is governed by what was said in Gopi v.
7 Sar. P.C.J. " Bisheshwar (Weekly Notes for 1885, page 100)."

523.

The rule or principle thus adopted by the Subordinate Judge, which is reported to have been laid down in Gopi v. Bisheshwar, is thus stated by him :—"If a man permits another to build upon his land, and, with the knowledge that the building is being erected, stands by and does not prevent the other from doing so, then, no doubt, equity comes in, and by the rules of equity which in this respect are the same as the rules of law, he cannot eject that other person."

The case was then carried, by the present appellants, before the second appellate tribunal, the High Court at Allahabad, who, on the 26th January 1894, confirmed the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Aligarh and dismissed the appeal, with costs. The learned Judges of the High Court, without entering into any discussion of the other issue which the first appellate [502] Court had decided in favour of the present appellants said :—"We need not go further into the construction that should be placed upon that lease, because we are of opinion that upon the finding of acquiescence, which we think was a right finding in this case, the appeal will have to be dismissed." They accordingly disposed of the appeal on that ground alone.

It is to be regretted that the loose and inadequate statement of the rule of equity, which is reported in Gopi v. Bisheshwar should have been accepted, apparently without much consideration, by the learned Judges of both appellate Courts. The proposition, if it were carefully supplemented, might possibly be made to apply to the case where the owner of land sees another person erecting buildings upon it, and knowing that such other person is under the mistaken belief that the land is his own property, purposely abstains from interference, with the view of claiming the building when it is erected. The findings of fact pronounced by the Subordinate Judge, which were conclusive in the second appellate Court, and are equally binding upon this Board, show that the present is not a case of that kind. The respondents knew that the predecessors of the appellants were the owners of the land let, and that their own title was limited to their occupation of the land as tenants, upon the terms and for the periods provided by the original lease of 1858. In order to raise the equitable estoppel which was enforced against the appellants by both the appellate Courts below, it was incumbent upon the respondents to show that the conduct of the owner, whether consisting in abstinence from interfering, or in active intervention, was sufficient to justify the legal inference that they had, by plain implication, contracted that the right of tenancy, under which the lessees originally obtained possession of the land, should be changed into a perpetual right of occupation.

Their Lordships have had no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that the respondents have failed to discharge themselves of that onus. If there be one point settled in the equity law of England, it is, that in circumstances similar to those of [503] the present case, the mere erection by the tenant of permanent structures upon the land let to him, in the knowledge of and without interference by his lessor, will not suffice to raise the equitable right against the latter which has been affirmed by the Courts below. It must also be kept in view that, in Indian law, the maxim "quicquid inaedificatur solo, solocedit," has no application to the present case. The rule established in India is that of s. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act, which provides that, "the lessee may remove, at any time during the continuance of the lease, all things which he has attached to the earth ; provided he leaves the property in the state in which he received it."

The leading authority of the law of England upon the point, in Ramsden v. Dyson and Thornton (1). In that case, the Vice-Chancellor (Sir J. Stuart) had held that Sir J. Ramsden, the owner, was estopped in equity from bringing ejectment against the defendants, his tenants, by reason of the defendants having been permitted, in the knowledge of their lessor, to build valuable and permanent structures upon the land demised to them. The judgment of the Vice-Chancellor was reversed in the House of Lords, by the Lord Chancellor (Cranworth), Lord Wensleydale and Lord Westbury, dissentiente Lord Kingsdown.

The Lord Chancellor (L.R. 1 E. and I.A. at p. 141 of the report) said : — "It follows as a corollary from these rules, or, perhaps, it would be more accurate to say it forms part of them, that if my tenant builds on land which he holds under me, he does not thereby, in the absence of special circumstances, acquire any right to prevent me from taking possession of the land and buildings when the tenancy has determined. He knew the extent of his interest, and it was his folly to expend money upon a title which he knew would or might soon come to an end." The noble and learned Lord, in his opinion, which is expressed at considerable length, appears to me to indicate some [504] at least of the special circumstances which might suffice to raise an estoppel against the lessor. It was strongly urged for the defendants, at the Bar of the House, that Sir J. Ramsden had made representations which might fairly be supposed to lead his tenants at will or from year to year to expend money in building, in the belief that by building they acquired a title which he could never disturb." I do not find that the noble and learned Lord indicated any opinion that, if such representations had actually been made by the lessor, they would not have been sufficient to show the terms of a contract which might be enforced in a Court of Equity. But he rejected the plea on the double ground (1) that the alleged communications were not proved to have been sufficient for that purpose, and (2) that the representations, if they had been sufficient to raise an implied contract, were not binding upon the lessor, inasmuch as they proceeded from an estate agent, and were not shown to have been made by him, in the knowledge and with the authority of the lessor.

The respondents, in their appeal case lodged before this Board, relied exclusively upon their plea of acquiescence, which had been sustained by both the appellate Courts below. In their argument, the learned

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 496
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L.R.
400 = 3
C.W.N. 502 =
26 I.A. 58 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
523.

(1) (1865) L.R. 1 E. and I. A. 129.

1899
MARCH 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 496
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L.R.
400 = 3
C.W.N. 502 =
26 I.A. 58 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
523.

Counsel by whom they were represented, ably urged that plea, but frequently digressed into other points raised in the case, always with the explanation that these digressions were meant to aid the plea of acquiescence. They also argued that their Lordships could not competently disturb the judgment to the effect that there had been acquiescence, inasmuch as it was a concurrent finding of the appellate Courts. The argument was palpably erroneous. Their Lordships were bound by, and have accepted as final, the findings of the Subordinate Judge of Aligarh upon the facts from which acquiescence might or might not be inferred. But acquiescence is not a question of fact, but of legal inference from the facts so found; and upon it the judgments of the appellate Courts are not final.

[505] Their Lordships will therefore humbly advise Her Majesty to reverse all the judgments appealed from, and to give the appellants decree of ejectment in terms of their plaint; to order that the costs, if any, already paid by the appellants, under the decrees respectively of the Munsif of Hathras, the Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, and the High Court at Allahabad, be repaid to the appellants by the respondents; and that there be no costs of suit in the Courts below paid to or by either of the parties. The respondents must pay to the appellants the costs of this appeal.

Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the appellants—Messrs. Ranken, Ford, Ford and Chester.

Solicitors for the respondents, Kundan Lal and Birj Lal.—Messrs. Barrow and Rogers.

21 A. 505 (P.C.) = 1 Bom. L.R. 700 = 3 C.W.N. 517 = 26 I.A. 175 = 7 Sar. P.C.J. 538.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT:

Lord Hobhouse, Lord Macnaghten and Sir Richard Couch.

On appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces.

PARSOTAM GIR (Plaintiff) v. NARBADA GIR (Defendant).
[22nd February, and 24th March, 1899.]

Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code. s. 13—Prior decree between the same parties in the same claim, not arriving at a final decision.

In a former suit between the same parties that were now in litigation, in which the same claim upon title was made, a decree dismissed the suit. But the judgment in the former suit stated that it was left open to the plaintiff to sue again, and that no matters affecting the rights of the parties were decided between them. Held, that the prior decree was not a final decision within the meaning of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the defence of res judicata was not maintained.

[R., 2 Ind. Cas. 622; 15 Ind. Cas. 930 (932) = 56 P.R. 1912 = 251 P.L.R. 1912 = 245 P.W.R. 1912; U. B. R. (1897—1901) 443; D., 4 Bom. L.R. 25 (26)]

APPEAL from a decree (4th November 1895) of the High Court reversing a decree (29th June 1893) of the Subordinate Judge of Allahabad.

This suit was filed on the 3rd January 1893 by one Nepal Gir, upon whose decease during the proceedings the present appellant was brought upon the record. The claim was against the respondent Narbada Gir, representative of Prasad Gir, deceased, for possession with mesne profits, of lands belonging to a religious institution, which lands had been in the possession [506] of Prasad Gir in his lifetime. The plaint, which was based on an agreement registered on the 30th March, 1868, stated the proceedings in a prior suit of 1885, disposed of by the High Court on the 8th March 1886, between the same parties.

The defendant in his written statement pleaded adjudication in that suit of the matters now in issue.

The facts of the case, as well as the proceedings in both the suits, sufficiently appear in their Lordships' judgment on this appeal.

The only questions now raised were whether or not this suit was barred, within s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, by the decree of the 8th March 1886, and whether or not there was any estoppel from the former proceedings.

The Subordinate Judge held that the suit was not barred by that decree. He found in favour of the plaintiff on all the issues; and decreed possession with mesne profits for three years.

On an appeal by the defendant to the High Court, the above was reversed.

On the plaintiff's appeal, Mr. A. Cohen, Q. C., and Mr. G. E. A. Ross, for the appellant, urged that there was nothing in the judgment and decree of the High Court of the 8th March 1886 to prevent the plaintiff from bringing the present suit.

Mr. J. D. Mayne and Mr. J. F. Kershaw, for the respondent, argued that the High Court was right in holding that material contentions of the appellant had been decided against him sufficiently to cause an estoppel, so that the present suit was barred.

Mr. A. Cohen, Q. C., was not heard in reply.

Their Lordships' judgment was afterwards, on the 24th March, delivered by LORD MACNAGHTEN.

JUDGMENT.

This is an appeal from a decree of the High Court at Allahabad. The plaintiff, Mahant Nepal Gir, who is now represented by the appellant, sued for recovery of possession of four villages. The suit was brought in the Court of the Judge of Small Causes at Allahabad exercising the powers of a [507] Subordinate Judge. He gave the plaintiff a decree which has been reversed by the learned Judges of the High Court, who dismissed the suit with costs.

The facts of the case are few and simple and not in dispute. The whole argument before this Board turned upon the meaning and effect of a judgment of the High Court in a previous litigation between Mahant Nepal Gir and Prasad Gir, the person whom the defendant Narbada Gir claims to represent.

The parties to the present suit are sannyasis or ascetics of a sect known as Baghambari from the name of their founder, who lived more than a hundred years ago. The gaddi or shrine of Baghambari, which appears to have been endowed with considerable property, was originally established in a house below the fort of Allahabad. This house was destroyed in the Mutiny and the gaddi was removed in consequence to an adjoining mauza called Baski. The manager of the gaddi at this time was Baba Bhola Gir. Bhola Gir died on the 8th of March 1868, leaving four chelas or disciples, Nepal Gir, Bijai Gir, Moti Gir and Prasad Gir. There seems to have been at first some dispute about the succession,

1899
MARCH 24.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 505
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L.R.
700 = 3
C.W.N. 517 =
26 I.A. 175 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
538.

1899
MARCH 24.

—
PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 505

(P. C.) = 1

Bom. L.R.

700 = 3

C.W.N. 517 =

26 I.A. 175 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

538.

but the differences, whatever they were, were soon arranged. On the 25th of March 1868 the four chelas executed an ikrarnama or deed of arrangement providing for the administration of the gaddi and division of offices between them. Nepal Gir became gaddi-nashin or head Mahant, Moti Gir Bhandari or treasurer and manager at Allahabad; Bijai Gir manager of certain villages, and Prasad Gir manager of the villages in dispute.

This ikrarnama was duly registered on the 30th of March 1868. It recites that Bhola Gir before his death gave the following direction to his four chelas in the presence of respectable people:—"After me you four persons should by common consent become proprietors of all the properties belonging to the gaddi of Baba Baghambari and should maintain the property and management thereof as usual like myself." It then goes on to declare that in compliance with that direction [508] and in order to avoid future disputes and to keep up the name and prestige of the gaddi and properties the four persons parties to the deed unanimously covenanted in the terms expressed in the following clauses. Clause 1 provided that Nepal Gir having been appointed Mahant should be installed as gaddi-nashin. Clause 2 so far as material was in the following words:—

"2ndly, that as formerly the name of Baba Bhola Gir was entered in respect of the ilakas (villages) and the Mahant's name was not entered, so the names of Bijai Gir and Prasad Gir be entered in respect of the ilakas and they should be peshwakars (heads) and managers of the property (ilakas) and other affairs and should maintain the management of receipts and disbursements in the same way as it had been before. But they on account of their names being entered or any other person for any reason neither have nor shall have any right whatever nor even the Mahant himself shall have any power of partition or temporary or permanent transfer in respect of the whole or any part of the moveable or immoveable property because all the properties belong to the gaddi of Baba Baghambari and they are not meant for person or, for any particular individual."

Clause 1 had provided for the expulsion of the gaddi-nashin in certain events. Clause 2 provided for the expulsion of any of the other three "discovered doing any vicious act or any act disgracing the gaddi, or contrary to the customs of the Math." Clause 3 provided that—

"As at present the disciples stay at ilakas (villages) and look after the management of cultivation and making collections of the ilakas like managers, so Bijai Gir and Prasad Gir should in the like manner live there as munsarims and managers and carry on the current affairs as usual. In case of their proving unfaithful and of misconduct the Mahant Moti Gir and the third person who might be left of good behaviour have and shall have power to turn them out with their mutual consent and consultation as an owner has in respect of the manager."

Clause 4 provided for the duties to be undertaken by Moti Gir. Clause 5 so far as material was as follows:—

"5thly, that none of us either gaddi-nashin, peshwakar or another disciple or any one who may be the successive representative or disciple of any person shall have any power to act contrary to any of the terms of this document . . . and those who are our disciples should also live as usual in those ilakas of which we are the managers in our stead; but in case of misbehaviour the Mahant and Peshwakar have and shall have in every case authority to turn them out."

[509] On the terms of this ikrarnama Prasad Gir entered into possession of the villages in dispute. One of his first acts after he obtained possession was to join with the other three persons parties to the deed in a petition for a certificate to enable the four to collect the debts due to the estate of Bhola Gir. The petition was verified by a declaration signed by Prasad Gir himself. It set out Bhola Gir's will as contained in the ikrarnama and proceeded to state that the petitioners in union among themselves for giving additional strength to the will having executed an ikrarnama on the 25th March 1868 " with the conditions entered therein," got it registered and according to the same mutation of names in their favour was effected, and that under the same they had been in possession and enjoyment as proprietors of all goods and properties (imlak) appertaining to the gaddi of Baghambari left by the deceased goshain.

Whether in the interval between the execution of the ikrarnama and the end of the year 1881 Prasad Gir remitted any contribution in money or in kind from the estates under his management to the gaddi of Baghambari at Baski is a question about which a good deal of evidence was adduced which left the matter still in doubt. For the purpose of the present suit that question seems to be wholly immaterial. It is clear that from the commencement of the year 1882, Prasad Gir made no remittance to the gaddi of Baghambari. In June 1884 there was a meeting of the persons interested, to which Prasad Gir Moti Gir, and the representatives of Bijai Gir, who was then dead, were summoned. Moti Gir and the representatives of Bijai Gir attended and formally acknowledged the obligation incumbent upon them to act in conformity with the terms of the ikrarnama. Prasad Gir absented himself without making any excuse or sending any explanation of his conduct. The parties present resolved that Prasad Gir should be requested to state his intentions and furnish an account of the property under his management within a limited time and that then a further meeting should be convened to consider future proceedings. A notice to that effect with a copy of the [510] proceedings of the meeting of June 1884 was accordingly sent to Prasad Gir. Prasad Gir, however, paid no attention to the summons, and treated the matter with absolute indifference. Thereupon the Mahant Nepal Gir, Moti Gir and the representatives of Bijai Gir brought a suit to recover possession of the villages in dispute and for an account.

Prasad Gir filed a written statement. He alleged that the villages in dispute did not belong to the gaddi of Baba Baghambari at Baski, but to the gaddi of Baba Baghambari at Niria, one of the villages in dispute where Prasad Gir lived. He denied that he had executed the ikrarnama of March 1868. He pleaded that he had been in adverse possession for twelve years and that the plaintiffs' claim was barred by limitation.

While the suit was pending, and after it had been partly heard, Prasad Gir died. On his death Narbada Gir who had taken possession of the villages in dispute claiming under Prasad Gir brought was upon the record, but no amendment was made, nor was any fresh issue directed. The Subordinate Judge found that the villages in dispute belonged to the gaddi of Baba Baghambari at Baski, the ikrarnama of March 1868 was executed by Prasad Gir and that he never challenged its genuineness or validity until he filed his written statement. He negatived the plea of adverse possession. He held that if Prasad Gir had been alive the plaintiffs would have been entitled under the terms of the ikrarnama to oust him from the villages in dispute on account of his misconduct in not rendering account and sending profits to the gaddi and in claiming them as his own property. He further held that Narbada, assuming that he was Prasad Gir's heir, could not retain possession of the villages in dispute against the will of the plaintiffs who were entitled to resume possession of the villages and to make a fresh arrangement for their management. He dismissed the claim for an account. Narbada, he said, had not misappropriated the profits which the plaintiffs claimed, and as it was not proved that any personal estate of Prasad Gir had come to his hands he could [511] not be made accountable for the profits received by Prasad Gir. In 1899

MARCH 24.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
21 A. 505
(P.C.) = 1
Bom. L.R.
700 = 3
C.W.N. 517 =
26 I.A. 175 =
7 Sar. P.C.J.
538.

1899 the result therefore the claim for an account was dismissed, but the claim
 MARCH 24. for possession was granted.

—
 PRIVY Against this decree Narbada appealed. On the 8th of March 1886 the COUNCIL. learned Judges who heard the appeal pronounced a judgment which unfortunately neither the High Court on the appeal in the present suit nor the learned counsel at the bar nor their Lordships are able to understand.
 21 A. 505 They seem to have misapprehended the grounds of the Subordinate Judge's
 (P.C.) = 1 decision. They held Prasad Gir absolved apparently because it was not Bom. L.R. proved to their satisfaction that he "had acted as a person accountable to 700 = 3 the gaddi." "The impression left upon our minds," they said, "is that C.W.N. 517 = "there is good reason for believing that from 1868 down to his 26 I.A. 175 = "death Prasad Gir occupied and asserted an independent position
 7 Sar. P.C.J. "in respect of the Niria Shrine." So they held that the suit would have 558. failed against Prasad Gir if he had been alive, and accordingly they reversed the decree and dismissed the suit against Narbada Gir as the legal representative of Prasad Gir with costs. But they concluded their judgment with the following announcement—We think that the Subordinate Judge,
 "should, as we propose to do, have left it open to the plaintiffs, or rather "Nepal Gir, to institute a suit against Narbada Gir personally in which a "number of questions which as yet have never been raised or considered
 "can be properly dealt with and determined, and in holding that the "present suit failed as against Prasad Gir, we leave untouched and "undecided all matters affecting the rights of the plaintiff Nepal Gir on "the one side and of Narbada Gir, on the other."

On the 30th of July 1892 Nepal Gir sent a notice to Narbada Gir, requesting him under threat of legal proceeding to come in and submit his accounts, treating him as "manager and agent in charge" of property belonging to the gaddi of Baghambari. As Narbada Gir paid no attention to this notice the present suit was brought for the purpose [512] of recovering possession of the villages in dispute. Narbada pleaded the defence of res judicata, adverse possession by Prasad Gir and title under Prasad Gir's will, and refused to admit the validity and existence of the ikrarnama of March 1868.

The Subordinate Judge held that the suit was not barred by the decree of the High Court of the 8th of March 1886. He found in favour of the plaintiff on all the issues and gave a decree for possession with mesne profit for three years.

Narbada Gir appealed to the High Court. On the 14th November 1895 the learned Judges of the High Court pronounced a judgment which is almost, if not quite, as difficult to understand as the judgment of their predecessors in 1886. They observe that the difficulty which they had felt in the case had been "in trying to ascertain from the judgment of the Court in the previous suit what were the findings upon which this Court "in that suit made its decree dismissing the suit." They then address themselves to the solution of that problem. They begin by rejecting the only part of the former judgment which is absolutely clear, and they express their opinion that "the only possible construction of that judgment "which would make it consistent throughout and would not suggest abso"lutely inconsistent findings" is a construction which (if their Lordships have rightly apprehended its effect), leaves it undetermined whether the ikrarnama of 1868 was or was not proved or was or was not binding on the parties and attributes to learned Judges of one of the highest Courts of Appeal in India the view that a person who executes a solemn instrument in the terms of such an ikrarnama and accepts the management of property on the conditions therein contained is at liberty to repudiate the trust and to set up an adverse title in some other religious foundation if not in himself without being liable to removal either by the parties interested or by the Court. Having placed this construction on the earlier judgment and finding that the only charge against Narbada Gir was that he obtained possession under the ikrarnama of 1868, and then wholly repudiated the obligations of that instrument the [513] learned Judges of the High Court treated the matter as res judicata and dismissed the suit with costs in all Courts.

The High Court placed some reliance on the notice of the 30th of July 1892. Narbada Gir did not accept it or act upon it. It seems to their Lordships to have no bearing on the question between the parties.

Their Lordships think that it would be an idle and a hopeless task to speculate upon the grounds of the judgment of the High Court in 1886. Whatever the grounds may have been, they are certainly not apparent on the face of the judgment. One thing, however, is plain; the learned Judges in 1886 did not intend to decide anything as between Nepal Gir and Narbada Gir. They "left it open to Nepal Gir to institute a suit against Narbada Gir personally." They said in so many words: "We leave untouched and undecided all matters affecting the rights of the plaintiff Nepal Gir on the one side and Narbada Gir on the other." The only reason why the High Court in 1895 refused to give effect to those words was because they considered that if they construed them according to their plain meaning they "should be holding that the decree of this Court in the previous suit was simply what is known in England as a decree of non-suit." Such a decree, they say, no Court in India has power to make. Now the objection to a judgment of non-suit under the old practice in this country—there was no such thing as "a decree of non-suit" for the term "non-suit" was not known in Chancery—was this:—It enabled a plaintiff after he had dragged the defendant into Court, if he found the case going against him or that he had not the requisite materials to support his claim, to elect to be non-suited, with the result that he could bring a fresh action and so harass the defendant with further litigation. The Judge at the trial was powerless: the plaintiff was dominus litis. There can be no room for such an objection when the Judge has the matter in his own hands. But however that may be, the real answer to the difficulty propounded by the High Court is this:—The question is not whether the judgment of the High Court in 1886 was [514] right, but whether it did or did not finally decide the present question as between Nepal Gir and Narbada Gir. It would be a contradiction in terms to say that the Court had finally decided matters which it expressly left "untouched and undecided."

Mr. Mayne for the respondent did not go so far as to contend that the judgment of 1886 as it stands, and of itself would support a plea of res judicata. Following the arguments or suggestions contained in the judgment under appeal, he endeavoured to persuade their Lordships that there must have been some grounds for the decision of the High Court in 1886 or some findings underlying that decision which would support a case of what may be called constructive estoppel. It is enough to say that there is no such thing known to the law as constructive estoppel and if there were it would not satisfy the requirements of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). "The conditions for the exclusion of jurisdiction on the ground of res judicata are" as Willes, J., says, "that the same identical matters shall have come in question already in a

1899

MARCH 24.

PRIVY

COUNCIL.

21 A. 505

(P.C.) = 1

Bom. L.R.

700 = 3

C.W.N. 517 =

26 I.A. 175 =

7 Sar. P.C.J.

538.

- 1899
MARCH 24.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

21 A. 505
(P.C.)=1
Bom. L.R.
700=3
C.W.N. 517=
26 I.A. 175=
7 Sar. P.C.J.
538.
- " Court of competent jurisdiction, that the matter shall have been controverted and that it shall have been finally decided " (1). That is just what s. 13 requires ; there must be a final decision.
Their Lordships are of opinion that the view taken by the Subordinate Judge was correct. Their Lordships will therefore humbly advise Her Majesty that the appeal ought to be allowed, the decree of the High Court reversed, and the appeal to it dismissed with costs, and the judgment of the Subordinate Judge restored.
The respondent must pay the costs of the appeal.
- Appeal allowed.*
- Solicitors for the appellant—Messrs. T. L. Wilson and Co.
Solicitors for the respondents—Messrs. Barrow and Rogers.

(1) Langmead v. Maple, (1865) 18 C.B.N.S. 255 (270).

I.L.R., 22 ALLAHABAD.

22 A. 1 (F.B.) = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 111.

FULL BENCH.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Knox,
Mr. Justice Banerji, Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Aikman.

DALGANJAN SINGH (Plaintiff) v. KALKA SINGH AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [15th May, 1899.]

Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-arz—Perfect partition of mahal—Act No. XIX of 1873 (N.W.P. Land Revenue Act), s. 191—No new wajib-ul-arz framed on partition—Pre-emption claimed under wajib-ul-arz of undivided mahal—Custom—Co-sharers—“Hissadar deh.”

Where, on the perfect partition of a mahal under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, no new wajib-ul-arz has been framed for any of the new mahals, the question whether or how far a contract or a custom of pre-emption recorded in the wajib-ul-arz of the undivided mahal is still in force, or who is entitled to claim the benefit of it, is not capable of any absolute or invariable answer. It depends in each case upon the proper construction of the terms of the particular contract or the proper interpretation of the particular custom recorded, assuming that there is no evidence of any intention on the part of the co-sharers at the time of partition to put an end to the contract or the custom. But there is a strong presumption against such claims for pre-emption when made after perfect partition by persons who are no longer co-sharers of the vendor; and where the language of the wajib-ul-arz is ambiguous this presumption may be decisive.

The wajib-ul-arz of a village forming one undivided mahal recorded a right of pre-emption by custom as existing in favour of “hissadaran deh” in cases of transfer by a “hissadar” of his share or “hissa” to a stranger. After a perfect partition, on which no new wajib-ul-arz was framed, and after a subsequent sale to a stranger of land in one of the new mahals, a person who, prior to the partition, was a co-sharer of the vendor in the undivided mahal, but who, since the partition, owned a share only in another of the new mahals, claimed pre-emption under the old wajib-ul-arz as a “hissadar deh.”

Held by the Full Bench, upon the construction of the wajib-ul-arz, that he was not entitled to pre-emption.

[F., 27 A. 602 = 2 A.L.J. 313 = A.W.N. (1905) 115; 32 A. 63 = 4 Ind. Cas. 138 = 6 A.L.J. 958; 1 A.L.J. 33 (36); 2 A.L.J. 261; 1 Ind. Cas. 504; 3 Ind. Cas. 927; R., 29 A. 295 = 4 A.L.J. 137 = A.W.N. (1907) 39; 32 A. 265 = 7 A.L.J. 133 = 6 Ind. Cas. 17; 33 A. 196 (201) = 7 A.L.J. 1040 = 7 Ind. Cas. 680; 33 A. 605 (607) = 8 A.L.J. 996 (1001); 34 A. 13 (17) = 8 A.L.J. 1072 = 11 Ind. Cas. 305 (306) = 34 A. 434 (435) = 9 A.L.J. 670 = 14 Ind. Cas. 278; 6 A.L.J. 715 = 3 Ind. Cas. 534; 16 Ind. Cas. 361 (364); 133 P.R. 1907 = 188 P.L.R. 1908 = 84 P.W.R. 1907; D., 28 A. 286 = 2 A.L.J. 833 = A.W.N. (1906) 2; 28 A. 614 = A.W.N. (1906) 134; 31 A. 274 = 6 A.L.J. 180 = 2 Ind. Cas. 208.]

[2] THIS was an appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent arising out of a suit for pre-emption of a piece of land in the village of Serai Sitam in the Jaunpur district, the suit being based on a custom recorded in the wajib-ul-arz of that village framed at the last Settlement in 1880-81. The suit was brought in September 1896. The village, which at the time of ^{*} Appeal No. 34 of 1898, under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

1899
MAY 15.

FULL BENCH.

22 A. 1
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

the settlement had consisted of only a single mahal, was divided by perfect partition, in 1888 or 1889, into three mahals, but no new wajib-ul-arz was framed for any of the new mahals. The plaintiff pre-emptor was not a sharer in the mahal in which the property sold was situated. The Court of first instance (Munsif of Jaunpur) and the lower appellate Court (Subordinate Judge) held that the plaintiff was entitled to pre-emption by the custom of the village notwithstanding the partition, and decreed the claim. On appeal by the defendants to the High Court, a single Judge of the Court allowed the appeal and dismissed the suit. From that decree the present appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent was preferred by the plaintiff. The facts of the case will be found stated in greater detail in the judgment of the Chief Justice. The substantial question raised by the appeal was—what is the effect of a perfect partition of a mahal under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, upon claims for pre-emption based on a custom recorded in the wajib-ul-arz where no new wajib-ul-arz for any of the new mahals has been framed at or since the partition?

Babu Durga Charan Banerji, for the appellant (pre-emptor).

The learned Judge has dismissed the appellant's suit upon the solitary ground that upon perfect partition the old wajib-ul-arz disappears with the legal entity to which it applied, and therefore no suit will lie for pre-emption. I submit that there is no such rule of law. The Land Revenue Act gives no sanction to such a view. On the other hand the Land Revenue Act and the case law support the contention that a record-of-rights may remain in force even after the term for which it was prepared. S. 191 of the Land Revenue Act lays down that if no new [3] wajib-ul-arz is prepared, the existing wajib-ul-arz remains in force, even after the settlement, when it is not superseded by a new one—Shiam Sundar v. Amanant Begam (1). In Sadhu Sahu v. Raja Ram (2) it has been held that even after the expiration of the term for which a wajib-ul-arz is prepared, the old wajib-ul-arz may be good evidence of custom.

If the wajib-ul-arz is in force, the plaintiff who is still a shareholder in the village (though not in the mahal) is entitled to pre-empt as a hissadar deh. The entity deh (village) has not ceased to exist with the partition. The area still exists, though for fiscal purposes it has been divided into separate portions which for such purposes are independent of one another.

If the wajib-ul-arz recorded a contract, such contract ran with the land and would not be abrogated, there having been no novation in the shape of a fresh wajib-ul-arz. If it is a record of custom, such custom applied to the area deh, and partition for revenue purposes would not affect such custom. The wajib-ul-arz is a record-of-right prepared under the Land Revenue Act. The Collector has to keep and maintain the record, and he is required to note any changes which may occur during the term of the settlement for which such record is prepared. This evidently contemplates alteration in the existing record. Changes in such record consequent upon partition should be noted,—see ss. 94 to 102 of the Act.

Upon the construction of the particular wajib-ul-arz in question, hissadar means a shareholder and not necessarily a co-sharer. The plaintiff still holds a share in the village, and upon that account he is entitled to claim pre-emption.

(1) 9 A. 234.

(2) 16 A. 40.

I rely upon Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal (1), Ramjiwan Sahu v. Raturaj Singh (2), Shiam Sundar v. Amanant Begam (3), Kuar Dat Prasad Singh v. Nahar Singh (4), Abbas Ali v. Ghulam Nabi (5), Mata Din v. Mahesh Prasad (6). [4] In Lachcho v. Maya Ram (7), relied upon by the other side, a new wajib-ul-arz had been prepared which abrogated the old one.

I also rely on Ghure v. Man Singh (8), which indirectly supports my contention.

Mr. Abdul Majid, for the respondents :—

The question is, what is the meaning of the word village (deh) and what is the meaning of the word share (hissa) and shareholder (hissadar) used in the wajib-ul-arz? The wajib-ul-arz was framed for the mahal of Serai Sitam. The co-sharers before the village was partitioned were the existing co-sharers of the mahal Serai Sitam. The village and mahal Serai Sitam were both one and the same. But when the village was partitioned and divided into several mahals, the co-sharers of the separated mahals could not be said to remain still co-sharers of the old mahal Serai Sitam. There is nothing joint between them now in the new mahals. The words 'deh' and 'hissa' and 'hissadar' must be used in one sense in the whole wajib-ul-arz whenever those words are used.

The old wajib-ul-arz which was framed for the mahal Serai Sitam has disappeared when the said mahal was partitioned into these new mahals, inasmuch as the mahal for which it was prepared has disappeared.

The following cases cited are distinguishable from the present case.

Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal (1), Ramjiawan Sahu v. Raturaj Singh (2), Shiam Sundar v. Amanant Begam (3), Kuar Dat Prasad Singh v. Nahar Singh (4), Abbas Ali v. Ghulam Nabi (5) and Mata Din v. Mahesh Prasad (6).

I rely on the following cases :—

Motee Sah v. Mussumat Goklee (9), Moolchund v. Rugha Singh (10), Joobraj Singh v. Tookun Singh (11), Shaikh Bunday [5] Hossein v. Lalla Puriag Dutt (12), Ram Pershad v. Buljeet Singh (13), Jai Ram v. Mahabir Rai (14), Abdul Rahim Khan v. Kharag Singh (15), Nazir-ud-din v. Kadir Baksh (16), Abdul Aziz Khan v. Husen Ali Khan (17), Abdul Hai v. Nain Singh (18), Ghure v. Man Singh (19) and Mithu Lal v. Muhammad Ahmad Said Khan (20).

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J.—This appeal raises a question which has been discussed in many previous decisions of this Court, the effect of a perfect partition of a mahal under the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873, upon claims for pre-emption based on a custom recorded in the wajib-ul-arz, where no new wajib-ul-arz for any of the new mahals has been framed at or since the partition. The present suit for pre-emption

1899
MAY 15.

FULL BENCH.

22 A. 1
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

(1) 7 A. 772.

(3) 9 A. 234.

(5) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 137.

(7) 17 A. 226.

(9) S.D.A.N.W.P. (1861) Vol. I, 506.

(11) 14 W.R.C.R. 476.

(13) N.W.P.H.C.R. (1867) 252 = 2 Agra 252.

(15) 12 A.W.N. (1892) 240.

(17) 15 A.W.N. (1895) 233.

(19) 17 A. 226.

(2) 9 A.W.N. (1889) 81.

(4) 11 A. 257.

(6) 12 A.W.N. (1892) 100.

(8) 5 A. 158.

(10) S.D.A.N.W.P. (1864) Vol. I, 96.

(12) 16 W.R.C.R. 110.

(14) 7 A. 720.

(16) 14 A.W.N. (1894) 193.

(18) 20 A. 92.

(20) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 19.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

is based on the wajib-ul-arz of a village, Serai Sitam, in the Jaunpur district. The sale which it seeks to avoid was a sale of 7 bighas of land in that village, and was made on the 29th September 1896. The wajib-ul-arz was framed at the last settlement in 1880-81. The part of it relating to pre-emption is contained in chapter 11, which is headed "As to the rights of co-sharers among themselves based on custom or agreement." S. 13 of the chapter is headed "As to the custom of right of pre-emption." In regard to the precise English equivalents of some of the expressions used in the pre-emption clause, there has been some dispute. The following is a translation of the clause, leaving the disputed terms as they stand in the original :—

"If any hissadar wishes to transfer his share (hissa), first he will transfer it to his own brother, then to his near relatives, thirdly, to owners in the village who are partners in the same khata (malikan sharik khata), fourthly, to the hissadaran deh : if none of these purchase, then he is competent to transfer it to any one he likes."

[6] The plaintiff claims pre-emption as one of the fourth class of pre-emptors mentioned in the clause, the hissadaran deh. The defendant vendee is admittedly a stranger to the village. It is not disputed that until 1888 or 1889 the plaintiff would have been entitled to pre-emption under the wajib-ul-arz as a hissadar deh in respect of such a sale as that of the 29th September 1896. Up to that time the village Serai Sitam formed a single mahal, of which both the plaintiff and the defendant vendor were co-sharers. But in 1888 or 1889 the mahal was divided by a perfect partition into three separate mahals. The plaintiff is a co-sharer in one of the new mahals : the property in suit is situate in another, in which he is not a co-sharer. No new wajib-ul-arz has been framed for any of the new mahals. The suit is based upon the custom of pre-emption alleged by the plaintiff to prevail in the village Serai Sitam, and upon the status of the plaintiff as a hissadar of the village within the meaning of the wajib-ul-arz. The principal defence was that no such custom existed, and that upon the partition of Serai Sitam the pre-emption clause of the wajib-ul-arz of 1880-81 ceased to have effect. No evidence of the custom except the wajib-ul-arz was produced. Upon that document the Courts below decided that the custom was proved, and that the plaintiff was entitled to pre-emption in accordance with the wajib-ul-arz, notwithstanding the partition. On appeal by the defendants to this Court, Mr. Justice Blair stated the question involved as "whether the wajib-ul-arz of a mahal before partition applies to each part which is partitioned off into a separate mahal," and said that there had been of late years a cursus curiæ according to which many, if not all, of the Judges of this Court had held in principle "that the old wajib-ul-arz disappears with the legal entity to which it applied." He accordingly set aside the decree of the Court below and dismissed the suit, and in this appeal under the Letters Patent we have to say whether his decision was right.

It appears to me to be incorrect to say that, upon a perfect partition of a mahal, the wajib-ul-arz necessarily "disappears" [7] or ceases to exist. There is no such general rule of law. The wajib-ul-arz forms part of the record-of-rights which the settlement officer has to frame for each mahal under s. 62 of the Land Revenue Act. It is true that both that section and s. 3 (1) speak of this document as the record-of-rights for the mahal, and this suggests that when the mahal is destroyed by perfect partition the record-of-rights becomes inoperative. But s. 191 provides that "in all cases the existing record-of-rights shall remain in force until a new record-of-rights is framed." It was held by this Court in Kedar Nath v. Ram Dial (1), that the Collector had an implied power, upon the partition of a mahal, to frame a new record-of-rights for each of the new mahals so constituted. It was further held in Abdul Hai v. Nain Singh (2) that it was the duty of the Collector or Assistant Collector to do so. Where that is done, the old wajib-ul-arz is, of course, superseded. But it is often not done, and, in the absence of any such new wajib-ul-arz, the old wajib-ul-arz remains in force except so far as its provisions are inconsistent with the state of things which the partition has created. That was expressly held to be "clear law" by Mr. Justice Blair in Mithu Lal v. Muhammad Ahmadd Said Khan (3). Then, if the wajib-ul-arz as a whole is not necessarily abrogated by a perfect partition, is there any more ground for holding that the pre-emption clause of it is so abrogated? In the case just referred to, Mr. Justice Aikman said that he could not draw the conclusion that the custom of pre-emption recorded in the old wajib-ul-arz had fallen into abeyance from the fact that the officer who carried out the partition omitted to prepare a new wajib-ul-arz. If the custom may still be in force, the wajib-ul-arz is still good evidence of it. Some of the decisions cited to us appear to lay down a general rule of law that, after a perfect partition, no claim for pre-emption can be successfully made on the basis of the old wajib-ul-arz. Others, going to the opposite extreme, [8] appear to regard partition as a purely fiscal arrangement concerned exclusively with the collection of the Government revenue, and having no possible bearing upon any contract or custom of pre-emption. Both views appear to me equally open to the objection that they treat as an abstract question of law what is really a question of the construction of a particular contract or the interpretation and application of a particular custom. In many of the cases the terms of the particular pre-emption clause upon which the decision properly depended are not even referred to. This mistaken way of looking at the subject appears to me to account for much of the conflict of authority which undoubtedly exists. The pre-emption clause of a wajib-ul-arz may constitute either a contract of the co-sharers or the record of a custom found by the settlement officer to prevail among them. In all that follows, I assume that there is no evidence of any intention on the part of the co-sharers at the time of partition to put an end to the contract or the custom. Upon that supposition, where the clause constitutes a contract, the question whether or how far it is applicable after a perfect partition is one of the proper construction of its terms. In other words, the question is whether the intention of the parties as expressed in the clause was that the right of pre-emption should exist only so long as the village remained a single mahal, of which they were the co-sharers, or that it should be wholly unaffected by the destruction of the mahal and the severance of that co-parcenary bond, or that it should be claimable after partition by those only who continued to be co-sharers in any of the separate mahals. If the contract unmistakeably confined the right to the existing co-parcenary body, there can be no doubt that it would not survive the partition. If it contained this express covenant—"no person hereby entitled to pre-emption shall be deprived of his right by any perfect partition of the mahal"—it would be difficult to contend that partition would affect the right. If it expressly

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

(1) 15 A. 410.

(2) 20 A. 92.

(3) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 19.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

provided that all who were still co-sharers should have the right notwithstanding any perfect partition, then those who continued to be [9] co-sharers in any of the new mahals, but no others, would have a good claim. If, in any of these three cases, the terms used were less clear, the question would still be whether the same intention was to be inferred from them. Again, where the clause does not constitute a contract but records a custom, the question is still one of its true meaning, though in this case, considering that the wording of the clause is often the composition of some ignorant subordinate whose accuracy cannot be assumed, the only safe course is to look to the substance of the thing, and not to attach undue weight to the particular expressions used. The question is whether the custom is one which necessarily presupposes the continuance of the co-parcenary body existing at the time when the clause was framed. If the custom recorded is one by which the right of pre-emption is confined to co-sharers of the then existing mahal, then it appears to me that it can no more exist in favour of others after the mahal and that particular co-parcenary body have been destroyed by perfect partition than any other custom can continue after the class among which it has always prevailed has perished. On the other hand, it is possible to imagine a custom of pre-emption which does not depend upon the continued existence of the undivided mahal and its co-parcenary body. A custom in favour of the brothers, or other near relatives of the vendor, might be an instance. Again, when a settlement officer records a custom of pre-emption in the wajib-ul-arz of a new mahal created by perfect partition of an old one, what is that custom? It cannot be something absolutely new, or the word custom would be a misnomer. It must therefore be something which existed before the new mahal and before the partition, something therefore which existed in the time of the old mahal, which has survived the partition, and which is recognized as still applicable within the new mahal. In one of the cases cited to us, and no doubt in a great many other cases, the settlement officer simply copied verbatim in the new wajib-ul-arz the pre-emption clause of the old one. This implies that the old custom thus continued is regarded as a custom [10] of the co-sharers, still applicable to all who, notwithstanding the partition, stand in the relation of co-sharers, not a custom necessarily confined to co-sharers while members of the co-parcenary body of the old undivided mahal. For these reasons, the decisions which treat the question of the effect of a perfect partition upon the pre-emption clause as capable of an absolute and invariable answer appear to me to be based upon a wrong principle.

At the same time, it would be a mistake to conclude that in deciding whether a contract or a custom of pre-emption recorded in the wajib-ul-arz is applicable after a perfect partition, no general considerations are of any value. In every case we must place ourselves as nearly as possible in the position of the parties and have regard to the surrounding circumstances. In particular, one must remember what is the nature of the co-parcenary body in an undivided mahal, the nature of the wajib-ul-arz prepared by the settlement officer, the meaning and object of pre-emption, and the meaning and object of perfect partition. The most essential feature of the co-parcenary body is the joint and several responsibility of the co-sharers for the payment of the Government revenue assessed on the mahal, coupled in cases of zamindari tenure with the holding and management of the whole of the lands of the mahal by all the co-sharers in common. It is for the mahal, for the "local area held under a separate engagement for the payment of the land revenue," not for a village or other local area not being a mahal, that the settlement officer frames the wajib-ul-arz. It is meant as a record of the contracts or the customs of the co-sharers of the mahal. This being its object, it is prima facie unlikely to include any contract or custom which is absolutely independent of the continuance of the mahal as a fiscal and proprietary unit or of the co-parcenary body for which it is framed. Next, what is pre-emption? It is a right very closely connected with the objects of the co-parcenary system. Its essential purpose is the exclusion of strangers and the maintenance of the existing proprietary body throughout all changes of ownership. It thus prima facie [11] implies that the co-parceners desire to preserve and not to destroy their mutual connection, and is prima facie inapplicable after that connection has been severed by a perfect partition. Lastly, what is a perfect partition? It is defined by s. 107 of the Act as "the division of a mahal into two or more mahals." Its object is the exact opposite of the object of pre-emption; it is to completely break up the connection hitherto existing between the co-sharers; to put an end to their joint and several responsibility for payment of Government revenue; to destroy altogether the distinction between them and strangers. Sometimes partition is effected in order to get rid of a quarrelsome or litigious co-sharer who seeks to take more than the others consider him entitled to: Ghure v. Man Singh (1), Mithu Lal v. Muhammad Ahmad Said Khan (2). Sometimes it is because some of the co-sharers "do not pay their quota of the Government revenue regularly, thereby bringing liability for their arrears upon all the co-sharers of the mahal:" Abdul Hai v. Nain Singh (3). Whatever the reason, the co-sharers can no longer get on comfortably together, and partition is the process which enables them to separate. It is therefore prima facie unlikely that, in the case of a contract, the co-sharers should intend that pre-emption, which implies the distinction between the co-parceners and outsiders, should continue after a partition by which that distinction is abolished. It is also unlikely, as pointed out by Mr. Justice Knox in Ghure v. Man Singh, that a custom "recorded at a time when the village bore its natural and, from a Hindu point of view, proper form of an undivided village and an undivided mahal," would be applicable "when the relations of persons and property then subsisting had undergone such a radical change as necessarily ensues when perfect partition takes place." I agree with him that it would require "strong proof to establish that a custom which regulated and provided for one set of circumstances still regulates and [12] provides when these circumstances have been wholly altered." I also agree with the learned Judges who decided Abdul Hai v. Nain Singh that "it would require very strong evidence to satisfy us that after shareholders in a mahal have applied for and obtained partition and consequent separation of their interest from other shareholders in the mahal, they intended that the other co-sharers from whom they had separated their interest should be entitled to come in and pre-empt in the new mahal, and become again their co-sharers." Some of these considerations obviously do not apply where the right is claimed after partition by persons who, having been co-sharers in the undivided mahal, are still co-sharers with the vendor in one of the separate mahals. Partition has

1899
MAY 15.

FULL BENCH.

22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

(1) 17 A. 226.

(2) 19 A.W.N.(1899) 19 (21).

(3) 20 A. 92 (94).

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

not, as regards them, made so radical a change, they are as closely united as before, though by a new bond; there is still the distinction between them and strangers which it is the object of pre-emption to preserve. The inference which I draw is that while it depends in every case on the particular circumstances and especially upon the terms of the particular wajib-ul-arz, whether or how far pre-emption can be claimed under it after a perfect partition, there is a strong presumption against such a claim, when made by persons who are no longer co-sharers of the vendors. Where the language of the wajib-ul-arz is ambiguous, this presumption may be decisive.

The earliest case which was cited to us is Motee Sah v. Musummat Goklee (1). The terms of the wajib-ul-arz are not stated in the report, and it does not appear whether the claim for pre-emption was based upon contract or upon custom. The judgment contains this passage:—"Now, an essential condition of the existence of a right of pre-emption is that the parties claiming such a right shall be co-parceners in the same estate as those against whom the claim is made, a relation between the parties which is extinguished by the very operation of partition and the separate proprietorship thereby established." I infer that the wajib-ul-arz in that case confined the right of pre-emption to co-parceners [13] of the vendor, and that after the partition the plaintiff was not such a co-parcener in one of the new mahals. Upon that assumption the decision was no doubt right. If, however, the passage means that, whatever the terms of the wajib-ul-arz, no one can in any case successfully claim pre-emption who is not a co-parcener of the vendor, it is, in my opinion, too widely expressed. The unreported case of Abdullah Khan v. Halimunnissa (F.A. No. 69 of 1882) is cited in Shiam Sunder v. Amanant Begam (2) as laying down the rule that, despite the partition of a village into separate mahals, the existing wajib-ul-arz at the time of partition must be presumed to subsist and govern the separate mahals until it is shown that a new one has been made. No such proposition is to be found in any of the three judgments successively remanding the case, nor in the judgment finally disposing of the appeal. The precise terms of the pre-emption clause do not appear from the paper-book, but it was a contract giving the right to "sharers" or "owners." The plaintiffs, did not, after the partition, own any share in the new mahal in which the property sold was situate. The remand order of the 22nd April, 1884, contained this passage:—"In our opinion the wajib-ul-arz, never having been withdrawn, is still binding, and the plaintiff's appellants are entitled to come into Court to enforce its terms, if they can show themselves to be, and this is admitted that they are, co-sharers in the villages of Khushalpur and Majri." As, however, the High Court apparently accepted the lower Court's finding on remand that the villages in question had not been partitioned in the manner and with the formalities required by the Land Revenue Act, I cannot regard that case as instructive. The next case is Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal (3) decided by Petharam, C. J., and Mahmood, J., in 1885. The pre-emption clause is not set out in the report, but apparently it contained a contract, and gave the right of pre-emption to persons described in the report as "share-holders" or "partners" in the "village" but in the Subordinate Judge's judgment as "co-sharers" or [14] "co-parceners." In the undivided village the two plaintiff's held a one-third share, and the vendor and another person one-third each. There was a perfect partition by which each one-third share was divided from the others and made a separate mahal. After the partition, therefore, the plaintiffs were still co-sharers, but no one was a co-sharer of the vendor, who was the sole proprietor of one of the separate mahals. The sale to which the suit related was of the whole of that mahal. The judgment of Petheram, C.J., appears to have been based, first on the use of the word "village" as distinguished from "mahal," and secondly, on the view that the word "shareholder," "partner" or the like would, notwithstanding the partition, still apply to persons "living in" the village and sharing in the common use of roads, drains and other public things. The interpretation of the word share-holder as referring not to proprietary interest but to residence and participation in the use of roads and drains is very singular. Mahmood, J., whom the report represents as simply concurring with Petheram, C.J., delivered a separate written judgment, which appears to have escaped the Reporter's notice. He apparently held that the partition was not "perfected" or complete so as to constitute the separate mahals until a new wajib-ul-arz had been framed for each divided portion of the original mahal. So far as I know, there is no other authority for that view. The learned Judge further held that the pre-emption clause of the old wajib-ul-arz, not having been superseded by any new covenant, was still in force. "The mere apportionment of revenue and the disseverance of the liability to that revenue could not, ipso facto, defeat a covenant relating to pre-emption entered into by all the co-sharers for the time being, and which covenant ran as an incident of the tenure of the lands owned by them before such partition. In the second place, the terms of the pre-emption clause of the wajib-ul-arz speak not of the co-sharers of the mahal but of the village, and the distinction between these two terms seems to me sufficiently obvious, as explained by the learned Chief Justice." It appears to me that the whole question was whether the plaintiffs, [15] when they brought their suit, were co-sharers of the village within the meaning of the contract. That depended on whether the pre-emption clause meant by co-sharers of the village all persons owning shares within any part of the village area, or all whose shares were co-extensive with the whole of that area, or all who, whether in the whole or in part of the village, were co-sharers of the vendor. If it had the first meaning, then the plaintiffs, being co-sharers of one of the mahals into which the village was divided, were entitled to pre-emption. If it had the second meaning, neither the plaintiffs nor any one else were entitled to pre-emption, for the class of co-sharers of the village in that sense ceased to exist when the partition was made. If it had the third meaning, the plaintiffs were not entitled to pre-emption, for they were not co-sharers of the vendor, who was the sole proprietor of his mahal. The next case is Jai Ram v. Mahabir Rai (1). The terms of the wajib-ul-arz are not stated in the report. From the paper book it appears that the pre-emption clause gave a right of pre-emption (apparently by custom) "to brothers and sharers of of the thoke, and if the thoke-walah refuses, then to other shareholders." There was a partition by which one of the pattis of the mahal was divided from the rest and made a separate mahal. A new wajib-ul-arz was framed for the new mahal, giving a right of pre-emption to the co-sharers of that mahal, but not to the co-sharers of the pattis remaining with the original mahal. There was a sale of property, part of which was in the 1898

(1) S.D.A.N.W.P. (1861) Vol. I. p. 506.

(2) 9 A. 234 (238).

(3) 7 A. 772.

MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

(1) 7 A. 720.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

new mahal and part in the other pattis. A co-sharer in those pattis, but not in the new mahal, sued for pre-emption, excluding from the suit so much of the property sold as was situate in the new mahal. The defendant pleaded that, according to certain rulings of this Court, a suit for pre-emption could not be maintained in respect of part only of the property sold. The plea was overruled and the suit decreed, on the ground that as the suit included all the property sold which the plaintiff was entitled to pre-empt, the rulings referred to were inapplicable. Mahmood, J., held that the effect of the partition [16] was to exclude property in the new mahal from the operation of the old wajib-ul-arz, and to place it under the new wajib-ul-arz which gave the plaintiff no right of pre-emption. Oldfield, J., without referring to the new wajib-ul-arz, held as to the old one that "the condition as to pre-emption only affected the share-holders of the mahal so long as they remained shareholders, and ceased to have effect upon those share holders and their property who separated themselves and their property by forming a separate mahal. The plaintiff could, after the separation, exercise no right of pre-emption against and in respect of share-holders and property so separated, nor could the separated shareholders exercise any right of pre-emption against the plaintiff and his property remaining in the mahal from which they had separated." It is noticeable that no suggestion appears to have been made that the partition affected the plaintiff's right under the old wajib-ul-arz to pre-empt the property not situate in what was called "the new mahal." The judgments treat the partition not as destroying the "old mahal"—that is, the undivided mahal—but as merely detaching from it and converting into a new and separate mahal one of its pattis. It follows, however, from the definition in the Land Revenue Act of perfect partition as "the division of a mahal into two or more mahals," that after the partition both the mahals were "new," the old mahal with its co-parcenary body had disappeared, and for it were substituted two new mahals, each with a separate co-parcenary body of its own. Whether in that view the right of pre-emption given by the old wajib-ul-arz to the co-sharers of the original undivided mahal could be claimed by a co-sharer of the larger of the two mahals into which it was divided, was a question not considered by the Court. In Siam Shundar v. Amanant Begam (1) decided by Straight and Tyrrell, JJ., in 1887, the pre-emption clause was described as a contract. At the time when the wajib-ul-arz was framed, the plaintiff was a co-sharer with the vendor in the three villages to which it related. It gave a right of pre-emption to "shareholders" [17] or "co-sharers" in the village or mauza. Afterwards there was a perfect partition by which the plaintiff's shares were formed into a separate mahal, of which he was the sole proprietor, but no new wajib-ul-arz was made. The judgments do not discuss the terms of the wajib-ul-arz upon which the claim was based. They state the question for decision as "whether, this partition having taken place, the conditions of the wajib-ul-arz which subsisted prior thereto, and which has not been replaced by another, are still effectual and binding on all the persons who were originally co-sharers in the villages." Upon this they observe:—"The question is by no means without difficulty, and, were it res integra, we should have had some doubts in deciding it. There are, however, two rulings of Division Benches of this Court—one Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal (2) and the other an unreported case, F. A. No. 69 of 1882—the former of which has been followed in the present suit by the Court below, that are directly in point. We are not prepared, as at present advised, to reconsider the rule therein laid down, to the effect that despite the partition of the village into separate mahals, the existing wajib-ul-arz at the time of partition must be presumed to subsist and govern the separate mahals until it is shown that a new one has been made. We may add that this view is supported by the terms of the second paragraph of s. 191 of the Revenue Act of 1873." In this passage the effect of the two cases cited is not, in my opinion, accurately stated. No such rule or presumption is laid down in either. The second paragraph of s. 191 only provides that the existing record-of-rights shall remain in force until a new record-of-rights is made. It implies no presumption as to the construction to be placed on the terms of the wajib-ul-arz, nor as to whether co-sharers in the separate mahals, or even a sole proprietor of one of them, can claim the benefit of a pre-emption clause in favour of co-sharers in the undivided mahal. The case of Kuar Dat Prasad Singh v. Nahar Singh (1) decided by Straight and Mahmood, JJ., in 1888, does not throw much [18] light on the subject. There was no question of the application after partition of a wajib-ul-arz framed for an undivided mahal. There was a perfect partition of a village into two separate mahals, for each of which a wajib-ul-arz was framed. The suit was based on one of these wajib-ul-arzes; it was brought by a co-sharer in the mahal, though not in that patti of the mahal in which the property sold was situate; and the question was whether, according to the pre-emption clause, such a co-sharer was entitled to preference over the vendee who was a co-sharer in a patti of the other mahal. The judgment was based on the terms of the wajib-ul-arz, but it contained this passage:—"It must be distinctly understood that this view of this particular wajib-ul-arz in no way ignores any other decision that may have been passed in cases where one wajib-ul-arz having existed for the purpose of a common village area, and that village area having been divided into separate revenue areas, and no new wajib-ul-arz having been drawn up, such wajib-ul-arz has been held to apply generally to the new area. The principle upon which that view of the law is based is to be found stated in the case of Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal, and this principle, which is further elaborated in another ruling at page 720 of the same volume (Jai Prasad v. Mahabir Rai) is that this pre-emptive right runs with the land and the division of that land for the purposes of the revenue in no way affects any covenant or agreement existing between the co-sharers." That is, in my opinion, a misleading description of the effect of perfect partition, an inaccurate account of the case of Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal, and a most extraordinary misconception of the judgments in Jai Prasad v. Mahabir Rai. The learned Judges in the latter case did not elaborate any principle stated in the former, and, so far from holding that the pre-emptive right ran with the land and that partition did not affect any agreement between the co-sharers, held, as nearly as possible, the very reverse.

(1) 9 A. 234.

(2) 7 A. 772.

In Ramjiawan Sahu v. Raturaj Singh (2) decided by Straight and Tyrrell, JJ., the question was whether under the [19] wajib-ul-arz of an undivided village, which gave rights of pre-emption to "co-sharers," the plaintiff as a co-sharer of one only of the two separate mahals into which the original mahal had been divided, could pre-empt property in the 1899

MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

(1) 11 A. 257.

(2) 9 A.W.N. (1889) 82.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

other. No new wajib-ul-arz had been framed. The learned Judges held that "the right of pre-emption was one created by agreement between the co-sharers of the village, and constituted a covenant which attached to and ran with the land. The mere fact that for purposes of revenue the village has been divided into two revenue-paying areas does not put an end to that covenant, which still attaches to all the land which formed a part of the original village unit, and will until it is abrogated. In support of this view, we may refer to I. L. R., 7 All., 772." I cannot agree either with the conception of pre-emption as a covenant running with the land, or with the conception of a perfect partition as an exclusively fiscal operation involving no material change in the pre-emptor's status as a co-sharer, or with the view that either conception is supported by Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal. To describe pre-emption as a covenant running with the land is to misapply a technical term of English real property law. To describe perfect partition as concerned exclusively with "purposes of revenue" is to ignore half its effect. In Abbasali v. Ghulam Nabi (1) Knox, J., held in substance that the partition of a village consisting of a single mahal into two separate mahals, in one of which the plaintiff and the vendor were co-sharers, and in the other the vendee was a co-sharer, did not render the previously framed wajib-ul-arz inapplicable, and that under it the vendee was equally entitled with the plaintiff as a co-sharer of the vendor. The learned Judge did not discuss the effect of the word which he translated "shareholder," but merely observed that the case was one in which the principle which should guide the Court was that contained in Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal, and in another case which does not seem very applicable. The circumstances of the next case, Mata Din v. Mahesh Prasad (2) were peculiar. There [20] was a village or mauza originally forming a single mahal, and the wajib-ul-arz gave a right of pre-emption to "hissadaran" (translated by the learned Judge as "co-sharers") not of the "mahal" but of the "mauza." There was a perfect partition of the village into three mahals, for each of which a new wajib-ul-arz was framed, and in each the pre-emption clause was copied verbatim from the old wajib-ul-arz. At that time one of the new mahals belonged to a single owner. Upon the sale of property in that mahal a suit for pre-emption was brought by a person who was a co-sharer in another of the new mahals. Mr. Justice Mahmood held that the plaintiff was entitled to pre-emption as a co-sharer of the mauza, notwithstanding the partition and the fact that he was not a co-sharer of the vendor in the mahal where the property was situate. Although the judgment refers to some of the previous cases, it treats the question as strictly one of the intention of the parties to the contract contained in the wajib-ul-arz. The learned Judge held that, from the use in that wajib-ul-arz of the expression "co-sharers of the mauza" as distinguished from the mahal, from its exact reproduction of the pre-emption clause of the wajib-ul-arz of the undivided village, and from the circumstance that when the new wajib-ul-arzes were framed, one of the new mahals belonged to a single owner, it was to be inferred that the parties to those instruments intended to preserve the right of pre-emption on its original footing as a right to be enjoyed by all who were formerly co-sharers of the mauza, notwithstanding the partition. It was as if each new wajib-ul-arz had said, "the right of pre-emption shall belong not only to the co-sharers of this mahal but to all persons who, prior to the partition, could have claimed pre-emption under the old wajib-ul-arz as co-sharers of the undivided mauza." In other words, they desired to confine the effect of the partition as nearly as possible to "fiscal purposes as to the payment of Government revenue," and to retain some distinction between the old co-parcenary body and total strangers to the village. Whether Mr. Justice Mahmood's conclusions [21] in that particular case were correct or not, I cannot doubt that his method of deciding it upon the construction of the contract contained in the wajib-ul-arz was the right one.

(1) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 137.

(2) 12 A.W.N. (1892) 100.

In Angan Lal v. Hamidulnissa (S.A. No. 1249 of 1892) the question was discussed in the judgment of Tyrrell and Blair, JJ., remitting certain issues on the 29th June 1894. The claim for pre-emption was based on the wajib-ul-arz of a mahal consisting of 12 biswas only of a mauza. In that mahal the plaintiff and the vendors were co-sharers. The wajib-ul-arz gave the right of pre-emption by contract to sharers (sharkai) in the mahal. There was a perfect partition by which the 12 biswas mahal was divided into four separate mahals. In one of these, in which the property in question was situate, there were several co-sharers, including the vendors, but not the plaintiff. Of another of the four, the plaintiff was the sole proprietor. No new wajib-ul-arz was framed. After the partition, the vendors sold some of the land in their new mahal to a stranger. The plaintiff sued for pre-emption on the basis of the old wajib-ul-arz. I think there can be no doubt that the suit was rightly dismissed. The plaintiff was not a sharik or sharer in the mahal, within the meaning of the wajib-ul-arz. The class of sharers in that mahal had ceased to exist with the mahal itself. The plaintiff was not even a sharik or sharer in the new mahal in which the property sold was situate. The Court distinguished Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal, Kuar Dat Prasad Singh v. Nahar Singh, Ramjiawan Sahu v. Raturaj Singh and Abbas Ali v. Ghulam Nabi, on the grounds that in those cases the mauza and the mahal were originally conterminous; that in them the wajib-ul-arz gave rights of pre-emption not to co-sharers in the mahal but to shareholders in the mauza, and that therefore the right there survived the partition of the mahal into separate mahals for which no new wajib-ul-arzes were framed. In Ghure v. Man Singh (1), decided in 1895, the wajib-ul-arz of a village forming a single mahal gave the right of pre-emption to "hissadaran deh," the same expression as is used in [22] the wajib-ul-arz in the present case. There was a perfect partition of the village into three separate mahals, and for each mahal was framed a new wajib-ul-arz which gave no right of pre-emption to sharers in the other mahals. A suit for pre-emption based on the old wajib-ul-arz was brought by a co-sharer of one of the separate mahals to avoid a sale of land situate in another of them. Two questions arose. The first was whether the new wajib-ul-arz was prepared in accordance with law so as to govern the rights of the parties. The second was whether the old wajib-ul-arz was still operative, notwithstanding the partition, and whether the plaintiff was entitled to pre-emption under its provisions. Upon the first question, the Court held that the new wajib-ul-arz was a valid document, and that, as it gave the plaintiff no right of pre-emption, the suit failed. Upon the second they held that the plaintiff could not, after the partition, successfully claim pre-emption on the basis of the old wajib-ul-arz. In reference to the argument for the plaintiff based on the words

1899
MAY 15.

FULL BENCH.

22 A. 1
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

"hissadar deh" Mr. Justice Knox made the following important observations:—

"We are dealing with a village which bears a Hindu name, the parties before us are Hindus, and the custom, if there be one, of pre-emption, in so far as it extends, is a custom superseding general law. In examining the terms in which it is recorded, we cannot forget that it was recorded at a time when the village bore its natural, and, from a Hindu standpoint, proper form of an undivided village and an undivided mahal. The term "hissadar deh" as then used would apply to all who could claim to hold a share in land within a well-defined ring-fence in which all were shareholders, and at a time when there existed no intention of the village brotherhood being separated or the land being broken up into distinct parcels, in which some only and not all the village brotherhood would hold a share. It is more than difficult to say that those who then made the record would have recorded that the custom was one which should prevail when the relations of persons and property then subsisting had undergone such a radical change as necessarily ensures when perfect partition takes place."

[23] The learned Judge proceeded to distinguish Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal, Mata Din v. Mahesh Prasad, Kuar Dat Prasad Singh v. Nahar Singh and Shiam Sundar v. Amanant Begam, with reference to the special circumstances of those cases. He concluded as follows:—
"The result then is that the document upon which the respondents base their right, and which was the only evidence which they produced in support of that right, is a document prepared at a time when circumstances wholly different from those now in existence prevailed, and which never contemplated the existing state of things. We are not prepared to hold that it is sufficient to establish that the custom which did prevail, if there be such a custom, can be held to be a custom governing and ruling the parties in the new and altered state of things." Mr. Justice Aikman, after holding that the new wajib-ul-arz would supply a sufficient answer to the suit, expressly stated that this would be enough to decide the case. What follows is therefore obiter. He proceeded to discuss the question "whether after a partition an owner of land in one mahal can assert a right of pre-emption when a sale is made of property situated in another mahal." After observing that it had never been held that a right of pre-emption disappears with an imperfect partition, he referred to Motee Sah v. Musammatt Goklee and Jai Ram v. Mahabir Rai in support of the view that "it is different in the case of perfect partition." He dissented from the decision in Gokal Singh v. Mannu Lal and expressed the opinion "that unless at the time of partition a right of pre-emption is specifically reserved by the co-sharers in respect of lands lying in the other mahals, such right of pre-emption is not to be presumed from the mere fact that, when the village formed but one mahal, the co-sharers had pre-emptive rights against each other." I agree that there is no such presumption, but in deciding whether the right has been established, the terms of the wajib-ul-arz and the state of things existing when it was framed, as well as that existing at that time of partition, must, I think, be considered. However, there is nothing in Mr. Justice Aikman's [24] judgment to the contrary, and he expresses no disagreement with Mr. Justice Knox. The decision in that case was followed by Mr. Justice Aikman in Abdul Aziz Khan v. Husen Ali (1) and by Mr. Justice Knox in Shah Bindraban Das v. Dani Ram (S. A. No. 675 of 1897). The claim in the former case appears to have been based on custom. The judgment holds in substance that, after perfect partition, the benefit of a custom of pre-emption recorded in the old wajib-ul-arz as prevailing among the co-sharers of the undivided mahal could be claimed by a co-sharer of one of the separate mahals in respect of property situate therein, but not in respect of property situate in another mahal of which he was not a co-sharer. The reason of this distinction must be that in the former case, but not in the latter, the claim is made by a co-sharer of the vendor. In neither case, however, is it made by a co-sharer of the mahal, to which alone the wajib-ul-arz presumably referred. Whether the distinction was justified or not depends, in my opinion, upon the terms of the wajib-ul-arz. It would not, I think, be safe to assume that a custom prevailing among the co-sharers of mahal A would, after the destruction of that mahal and of the co-parcenary body connected with it, necessarily apply to the co-sharers of mahal B or mahal C, into which A has been partitioned. In this respect Mr. Justice Aikman's decision appears to be inconsistent with that of Mr. Justice Knox in Shah Bindraban Das v. Dani Ram, which, however, also purports to follow Ghure v. Man Singh. For in the case before Mr. Justice Knox, the claim for pre-emption based on the old wajib-ul-arz was made by a person who, after perfect partition, was a co-sharer of the vendor in one of the separate mahals. He claimed as coming within words which the Court of first instance translated as "co-sharers in the order of nearness, with regard to their holding shares in the village." No new wajib-ul-arz was framed. The vendees were admittedly strangers. Mr. Justice Knox confirmed the decree of the lower appellate Court dismissing the suit. His judgment treats Ghure v. Man Singh as not merely stating certain presumptions [25] of fact are considerations as to what is probable in given circumstances, but as giving a general answer in the negative to the question "whether a wajib-ul-arz which was prepared at a time when the village out of which two separate mahals have now been carved by perfect partition and for each of which separate mahals no wajib-ul-arz of any kind has been framed, governs the co-sharers in the two new mahals upon a question of the right of pre-emption based upon a covenant said to be contained in the old wajib-ul-arz." In Abdul Hai v. Nain Singh (1) the terms of the wajib-ul-arz do not appear from the report or from the paper-book. It appears, however, to have recorded a custom of pre-emption as prevailing in the undivided village. The village was divided by perfect partition into two mahals consisting respectively of 15 biswas and 5 biswas. No new wajib-ul-arz was framed. The whole 5 biswas mahal belonged to the defendant vendor, and he sold it to strangers. The owner of a share in the 15 biswas mahal only sued for pre-emption on the basis of the old wajib-ul-arz. The High Court on appeal dismissed the suit. The judgment of Edge, C.J., and Blair, J., refers with approval to Ghure v. Man Singh and Angan Lal v. Hamid-ul-nissa. The principle on which it is based is the improbability, having regard to the usual objects and motives of shareholders obtaining perfect partition of a mahal, that they should, after partition, intend that the other co-sharers from whom they had separated their interest should be entitled to come in and become again their co-sharers. The last reported case is Mithu Lal v. Muhammad Ahmad Said Khan (2) decided by Blair

(1) 15 A.W.N. (1895) 233.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

(1) 20 A. 92.

(2) 19 A. W. N. (1899) 19.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

and Aikman, JJ. The suit was based on a pre-emption clause recording a custom of pre-emption in favour of "co-sharers in the village." The village, at the time when the wajib-ul-arz was framed, was an undivided mahal. By a perfect partition it was afterwards divided into two separate mahals of 15 and 5 biswas respectively. No new wajib-ul-arz was framed. The plaintiffs and the vendors were co-sharers in the 5 biswas mahal, in which the property was sold. The vendee [26] was sole proprietor of the 15 biswas mahal, and his only connection with the other was that he owned in it certain rent-free land. His main defence to the suit was that the plaintiffs had no preferential right because he was himself a "co-sharer in the village" within the old wajib-ul-arz, notwithstanding the partition. The High Court held in substance (1) that the old wajib-ul-arz and the old custom still remained in force in so far as they were not inconsistent with the state of things created by the partition, (2) that as in consequence of the partition the defendant had ceased to be a "co-sharer in the village" with the vendor, and was not a co-sharer in the 5 biswas mahal, he had not equal rights with the plaintiffs, and (3) that the plaintiffs were entitled to pre-emption under the old wajib-ul-arz. So far as this decision rejected the defendant's claim to the right of pre-emption, I have no doubt that it was right. But what about the claim of the plaintiffs? The Court in decreeing the suit assumed that the plaintiffs, at all events, were entitled to pre-emption under the old wajib-ul-arz, notwithstanding the perfect partition. Apparently they assumed it because the plaintiffs were admittedly co-sharers with the vendor in the 5 biswas mahal in which the property sold was situate. In other words they took for granted that co-sharers in one of the separate mahals were "co-sharers in the village" within the meaning of the wajib-ul-arz. It is likely enough that they were right, but they do not discuss the question. All depends on what the wajib-ul-arz meant by "co-sharers in the village." If it included all persons who might thereafter be co-sharers in any part of the village, the decision was right. If it meant all persons who were co-sharers in the entire undivided village for which the wajib-ul-arz was framed, the decision was wrong, for the plaintiffs, after partition, were no more co-sharers of the village in that sense than the defendant vendee. As a matter of fact the only co-sharers in the village at the time when the wajib-ul-arz was framed were co-sharers of the undivided village.

In the present case the whole question is, in my opinion, whether a hissadar has transferred his share within the meaning [27] of the wajib-ul-arz, and whether the plaintiff is a hissadar deh within the fourth category of pre-emptors. Taking first the word deh, it is, I think, virtually equivalent to mauza. It means a village in the sense of a definite local area, the actual village, with the lands belonging to it: Wilson's Glossary of Judicial and Revenue Terms, p. 141, Elliott's Supplementary Glossary of Terms used in the North-Western Provinces, Vol. ii, p. 283. It does not mean a mahal, and has no necessary reference to the fiscal unit. So far I agree with the argument on behalf of the plaintiff. The next question is, what is a hissadar of the village? The learned pleader contended that hissadar did not here mean a "co-sharer" of a mahal in the sense in which that term is used in the Land Revenue Act, but merely "the holder of a share." He argued that if co-sharers, in the sense of persons owning shares in the mahal formed by the undivided village, had been intended, some such word would have been used as "sharik-i-mahal," the term used for co-sharers in the official vernacular translation of the Land Revenue Act, or else "sharik-i-hissa." He laid stress on the expression "malikan sharik khatta" in the third category of pre-emptors mentioned in the wajib-ul-arz as indicating that, where jointness of interest was signified, the word "sharik" was employed. According to this argument, a hissadar deh merely means one who owns or holds a share within the area of the village. If that is the meaning, then, notwithstanding the partition, the plaintiff is entitled to pre-emption, for the deh or village still remains, and he is still a hissadar, or owner of a share, within its area. On the other hand, it was contended for the defendants that hissadar means not merely the owner of a share, but a "co-sharer," and that hissadar deh means a co-sharer of the entire village for which the wajib-ul-arz was framed. If that is the meaning, then, as the effect of the perfect partition was to destroy the class of hissadاران deh altogether, neither the plaintiff nor anyone else can now claim pre-emption as a member of it.

The result of the argument is, I think, to show that the word hissadar taken by itself, and without reference to any context, [28] is ambiguous. In Wilson's Glossary it is translated "a shareholder, a sharer, a co-parcener, one who pays his share of revenue to a zamindar or to the State." Mr. Durga Charan has pointed out in the written statement of one of the defendants and in the deposition of a witness instances of the description of persons as hissadars of the village Serai Sitam, though, since the partition, no one has been a co-sharer of the entire village. All depends, I think, upon the context. There are two main considerations which have led me to the conclusion that in this wajib-ul-arz hissadar deh means a co-sharer of the undivided village for which the wajib-ul-arz was framed. The first is that the word "hissadar" as used in the fourth category of pre-emptors must be construed in the same sense as the same word in the opening words of the clause "if any hissadar wishes to transfer his share (apna hissa)."²⁸ The word "hissadar" is there used without the word deh. Considering that a wajib-ul-arz is framed under the Land Revenue Act for a mahal, and that its chief purpose is to record the usages of co-sharers of the mahal in the sense of the Act, I think here is a strong presumption that the word "hissadar" when used in such a document means, in the absence of other expressions implying a different meaning, a co-sharer in that sense, a person jointly and severally responsible to Government for the revenue for the time being assessed on the entire mahal for which the wajib-ul-arz was framed, and, in cases of zamindari tenure, having a joint and undivided share in the whole of that mahal. The opening words of the clause mean therefore, in my opinion, "if any co-sharer of this mahal wishes to transfer his share therein." If so, the subsequent words "hissadاران deh" mean "co-sharers of the undivided village," not "owners of shares in any sub-division of the village." The second consideration is this. We are interpreting and applying a particular custom of which the plaintiff claims the benefit. In considering who is entitled to the benefit of a custom it is essential to see who are the persons among whom it has in fact habitually prevailed. It cannot be claimed by anyone [29] who is not a member of the class thus determined. Now there can be no doubt as to what was the class of persons who at the time when the wajib-ul-arz was framed, habitually exercised the right of pre-emption by virtue of the custom. They were the co-sharers of the undivided mahal which the village Serai Sitam then formed and no others. There was no distinction between shareholders in the village and 1899

MAY 15.

FULL BENCH.

22 A. 1
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

co-sharers of the entire village; there was only a single class of co-sharers. That is the only class among whom the custom actually prevailed, and to whom therefore the right belonged. It is now sought to apply the custom for the benefit of the plaintiff, who stands in a totally different relation to the village, to the vendor, and to the property sold. He is not a co-sharer of the entire village. He is not a member of the class who exercised the right of pre-emption at the time when the custom was recorded. He is a member of a class which only came into existence through the partition—persons who have shares in a particular sub-division of the village. He is not even a co-sharer of the vendor. To allow him to pre-empt under the old wajib-ul-arz would be, in my opinion, to change the custom while professing to apply it.

For these reasons I am of opinion that the sale which the suit seeks to avoid was not a transfer within the meaning of the wajib-ul-arz, that the plaintiff is not entitled to pre-emption as a hissaddar deh, and that his suit and this appeal must be dismissed with costs in all Courts.

KNOX, J.—I concur in all that the learned Chief Justice has written, and have nothing more to add.

BURKITT, J.—I am of the same opinion.

BANERJI, J.—I have arrived at the same conclusion as the learned Chief Justice.

A claim for pre-emption not founded on Muhammadan law must be based on custom, or contract, or both. A wajib-ul-arz in so far as it relates to pre-emption, is the record of the custom of pre-emption which prevails in the village or mahal, or of the contract by which the co-sharers have agreed to be bound; [30] when therefore a wajib-ul-arz is referred to as the foundation of a claim for pre-emption, the real basis of the claim is the custom or contract which is evidenced by the wajib-ul-arz. Even if the wajib-ul-arz has become inoperative as a part of the record-of-rights, it does not necessarily follow that the custom or contract embodied in it has ceased, and that a suit cannot be brought upon the basis of such custom or contract. It seems to me that the conflict of opinion which arose in the numerous cases cited to us at the hearing and considered in detail by the learned Chief Justice was to a great extent due to the fact that in many of those cases the provisions of the wajib-ul-arz were treated as representing a contract between the co-sharers, whereas in fact they were, and professed to be, the record of a custom prevailing in the particular village or mahal. It was, I suppose, in consequence of this disregard of the exact nature of the claim that it was laid down in some of those cases that after a perfect partition has been effected a co-sharer in one mahal is not entitled to pre-empt property in another mahal "unless at the time of partition there has been some specific arrangement by which reciprocal rights of pre-emption have been maintained between the co-sharers of the different mahals." In my opinion the mere fact that a perfect partition has taken place does not abrogate a custom or contract as to pre-emption which was in force before partition. If after partition a new wajib-ul-arz has been prepared recording a custom or contract different from the custom or contract embodied in the old wajib-ul-arz, the presumption will be that the custom which obtained in the village or the mahal at the time of the preparation of the old wajib-ul-arz has fallen into desuetude, and a new custom has sprung up, or that the co-sharers have set aside the old contract and entered into a new one. But where a fresh wajib-ul-arz has not been prepared at partition, it does not follow, as a matter of law or principle, that the custom or contract in force before partition is no longer to have effect and operation. As observed by the learned Chief Justice, the question in each case is that of the construction of the nature of the particular custom or [31] contract on which the claim for pre-emption is based, and whether the custom or contract can apply to the altered state of things which has come into existence since a perfect partition has been effected.

In the case before us the wajib-ul-arz which was referred to as the basis of the claim professes to be the record of a custom and not of a contract. What we have to consider is whether under that custom the plaintiff has a preferential right of pre-emption. It is admitted that the plaintiff does not belong to the first three classes of pre-emptors mentioned in the wajib-ul-arz, nor does he come under the fourth category. Since partition he has admittedly ceased to be a co-sharer of the vendor. He no doubt holds a share in the village. But, in my opinion, the true construction of the custom as recorded in the wajib-ul-arz is that it is only such a shareholder as is also a co-sharer who has the right of pre-emption as a pre-emptor of the fourth class. At the time when the wajib-ul-arz was prepared all the shareholders were also co-sharers. The custom which was embodied in the wajib-ul-arz evidently had reference to that description of shareholders. Therefore by virtue of such a custom the plaintiff, who is the holder of a share in the village, but not a co-sharer of the vendor, has no right of pre-emption and his suit has been properly dismissed. I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

AIKMAN, J.—The question raised in this appeal is whether, when no new wajib-ul-arz has been prepared on the perfect partition of a mahal, a claim for pre-emption can be maintained on the basis of the old wajib-ul-arz framed for the former mahal, which has by partition been broken up into two or more mahals. I agree with the learned Chief Justice in holding that it is incorrect to say that upon partition the former wajib-ul-arz necessarily disappears or ceases to exist. If a fresh wajib-ul-arz is prepared for each of the new mahals the old wajib-ul-arz is thereby superseded, but until this is done the old wajib-ul-arz must be considered as in force, but only so far as it is applicable to the altered state of things.

[32] The cases in this Court which held that, because, under a wajib-ul-arz in force before partition there had been a right of pre-emption amongst those who were then co-sharers of the village, the same right subsisted after partition amongst those who owned shares in the different mahals of the village, lost sight, it appears to me, of the material alteration in the circumstances brought about by the partition.

Where the wajib-ul-arz of an undivided mahal, whether reciting a custom or embodying a contract, lays down that a right of pre-emption prevails amongst the "shareholders" of the mahal, it refers to a body of men between whom there is this common bond that they each own a fractional share of an integer made up of all the shares held by each, in virtue of which ownership they incur reciprocal liabilities and are entitled to reciprocal rights. When this common bond has disappeared it cannot be assumed that the reciprocal rights and liabilities which formerly existed are still in force. Where the old wajib-ul-arz recites the existence of a custom amongst a body of men between whom a common link subsists, I do not see how, after a perfect partition, it can reasonably be held that the custom continues to prevail amongst those between whom that common link is no longer in existence. Where, however, the wajib-ul-arz embodies a contract, I concur with the learned Chief Justice in holding 1899

MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.

—
22 A. 1
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

1899
MAY 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 1
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 111.

that the question whether, in the altered state of things, the contract is still in force, must depend on the language of the old wajib-ul-arz. It is quite conceivable that the old wajib-ul-arz might set forth an express agreement that no future partition would destroy existing rights of pre-emption. But where there is no such express contract, and the old wajib-ul-arz merely records a right of pre-emption as existing by way of a contract amongst those who are hissadars of the village, the inference is that the language of the wajib-ul-arz refers to persons who stand to one another in the mutual relation of owning shares in the same integer.

In the present case the claim of the plaintiff was based on a clause in the wajib-ul-arz which occurs in a chapter dealing with [33] the rights of co-sharers amongst themselves. According to this clause a hissadar could not sell his share to an outsider until he had first offered it to the other shareholders in the village (hissadaran deh). This was the record of a custom. From the language used, the inference I draw is that the custom was one which prevailed amongst those who each owned a fractional share or hissa of one undivided estate, and cannot be held to subsist amongst those between whom there is now no such common bond. To use the words of Oldfield, J. — "The condition of pre-emption only affected the shareholders of the mahal as long as they remained shareholders, and ceased to have effect on those shareholders and their property who separated themselves and their property by forming a separate mahal" (1). The plaintiff in this case owns no property in the mahal in which the share sold is situated, and cannot therefore be held to be standing in the relation of hissadar to the hissadar who has sold.

For these reasons I think the plaintiff's suit was properly dismissed by our brother Blair, and I would dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

22 A. 33 (F.B.) = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 159.

FULL BENCH.

*Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Knox, Mr. Justice Blair, Mr. Justice Banerji, Mr. Justice Burkitt
and Mr. Justice Aikman.*

BHAGWANTA AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs) v. SUKHI AND OTHERS
(Defendants).^{*} [12th June, 1899.]

Hindu Law—Reversioners—Suit to set aside alienation by Hindu widow—Similar suit barred by limitation as against a prior reversioner—Suit by subsequent reversioner not thereby barred—Limitation—Act No. XV of 1877 (Indian Limitation Act), s. 7; sch ii, art. 120.

Held that, where there are several reversioners entitled successively under the Hindu law to an estate held by a Hindu widow, no one such reversioner can be held to claim through or derive his title from another, even if that other happens to be his father, but he derives his title from the last full owner. If, therefore, the right of the nearest reversioner for the time being [34] to contest an alienation or an adoption by the widow is allowed to become barred by limitation as against ^{*} Second Appeal No. 879 of 1896, from a decree of W. F. Wells, Esq., District Judge of Agra, dated the 13th July 1896, confirming a decree of Maulvi Siraj-ud-din Ahmad, Subordinate Judge of Agra, dated the 23rd April 1896.

(1) 7 A. 720 (730).

him, this will not bar the similar rights of the subsequent reversioners Beni Prasad v. Hardai Bibi (1), Ramphal Rai v. Tula Kuari (2), Jumona Dassya Chowdhrani v. Bamasoonderai Dassya Chowdhrani (3) and Isri Dut Koer v. Mussumat Hansutti Koerain (4) referred to. Chhaganram Astikram v. Bai Motigavri (5) and Pershad Singh v. Chedee Lall (6) dissented from.

A minor plaintiff instituting a suit which falls within art. 120 of the second schedule of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, is not excluded from the benefit of s. 7 merely because the right of some other person through whom he does not claim to sue for similar relief has become time barred. The "right to sue" mentioned in the third column of art. 120 means the right to sue of the plaintiff or of some one through whom he claims. The "period of limitation" mentioned in s. 7 means the period of limitation for the suit which the plaintiff or some one through whom he claims is entitled to institute. Siddhessur Dutt v. Sham Chand Nundun (7), Mrino Moyee Debia v. Bhoobun Moyee Debia (8), Gobind Coomar Chowdhry v. Huro Chunder Chowdhry (9) and Gobind Chandra Sarma Mazoomdar v. Anand Mohun Sarma Mazoomdar (10) referred to.

[Diss., 14 Ind. Cas. 60=173 P.W.R. 1912; F., 28 M. 57=14 M.L.J. 209; 16 Ind. Cas. 839 (841)=23 M.L.J. 269 (271)=12 M.L.T. 188=(1912) M.W.N. 912 (914); 13 M.L.J. 359; R., 22 A. 382; 27 A. 37 (45) (P.C.)=2 A.L.J. 237=1 C.L.J. 46=32 I.A. 17=8 Sar. P.C.J. 727; 32 A. 33=6 A.L.J. 931 (939)=3 Ind. Cas. 725=6 M.L.T. 348; 32 C. 62=9 C.W.N. 25; 36 C. 780 (P.C.)=6 A.L.J. 567=11 Bom. L.R. 833=10 C.L.J. 58=13 C.W.N. 920=3 Ind. Cas. 332=5 M.L.T. 423=93 P.R. (1909); 27 M. 588; 29 M. 390 (407)=16 M.L.J. 307=1 M.L.T. 183; 31 M. 366=18 M.L.J. 209=3 M.L.T. 355; 2 C.L.J. 87=9 C.W.N. 795; 12 C.W.N. 857 (859); 17 C.W.N. 605=13 M.L.T. 437=(1913) M.W.N. 470 (472); 9 Ind. Cas. 300=26 P.R. 1911=34 P.L.R. 1911=33 P.W.R. 1911; 9 Ind. Cas. 957 (960)=38 P.L.R. 1911; 17 Ind. Cas. 101 (105)=8 N.L.R. 113; 8 O.C. 124 (126); 184 P.W.R. 1911=9 Ind. Cas. 957; D., 58 P.R. (1905)=59 P.L.R. (1905); 68 P.R. (1905)=2 P.L.R. (1906); 21 P.W.R. 1907.]

THIS was a suit by certain plaintiffs, who claimed, as reversioners under the Hindu law, to get rid of the effect, as against their interests, of certain alienations of property which had been of their maternal grandfather, Richpal, in his lifetime. The plaintiffs asked for a declaration, first, that an alienation made in 1876, by a Hindu widow, their maternal grandmother, Sabej Kuwar, in favour of one Musammam Hanso, was void as against the plaintiffs; secondly, that a further alienation made by Musammam Hanso in 1893 to one Kirpa Ram was also void as against the plaintiffs; thirdly, that the plaintiffs were entitled, after the death of their mother, Musammam Matta, to possession of the property in suit. At the time of the alienation in 1876 by Sabej Kunwar, the plaintiff's mother, Musammam Matta, was the nearest living reversioner. She became entitled to possession of the property in 1889, when her mother, the widow Sabej Kunwar, died; she took no steps to [36] question the alienation made in 1876. She was made a pro forma defendant to the suit, and in her written statement she pleaded that she did not wish to question either the alienation of 1876 or that of 1893. The suit was brought in 1894, all the plaintiffs being then minors, represented, for the purposes of the suit, by their father, Jewa Ram, as guardian ad litem.

The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Agra), dismissed the suit as barred by limitation, holding that limitation began to run from the date of the alienation by Sabej Kunwar in 1876, and that the case was governed either by art. 120 or by art. 125 of the second schedule to

(1) F.A. No. 35 of 1884 decided February 4th, 1893, (14 A. 67).

(2) 6 A. 116.

(3) 3 I.A. 72.

(4) 10 I.A. 150=10 C. 324.

(5) 14 B. 512.

(6) 15 W.R. C.R. 1.

(7) 23 W.R. C.R. 285.

(8) 23 W.R. C.R. 42.

(9) 7 W.R. C.R. 134.

(10) 2 B.L.R. A.C. 313.

1899
JUNE 12.
—
FULL BENCH.

22 A. 33
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 159.

the Indian Limitation Act, 1877. The plaintiffs appealed and the lower appellate Court (District Judge of Agra) dismissed their appeal, holding the suit to be barred by either art. 120 or art. 126. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court.

Pandit Baldeo Ram Dave, for the appellants.

Article 125 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, is not applicable to this suit. That article is applicable to a suit brought during the lifetime of a Hindu or Muhammadan female by a Hindu or Muhammadan who, if the female died at the date of instituting the suit, would be entitled to have an alienation of land made by such female declared to be void except for her life. In the present case, the female who made the alienation was dead before the institution of the suit. It has not been brought by a person who was entitled to possession immediately after the death of that female. The appellant's mother, Musammat Mattra, is still alive, and she is the person entitled to immediate possession. She is a defendant to this suit. There is no article in the Limitation Act applicable to a suit of this class. Article 126, referred to by the Court of first instance, has no bearing on the question. Article 120 of the second schedule to the Act has been held by this Court to apply to suits for declaratory decrees—Legge v. Ram Baran (1). Under it a period of six years is provided, and the time from which it [36] begins to run is "when the right to sue accrues." The right to impeach an alienation made by a Hindu widow having a limited interest belongs to the presumptive reversionary heir—Rani Anund Koer v. The Court of Wards (2). The present plaintiffs have no right to sue for the declaration sought by them during the lifetime of their mother, who is the presumptive reversionary heir, unless they show that their mother has refused to sue without any sufficient cause, or has precluded herself by her own act or conduct from suing, or has colluded with the widow or concurred in the act which we say is wrongful—Rani Anund Koer v. The Court of Wards (2). We allege facts to that effect in the 8th paragraph of our plaint. So long as Sabej Kunwar was alive, the transferees had a right to be in possession of the property alienated to them, and Musammat Mattra could have abstained from taking any steps to impeach the alienation. But the moment she was dead, Musammat Mattra ought not to have allowed the alienees to remain in possession of that property to the prejudice of the plaintiff's right. If the plaintiff's allegations be true, the alienees become trespassers on the death of Musammat Sabej Kunwar. It is the conduct of Musammat Mattra, on the death of Musammat Sabej Kunwar, which gave the plaintiff a right to sue. The suit is within six years of the date of Musammat Sabej Kunwar's death. There is only one case of this Court, in which Mahmood, J., has ruled that a daughter's son could, during the lifetime of his mother, maintain a suit to impeach an alienation made by his maternal grandmother without proof of collusion or other circumstances on the part of the daughter—Balgobind v. Ram Kumar (3). Oldfield, J., who was one of the Judges who decided that case, held that the suit was maintainable as one coming within the exceptional circumstances under which a daughter's son could maintain such an action. The view of Mahmood, J., has been based on the doctrines of the English law concerning life estates, whilst the estate of a Hindu widow inheriting from her [37] husband is not, strictly speaking, what a life

(1) 20 A. 35.

(2) 8 I. A. 14 = 6 C. 764.

(3) 6 A. 431.

estate is under the English law—Tagore Law Lectures for 1879, pp. 239—245. The view of Mahmood, J., is in direct conflict with the ruling in Madari v. Malki (1), decided by Straight, Officiating C. J., and Brodhurst, J. Following the latter ruling, Tyrrell and Blair, JJ., have in Ishwar Narain v. Janki (2) expressly dissented from the ruling of Mr. Justice Mahmood. That ruling is also opposed to the principles laid down in Musammatt Golab Koonwer v. Shib Sahai (3), Radha Kishen v. Bukhtawur Lal (4), Bal Gobind Ram v. Hirusranee (5), and Bama Soonduree Dossee v. Bama Soonduree Dossee (6). In Kandasami v. Akkam-mal (7) and in Raghupati v. Tirumalai (8), the Madras High Court seems to have taken the same view as Mahmood, J., has in Bal Gobind v. Ram Kumar (9). But the weight of authority appears to be in favour of the plaintiff's case.

The ruling of the Bombay High Court in Chhaganram Astikram v. Bai Motigavri (10) has no application to a case governed by the Mitakshara law. In the Bombay case, to which the Mayukha law was applicable, the daughter took a full estate, and the daughter's son inherited to his mother. Under the Mitakshara law, a daughter takes only a widow's estate in the property left by her father, and a daughter's son inherits to his maternal grandfather. The case of Pershad Singh v. Chedee Lall (11), relied on by the Court below, has been decided on a misconception of the principle that under the Mitakshara law a daughter's son does not inherit to his mother but to the maternal grandfather in respect of the property left by him. In order to substantiate the proposition that the plaintiff's suit was barred by limitation, because a right to sue for a declaration had accrued to Musammatt Mattra in 1876, it must be shown that the plaintiffs derived their right to sue from or through Musammatt Mattra. [38] [Definition of the word "plaintiff" in s. 3 of the Indian Limitation Act.]

Any act or omission on the part of Musammatt Mattra cannot be prejudicial to the right of the plaintiffs by way of res judicata or estoppel—Isri Dut Koer v. Mussumat Hansbutti Koerain (12). Mahmood, J., sitting with Young, J., has fully considered this question in the case of Beni Prasad v. Hardai Bibi in an unreported judgment which was delivered on a preliminary point before the appeal was referred to the Full Bench [F.A. No. 35 of 1888] (13); and has held that a suit under similar circumstances was not barred by any rule of limitation.

I further contend that as the plaintiffs were minors at the time of the institution of this suit, and as they do not derive their right to sue from, or through, any person to whom a right to sue might have accrued, the suit is not barred by limitation. The plaintiffs can claim the benefit of s. 7 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, even if they sue through their next friend—Mussumat Phoolbas Koonwur v. Lalla Jogeshur Sahoy (14).

Munshi Gulzari Lal, for the respondents.

Art. 125 of the Limitation Act is applicable to this suit. Although the present suit has been brought after the death of the female making

1899
JUNE 12.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 33
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 159.

(1) 6 A. 428.

(3) N.W.P.H.C.R. (1867) 54 = 2 Agra. 54.

(4) N.W.P.H.C.R. (1866) 1 = 1 Agra 1.

(5) 2 W.R.C.R. 255.

(8) 15 M. 422.

(11) 15 W.R.C.R. 1.

(6) 10 W.R.C.R. 301.

(9) 6 A. 431.

(12) 10 I.A. 150 = 10 C. 324.

(14) 3 I.A. 7 = 1 C. 226.

(2) 15 A. 132.

(7) 13 M. 195.

(10) 14 B. 512.

(13) 14 A. 67.

1899
JUNE 12.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 33
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 159.

the alienation, the prayer of the plaintiffs is that all alienations should be declared ineffectual. They could have sought for this declaration in the lifetime of Sabej Kunwar, and should have done so within six years of the alienation of 1876. Not having done so, their remedy is barred. Such a suit would lie even during the lifetime of Musammat Mattra, who has only a life estate like that of her mother, Musammat Sabej Kunwar—Bal Gobind v. Ram Kumar (1). This ruling has been followed by the Madras High Court in Raghupati v. Tirumalai (2), and to the same effect is the ruling in Kandasami v. Akkammal (3). The judgment of Mahmood, J., in Bal Gobind v. Ram Kumar (1), [39] sets out fully the reasons for his conclusions. Even if Musammat Mattra was entitled to sue in preference to the plaintiffs, she not having availed herself of her remedy, the plaintiff's suit would be barred on the authority of Chhaganram Astikram v. Bai Motigavri (4). That case was not decided upon any special doctrine of the Hindu law under the Mayukha, but was decided upon the authority of the case of Pershad Singh v. Chedee Lall (5), which has been relied on by the plaintiff. Under these circumstances the plaintiff's suit is barred by limitation. As to the application of s. 7 of the Limitation Act, I say that that section does not apply if the suit is by a guardian. The ruling of the Privy Council was decided under the old Limitation Act, which has been repealed. The word "plaintiff" has not been used in s. 7 of the Act or in art. 120 of the schedule. The definition of that word in s. 3 has no application.

[The case was again put up at a subsequent date for further argument with reference to the principle enunciated in the case of Siddhessur Dutt v. Sham Chand Nundun (6)].

On this point Pardit Baldeo Ram Dave, for the appellants—

In the case of Siddhessur Dutt v. Sham Chand Nundun (6), the suit was one to set aside an adoption and was governed by art. 129 of the Indian Limitation Act of 1871. Under that article, which has now been replaced by art. 118 of the present Act, the period of limitation began to run from "the date of the adoption, or (at the option of the plaintiff), the death of the adoptive father." There a particular date was fixed and the period of limitation began to run from that date. No subsequent disability or inability to sue could stop it. But the article applicable to the present suit is art. 120 of the Limitation Act of 1877, which provides 6 years from the date "when the right to sue accrues," that is, when the right to sue accrues to the "plaintiff" as defined in s. 3 of the Act. As the plaintiffs in this case do not derive their right to sue from or through any person, but they sue [40] in their own right, no right to sue could accrue to them before their birth. No cause of action can exist "unless there be also a person in existence capable of suing"—Murray v. The East India Company (7). As the right to sue did not accrue to the plaintiffs before their birth, no period of limitation could begin to run prior to their birth. As the plaintiffs were minors at the time of the institution of this suit, they could avail themselves of the provisions of s. 7 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, and present suit was not barred by limitation.

Munshi Gulzari Lal contra.

I rely on the terms of s. 7 of the Limitation Act, according to which the plaintiff must be in existence at the time from which the

(1) 6 A. 431.

(2) 15 M. 422.

(3) 13 M. 195.

(4) 14 B. 512.

(5) 15 W.R.C.R. 1.

(6) 23 W.R.C.R. 235.

(7) (1821) 5 Barn. and Ald. 204 = 24 R.R. 325.

period of limitation is to begin, to enable him to avail himself of the provisions of that section. In this suit the plaintiffs were not in existence. In support of this I also rely upon Siddhessur Dutt v. Sham Chand Nundun (1), Mrino Moyee Debia v. Bhoobun Moyee Debia (2), Gobind Coomar Chowdhry v. Huro Chunder Chowahry (3) and Gobind Chandra Sarma Mazoomdar v. Anand Mchan Sarma Mazoomdar (4).

These authorities have not been overruled by any subsequent decisions. The change in the terms of s. 7 of the present Act does not alter the law. We have now the words "the right to sue" in art. 120, which is applicable to this suit, instead of in s. 7 of the Act.

1899
JUNE 12.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A 33
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 159.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J.—The only question which we have to consider is whether the Court below has rightly dismissed this suit as barred by limitation. The suit was brought for a declaration, first, that an alienation made in 1876 by a Hindu widow, the plaintiffs' maternal grandmother Sabej Kunwar, in favour of Musammatt Hanso was void as against the plaintiffs; secondly, that a further alienation made by Hanso in 1893 to Kirpa Ram was also void as against the plaintiffs; thirdly, that the plaintiffs [41] are entitled after the death of their mother Musammatt Matta to possession of the property in suit. At the time of the alienation of 1876 by Sabej Kunwar, the plaintiff's mother Musammatt Matta was the nearest living reversioner. She became entitled to possession of the property in 1889, when her mother, the widow Sabej Kunwar, died. She took no steps to question the alienation made in 1876. She has been made a pro forma defendant to this suit, and in her written statement she pleads that she does not wish to question either the alienation of 1876 or that of 1893.

Several questions have been discussed, which, in the view we now take of the case, it is not necessary to consider further, such, for instance, as whether the plaintiffs could during the life-time of Sabej Kunwar have sued for a declaration in respect of the alienation of 1876, their mother Musammatt Matta being then the nearest reversioner, though having only an estate similar in nature and extent to that of the widow, and whether on the death of Sabej Kunwar in 1889, or on the further transfer made by Hanso to Kirpa Ram in 1893, any fresh cause of action for a declaratory suit accrued to the plaintiffs. As I have said, the only question which it is necessary to consider is whether this suit is barred by limitation.

Admittedly during the life-time of Musammatt Matta all that the plaintiffs can claim is declaratory relief in respect of these alienations. It is clear that the suit does not fall within art. 125 of the second schedule of the Limitation Act, which refers only to suits brought during the life-time of the widow whose alienation is impeached. That article could not apply to the suit as regards the transfer made by Sabej Kunwar, who died in 1889. The only article applicable to the suit is art. 120 which prescribes a period of six years from the time when the right to sue accrues. A right to sue for a declaration impugning the alienation of 1876, accrued to Musammatt Matta at the date of that alienation, and, having regard to art. 125, became barred in the year 1888, in the absence of any special circumstance extending the limitation period. The right of the present plaintiffs, the sons of Musammatt

(1) 23 W.R.C.R. 285.
(3) 7 W.R.C.R. 134.

(2) 23 W.R.C.R. 42.
(4) 2 B.L.R. A.C. 313.

1899
JUNE 12.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 33
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 159.

[42] Mattra, to impugn that alienation accrued on one view of the law at their birth, and on another view of the law when, by the death of Sabej Kunwar in 1889, the first occupied the position of next reversioners to the estate. It is, however, admitted that all the present plaintiffs were minors at the date of the institution of the suit which they brought in February 1894. They claim the benefit of s. 7 of the Limitation Act, which has been held by the Privy Council in Phoolbas Koonwur v. Lalla Jogeshur Sahoy (1), to apply not only after the disability of minority has ceased, but, during its continuance, to suits brought on behalf of the minor by his next friend; so that in any view it would appear that, having regard to s. 7, the suit cannot be defeated on the ground of limitation.

It has, however, been argued that s. 7 pre-supposes a right to sue in existence at the time of the institution of the suit, and that the fact that a suit by Musammatt Mattra was long ago time-barred would operate as a bar to the plaintiffs, even though they are minors and notwithstanding s. 7. In support of that contention the case of Chhaganram Astikram v. Bai Motigavri (2), has been cited. There the mother of the plaintiffs was originally the nearest reversioner. There was a sale of the property in suit in execution of a decree against the widow for a debt due by her husband, and in consequence the widow was dispossessed in 1869. The nearest reversioner, the plaintiff's mother, died in 1879. In 1883, the plaintiffs sued as reversioners, the widow being still alive, for a declaration that they were not bound by the sale, that the decree in execution of which the property was sold was collusive and fraudulent, and that they were entitled to the property on the widow's death. One of the plaintiffs was a minor up to the year 1881. The other was still a minor in 1883, when the suit was brought. It was held that all right to sue for a declaration in respect of the sale and dispossession of the widow was barred in 1875, that is, when both the plaintiffs were minors, under art. 120 of the second schedule of the Limitation [43] Act. The ground of the decision is thus stated at p. 515 of the report:—"Cause of action having, therefore, been given to the plaintiffs' mother both by the sale and dispossession, no new cause of action can be held to have remained to the plaintiffs on their mother's death. It could not have been the intention of the Legislature, in giving a right to sue for a declaration within six years from the accrual of the right, to give successive rights to a series of successive reversioner to harass the alienees of an estate with repeated suits in respect of the same alienation. It has been held that when the widow dies, a new right of action (for possession) will be given to the reversioner then living, but, till then, at any rate, any right to seek a declaration possessed by any reversioner whose title to sue had accrued after the alienation must be regarded as derived from the person who was the heir-presumptive at the time of the alienation." Now, it is quite clear that such a reversioner does not in fact derive his title from the person who was the heir-presumptive at the time of the alienation. The judgment seems to me in effect to hold that although one reversioner does not derive his title from another and nearer reversioner, he must be deemed to do so in order to avoid the consequence of the alienees of the estate being harassed by a multiplicity of suits. The reversioner derives his title, not from any other reversioner but from the last full owner of the estate, and I can see no justification for introducing

(1) 3 I.A. 7=1 C. 226.

(2) 14 B. 512.

a fiction to the contrary effect merely to avoid a result which the Court may consider inexpedient. That judgment, having regard to the passage which I have just read, does not depend, as was suggested to us in argument, upon any special view entertained in Bombay as to the position in Hindu law of a daughter as being a full owner of the estate through whom the plaintiffs, in that case her sons, might have been held to claim. It follows a judgment of the Calcutta High Court in Pershad Singh v. Chedee Lall (1). In that case a Hindu widow was sued for acts of waste and alienation alleged to have taken place during the [44] lives of the mothers of the plaintiffs who were, when those acts were committed, the next heirs to the property. "At the time when the alienation complained of occurred, the mothers of the plaintiffs were alive and were then the next heirs entitled to this property, and they might have brought the suit which the plaintiffs have now brought, but they did not do so. They allowed more than twelve years to elapse, and this cause of action is not revived in favour of the plaintiffs who have since been born and have now arrived at majority." That is to say, the plaintiffs' right of suit was held barred by the omission of their mothers to sue, through whom they did not claim, and it was assumed that the cause of action accruing to the plaintiffs' mothers and the cause of action on which the plaintiffs themselves came into Court were one and the same, so that what barred the mothers would equally bar the sons. We have very carefully considered these two cases. It appears to me that they are contrary to well recognized principles, and that we ought not to follow them. If the nearest reversioner could be held, as the Hindu widow has been held, to represent fully the whole estate, it would no doubt follow that the limitation which would bar that reversioner would bar other reversioners, just as a decree passed against the nearest reversioner would, in that case, operate as res judicata against the more remote. But so far as I know, that has never been held to be the relation in which one reversioner stands to another, and we are not, I think, at liberty to act on an incorrect view of that relation in order to achieve the desirable result of preventing multiplicity of suits. A similar question has been considered with greatfulness and care by Mr. Justice Mahmood in an unreported case—Beni Prasad v. Hardai Bibi.* That case has recently been decided by the Privy Council in connection with the validity in Hindu law of the adoption of an only son; but the question of limitation was apparently not raised by the defendants before the Privy Council; it was disposed of by Mr. Justice Mahmood and Mr. Justice Young as a preliminary point in the appeal before them. [45] In that case there was an adoption by a Hindu widow in 1858. At that time the nearest reversioner was one Kedar Nath. He died in 1881, a declaratory suit to impugn the adoption being then barred so far as he was concerned by art. 118 of the Limitation Act. The plaintiff was the son of Kedar Nath. He was born in 1852, but until he became, on Kedar Nath's death in 1881, the nearest reversioner, he could not have brought a declaratory suit to impugn the adoption. He brought such a suit in 1886, it was found, within six years from the date on which he acquired knowledge of the adoption. So far it was clear that the suit was within limitation. But it was argued that as a suit by Kedar Nath when he was the next reversioner became barred by limitation long before his death in 1881, on which the plaintiff acquired his right to sue, the plaintiff's suit was also barred. Mr. Justice Mahmood held, with the concur-

1899
JUNE 12.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 33
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 159.

(1) 15 W.R.C.R. 1.

* F.A. No. 35 of 1888, decided 4th February 1892 (14 A. 67).

1899
JUNE 12.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 33
(F B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 159.

rence of Mr. Justice Young, first, that one reversioner cannot be held to claim through or to derive his title from another, even if that other happens to be his father, but derives his title from the last full owner; secondly, that the limitation which barred a suit by the nearest reversioner for the time being to contest an alienation or an adoption by a Hindu widow, would not bar a similar suit brought by another person after he became the nearest reversioner. At p. 160 of the paper book in that case Mr. Justice Mahmood thus sums up his elaborate consideration of the question:—"I think it is quite clear from what I have said that there is no authority, and there can be no reason in juristic principle for maintaining the proposition that the reversionary right under the Hindu law is a kind of heritable estate which descends from the father to the son, maintaining a kind of privity of blood for purposes of estoppel, the plea of res judicata, or the bar by limitation." Again at p. 161, after referring to the ruling of the Full Bench in Ramphal Rai v. Tula Kuari (1), he said:—"Applying the principle of that case together with that I have said as to the nature of reversionary right under the Hindu law, I hold that the circumstance [46] that the plaintiff's father Kedar Nath, whilst being the nearest reversioner, had allowed the period of limitation for such a suit to elapse during his life-time, does not operate as barring the plaintiff's present suit by limitation." In support of his conclusion Mr. Justice Mahmood refers by way of analogy to the judgment of the Privy Council in Jumona Dassya Chowdhrani v. Bamasoonderai Dassya Chowdhrani (2), where their Lordships expressed a doubt as to whether a decree in favour of an adoption passed in a suit by a reversioner to set aside the adoption is binding upon any reversioner except the plaintiff, and whether a decision in such a suit adverse to the adoption would bind the adoptive son as between himself and any other than the plaintiff. In a later Privy Council case not referred to by Mr. Justice Mahmood, Isri Dut Koer v. Mussummat Hansbutti Koerain (3), their Lordships (at p. 157 of the report) indicate strongly that such a decision would not be binding as res judicata in the case of a new reversioner.

It was further argued that, having regard to the terms of s. 7 of the Limitation Act, a plaintiff, to be entitled to the benefit of that section, must have been in existence and under disability at the time from which the period of limitation commences, and that therefore a minor cannot avail himself of the section in respect of a right of suit which came into existence before his birth. That contention in effect seeks to apply to the case the principle of s. 9, that "when once time has begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability to sue stops it." In support of that contention the following cases were cited:—Siddhessur Dutt v. Sham Chand Nundun (4), Mrino Moyee Debia v. Bhoobun Moyee Debia (5), Gobind Coomar Chowdhry v. Huro Chunder Chowdhry (6) and Gobind Chandra Sarma Mazoomdar v. Anand Mohan Sarma Mazoomdar (7). None of those cases were decided with reference to the present Limitation Act, and in none of them was the suit of the exact description of [47] that now before us. None of them, so far as I am aware, have been applied to suits brought since Act No. XV of 1877 came into force for a declaration impugning the validity of an alienation made by a Hindu widow. They are cases of suits to set aside an adoption

(1) 6 A. 116.

(2) 3 I.A. 72.

(3) 10 I.A. 150.

(4) 23 W.R.C.R. 285.

(5) 23 W.R.C.R. 42.

(6) 7 W.R.C.R. 134.

(7) 2 B.L.R. A.C. 313.

falling under art. 129 of Act IX of 1871, which article has been replaced by the totally different provisions of art. 118 of the present Act. Instead of straining the language of these decisions to meet a case of this kind, it appears to me to be safer to look to the precise terms of the provisions applicable to this present case, i.e., art. 120 of the second schedule and s. 7. As regards art. 120, when the Legislature said that a suit may be brought six years from the time when the right to sue accrues, I think it clearly meant the right to sue of the plaintiff himself or some one through whom he claims, not a right of somebody else to sue through whom the plaintiff does not claim. The Legislature cannot have meant a right of anybody to sue, a right at large of some person wholly unconnected with the plaintiff. Similarly if s. 7 is read giving the terms used their ordinary and natural signification. I think the expression "the period of limitation" means the period of limitation for the plaintiff's suit, the period of limitation for the suit which the person under disability or some one through whom he claims is entitled to institute, nor the period of limitation for a similar suit which some other person may have been entitled to institute. In my opinion nothing has occurred to deprive the plaintiffs, who are still minors, of the benefit of s. 7 by extinguishing or barring their right to sue for a declaration in respect of the alienations of 1876 and 1893. I am therefore of opinion that the Court below ought not to have dismissed the suit as barred by limitation, but should have disposed of it on the merits. I think that the proper course is to allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below, and remand the case to the Court of first instance for disposal on the merits. The plaintiffs are entitled to their costs of this appeal. The other costs will abide the result.

[48] KNOX, J.—I also agree that the plea of limitation should not have been allowed, and concur in the order proposed by the learned Chief Justice.

BLAIR, J.—I concur in the order proposed by the learned Chief Justice and the reasons by which that order is supported.

BANERJI, J.—I have arrived at the same conclusion as the learned Chief Justice. The lower appellate Court dismissed the suit as barred by limitation under art. 125 of the second schedule of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877. As the suit was not one to set aside an alienation during the lifetime of the Hindu female who made the alienation, that article clearly did not apply. There being no other provision of the Limitation Act applicable to a suit of the kind brought by the plaintiffs, it was governed by art. 120, which prescribes a limitation of six years, calculated from the date on which the right to sue accrued. I am of opinion that the right therein referred to is clearly the right of the plaintiff as defined in s. 3 of the Act, and that the article does not refer to the right of a person other than the plaintiff. In the present case the right of the plaintiffs to question the alienation made by Sabej Kunwar could arise at the earliest on their birth. During the whole of the period subsequent to their birth they have been under a disability, and consequently they are entitled to the privilege which is accorded to plaintiffs of that description by s. 7 of the Act. The rulings of the Calcutta High Court on which the learned vakil for the respondents has relied, and which are referred to in detail in the judgment of the learned Chief Justice, had reference to suits of a particular description and were based on the peculiar phraseology of the Limitation Act applicable to 1899

JUNE 12.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 33
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 159.

1899
JUNE 12.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 33
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 159.

those suits. I am unable to hold that by reason of their not being in existence at the date of the alienation in question, the plaintiffs are not entitled to bring their suit at any time during the period of their minority, after the accrual of their right of suit. As regards the only other contention which was raised in this case, namely, whether the fact of the omission of the plaintiff's [49] mother to question the alienation made by Sabej Kunwar barred the plaintiffs from maintaining the present suit, and the ruling by which that contention was sought to be supported, it is sufficient to say that those rulings evidently proceed upon the assumption that one reversioner derives title from another. I am unable to hold that that is a true proposition under the Hindu law. There is no privity of estate between one reversioner and another qua reversioners; therefore the act or omission of one reversioner cannot bind another, on the general principle that no one can be bound by the act or omission of a person through whom he does not derive title. For these reasons I agree in the order proposed by the learned Chief Justice.

BURKITT, J.—I have arrived at the same conclusion. In my opinion no cause of action for the present suit accrued before these plaintiffs' birth, and therefore it cannot possibly be barred by any limitation.

AIKMAN, J.—I concur in the judgments of the learned Chief Justice and my brother Banerji, and in the order proposed.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

22 A. 49 (P.C.) = 3 C.W.N. 736 = 1 Bom. L R. 708 = 26 I.A. 242 = 7 Sar. P.C.J. 556.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRESENT:

Lord Hobhouse, Lord Macnaghten and Sir Richard Couch.

[On Appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces.]

IN THE MATTER OF RAJENDRO NATH MUKERJI.

[27th April and 21st June, 1899.]

Para 8 of the Letters Patent, 1866—Removal of a vakil from the roll for reasonable cause—A conviction under s. 471, Indian Penal Code.

A vakil of the High Court was convicted, under s. 471 of the Indian Penal Code of fraudulently using as genuine a document which he knew to be forged. This was affirmed on appeal, when the punishment to which he had been sentenced was reduced to two years.

The High Court, while not allowing the propriety of the conviction and sentence to be questioned, had considered whether his culpability was such as to disqualify him for his profession, and had decided in the affirmative, removing him from the roll, under para 8 of the Letters Patent, 1866.

Held, that, in the present case, the conviction, followed by the sentence, was sufficient, without further inquiry, to justify the High Court in making that order. The appellant could not be allowed to have an indirect appeal [50] against the judgment of the Sessions Judge confirmed by the High Court. The judgment of Lord Mansfield in ex parte Brounsall (1) referred to as well explaining the disqualification of a member of the legal profession that attends such a conviction and sentence.

In re Weare (2), where the Court of Appeal looked to see what was the nature of the offence and would not, as a matter of course, strike a solicitor off the roll because he had been convicted, distinguished from the present case.

(1) 2 Cowper's Rep. 829.

(2) (1893) L.R. 2 Q.B.D. 439.

In re Durga Charan (1), dealt with under s. 12 of Act XVIII of 1879, referred to as a case where the nature of the offence admitted of further inquiry and also distinguished.

In regard to the finality of the judgment of the High Court in deciding the appeal from the conviction and sentence, In re the petition of Macrea (2) was referred to.

[R., 29 A. 95 (P.C.) = 4 A.L.J. 34 = 9 Bom. L.R. 9 = 5 C.L.J. 130 = 11 C.W.N. 273 = 17 M.L.J. 74 = 2 M.L.T. 1 ; 32 B. 106 = 10 Bom. L.R. 21 = 3 M.L.T. 131 ; 13 Cr. L.J. 800 (804) = 17 Ind. Cas. 544 (546) = 23 M.L.J. 447 = 12 M.L.T. 615 = 1912 M. W.N. 1029 (1032) ; 11 Cr. L.J. 503 = 14 C.W.N. 1073 = 7 Ind. Cas. 623 (623) ; 11 Cr. L.J. 615 (619) = 8 Ind. Cas. 282 (286) = 6 N.L.R. 129 ; D., 8 A.L.J. 389 = 9 Ind. Cas. 1013 (1015).]

1899
JUNE 21.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.

22 A. 49
(P.C.) = 3
C.W.N. 736 =
1 Bom. L.R.
708 = 26
I.A. 242 = 7
Sar. P.C.J.
556.

APPEAL from an order (4th January 1896) of the High Court (3) in the matter of a vakil of the Court.

The appellant was enrolled as a vakil on the 8th April 1885, and practised till 1895. On the 9th August 1895, he was convicted at the Sessions, at Allahabad, of an offence under s. 471 of the Indian Penal Code, and was sentenced to a term of rigorous imprisonment for three years. On the 1st November 1895, his appeal was dismissed by the High Court with a reduction of the sentence to two years. The ground of his conviction was the making use of an official copy, filed by him in the High Court, for the purpose of presenting an appeal from a decree of the Saharanpur District Court, in which copy, as he knew, the date had been fraudulently altered, to make it appear that the appeal was not time-barred, as in fact it was.

A question now raised on this appeal was whether the conviction and the sentence of the Sessions Court, affirmed by the Court of Criminal appeal, sufficiently established the unfitness of a vakil to belong to the legal profession, forming a reasonable cause for his exclusion under para. 8 of the Letters Patent, or there should be further consideration of the degree of his culpability as affecting the justice of his removal or suspension from practice.

[51] The conviction and sentence had been brought to the notice of the High Court by the Registrar on the 26th November 1895. The proceedings thereupon, under the above para. 8, the hearing by the Chief Justice and five Judges, and their judgment, are reported in Volume 18, p. 174, of the Indian Law Reports, Allahabad series.

The High Court decided that the propriety in law, or in fact, of the conviction, maintained by the Court of appeal, could not be brought into question. That was final. They, however, considered it incumbent on them to consider whether there existed reasonable cause or not for removing the vakil from practice in the fact of the conviction itself. Their opinion was that the prisoner's Counsel was not precluded from showing, if he could, that the conduct of the vakil was not such as to render him unfit to be retained on the roll, and that the case presented was that the Court should consider the degree of culpability involved in the act which constituted the offence in regard to his removal, or suspension, from practice. Their conclusion was that he had proved himself unfit to remain a member of an honorable profession, and that he must be excluded from it.

The appellant obtained a certificate for appeal under s. 595, Civil Procedure Code. On this appeal,

(1) 7 A. 290.

(2) 20 I.A. 90 = 15 A. 310.

(3) 18 A. 174.

1899
JUNE 21.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
22 A. 49
(P.C.) = 3
C W.N. 736 =
1 Bom. L R.
708 = 26
I.A. 242 = 7
Sar. P.C.J.
556.

Mr. J. H. A. Branson, for the appellant, referred to In re Weare (1), where the Court had held that it had a discretion to remove a solicitor or not to do so after a conviction. Also to In re a solicitor, ex parte the Incorporated Law Society (2), where the fact of the conviction of a practitioner was not taken to add necessarily to the gravity of his offence in regard to the question of his remaining on the roll. In re Hill (3) there referred to. In re Durga Charan, and s. 12 of Act XVIII of 1879 (4), as reported contained the expression of a former Chief Justice that the pleader in that case could "go behind the [52] order" of the Criminal Court. In re Dillet (5) was also referred to. Afterwards on June 17th, their Lordships' judgment was delivered by SIR RICHARD COUCH:—

JUDGMENT.

This is an appeal against an order of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad made on the 4th of January 1896, whereby it was ordered that the appellant's name should be struck off the roll of vakils entitled to practice before the said Court and his certificate should be cancelled. On the 9th of August 1895, the appellant was found guilty by the Sessions Judge of Allahabad concurring with the assessors under s. 471 of the Indian Penal Code of fraudulently using as genuine a document which he knew to be forged, and sentenced to be rigorously imprisoned for three years. He appealed to the High Court by which on the 21st November 1895, the conviction was affirmed and the sentence altered to two years' rigorous imprisonment. On the 27th November 1895, the High Court ordered notice to be given to the appellant to show cause why he should not be removed from the roll of vakils and his certificate be cancelled in consequence of the offence of which he had been convicted. On the 3rd of January 1896, the case came before the Chief Justice and five Judges of the High Court and it was held that the propriety in law or in fact of the conviction could not be questioned, but the Counsel for the appellant was not precluded from showing, if he could, that the conduct of his client in the matter was not such as to render him an unfit person to be retained on the roll of the vakils of the Court. On the next day the same Judges in their judgment after stating the circumstances connected with the offence said that the appellant had attempted to deceive the Court by representing by means of a forged endorsement on a copy of a decree that an appeal was within time when he knew or must have known that it was time-barred; that this offence was not committed by an ignorant man or by a new practitioner unaccustomed to the examination of documents, nor in the hurry of the moment and without due consideration, and [53] made the order now appealed against. The printed case in this appeal for the appellant consists of a statement of the facts previous to the using by him of the forged document, the evidence of witnesses examined at the trial, and the judgment of the High Court on the 21st November 1895. The reasons given for the appeal are that the High Court was wrong in law in not allowing the propriety of the conviction to be questioned, that the conviction was not justified either in law or in fact, that the appellant did not fraudulently or dishonestly use the copy of the decree, that no reasonable cause had been shown to justify his removal from the roll of vakils, and the evidence given on his trial did not prove any

(1) (1893) L.R. 2 Q.B.D. 439.

(2) 61 L.T.R. Q.B.D. 842.

(3) (1869) 18 L.T.R. 564 = 3 Q.B.D. 543.

(4) 7 A. 290.

(5) (1887) L.R. 12 App. Cas. 459.

act or practice on his part justifying the order for it. It is plain that the object of the present appeal is to have the judgment of the Sessions Judge and of the High Court on the appeal reviewed and reversed in substance if not in form. This ought not to be allowed. In effect the appellant would indirectly have an appeal against the conviction when if he had petitioned for leave to appeal against it the leave would certainly have been refused. Ex parte Macrea (1). Mr. Branson, who appeared for the appellant, admitted that if this review of the conviction was not allowed, there were no extenuating circumstances that he could rely upon against the order. He referred to In re Weare (2). In that case a solicitor had been convicted by two justices of Bristol of being a party to the continued use of premises as a brothel and sentenced to a term of imprisonment, which sentence was on appeal to the quarter sessions, set aside, and a fine of 20*l* substituted. An application was made by the Incorporated Law Society to strike his name off the roll, which was ordered by the Divisional Court, and he appealed from that order to the Court of Appeal. The Court looked at the evidence given at the trial to see what was the nature of the offence, holding that it had a discretion and would not as a matter of course strike him off the roll because he had been convicted. This is a very different case from the present [54] one. The judgment of Lord Mansfield in In re Brounsall (3) quoted by Lord Esher in his judgment is more appropriate to the present case. That was an application to the Court to strike an attorney off the roll, he having been convicted of stealing a guinea, for which offence he was sentenced to be branded in the hand and to be confined in the House of Correction for nine months. Lord Mansfield said: "This application is not in the nature of a second trial or a new punishment. But the question is whether after the conduct of this man" (i.e., in stealing the guinea—it does not say when, where or how—) "it is proper that he should continue a member of a profession which should stand free from all suspicion..... and it is on this principle that he is an unfit person to practise as an attorney. It is not by way of punishment, but the Court in such cases exercise their discretion, whether a man whom they have formerly admitted, is a proper person to be continued on the roll or not. Having been convicted of felony we think the defendant is not a fit person to be an attorney." Lord Esher in Weare's case adds: "There it seems to me is the whole law on the matter laid down as distinctly as can be, and in a way the propriety of which nobody, as it appears to me, can doubt." The case in 61 Law Times 842 also referred to by Mr. Branson is only an authority that the Court has a discretion. The case in 7 All. 290 was under s. 12 of Act XVIII of 1879, which gives power to the High Court to suspend or dismiss any pleader holding a certificate who is convicted of any criminal offence implying a defect of character which unfits him to be a pleader. It does not appear in the report whether the Court considered that the conviction of the pleader of cheating was wrong, or that in the exercise of its discretion he should not be suspended or dismissed. It was a case where the nature of the offence might reasonably be inquired into. Their Lordships do not agree with the Chief Justice where he says that the pleader's Counsel was entitled to go behind the conviction in order to show that he had committed no offence at [55] law. In the present case the conviction of 1899

JUNE 21.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
22 A. 49
(P.C.) = 3
C W N. 736 =
1 Bom. L.R.
708 = 26
I.A. 242 = 7
Sar. P.C.J.
556.

(1) 20 I.A. 90.

(2) L.R. (1893) 2 Q.B.D. 439.

(3) 2 Cowper's Reports 829.

1899
JUNE 21.
—
PRIVY
COUNCIL. forgery, followed by a sentence of two years' rigorous imprisonment, is sufficient without further inquiry to justify the Court in removing the appellant from the roll of vakils and cancelling his certificate. Their Lordships will therefore humbly advise Her Majesty to affirm the High Court's order and to dismiss the appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the appellant :—Messrs. Barrow, Rogers and Nevill.

22 A. 49
(P.C.) = 3
C.W.N. 736 =
1 Bom. L.R.
708 = 26
I.A. 242 = 7
Sar. P.C.J.
556.

22 A. 55 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 172.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Knox.

BASDEO (Defendant) v. JOHN SMIDT AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs).
[3rd July, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, ss. 51, 578—Plaint not signed by plaintiff or his authorized agent—Effect of such want of signature—Plaint not necessarily void—Breach of contract—Measure of damages.

Held, that the mere fact that the plaint in a suit has not been signed by the plaintiff named therein or by any person duly authorized by him in that behalf as required by s. 51 of the Code of Civil Procedure will not necessarily make the plaint absolutely void. A defect in the signature of the plaint, or the absence of signature, where it appears that the suit was in fact filed with the knowledge and by the authority of the plaintiff named therein, may be waived by the defendant, or, if necessary, cured by amendment at any stage of the suit, and, having regard to s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is not a ground for interference in appeal. Rajit Ram v. Katesar Nath (1) and Mohini Mohun Das v. Bungsi Budden Saha Das (2) referred to. Marghub Ahmad v. Nihal Ahmad (3) overruled. Mahabir Prasad v. Shah Wahid Alam (4) distinguished. Katesar Nath v. Aggyan (5) and Badri Prasad v. Bhagwati Dhar (6) discussed.

The plaintiffs sold to the defendant a certain number of cases of embroidered muslin. The defendant took delivery of some of the cases, but refused to take delivery of or pay for the rest. The plaintiffs re-sold the goods refused by the defendant, and brought a suit against the defendant for damages. Held, that the proper of damages was the difference between the contract price [56] of the goods which the defendant had refused to accept, and the price realized by the plaintiffs on the re-sale. Moll Schutte & Co. v. Luchmi Chand (7) followed. Yule & Co. v. Mahomed Hossain (8) dissented from.

[F., 28 A. 244 = A.W.N. (1905) 263; 5 C.W.N. 91 (98); 4 L.B.R. 284; 5 O.C. 365 (358); R., 25 A. 635 (637) = A.W.N. (1903) 189; 34 A. 348 = 9 A.L.J. 294 = 14 Ind. Cas. 507; 10 Ind. Cas. 731 (732) = 7 N.L.R. 33; 11 Ind. Cas. 842 (843) = 254 P.L.R. 1911 = 165 P.W.R. 1911; 15 Ind. Cas. 533 (584).]

THIS was a suit to recover damages alleged to have been incurred by the plaintiffs by reason of the defendant's refusal to take delivery of and to pay for certain goods which he had contracted to purchase from the plaintiffs. The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore) gave the plaintiffs a decree. The defendant appealed, but his appeal was dismissed by the lower appellate Court (District Judge of Cawnpore). The defendant appealed to the High Court, and there a new point was raised, which had not been taken in either of the Courts below, namely,

* Second appeal No. 474 of 1897, from a decree of J. E. Gill Esq., District Judge of Cawnpur, dated the 29th March 1897, confirming a decree of Rai Kishen Lal, Subordinate Judge of Cawnpur, dated the 5th October 1896.

(1) 18 A. 396.

(2) 17 C. 580

(3) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 55.

(4) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 152. (5) 14 A.W.N. (1894) 95. (6) 16 A. 240.

(7) 25 C. 505.

(8) 24 C. 124.

that "the suit of the plaintiffs is defective in point of law and is wrongly framed and should have been dismissed." This ground of appeal was explained at the hearing to convey an objection to the form of the plaint, the contention being that inasmuch as the person who had signed the plaint on behalf of the plaintiffs was not duly authorized so to sign on their behalf, the plaint was in effect unsigned, and there had never been before the Court any suit of which cognizance could legally be taken. There was on the record no power of attorney authorizing the signature of the plaint and nothing otherwise to show that the person who signed it was authorized to sign within the meaning of s. 51 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Mr. R. Malcomson (with whom Pandit Sundar Lal), for the appellant.

The suit ought to have been dismissed on the ground that the plaint was not signed by the plaintiffs or by anyone duly authorized by them in that behalf. No Civil Court can take cognizance of a suit without having before it in the first instance a properly constituted plaint, that is to say, a plaint which complies with the requirements of ss. 49, 50, 51, and 52 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In this case the plaint was signed on behalf [57] of the plaintiffs by Mr. C. G. Sanders, but Mr. Sanders was not authorized to sign plaints, or this particular plaint, on behalf of the firm. The plaint must therefore be regarded as unsigned. This being so, the so-called plaint was, within the rulings of this Court, no more than a "piece of waste paper"—Mahabir Prasad v. Shah Wahid Alam (1), Katesar Nath v. Aggyan (2), Marghub Ahmad v. Nihal Ahmad (3).

In view of the rule laid down in the last mentioned case, the Court has no power to amend an unsigned plaint or to allow amendment thereof. The defect is much more than a mere irregularity which may be cured by amendment: it is an absolute bar to the entertainment of the suit. S. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure could not be applied, inasmuch as there was here no suit before the Court of which cognizance could be taken or in the course of which any error, defect or irregularity could possibly be committed. I would adopt the reasoning set forth in the judgments in Katesar Nath v. Aggyan and Marghub Ahmad v. Nihal Ahmad.

Babu Durga Charan Banerji, with the Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Munshi Ram Prasad, for the respondents.

I contend that the provision contained in s. 51 of the Code of Civil Procedure as to signature and verification is a rule of Procedure merely and any defect in signature does not affect the merits of the case. In order to show that the omission to sign in compliance with s. 51 will not lead to the dismissal of the suit, it is necessary to show that the plaint was not the plaintiff's plaint. In this case there is no room for such contention upon the admitted facts. If the defect had been pointed out, it could and would have been remedied. The defect is certainly covered by s. 578 of the Code. Moreover, the defendant by his pleadings and conduct must be held to have waived the irregularity. There was a valid plaint as required by law, and any defect in the prescribed formality as to signature could be remedied [58] as well as waived. The plaint without the signature is not necessarily a piece of waste paper as contended for on 1899

JULY 3.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

22 A. 58 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 172.

(1) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 152.

(2) 14 A.W.N. (1894) 95.

(3) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 55.

1899
JULY 3.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

22 A. 55 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 172.

the other side. I rely on Rajit Ram v. Katesar Nath (1) and Fateh Chand v. Mansab Rai (2). The plaintiff, although he may not have signed the plaint, is none the less plaintiff in the suit, and it cannot be contended upon the admitted facts of this case that he has in any way or at any stage repudiated the plaint as his.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J.—There are in substance two objections taken on behalf of the appellant. The first objection is not set forth in the memorandum of appeal, but upon an application made to us under s. 542 of the Code of Civil Procedure, we allowed the learned counsel for the appellant to argue in support of it. That objection is that the plaint was not signed as it should have been in accordance with s. 51 of the Code, and that consequently all the proceedings in the suit have been bad and void ab initio. Now, with regard to that objection, the plaint purports to be signed on behalf of the plaintiff by an advocate of this Court, who, as the Munsarim's note shows, himself filed the plaint, and also by a gentleman named C. G. Sanders who purports to sign as "agent" for the plaintiffs, who are a firm of foreign merchants, residing out of, but trading within, British India. There is no finding which would justify us in holding that Mr. Sanders was a recognised agent of the plaintiffs within the meaning of s. 37 of the Code, so that the point considered in Maharane Surnomoye v. Poolin Behary Mundul (3) and Roy Dhunput Singh v. Jhoomuk Khawas (4) does not arise. There is on the record no power of attorney authorizing Mr. Sanders to sign the plaint on behalf of the plaintiffs, and there is nothing which otherwise shows that he was so authorized within the meaning of s. 51. The most probable reason why there is nothing of the kind on the record is that, until the point was raised for the first time in second appeal, the defendant appears [59] never to have thought of suggesting that Mr. Sanders was not authorized to sign the plaint, or that there was any sort of defect or irregularity in the institution of the suit. There is no such suggestion in the defendant's written statement, in the issues, the judgments of the Courts below, the defendant's memorandum of appeal in the lower appellate Court, or his memorandum of appeal to this Court. Now, in the first place, as I have said already, the plaint is signed and was filed by an advocate of this Court, who thus claimed to represent the plaintiffs named in the plaint. The decrees of both the Courts below show that throughout the trial of the suit in both Courts the same advocate appeared and conducted the case as representing the plaintiffs. There is no plea, no suggestion, still less any finding, that that advocate did not possess in fact the authority to represent the plaintiffs named in the plaint which he claimed throughout to possess. On the contrary it is clear that the suit was throughout contested entirely on the merits, and on the assumption of everybody that it was properly brought by the right parties. Under s. 39 of the Code an advocate of this Court does not depend for his authority to represent a party upon any document empowering him to act. It appears to me that in the total absence of any finding, evidence or suggestion to the contrary, it must be presumed that the plaintiffs named in the plaint were throughout represented in the suit by the counsel who claimed to represent them, and that the

(1) 18 A. 396.
(3) 3 C.L.R. 15.

(2) 18 A.W.N. (1898) 110.
(4) 3 C.L.R. 579.

suit was therefore instituted and conducted throughout with the knowledge and authority of those plaintiffs. Bearing this in mind, I have come to the conclusion first, that the defect in the plaint arising from non-compliance with s. 51 has been waived by the defendant, and that, therefore the suit cannot on that ground be now dismissed. Secondly, that the defect falls within s. 578 of the Code, which prohibits our interference with the decrees below on the ground of any error, defect, or irregularity which affects neither the merits of the case nor the jurisdiction of the Court. If it were necessary, I should be prepared to hold, having regard [60] to the judgment of this Court in Rajit Ram v. Katesar Nath (1), that we are, even at this stage, competent under s. 53 (c) of the Code to direct that the plaint be amended by the addition of the signature of the plaintiffs or of any person duly authorized by them in that behalf. But for the reasons which I have indicated, I am of opinion that any such amendment is unnecessary. The argument on behalf of the appellant is shortly this, that where a plaint is not signed in accordance with s. 51, not merely is there "an error, defect or irregularity," but there is no suit: the plaint is "waste paper," and the Court has no suit before it which it can legally decree. From this argument I entirely dissent. S. 48 of the Code shows that a suit is instituted by presenting a plaint to the Court or to the proper officer. The Code contains no definition of a plaint, but s. 50 shows what a plaint substantially is, and states the various particulars which it must contain. It says nothing about signature, and in no way suggests that what it describes as a plaint is not a plaint if it is unsigned or if the signature is in any way defective. S. 51 deals with the signature and verification of the plaint. It places the signature and the verification on exactly the same footing. In that connection I observe that at page 400 of the report in Rajit Ram v. Katesar Nath, the Full Bench of this Court observed:—"It would be difficult to imagine any case in which a defective verification of a plaint could affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court." There is nothing whatever in s. 51 to suggest that, if its terms are not complied with, the defect stands on any different footing from the other defects mentioned in s. 53 (b), or involves any other consequence than rejection of the plaint if not amended in accordance with an order for amendment, or that the defect cannot be waived like other initial irregularities, or that the plaint by reason of the defect is necessarily "waste paper," or that there is no suit legally before the Court. The object of the verification of the plaint [61] is to fix upon the plaintiff the responsibility for the statements which it contains, and to afford a guarantee of his good faith. The object of the signature to the plaint is to prevent, as far as possible, disputes as to whether the suit was instituted with the plaintiff's knowledge and authority. I do not underrate the importance of this: but there may be other ways of establishing the plaintiff's responsibility besides signature; and the fact that the Code contains no provision requiring an appellant to sign his memorandum of appeal supports this view. In a work by a learned American author, Mr. Vanfleet, "The Law of Collateral Attack on Judicial Proceedings," there is stated what, I think, is the true principle as to verification, and the whole context shows that the principle is equally applicable to signature, which s. 51 places on the same footing. At page 235 he says:—"The statutes require many kinds of petitions to be verified. This 1899

JULY 3.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 55 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 172.

(1) 18 A. 396.

1899
JULY 3.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 53 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 172.

includes generally all complaints and petitions in special proceedings, the bill in equity, the libel in admiralty, and, in some states, the complaint or petition in all cases. Such verification adds no allegation to the pleading and tenders no issue. Its only object is to show the good faith of the petitioner. In other words, if he will not swear that he believes his cause to be just, the law does not care to bother with it. But when the adversary comes in, such verification is of no moment. It is not even evidence. The justice of the cause must then be proved by competent evidence. Like any other formal matter its absence is waived by a failure to object. And if its entire absence does not affect the jurisdiction, of course, mere defects in it cannot."

Section 53 (b) (i) clearly shows that there may be a plaint within the meaning of the Code, although the plaint is not signed and verified as required by s. 51. If such a plaint were "waste paper" or not a plaint at all within the meaning of the Code the section would not have called it a plaint and would not have provided for its amendment. It is only upon the plaintiff's failure to comply within the time fixed by the Court, with the order allowing the amendment, that such a plaint has to be [62] rejected under s. 54 (d). The doctrine that the plaint is waste paper because it is not duly signed in accordance with s. 51 of the Code, and that there is consequently no legal suit before the Court, is opposed to the judgments of this Court in three connected unreported cases, First Appeals Nos. 170, 126 and 29 of 1895, in which the plaint was, at the stage of first appeal, returned for amendment under s. 53, on the ground that the person who had signed it was not duly authorized in that behalf by his power of attorney. In these cases the objection was taken by the defendant in his memorandum of appeal; and, in two at least out of the three, was specifically pleaded by him and put in issue in the Court below. The doctrine that a plaint not duly signed is necessarily waste paper also appears to me to be opposed to the judgment of the Privy Council in Mohini Mohan Das v. Bangsi Baddan Saha Das (1). In that case there were three plaintiffs named in the plaint as joint creditors. Only one of them signed and verified the plaint. Sometime after the plaint was filed, the Court made an order adding another of the joint creditors as a plaintiff, evidently on the view that he was not one already. The suit was dismissed on the ground that it must be regarded as instituted on the date of the order, and that, so regarded, it was barred by limitation. On appeal the Privy Council set aside the dismissal, holding that all the creditors became plaintiffs when the plaint was filed, that the order was "merely waste paper," and that the suit was not barred. Their Lordships observed:—"On the face of the plaints the three joint creditors are named as co-plaintiffs. The names of Gobind Rai and Khettar Mohun have not been struck out, nor did they, or either of them, attempt to repudiate the suits. There is no rule providing that a person named as a co-plaintiff is not to be treated as a plaintiff unless he signs and verifies the plaint." Observe, they do not say that a person named as a co-plaintiff need not sign and verify the plaint. They could not have said so, for s. 51 makes no distinction between a co-plaintiff and a [63] single plaintiff. What they say is, that it does not follow from his omitting to sign and verify the plaint that he is not to be treated as a plaintiff. They further indicate the considerations which, in that case, prevented such a consequence from following. The persons in question were named as co-plaintiffs on the face of the plaint; their names had not been struck out; they had not attempted to repudiate the suit. In other words, there was no reason to doubt that the suit was really theirs, and, that being so, their omission to sign the plaint would not justify the Court in treating them as not plaintiffs. Nothing in the judgment turns upon their being joint creditors with the plaintiff who had signed, or upon any supposed authority in him to sign on their behalf. Several cases have been cited in support of the argument I am considering. The first was Mahabir Prasad v. Shah Wahid Alam (1). That case is, I think, clearly distinguishable. The evidence there showed that the so-called plaintiff knew nothing whatever about the suit and was not a party to its institution. The second case was Katesar Nath v. Aggyan (2). It does not appear to me quite clear from the report whether the learned Judge held that there was no legal plaint and no legally instituted suit merely because the plaint was not signed in accordance with s. 51, or whether he so held on the ground that there was no valid authority given by the plaintiff for the institution of the suit. My doubt arises from the learned Judge's allusion to the case of Badri Prasad v. Bhagwati Dhar (3), which has nothing to do with the signing of the plaint, but relates only to the conditions under which a suit or appeal may be filed under a vakalat-namah. The case of Katesar Nath v. Aggyan was a decision of a single Judge of this Court, and if it means that, in all circumstances whatever, whether the plaintiff knew of and authorized the suit or not, whether the defendant waived the defect or not, and notwithstanding s. 578 of the Code, an unsigned plaint is necessarily waste paper, [64] and a Court of appeal is at liberty to treat the suit as no suit at all, then, with the greatest respect for the learned Judge, I cannot agree with him. The last case on the point to which I need refer is the case of Marghub Ahmad v. Nihal Ahmad (4). In that case not only did the defendant make no objection that the plaint was not duly signed, but he expressly stated that he desired the suit to be disposed of on the merits. In that suit also, so far as one can gather from the report, although the plaintiff had not signed the plaint, there seems to have been no doubt at all that the suit was instituted with his knowledge and authority, but it was held that, notwithstanding these facts, neither the Court below nor this Court had power to allow any amendment, and that the plaint must be rejected. All I can say as to that case, in which no doubt it was held that the plaint in such cases was "a piece of waste paper," and that there was no suit before the Court, is that it appears to me to be wholly at variance with the three unreported decisions which I have mentioned, that in this conflict of authority it is open to me to adopt the view which I think right, and that I unhesitatingly prefer that taken in the unreported cases. In my opinion, to dismiss a suit at the stage of second appeal upon a point of this kind never raised before by the defendant, would be to sacrifice the substantial merits and justice of the case for the sake of technicality, to an extent to which I could never agree. Although I do not say that an objection founded on s. 51 is always and necessarily one of pure form, I think that it is so here, and that this objection therefore to the decrees of the Courts below must be over-ruled.

The only other objection which has been pressed is that the Courts below have applied a wrong principle as to the measure of damages. The damages claimed are the difference between the contract price of the goods

(1) 11 A.W.N. (1891) 152. (2) 14 A.W.N. (1894) 95. (3) 16 A. 240. (4) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 55.

1899
JULY 3.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 55 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 172.

1899
JULY 3.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 55=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 172.

which the defendant refused to accept and the price realized by the plaintiffs on the re-sale. That claim is in accordance with the clause in the indent contract, which is admittedly indistinguishable from the clause under [65] consideration by the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Moll Schutte and Co. v. Luchmi Chand (1). That case is exactly in point, and the only question is, whether we ought to follow it or the previous decision of the same Court in Yule and Co. v. Mahomed Hossain (2). For my part I have no hesitation in agreeing with the decision in the later case, and I adopt all that was said by the Chief Justice in delivering the judgment of the Full Bench. In this case, as in that, s. 107 of the Contract Act has no application. I think that the Courts below have taken the right view of the measure of damages, and that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

KNOX, J.—I too am of the same opinion, namely, that although the plaint in the case in which this appeal arises was not signed by the plaintiffs as required by s. 51 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the circumstances of the case raise a proper presumption that the plaintiffs have been privy to the suit throughout.

As the learned Chief Justice has pointed out the plaintiffs were represented by an advocate of this Court. The appearance in and prosecution of the suit by such advocate can be and must be taken to be an appearance by the plaintiffs themselves, especially as it was never suggested until the case came before the Court in Second Appeal that there could be any doubt upon the matter at all.

In First Appeal No. 170 of 1895, decided on the 22nd July, 1898, a decision of which I was one of the Judges, and which moreover is a stronger case, inasmuch as it was a case in which the plaintiffs were not represented in the Court of first instance by an advocate, my brother Banerji and myself were prepared to hold that the plaint might even in the appellate stage be amended and rectified. Marghub Ahmad v. Nihal Ahmad (3), is an authority at variance with this; but I have heard nothing which leads me to differ from the view which I took in F. A. No. 170 of 1895. In that case, the absence of the signature of the [66] plaintiffs was held not to be a defect which affected the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court; in my opinion no ground has been made out, so far as this appeal is concerned, for interference with the decrees of the Courts below.

The only other question raised before us, namely, as to damages, was fully considered in the case of Moll Schutte and Co. v. Luchmi Chand (1), and I agree with the way in which it was then decided.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 25 C. 505.

(2) 24 C. 124.

(3) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 55.

22 A. 66 (F.B.) = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 176.

FULL BENCH.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Knox, Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

LALTA PRASAD (Applicant) v. NAND KISHORE AND OTHERS
(Opposite parties).^{*} [3rd July, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, ss. 102, 103, 157—Order dismissing a suit for default of appearance—Construction of order—Application for restoration of suit—Pleadings—What constitutes an "Appearance".

1899
JULY 3.
FULL BENCH.
22 A. 66
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 176.

In construing an order alleged by one side and denied by the other to be an order under s. 102 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the order will be considered as an order under s. 102 if, apart from the mere description which the Court gives of its action, and apart from the actual fact of the plaintiff's appearance or non-appearance, the real meaning and substance of the Court's action is, that it dismisses the suit on the view, whether right or wrong, that the defendant appears and the plaintiff does not appear.

Where, his suit having been dismissed for default of appearance under s. 102 of the Code, the plaintiff applies for its restoration, the defendant cannot contest the application in limine as one which cannot be entertained at all under s. 103 by showing that at the time of the dismissal there was an appearance by the plaintiff in fact or in law; but as an answer to the application on the merits the defendant can raise the contention that the plaintiff was not prevented from appearing because in fact he did appear.

It is not an "appearance" within the meaning of s. 102 of the Code when the plaintiff is represented only by a pleader who is without instructions enabling him to proceed with the case, and who is merely instructed to apply [67] for an adjournment. Shankar Dat Dube v. Radha Krishna (1) and Soonderlal v. Goorprasad (2) approved. Mahomed Azeem-ool-lah v. Ali Buksh (3) Kashi Prashad v. Debi Das (4) and Kanahi Lal v. Naubat Rai (5) referred to.

[F., 34 A. 123 (126) = 8 A.L.J. 1265 (1268) = 12 Ind. Cas. 603 (604); R., 34 C. 403 = 5 C.L.J. 247 = 11 C.W.N. 329 = 2 M.L.T. 123; 33 M. 241 = 5 Ind. Cas. 23 = 19 M.L.J. 760 (762) = 7 M.L.T. 369; 8 C.W.N. 621 (623); 6 Ind. Cas. 851 (855) = 3 S.L.R. 203 (217); 18 M.L.J. 51 = 3 M.L.T. 225; 1 S.L.R. 115; 1 S.L.R. 224 (225).]

THIS was an appeal under s. 588 (8) of the Code of Civil Procedure from an order rejecting an application made under s. 103 of the Code by a plaintiff whose suit had been dismissed. The suit was instituted on the 19th of May 1898. Issues were fixed, and there were several adjournments of the hearing. On one of the adjourned dates certain evidence was taken, that is, the plaintiff gave evidence, one of the defendants was examined as a witness for the plaintiff, two other witnesses were examined on the same side, and certain documentary evidence was filed. There was then a further adjournment for the purpose of obtaining the attendance of certain other witnesses for the plaintiff who were not present. There were other adjournments which need not further be referred to, and at last the case came on for hearing on the 25th of November 1898. On that occasion the plaintiff was not present. There were present certain pleaders who had been engaged by the plaintiff, and also the defendants. The plaintiff's pleaders presented on his behalf an application for adjournment of the suit on the ground of his illness and also the illness of a friend. The pleaders in presenting this application stated that

* First Appeal, No. 22 of 1899, from an order of Pandit Rai Indar Narain, Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 23rd January 1899.

(1) 20 A. 195.

(2) 28 B. 414.

(3) 5 N.W.P.H.C.R. (1873) 74.

(4) 7 N.W.P.H.C.R. (1875) 77.

(5) 3 A. 519.

1899
JULY 3.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 66
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 176.

they were unable to proceed with the case, apparently by reason of the plaintiff's absence. The Court rejected the application for an adjournment and proceeded to pass the following order dismissing the suit:—"Up to the present this case has been adjourned four times since June 1898, on applications made by the plaintiff. Finally proclamations and warrants were issued for some of the plaintiff's witnesses, who have with difficulty been got to attend to-day; but the plaintiff has been called, and he himself is not present, and his pleaders being unable to proceed with the case, have made this application for adjournment. In the [68] application no reasonable cause is given for adjournment. Sickness, or a friend being at the point of death, is not a proper ground for non-prosecution, especially when no certificate of sickness has been produced. It appears that for some reason there is intentional inaction on the part of the plaintiff. Under these circumstances the case cannot remain pending. The Court cannot waste its time over the business of such a negligent party. It is therefore ordered that the claim of the plaintiff be dismissed for default of appearance and for want of prosecution, with costs; the costs of the defendant to be borne by the plaintiff."

On the 22nd of December 1898 the plaintiff applied for restoration of the suit to its original number, urging that there was in fact sufficient and reasonable cause for his not having prosecuted the suit on the 25th of November.

The defendants filed a counter application pleading (1) that the case had not been dismissed in default of prosecution, (2) that the case had not been decided ex parte (3) that the petitioner ought to have filed an appeal against the order of the Subordinate Judge, and (4) that no good reason for the petitioner's absence on the 25th November had been, or could be, shown.

The Subordinate Judge disallowed the plaintiff's application on the ground that the order dismissing the suit was not in effect an order under s. 102 of the Code, that it was a dismissal for want of proof, and therefore the plaintiff's remedy was by appeal against the decree and not by application under s. 103.

Against this dismissal the plaintiff appealed to the High Court.
Munshi Gulzari Lal, for the appellant.

The order of the 25th November 1898 as rightly understood was an order under s. 102 read with s. 157 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It clearly says that the suit was dismissed "for default of appearance and want of prosecution" the evidence upon the record was not taken into consideration and the suit was not decided upon the merits. The Court in dealing with the [69] subsequent application under s. 103 of the Code was not competent to go behind the order passed under s. 102 and say that it was a wrong order and therefore an application under s. 103 would not lie. The Court had only to interpret that order and to see whether it was really an order passed under s. 102 and then to deal with the application under s. 103 on the merits. I submit that the order of the 25th November was in substance and effect an order under s. 102. The circumstances under which it was passed were exactly those under which an order under s. 102 of the Code would be legally justified. The pleaders who presented the application for adjournment on that date on behalf of the plaintiff-appellant were not instructed to go on with the suit in case the application was refused. The following cases were referred to:—

Fazal Ahmad v. Bahadur Singh (1), Hira Dai v. Hira Lal (2), Ramtahal Ram v. Rameshar Ram (3), Shankar Dat Dube v. Radha Krishna (4), Bhimacharya v. Fakirappa (5), Administrator-General of Bengal v. Lala Dayaram Das (6), Zeinulabdin Khan v. Ahmed Raza Khan (7), Jonardan Dobey v. Ramdhone Singh (8), Bhagwan Dai v. Hira (9), Shrimant Sagajirao v. S. Smith (10), Soonderlal v. Goorprasad (11). The cases in I.L.R. 20 Allahabad and 23 Bombay are exactly in point. There seems to be no conflict of authority upon the point that an un-instructed pleader or counsel cannot represent a party in a Court of justice.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the respondents.

Under s. 157 of the Code of Civil Procedure if on any day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, the parties or any of them fail to appear, the Court may dispose of the suit in one of the modes provided in chapter VII of the Code, or make such order as it thinks fit. The 25th November 1898 was the [70] date of adjourned hearing of the case. Documentary evidence had already been filed. The Court could either dismiss the suit under s. 102 of the Code, if the plaintiff did not appear, or dispose of the case on the merits on the evidence on the record. In the latter case the plaintiff's remedy is by way of appeal under s. 540 of the Code, and not under s. 103 of the Code. The plaintiff's pleader was present before the Court. Whether his presence was appearance under s. 102 of the Code or not depended upon the instructions he had received—Soonderlal v. Goorprasad (11) There is nothing on the record to show that he had no instructions to appear. The order of the 25th of November 1898, read with the order under appeal, shows that the Court did not dispose of the suit under chapter VII of the Code, but on the merits. Therefore no application can be made under s. 103 of the Code. There must be an order under s. 102 of the Code, before an application under s. 103 can be made—Mahomed Azeemool-lah v. Ali Buksh (12) and Kashi Parshad v. Debi Das (13). The case of Kanahi Lal v. Naubat Rai (14) also supports this contention.

Munshi Gulzari Lal in reply.—The rulings relied upon by the other side do not really decide the point arising in this case. Some of them are clearly distinguishable and the others, I contend, were not rightly decided. The opening words of s. 103 make it abundantly clear that a Court in dealing with an application under that section should not reconsider its order under s. 102 of the Code.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J.—This is an appeal under s. 588 (8) of the Code of Civil Procedure from an order rejecting an application by a plaintiff under s. 103. The suit was instituted on the 19th of May 1898. Issues were fixed, and there were several adjournments of the hearing. On one of the adjourned dates certain evidence was taken, that is, the plaintiff gave evidence, one of the defendants was examined as a witness for the plaintiff, [71] two other witnesses were examined on the same side, and certain documentary evidence was filed. There was then a further adjournment for the purpose

1899
JULY 3.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 66
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 176.

- | | | |
|---|----------------------------|---------------------|
| (1) 13 A.W.N. (1893) 25. | (2) 7 A. 538. | (3) 8 A. 140. |
| (4) 20 A. 195. | (5) 4 B.H.C.R. A.C.J. 206. | (6) 6 B. L. R. 688. |
| (7) 5 I. A. 238. | (8) 23 C. 738. | (9) 19 A. 355. |
| (10) 20 B. 736. | (11) 23 B. 414. | |
| (12) 5 N.W.P.H.C.R (1873) 74. (13) 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. (1875) 77. | | |
| (14) 3 A. 519. | | |

1899¹
JULY 3.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 66
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 176.

of obtaining the attendance of certain other witnesses for the plaintiff who were not present. There were other adjournments which need not further be referred to, and at last the case came on for hearing on the 25th of November, 1898. On that occasion the plaintiff was not present. There were present certain pleaders who had been engaged by the plaintiff, and also the defendants. The plaintiff's pleaders presented on his behalf an application for adjournment of the suit on the ground of his illness and also the illness of a friend. The pleaders in presenting this application stated that they were unable to proceed with the case, apparently by reason of the plaintiff's absence. The Court made an order rejecting the application for adjournment and also dismissing the suit. The earlier part of that order referred to the number of adjournments already granted, and then continued:—"The plaintiff was called and he himself is not present, and his pleaders, being unable to proceed with the case, have made this application for adjournment. In the application no reasonable cause is given for adjournment." The order went on to criticise the reasons put forward in the application, and to say that the plaintiff seemed to be "intentionally negligent." The order concludes with these words:—"Therefore it is ordered that the claim be dismissed for default of appearance and for want of prosecution, with costs." It will be observed that the order makes no reference to the evidence, oral and documentary, which had already been taken in the case. We construe that order as an order passed under the earlier portion of s. 157 of the Code. In other words, the Court, in our opinion regarded the case as one in which the plaintiff had failed to appear at the adjourned hearing, and proceeded to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by Chapter VII, that is, under s. 102 of that chapter. We have arrived at this construction by a consideration of the terms of the order as a whole, and more especially with regard [72] to three points. The first is the expression baghair haziri, or "default of appearance." That is the expression which a Court ordinarily uses when dismissing a suit for default of the plaintiff's appearance. The second point is that if the suit had been dismissed otherwise than under s. 102, one would have expected the order to have at least referred to the evidence previously adduced by the plaintiff. The third point is that in awarding costs to the defendant the Court awarded half the pleader's fees only, and in doing so obviously acted with reference to Rule 458 of the Rules of the 4th April 1894, which is applicable only to cases in which one of the parties does not appear, and which is not applicable where both parties appear and the case is decided after contest. We also construe that order as meaning that the pleaders for the plaintiff, though present and applying for an adjournment, were not duly instructed for the purpose of proceeding with the suit, or instructed otherwise than for the purposes of the application. The order refers to those pleaders as unable to proceed with the case, that is unable in consequence of the plaintiff's absence; and when, notwithstanding the presence of the pleaders, it describes the suit as dismissed for default of appearance, we think that the Court was presumably referring to those cases in which it has been held that the mere physical presence of a pleader not instructed except for the purpose of applying for adjournment, is not an appearance in the suit in the sense of Chapter VII of the Code.

That being our construction of the order, what next happened was that on the 22nd of December 1898 the plaintiff made an application under s. 103 of the Code for an order to set the dismissal aside. The Court rejected that application on the ground that the dismissal of the suit could not be treated as a dismissal for want of appearance of the plaintiff under s. 157 read with s. 102, but must be treated as a dismissal on the merits, and for want of proof, having regard to the fact that evidence had been taken and was on the record. The Court observed that the contention of the pleaders, that on the 25th [73] of November they had had no instructions, could not be maintained. It, however, did not go into any evidence as to the nature or extent of the pleader's instructions, no doubt because, in the view which it took of that case, that question was not material. The Court held that as the suit had not been dismissed for default of appearance, the application under s. 103 could not be maintained. It therefore dismissed the application, and the plaintiff now appeals to us from that decision.

The contention of the plaintiff in this appeal is that the suit was in fact dismissed under s. 157 read with s. 102, and that his application under s. 103 ought therefore to have been determined as such an application properly made, and on the merits. He contends that as he was not present on the 25th of November, and as his pleaders, though present, were not duly instructed in the suit, there was a dismissal of the suit for default of appearance under s. 102. In support of that contention he relies on, amongst other authorities, the decision of this Court in Shankar Dat Dube v. Radha Krishna (1) and of the High Court of Bombay in Soondelal v. Goorprasad (2).

The defendants support the decision of the Court below. They contend on two grounds that s. 102, and therefore s. 103, is not applicable to the case. The first ground is, that the order of dismissal does not purport to be passed under s. 102, and on its true construction is not an order under that section. The second ground is that, even if the Court purported to act under s. 102, or intended so to act, it could not legally dismiss the suit under s. 102, because there was in law an appearance of the plaintiff within the meaning of s. 102. It was further argued that the order dismissing the suit, as it could not be considered a legal order under s. 102, must be treated as an order dismissing the suit in the ordinary way on the merits, or at all events not for want of appearance, and that the plaintiff's remedy was not by way of application under s. 103, but by way of appeal. In support of this contention the learned advocate for the [74] defendants cited, amongst others, the cases of Mahomed Azeemoolah v. Ali Buksh (3), Kashi Parshad v. Debi Das (4) and Kanahi Lal v. Naubat Rai (5).

The reply of the plaintiff to this contention is, first, that the order on its true construction is an order of dismissal under s. 102; and secondly, that a defendant cannot, in reply to an application under s. 103, be heard to say that an order purporting to be passed under s. 102, was one which the Court had no power to make under that section, or to contend for any reason that, contrary to the meaning and effect of that order, the plaintiff had actually appeared when his suit was dismissed for non-appearance.

Now in the first place, as I have already stated, we construe the order of the 25th of November 1898, as an order by which the Court intended to act and believed itself to be acting under s. 157 read with s. 102. It is not necessary to repeat the reasons which I have already given

1899
JULY 3.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 66
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 176.

(1) 20 A. 195.

(2) 23 B. 414.

(3) 5 N.W.P.H. C. R. (1873), 74.

(4) 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. (1875) 77.

(5) 3 A. 519.

1899
JULY 3.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 66
(F.B.) =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 176.

for that construction. In the second place, what is the meaning of the opening words of s. 103 of the Code "when a suit is wholly or partially dismissed under s. 102?" Is it a dismissal under s. 102 merely if the order says that it is passed under s. 102? Or is it only a dismissal under s. 102, if, irrespective of the language of the order, the suit was dismissed upon an actual non-appearance of the plaintiff in fact or law? Or is the suit dismissed under s. 102 if, apart from the mere description which the Court gives of its action, and apart from the actual fact of the plaintiff's appearance, or non-appearance, the real meaning and substance of the Court's action, is that it dismisses the suit on the view, whether right or wrong, that the defendant appears and the plaintiff does not appear? We think that the third of these views is the correct one. The mere naming of the section is not conclusive though, no doubt, it may be a useful piece of evidence in construing the order, which must be [75] read and construed as a whole. But, although the Court may describe an order of dismissal, as being made under s. 102, the order, taken as a whole, may show that the description is an error, and that the Court was not really dismissing the suit on the view that the plaintiff was not appearing. So, too, if s. 102 is not named, and even if some other section, whether s. 158 or any other, is named, still it may be that that is a mere misdescription, and that nevertheless the real reason for the dismissal is that in the Court's view the defendant appears and the plaintiff does not appear. In such a case, notwithstanding the misdescription, there is in substance and in fact a dismissal of the suit for non-appearance of the plaintiff and therefore a dismissal under s. 102, although that dismissal may be absolutely wrong, either because the Court was mistaken in supposing that the plaintiff did not appear or for any other reason. If the Court was mistaken in supposing that the plaintiff did not appear, still, whether the mistake was one of fact or of law, the appearance would not make the dismissal one not ordered under s. 102, it would only make the dismissal under that section a wrong one. In other words, a suit is dismissed under s. 102 if the dismissal is based on the state of things contemplated in that section, that is, if the Court's reason for the dismissal is its view that the plaintiff has not appeared.

If that is the correct view of the meaning of the opening words of s. 103, referring to a suit being dismissed under s. 102, it follows that a plea by the defendant, in answer to the plaintiff's application under s. 103, that the order under s. 102 was illegally made, is irrelevant. S. 103 allows the plaintiff to apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, where the suit has been in fact wholly or partially dismissed under s. 102. If there has been such a dismissal in the sense I have explained, whether right or wrong, the plaintiff is entitled to apply to the Court to set it aside, and it is no answer to such an application to say that the order sought to be set aside was illegal for any reason whatever. Therefore the defendant cannot contest the [76] application in limine as one which cannot be entertained at all under s. 103 by showing that at the time of the dismissal there was an appearance by the plaintiff in fact or in law. But what can the defendant do? He is entitled to meet in any way that is relevant the plaintiff's allegation, which is the only ground on which such an application can succeed, that the plaintiff was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing. In order to succeed the plaintiff must prove that he was [so prevented from appearing. The defendant may prove that the plaintiff was not prevented from appearing. Those terms would undoubtedly cover a contention by the defendant that the plaintiff was not prevented from appearing because, in fact, he did appear, so that the contention that there was such an appearance in fact and in law, though it cannot be used as a bar to the application under s. 103 in limine would still be material on the merits of the application and as a ground for dismissing it under the section.

Now in the present case the plaintiff did not appear in person. If he appeared at all, it was by his pleaders. If his pleaders were not duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit, if they were instructed only to apply for an adjournment, then Pandit Sundar Lal concedes that according to the authorities, and particularly according to Shankar Dat Dube v. Radha Krishna and Soonderlal v. Goorprasad, with which we agree, the plaintiff did not appear at all. Therefore, all depends on two questions : first, were the pleaders duly instructed in the sense of these authorities? and, secondly, if they were not, and if consequently there was no appearance by the plaintiff on the 25th of November 1898, was he prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing?

These questions have not been considered by the Court below. It did not consider them because of the erroneous view which it formed of the nature of the order of dismissal. It should have treated that order as a dismissal of the suit under s. 102, and [77] disposed of the application solely with reference to the circumstances contemplated by s. 103. The order must be set aside as in effect passed on a preliminary point, and the case must go back to the Court for the application under s. 103 to be disposed of on the merits. In this judgment I have not thought it necessary to discuss in detail the various cases that have been cited. If any of them, being decisions of this Court, and especially the cases reported in 5 N.W.P.H.C. Rep., 1873, p. 74, 7 N.W.P.H.C. Rep., 1875, p. 77, and I.L.R., 3 All., 519, contain anything inconsistent with the views expressed in this judgment, they must be considered overruled to that extent. The appellant will have his costs of this appeal. The other costs will abide the result.

KNOX, J.—I fully agree with the order proposed and with the reasons given for the same.

BANERJI, J.—I am of the same opinion, but desire to make a few observations. Two points have been conceded, and in my opinion rightly conceded, by the learned advocate for the respondents. The first is that if the dismissal of the plaintiff's claim was in fact and in law a dismissal under the first part of s. 157 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that is, a dismissal under s. 102, on the ground of the plaintiff's failure to appear at the adjourned hearing of the suit, the plaintiff has a remedy under s. 103. The second point is, that the mere presence of a pleader at the hearing is not an appearance within the meaning of the Code unless the pleader was duly instructed and able to answer material questions relating to the suit. On both these points the course of rulings in this Court in recent years, and in the other High Courts is to the effect that in the former case an application can be made under s. 103, and in the latter, that the party represented by a pleader without instructions must be deemed not to have appeared. There is no reason to depart from this consensus of rulings. The learned advocate for the respondents contends that whenever an application is made under s. 103, the first question to be determined is, whether the order which is sought to be [78] set

1899
JULY 3.

FULL BENCH.

22 A. 66

(F.B.)=

19 A.W.N.
(1899) 176.

1899
JULY 3.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 66
(F.B.)=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 176.

aside could legally have been made under s. 102. With this contention, and the rulings which support it, I am unable to agree. What the Court has to determine is, whether the order of dismissal was, in fact, made under s. 102; that is, whether it was made on the ground that the plaintiff did not appear and the defendant did appear, not whether that order was rightly or legally made. When a Court has dismissed a suit on the ground that the defendant has appeared, and the plaintiff has not appeared, that is a dismissal under s. 102, and an application can be made under s. 103 to set aside such a dismissal. The plaintiff's success upon that application depends on his ability to prove that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing. The defendant may, for the purpose of showing that no such cause existed, prove that, in fact, the plaintiff had appeared, and that he was not prevented by any sufficient reason from appearing at the hearing: but that is a question which must be determined for the purpose of considering whether the plaintiff has been able to substantiate his application under s. 103 to set aside the dismissal. In this case, as has been shown in the judgment of the learned Chief Justice, the Court did, in fact, dismiss the suit on the ground that there was no appearance on behalf of the plaintiff. That being so, the plaintiff was entitled to apply under s. 103 for the setting aside of that dismissal, and the Court below was wrong in refusing to entertain the application. I agree with the order proposed by the learned Chief Justice.

AIKMAN, J.—I also am of the same opinion. The learned Subordinate Judge says that the order of dismissal which was passed on the 25th November, 1898, amounted to a dismissal for want of proof. I am clear that this is a mistake. It would have been open to the Subordinate Judge in the present case to say that the evidence on the record was insufficient to prove the plaintiff's case, and that therefore the suit was dismissed. Had he said so, that would have been a decree against which the plaintiff's remedy would have been by way of appeal. But what he did say, [79] was that the suit was dismissed for default of appearance. That is clearly an order passed under the first part of s. 157 read with s. 102 of the Code, and the plaintiff adopted the proper course by applying under s. 103 for an order to set the dismissal aside. The argument that because the Court may have been mistaken in thinking that there was no appearance by the plaintiff, the order must be taken to have been one not passed under s. 102 is, in my opinion, utterly fallacious, and I would dissent from anything there may be in the judgments cited which would support such reasoning. I concur in the order proposed.

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

22 A. 79 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 181.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and
Mr. Justice Banerji.*

DHAN KUNWAR AND ANOTHER (Opposite-parties) v. MAHTAB
SINGH AND OTHERS (Objectors).^{*} [6th July, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 244—Execution of decree—Sale in execution—Decree satisfied—Amendment of decree in favour of judgment-debtors—Application by judgment-debtors to recover surplus from decree-holders.

1899
JULY 6.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 79 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 181.

Where by a sale in execution the decree as it stood at the time when execution was taken out had been fully satisfied, but the decree was afterwards amended at the instance of the judgment-debtors, and in consequence of the amendment the decree-holders were found to have realized more from the judgment-debtors than they were entitled to, it was held that it was competent to the judgment-debtors by application under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure to recover such surplus from the decree-holders.

[F., 25 A. 441; R., 24 A. 291 (294) = 22 A.W.N. (1904), 67; 29 A. 348 (350) = 4 A.L.J. 188 = 27 A.W.N. (1907) 90.]

THIS was an appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent from the judgment of a single Judge of the Court. The facts of the case, so far as they are necessary for the purposes of this report, appear from the judgment, which was as follows:—

“This appeal relates to a decree bearing date the 25th July 1895. Of that decree the ancestors of the present respondents [80] were decree-holders, and the ancestors of the present appellants were the judgment-debtors against whom the decree ran. The decree was a decree for sale passed under s. 88 of Act No. IV of 1882. The order absolute for sale had followed in due course, the property was sold, and the proceeds of the sale dealt with as provided by s. 88. The amount due had been paid to the plaintiffs, when the judgment-debtors discovered that there was an error in the decree, applied for amendment and got the decree amended. The result of the amendment was the discovery that a sum of Rs. 500-11-4 had been paid to the plaintiffs in excess of what was due to them under the decree as now amended. The judgment-debtors then applied under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure to recover this sum in the execution department. Their application has been dismissed on the ground that the loss is due to the negligence of the appellants.”

The single Judge thereafter proceeded to dismiss the appeal before him. The appellants appealed under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

Mr. D. N. Banerji and Babu Satish Chandar Banerji, for the appellants.

Pandit Moti Lal Nehru, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J. (BANERJI, J., concurring).—We are of opinion that this appeal must be dismissed. At the same time we are unable to concur in the view of the law on which the learned Judge has dismissed the appeal to this Court. The learned Judge's view was this. He considered that where there had been a sale in execution of a decree, and by that sale the decree as passed was fully discharged, but the judgment-debtor afterwards obtained an amendment of the decree, and the * Appeal No. 11 of 1899, under s. 10 of the Letters Patent.

1899
JULY 6.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 79=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 181.

decree as amended showed that the decree-holder had realized at the sale more than he was entitled to, the judgment-debtor had no right under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure to apply to recover the excess realized. We cannot agree with that view at all. It appears to us that the question whether the decree-holder had realized more than he was entitled to under the decree as it finally stood, was undoubtedly [81] a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, and that therefore under s. 244 the judgment-debtor was entitled to apply for the recovery of what the decree-holder had taken in excess. The learned Judge says:—"As soon as the decree ceased to subsist s. 244 had no application." It would, we think, be impossible to maintain that after the sale in execution, the decree ceased to subsist in the sense that no amendment of it could be made, and if so the answer is that as soon as the decree was amended, and the amendment showed that the decree-holder had realized too much, the application of s. 244 was revived. So long as there is no question which can be raised under s. 244, that section, of course, could have no application; but as soon as any such question arises the section again becomes applicable. Take the converse case. Suppose that after the execution sale it appeared that the decree awarded less to the decree-holder than he was entitled to according to the judgment. Surely he could apply, notwithstanding the sale, for an amendment of the decree so as to entitle him to recover in execution the full amount decided in the judgment to be due to him, and, if the amendment were made, surely he could then execute his decree for the balance due, and any application for such execution would be made under s. 244. If so, the judgment-debtor, in the converse case of too much having been realized, can equally apply for amendment and afterwards recover the excess under s. 244. According to the principle laid down by the learned Judge, neither the judgment-debtor nor the decree-holder would have any remedy under ss. 206 and 244, and a separate suit would be necessary, if it were discovered that too much or too little had been realized at the sale in consequence of a clerical or arithmetical error in the decree. Section 244 was intended to make a separate suit unnecessary in such cases.

On other grounds, however, we think that the appeal must fail. The whole question is whether the decree-holders in fact realized Rs. 500 odd in excess of what they were entitled to. That is a question of the construction of the decree for sale under s. [82] 88 of the Transfer of Property Act. That decree provides for future interest. It does not expressly state that the future interest is payable until realization, but it does not state that it is to stop at any earlier date. Therefore, unless there is anything to preclude us from so doing, we must construe the decree according to the recent Full Bench ruling in Bakar Sajjad v. Udit Narain Singh (1) as a decree in accordance with s. 88, that is, as a decree awarding interest until the date of realization. On that view of the decree the decree-holders have not realized too much, and this application of the judgment-debtors must fail. Then is there anything which does preclude us from applying the principle laid down by the Full Bench? The only thing which, it is suggested, precludes us is an order passed on the 4th of December, 1897, on the judgment-debtor's application, by which the Court amended, not the decree under s. 88, but the order absolute for sale under s. 89. Of course, the decree to be executed was the decree under s. 88, and no alteration of the order absolute could affect the rights of the decree-holders under that unamended decree. But it is said that the amending order placed a construction on the decree under s. 88 to the effect that interest beyond six months from the date of the decree should not be allowed. It is suggested that we are bound to construe the decree under s. 88 according to that construction and not on the construction which would be right according to the Full Bench decision. We do not think that the order of December, 1897, has any such effect. It was not an order passed in execution proceedings, nor an interlocutory order which could have an effect analogous to that of res judicata in accordance with the well-known rulings of the Privy Council. At the time when it was made, execution proceedings had been completed by the sale. It was not until some time later that proceedings in execution were resumed by the present application under s. 244. We do not think that the principle of the Privy Council rulings can be held to cover an [83] order of this kind. It is difficult, indeed, to say under what provision of the law the order was made. It cannot be regarded as an order under s. 206 of the Code, because the Court did not profess to act on any ground stated in that section. Nor can it be regarded as an order of review. We think that the principle laid down in the Full Bench case must be applied; that the decree-holders did not realize anything in excess of what was due to them under the decree, and that this appeal of the judgment-debtors must be dismissed with costs.

(1) 21 A. 361.

Appeal dismissed.

22 A. 83 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 189.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Banerji.

ZUBEDA BIBI (Defendant) v. SHEO CHARAN (Plaintiff).^{*}
[12th July, 1899.]

Act No. XII of 1881 (N. W. P. Rent Act), s. 36—Application for ejectment as a tenant—Subsequent suit for ejectment as a trespasser—Estoppel—Civil and Revenue Courts—Jurisdiction.

Held, that the mere fact of a plaintiff in a suit for ejectment in a Civil Court, having on a previous occasion applied to the Revenue Court for the ejectment of the defendant would not estop him from asserting that the defendant was unlawfully in possession, that is, as a trespasser.

[F., 22 A. 93; 35 A. 14 (17) = 10 A.L.J. 408 = 17 Ind. Cas. 376 (377); R., 10 A.L.J. 85 (86) = 15 Ind. Cas. 303.]

THE plaintiff in this case was the purchaser of the rights of the mortgagor in certain property which was the subject of a usufructuary mortgage. The defendant, Zubeda Bibi, was the representative in interest of the mortgagees. The plaintiff redeemed the mortgage by deposit of the whole mortgage-money in Court, and obtained possession of the mortgaged property with the exception of four plots of land on which the mortgagee during the continuance of the mortgage had planted trees. The plaintiff accordingly brought the present suit for the recovery of these four plots.

^{*} Second Appeal, No. 196 of 1899; from a decree of Maulvi Syed Jafar Husain Khan, Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur, dated the 31st December, 1898, confirming a decree of Mr. H. David, Munsif of Basti, dated the 6th November, 1897.

1899
JULY 6.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 79 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 181.

1899
JULY 12.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 83=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 189.

The Court of first instance (Munsif of Basti) decreed the plaintiff's claim. The defendant appealed and urged, inter alia, that the suit was not cognizable by a Civil Court because on a former occasion the plaintiff had sought to eject the defendant as [84] a tenant by proceedings under the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881. This was so; but in those proceedings the Board of Revenue had found that the relation of landlord and tenant did not subsist between the parties, and had directed the plaintiff to seek his remedy in a Civil Court. The lower appellate Court (Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur) dismissed the appeal confirming the decree of the Court of first instance.

The defendant thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Munshi Haribans Sahai, for the appellant.

Pandit Moti Lal Nehru (for whom Pandit Tej Bahadur Sapru), for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BANERJI, J.—This is an untenable appeal. The plaintiff respondent is the purchaser of the rights of two persons who mortgaged certain property to the defendant appellant. The amount of the mortgage was deposited by him in Court, and was withdrawn by the mortgagee in full discharge of the mortgage. The mortgagee delivered possession to the plaintiff of the whole of the mortgaged property except a grove which is claimed in this suit. The Courts below have decreed the claim. The first contention urged in this appeal is that the suit is cognizable by a Court of Revenue and not by the Civil Court. That contention is based upon the argument that the plaintiff, by reason of his having applied to the Revenue Court for the ejectment of the defendant under s. 36 of Act No. XII of 1881, is precluded from denying that the relationship of landlord and tenant exists between him and the defendant. It appears that the plaintiff did issue a notice for the ejectment of the defendant under s. 36 of the Rent Act. That notice was contested, and in the result the appellate Court held that the plaintiff was not entitled to eject the defendant under the proceedings taken by him in the Revenue Court. The order of the Board of Revenue, which is the only order on the record of this case, is to the effect that the plaintiff ought to seek his remedy in the Civil Court. From that order it is clear that the Revenue Court did not find that the relation of landlord and tenant existed between the parties. The mere fact [85] of the plaintiff having applied to the Revenue Court for the ejectment of the defendants does not estop him from asserting, as he has done in the present suit, that the defendant is unlawfully in possession, that is, as a trespasser. The application made by the plaintiff in the Court of Revenue did not amount to anything more than an admission which was rebuttable. In this case he asserted that the defendant, after having received the mortgage-money, had no right to continue in possession of a part of the property, and that she was thus in possession as a trespasser. A suit brought upon such an allegation can only be brought in the Civil Court. It has been found that the relation of landlord and tenant does not exist between the parties. It was never stated in the pleadings that such relation subsisted between the parties. The only ground upon which the defendant contended in the Courts below that the suit was not cognizable by the Civil Court was the ground stated in the first plea in the memorandum of appeal to the lower appellate Court, namely, the fact that the plaintiff had issued a notice of ejectment under s. 36 of Act No. XII of 1881. Upon the allegations made in this case and the findings of the Court below this was a suit which was exclusively cognizable by the Civil Court. The lower appellate Court has found that the grove in question was planted during the time when the defendant was in possession as an usufructuary mortgagee, and that it is thus an accession to the mortgaged property. It has found that separate possession and enjoyment of the grove without detriment to the principal property is not possible. It has further found that the planting of the grove was not necessary to preserve the property from destruction, forfeiture, or sale, and that the grove was not planted with the consent of the mortgagor. Consequently under s. 63 of the Transfer of Property Act the mortgagor is entitled to obtain delivery of possession over the accession made to the mortgaged property. It is true that the lower appellate Court in its judgment uses the word plaintiff when referring to the question of consent; but having regard to the fact that the Court in distinct terms referred [86] to the provisions of the second paragraph of s. 63, and that it was considering whether all the conditions mentioned in that section applied, it is clear that the Court meant to find that the grove was not planted with the consent of the original mortgagors. Upon the findings of the lower appellate Court the second contention raised in this appeal cannot be sustained. It is urged, lastly, that the plaintiff ought to have sued for redemption of the mortgage. It has been found, and it is a fact which was evidently admitted on the pleadings, that the defendant received the whole of the mortgage money in full satisfaction of the mortgage. That being so, there has been a redemption of the mortgage, and as the bulk of the property has been restored to the representative of the mortgagor, the only suit which the plaintiff, as such representative, had to bring was a suit for recovery of possession of the property which was withheld from him. I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

22 A. 86 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 184.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Aikman.

DHANI RAM (Defendant) v. CHATURBHUI AND ANOTHER
(Plaintiffs). * [15th July, 1899.]

Civil Procedure Code, s. 244—Execution of decree—Questions for the Court executing the decree—Sale in execution—Suit by decree-holder and judgment-debtor against auction purchaser to set aside sale alleging an uncertified adjustment of the decree prior to the sale.

Held that the provision of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure disallowing a separate suit to determine questions arising between the parties to the suit in which a decree has been passed and bearing upon the execution thereof, operates not only to prohibit a suit between the parties and their representatives, but also a suit by a party or his representative against an auction purchaser in execution of the decree, the object of which suit is to determine a question which properly arose between the parties or their representatives relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Basti Ram v. Fattu (1), and Prosunno Kumar Sanyal v. Kali Das Sanyal (2) referred to.

* First Appeal from order No. 46 of 1899 from an order of W. F. Wells, Esq., District Judge of Agra, dated the 6th May 1899.

(1) 9 A. 146.

(2) 19 C. 688.

1899
JULY 12.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 83 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 189.

1899
JULY 15.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

22 A. 86 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 184.

[R., 24 A. 239 (240) = 22 A.W.N. 1902 49; 26 A. 447 (459, 460) = 1 A.L.J. 65 = A.W.N. (1904) 31; 34 M. 417 (420) = 8 Ind. Cas. 429 = 21 M.L.J. 928 (932) = 9, M.L.T. 152 (154) = 1910 M.W.N. 662; 11 Bcm. L.R. 699 (705) = 3 Ind. Cas. 763.]

[87] THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of Aikman, J.

Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellant.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri (for whom Munshi Gulzari Lal), for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR, J.—The plaintiffs' suit, out of which this second appeal arises, is a suit by a decree-holder and a judgment-debtor as plaintiffs against an auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree in which the plaintiffs occupied the position I have mentioned on the ground that an adjustment had been arrived at between them before sale. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit of the plaintiffs, applying the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The appellate Court reversed that decision and remanded the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure for decision upon the merits. It is against that order of remand that the present appeal is brought. The ground taken by Pandit Sundar Lal, who appears for the appellant, is that the Court of first instance was right in applying s. 244 as a bar to this suit. That practically is the substantial ground of appeal. The fact alleged is, that the plaintiffs had really effected an adjustment, which, if duly certified to and sanctioned by the executing Court, would have put an end to the suit in the execution proceedings. It was manifestly the duty of the decree-holder under s. 258 of the Code of Civil Procedure to certify such adjustment. It was open to the judgment-debtor, upon the decree-holder failing to perform that duty, to protect himself from the further execution of the decree by himself certifying to the Court the fact of such adjustment, whereupon due notice would have been given to the decree-holder to show cause why the adjustment should not be recorded as certified. As a matter of fact neither party took the course which is imposed upon one, and, in case of his default, is allowed to the other, by that section. The consequence was that the sale proceeded and the defendant became a purchaser. It is now sought to set aside that sale. Apart altogether from authorities to [88] which I am bound to conform, it does seem contrary to elementary principles of right and justice to allow two persons, either of whom could have prevented the sale, to put their hands in their pockets till the sale was over, and then to proceed against an innocent auction-purchaser by suit in order to set aside the sale which ought never to have taken place. However, we have abundant authority in the Full Bench decision of this Court in Basti Ram v. Fattu (1), and the decision of the Privy Council in Prosunno Kumar Sanyal v. Kali Das Sanyal (2). The only distinction that appears to us which could possibly be urged between this case and those that have been decided is that the sole defendant here is the auction-purchaser, and it has been contended before us that upon that fact the provisions of cl. (c) of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure do not apply. In my opinion the question as to the fact and propriety of this adjustment did arise between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and ought to have been by them decided in the executing Court as provided for by s. 244. I would allow this appeal, and, setting aside the order of remand by the Court below, restore with costs the decree of the Court of first instance.

(1) 8 A. 146.

(2) 19 C. 683.

AIKMAN, J.— I am of the same opinion. The suit out of which this appeal arises was brought to set aside an auction sale held in execution of a decree on a mortgage. The plaintiffs are the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor in the mortgage suit. The defendant, who is the appellant here, is the auction-purchaser of the mortgaged property. It appears from the statement of facts that on the 10th of March, 1898, the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor in the mortgage suit entered into an arrangement, whereby the judgment-debtor executed a fresh mortgage in favour of the decree-holder in adjustment of the decree which the latter had obtained upon the previous mortgage. Neither of the parties took any steps to have this adjustment certified to the Court, whose duty it was to execute the decree. For anything we know to the contrary, the agreement entered into between the decree-holder [89] and the judgment-debtor may have come within the provisions of the second paragraph of s. 257-A of the Code of Civil Procedure, and may have required the sanction of the Court. The 21st of March, 1898, was the date fixed for the sale which, under the provisions of s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure, had been transferred to the Collector. On that date the son of the decree-holder presented an application to the officer conducting the sale, asking him to stay the sale on the ground that the decree had been satisfied. That officer refused the prayer of the applicant. The property was sold, and was purchased by the appellant before us. The judgment-debtor applied under s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have the sale set aside. That application was refused, and no appeal was preferred against the order of refusal. The Court of first instance held that the present suit was barred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Code, and on that ground dismissed it. On appeal the learned District Judge came to the conclusion that s. 244 did not apply to the case, set aside the decree of dismissal, and remanded the suit for decision on the merits. The defendant appeals against this order of remand, contending that the decision of the first Court was right. In my judgment the suit is clearly barred by s. 244. The case is, in my opinion, governed by the decision of the Full Bench of this Court in Basti Ram v. Fattu (1). That was a case in which a judgment-debtor, whose property had been sold in execution of a decree, brought a suit against the auction purchaser to have the sale set aside on the ground that the property, an occupancy tenure, could not be sold in execution. The Full Bench held that the provisions of s. 244 disallowing a separate suit to determine questions arising between the parties to the suit in which a decree had been passed and bearing upon the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, or stay of the execution thereof, operated not only to prohibit a suit between the parties and their representatives, but also a suit by a party or his representative against an auction purchaser in execution of the [90] decree, the object of which suit is to determine a question which properly arose between the parties or their representatives relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. If the question be of this nature in this suit it is one which by s. 244 must be determined by order of the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit, and it is immaterial whether the party did or did not raise it prior to the auction sale in execution proceedings. If he did not, "suit is not the remedy which the Legislature

1899
JULY 15.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 86=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 184.

(1) 8 A. 146.

1899
JULY 15.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 86=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 184.

has provided." These remarks in my judgment apply clearly to the present case. A purchaser at an auction sale held in execution of a decree is entitled to take it for granted that questions as to whether the decree under execution is or is not barred by limitation, as to whether the property advertised for sale is or is not saleable under the decree, and as to whether the decree has or has not been satisfied, have been decided by the Court executing the decree. If a suit like the present were held to be maintainable against an auction-purchaser, it would have a most injurious effect upon auction sales. If parties will not adopt the course provided by law for deciding whether a decree has or has not been satisfied, they cannot take advantage of their own laches and neglect of the law to harass an innocent auction-purchaser. I concur in the order proposed.

Appeal decreed.

22 A. 90=19 A.W.N. (1899) 188.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox, Acting Chief Justice.

MUHAMMAD BAQAR (Defendant) v. MANGO LAL (Plaintiff).^{*}
[26th July, 1899.]

Limitation—Act No. XV of 1877 (Indian Limitation Act), sch. ii, art. 120—Suit by auction-purchaser of mortgaged property to cancel a perpetual lease granted by the mortgagor in contravention of a covenant in the mortgage.

During the continuance of a mortgage which contained a covenant against alienation of the mortgaged property, the mortgagor made a perpetual lease of that property. The mortgagee brought a suit on his mortgage, and [91] having obtained a decree, put the mortgaged property up to sale. The auction purchaser of the mortgaged property on becoming aware of the existence of the perpetual lease, sued for its cancellation and for a declaration that the defendant had no right to interfere with or obstruct the plaintiff in respect of the property in question. Held, that the limitation applicable to such suit was that prescribed by art. 120 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, and not that prescribed by art. 91 or art. 95. The main prayer of the plaint was for a decree declaring and establishing the plaintiff's title and the prayer for cancellation of the lease could be treated as merely subsidiary to the main relief asked. Pachamuthu v. Chinnappan (1) and Uma Shankar v. Kalka Prasad (2) referred to. Din Dial v. Har Narain (3) followed.

[R., 26 M. 410 (416); 1 C.L.J. 73 (80); 7 Cr.L.J. 89 (91)=10 O.C. 337; 15 Ind. Cas. 819 (820)=5 S.L.R. 240.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the appellant.

Mr. B. E. O'Connor, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, ACTING C. J.—The suit out of which this second appeal arises was brought by one Mango Lal, who is now respondent, on the basis of a bond executed by Fazal Husain. The bond is said to have been executed on the 1st of July, 1889, in favour of the predecessor in interest of the plaintiff, and to have been followed by a second bond executed by the same person and in favour of the same ancestor of the plaintiff. On the 26th of January 1890, a suit was brought upon these bonds, and a decree ^{*} Second Appeal No. 777 of 1898 from a decree of Babu Baijnath, Rai Bahadur, Additional Judge of Saharanpur, dated the 5th July 1898, confirming a decree of Maulvi Shah Amjadullah, Munsif of Saharanpur, dated the 27th July 1897.

(1) 10 M. 213.

(2) 6 A. 75.

(3) 16 A. 73.

obtained for the enforcement of the hypothecation lien on the 28th of March 1891. The plaint in that case was filed by the father of the present plaintiff. He died before the close of the suit. The plaintiff and his brother obtained a decree under s. 89 of Act IV of 1882, on the 25th of June 1892, and in execution of the decree the entire hypothecated property was brought to sale. The plaintiff purchased the property when it was put up for sale, and the date of his purchase was the 20th of August 1894.

It appears that on the 7th July 1890, Fazal Husain executed a perpetual lease in respect of a portion of the hypothecated property in favour of Muhammad Baqar.

[92] The plaintiff contends that the execution of this lease was in contravention of a covenant not to alienate, which was contained in the mortgage-deed executed by Fazal Husain in favour of Bhagwan Das, and accordingly prays in this suit that the lease be declared null and void.

The date on which the cause of action accrued is entered in the plaint as November 1896, and is set out as being a decision which the Revenue Court gave against the plaintiff when he tried to realize rent from his tenants and found himself opposed by Muhammad Baqar.

The learned Judge found that the suit was within time and rejected the defence set up by the appellant that limitation barred the claim. He also found that the lease was in contravention of the covenant contained in the mortgage-deeds of 1889 and 1890, and granted the respondent the decree prayed for.

It is now contended before me in appeal that the suit is barred by limitation, as the article which applies is either art. 91 or 95 of the second schedule of Act No. XV of 1877. It is also contended that the respondent was aware of the lease on the 5th of July 1893, the date on which Mango Lal, plaintiff, in his defence filed by him in answer to a suit brought by one Musammatt Saidunnissa, expressly made mention of this lease, and time began to run from that date; and lastly, that, even if art. 120 of the above named schedule is the article which governs the case, then also time began to run from the date of the execution of the lease, the 7th of July 1890, and in this event also the suit brought was beyond time.

The learned Judge held that the article which governs the suit was art. 120 and the right to sue did not accrue to the plaintiff until he purchased the property in August 1894. In support of his judgment I have been referred to the case of Pachamuthu v. Chinnappan(1). The difficulty about applying that precedent is that in that suit there was no prayer that the deed which prejudiced the plaintiff's title might be cancelled

[93] or set aside. I was also referred to the case of Uma Shankar v. Kalka Prasad (2). This is more in point, for the relief claimed by the plaintiffs was proprietary possessions by establishment of ownership and by removal of the defendants' opposition based on the collusive mortgage. The learned Judges in that case held that the suit was not for relief on the ground of fraud, but for possession of property by right of auction purchase. Similarly in the case before me the prayer is for a declaratory decree declaring and establishing the plaintiff's title, and also declaring that the lease of the 7th of July 1890, is null and void. I think the suit before me may be considered as one in which I should follow the principle laid down in the ruling just quoted of this Court. I find that my 1899

JULY 26.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

22 A. 90 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 188.

(1) 10 M. 213.

(2) 6 A. 75.

1899
JULY 26.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 90=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 188.

brother Aikman in Din Dial v. Har Narain (1), had a similar point to decide, and held that the prayer for the cancelment of the deed, which was in the plaint before him, could be treated as merely incidental to the main relief asked. In the present case I too would treat the subsidiary prayer in the declaration prayed for as purely subsidiary. What the plaintiff wants is a declaration that the shadow cast upon his title may be dispersed. It is otherwise nothing to him whether the lease between Fazal Husain and Muhammad Baqar is or is not binding upon those who were parties to it. Accordingly, following it, I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

22 A. 93=19 A.W.N. (1899), 193.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Aikman.

HAMID ALI SHAH (Plaintiff) v. WILAYAT ALI (Defendant).^{*}
[2nd August, 1899.]

Act No. XII of 1881 (N. W. P. Rent Act), ss 36, 96 (b)—Application for ejectment as a tenant—Subsequent suit for ejectment as a trespasser—Estoppel—Civil and Revenue Courts—Jurisdiction.

Held that the fact that a plaintiff in a civil suit for ejectment of an alleged trespasser has on a previous occasion taken proceedings against the [94] defendant under s. 36 of the Rent Act, 1881, is not of necessity fatal to the suit in the Civil Court. Baldeo Singh v. Imdad Ali (2), and Deo Narain Rai v. Sheo Charan Rai (3) distinguished. Zubeda Bibi v. Sheo Charan (4) followed.

[R., 35 A. 14 (17)=10 A.L.J. 408 (411)=17 Ind. Cas. 376 (377); 10 A.L.J. 85=15 Ind. Cas. 303.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Munshi Gulzari Lal, for the appellant.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri (for whom Babu Harendro Krishna Mukerji), for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

AIKMAN, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit which was brought by the appellant to eject the defendant from certain plots of land as being a trespasser. The Court of first instance decreed the plaintiff's suit. The lower appellate Court reversed that decree and dismissed the suit upon the ground that it was not cognizable by the Civil Court. It appears that the plaintiff issued a notice to the defendant under s. 36 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, seeking to eject him from the land in suit. The defendant made an application to the Assistant Collector contesting his liability to be ejected. He contended in this application that he was not the plaintiff's tenant, but was himself the owner of the land. The Assistant Collector came to the conclusion that the present plaintiff, Hamid Ali Shah, had proved his ownership of the land, and upon that finding maintained the notice of ^{*} Second Appeal No. 278 of 1899, from a decree of Rai Pandit Indar Narain, Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, dated the 10th January 1899, reversing a decree of Babu Hari Mohan Banerji, B.A., Munsif of Farrukhabad, dated the 31st August 1898.

(1) 16 A. 73.

(3) 13 A.W.N. (1893) 166.

(2) 15 A. 189.

(4) (1899) 22 A. 83.

ejection. The defendant appealed to the Commissioner, who pointed out that the finding of the Assistant Collector in favour of the plaintiff's ownership of the land was not sufficient to give the Revenue Court jurisdiction. The Commissioner held that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between the parties, and reversed the order of the Assistant Collector, holding that the case was "essentially one for the Civil Court." The learned Subordinate Judge refers to a decision of Burkitt, J., in Baldeo Singh v. Imdad Ali (1). That decision, I may mention, was followed by me in the case of Deo Narain Rai v. Sheo Charan Rai (2). But the circumstances [95] of the cases dealt with in these two decisions were entirely different from those of the present case. The plaintiffs in both those cases had endeavoured to eject the defendant by taking action under s. 36 of the Rent Act, but the Revenue Court had, on the defendant's objection, held that the defendant was a tenant with right of occupancy. Under these circumstances, my brother Burkitt and I held that no suit was maintainable in a Civil Court to eject the defendant as a trespasser. That this view is right is quite evident from the provisions of s. 96, clause (b) of the Rent Act, although that was not referred to in our judgments. The present case is on all fours with an unreported case decided by my brother Banerji—Second Appeal No. 196 of 1899, decided on the 12th July 1899.* In that case, as in this, the Revenue Court held that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between the parties. With the following passage of the judgment, I fully concur:—"The mere fact of the plaintiff having applied to the Revenue Court for the ejection of the defendant does not estop him from asserting, as he has done in the present suit, that the defendant is unlawfully in possession, that is, as a trespasser."

In my judgment the suit was cognizable by the Civil Court. I therefore allow the appeal, and, reversing the decree of the lower appellate Court, remand the suit to that Court under the provisions of s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, with directions to readmit the appeal under its original number on the register, and proceed to dispose of the remaining grounds raised in the memorandum of appeal to it. The appellant will have the costs of this appeal. Other costs in the case will abide the event,

Appeal decreed and cause remanded.

22 A. 96 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 194.

[96] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Banerji.

BALBIR SINGH AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs) v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL (Defendant).†
[9th August, 1899.]

Construction of document—Grant of land—Presumption as to boundaries where grant is described as bounded by a river or a road—Meaning of "river."

If land adjoining a high-way or river is granted, the half of the road or the half of the river is presumed to pass, unless there is something either in the

* Since reported, Vide 22 A. 83.

† First Appeal No 96 of 1896 from an order of B. Lindsay, Esq., Subordinate Judge, Dehra Dun, dated the 14th December 1895.

(1) 15 A. 189.

(2) 13 A.W.N. (1893) 166.

1899
AUG. 2.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 93 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 193.

1899
AUG. 9.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 96 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 194.

language of the deed or in the nature of the subject-matter of the grant, or in the surrounding circumstances, sufficient to rebut that presumption ; and this, though the measurement of the property which is granted can be satisfied without including half the road or half the bed of the river, and although the land is described as bounded by a river or a road, and notwithstanding that the map which is referred to in the grant does not include the half of the river or the road. And this rule of construction cannot be departed from merely because it is shown that it would have been to the interest of the grantor to retain half the bed of the river. This rule of construction applies equally whether the subject matter be a grant from the crown or a subject. Micklethwaite v. Newlay Bridge Co. (1), Ecroyd v. Coulthard (2), and Lord v. The Commissioner for the City of Sydney (3), followed.

[R., 35 M. 28 (32) = 8 Ind. Cas. 175 = 20 M.L.J. 879 = 9 M.L.T. 44.]

THIS was a suit for the demarcation of the western boundary of the plaintiffs' estate. The plaintiffs were owners of two villages known as upper and lower Ghamandpur. These villages originally formed part of a Government grant of land made to the widow of Captain William Raynor, V.C., and one of the boundaries of that grant, the boundary in question in the present suit, was the bed of a hill stream called the Jakhan Rao. The plaintiffs claimed that the original grantee was in possession of the Jakhan Rao up to the line of mid-stream, the western boundary of the grant being described as the Jakhan Rao. They claimed that possession of the villages purchased by them had been always held according to the boundary alleged. The plaintiffs did indeed admit that in 1883 the Forest Department set up boundary pillars on the east bank of the Jakhan Rao and that on a dispute arising as to the boundary, the question had been decided against [97] them by the Collector, but they claimed to have always remained in possession notwithstanding that decision and that the Collector's order could not affect their rights. The defendant pleaded that ever since the erection of the boundary pillars on the left bank, the Forest Department had been in possession, and that the suit was barred by limitation. It was denied that any portion of the Jakhan Rao was included in the original grant and it was further alleged that the plaintiffs' predecessor had compromised her claim to the Rao by accepting an additional grant of 400 acres.

The Court of first instance (Subordinate Judge of Dehra Dun) dismissed the plaintiffs' suit, holding that the presumption as to the boundary being the middle line of the bed of the Jakhan Rao, applied only in cases where Government makes no claim to the soil of a river bed—not in cases like the present where the Government claims the whole of the river bed as of right and as being the proprietor of all the land in Dehra Dun. The Court also found that the area of the original grant would be made up without including half the bed of the Jakhan Rao, and that therefore the boundary set up by the defendant was correct.

The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Pandit Sundar Lal, for the appellants.

Mr. E. Chamier and Mr. A. E. Ryves, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX and BANERJI, JJ.—The plaintiffs-appellants are the owners of certain villages in the district of Dehra Dun, which originally formed part of a grant made by Government to the widow of Captain Raynor in 1865.

(1) (1886) L.R. 33 Ch.D. 133.
(3) (1859) 12 Moo. P.C. 473.

(2) L.R. (1897) 2 Ch. D. 554.

To the west of those villages lies a hill stream called the Jakhan Rao, and to the west of the stream is a forest belonging to Government.

It is alleged on behalf of the plaintiffs that the western boundary of their villages extends to the mid-stream of the Jakhan Rao, and that they are thus the owners of one-half of the bed of the stream. On behalf of the defendant it is asserted that the western limit of the plaintiffs' villages is the eastern bank of the Jakhan Rao, and that the whole of the bed of that stream belongs [98] to the Government. An order to that effect was passed by Mr. Church, Superintendent of Dehra Dun, on the 26th February 1883.

The present suit has been brought by the plaintiffs to have the western limit of their grant determined, and for a declaration that their property extends to the mid-stream of the Jakhan Rao.

The defendant denied the title set up by the plaintiffs and pleaded limitation.

The Court below has dismissed the claim.

The sanad of grant in favour of Mrs. Raynor is printed on page 5 of the appellants' book, and is dated the 3rd of August 1865. By it the Government of the North-Western Provinces, "in consideration of the good services performed by the late Captain William Raynor, V. C., of the Veteran Battalion, one of the gallant defenders of the Delhi Magazine in 1857," granted to "his widow and to his heirs, representatives and assigns, the proprietary right rent-free in perpetuity in the tract of land measuring 2,000 acres." The boundaries of the land are specified, the western boundary being "Jakhan Rao."

It is contended on behalf of the plaintiffs that the legal effect of this conveyance was to pass to Mrs. Raynor the bed of the Jakhan Rao usque ad medium filum.

The rule of law on the subject was laid down by Cotton, L. J., in the well-known case of Micklethwaite v. Newlay Bridge Co. (1), in the following terms:—"In my opinion the rule of construction is now well settled, that where there is a conveyance of land, even although it is described by reference to a plan, by colour, and by quantity, if it is said to be bounded on one side either by a river or by a public thoroughfare, then on the true construction of the instrument half the bed of the river or half of the road passes, unless there is enough in the circumstances, or enough in the expression of the instrument to show that that is not the intention of the party. It is a presumption that not [99] only the land described by metes and bounds, but also half the soil of the road or of the bed of the river by which it is bounded, is intended to pass, but that presumption may be rebutted." This rule has been followed in subsequent cases, of which we may only mention the recent case of Ecroyd v. Coulthard (2). The Court below refused to apply it to the present case on the ground that it is not applicable to a case in which the Crown lays claim to the soil of the bed of a river. We are unable to agree with this view which the learned counsel for the respondent has conceded to be erroneous. In Lord v. The Commissioner for the City of Sydney (3), it was held that the grant by the Crown of land bounded by a creek passed the soil of the creek ad medium filum aquæ, and that this rule "equally applies, whether the subject-matter be a grant from the 1899

AUG. 9.

—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

—
22 A. 96 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 194.

(1) (1886) L. R. 33 Ch. D. 133 (145).

(2) L.R. (1897) 2 Ch. D. 554.

(3) (1859) 12 Moo.P.C. 473.

1899 Crown or a subject." And the rulings to which the learned Judge has referred do not lay down a different view.

AUG. 9.

APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

22 A. 96=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 194.

It was, however, contended on behalf of the respondent that the Jakhan Rao was not a river, and that the rule of midstream did not apply to it. With reference to this contention which, we may observe, was not raised in the Court below, we referred certain issues to that Court. Upon the findings on those issues the Jakhan Rao must be held to be a river. It has a perennial source, a bed and well-defined banks on either side: water flows in it for a part of the year, and it discharges itself in a continuous flow into another river, the Suswa. It has thus all the elements which constitute a river to which riparian rights attach. The water, it is true, dries up, and the bed remains dry for several months in the year, but it is not necessary that "water should flow in it continually." (See Tagore Law Lectures on the Law of Riparian Rights, p. 81, and the authorities cited therein). We therefore hold that the Jakhan Rao is a river. It is so described in the wajib-ul-arzes of the villages through which it passes. It was treated as such in the reports of the revenue officers, and the parties and the Court below proceeded on [100] the assumption that it is a river. It is too late therefore now to contend that the presumption of law which arises in the case of rivers does not apply to the Jakhan Rao.

The presumption that by a conveyance of land abutting on a river the bed of the river ad medium filum passes to the grantee may no doubt be rebutted, but do any circumstances exist in this case which rebut the presumption? The circumstances relied upon are, that the quantity of land granted is specified in the grant; that when the land was measured and entered in the khasra the bed was not included in the measurement; that in some of the maps the bed was not shown as a part of the grant; that as the bed yields lime-stones, which are a valuable source of income, it would have been to the interest of the Government to retain the bed and it is not likely that it was intended to be conveyed by the grant. All these arguments are fully met by the observations made by Lopes, L.J. and Cotton L.J., in Micklethwaite v. Newlay Bridge Co., Lord Justice Lopes said:—"If land adjoining a high-way or river is granted, the half of the road or the half of the river is presumed to pass, unless there is something either in the language of the deed or in the nature of the subject-matter of the grant, or in the surrounding circumstances, sufficient to rebut that presumption, and this, though the measurement of the property which is granted can be satisfied without including half of the road or half of the bed of the river; and although the land is described as bounded by a river or a road, and notwithstanding that the map which is referred to in the grant does not include the half of the river or the road." And Cotton, L. J., observed:—"When the rule is once established as a rule of construction, we are not at liberty to depart from it merely because it is shown that it would have been to the interest of the vendor to retain the half of the bed of the river." As in that case, so in this, there is nothing in the language of the sanad, or in the nature of the property, or in the surrounding circumstances to exclude the presumption of a grant of a half of the bed of the Jakhan Rao to Mrs. Raynor. [101] On the contrary, it appears from a memorandum, dated the 14th April 1874, on the recently settled boundaries in the Dun Forests, forwarded by the Conservator of Forests to Captain Bailey, Superintendent, Forest Surveys, that it was declared by the Forest authorities that "the centre of the Jakhan Rao constitutes the boundary between the Government forests and the several grants." (cf. appellants' book, p. 17). It was urged by the learned counsel for the respondent that had it been intended to make a grant to Mrs. Raynor of any portion of the bed of the Jakhan Rao, the Forest Officers would not have raised objections, so far back as 1877, and asserted that the western boundary of the grant was the eastern bank of the Rao. This argument has no doubt much force, and it derives support from the correspondence printed on page 17 of the appellants' book. It must, however, be remembered that the grant had been made twelve years before, i.e., in 1865. In 1871, Mrs. Raynor asserted that her boundary extended into the bed of the Jakhan, and that she had been taking lime-stones from it for five years preceding the date of her letter. It has been proved by the oral evidence adduced in the case, and specially by that of Mr. Raynor, that pillars were erected shortly after the grant along the middle of the bed of the river, and that lime-stones were appropriated by Mrs. Raynor and her son. The statement of Mr. Reynolds that permission was obtained from Forest Officers by Mrs. Raynor for burning lime is contradicted by that evidence. The inability of Mr. Reynolds to produce any application for permission very much weakens his statements (see correspondence p. 11, respondent's book). Mr. Reynolds has admitted in his deposition that he was not aware of any facts which would prove actual possession of the Rao. The same may be said of the evidence of the other witnesses for the defendant. It has been fully established that in spite of the objections of the officers of the Forest Department, Mrs. Raynor and her successors in title remained in possession of the bed of the Rao, and prevented Government contractors from taking lime-stones from it. The possession of Mrs. Raynor is [102] admitted, even in Mr. Church's order of the 26th of February 1883 (pp. 18 and 19, appellants' book). We are unable to agree with Mr. Ryves' contention that this order operates as res judicata. We are not satisfied on the evidence that the plaintiffs or their predecessors have been out of possession, that the defendant has been in adverse possession, and that the claim is beyond time.

A faint attempt was made to show that Mrs. Raynor relinquished all claim to the bed of the Jakhan Rao on obtaining 400 acres of land. But there is no satisfactory evidence to connect the grant of the 400 acres with the claim to the land now in question. Mr. Raynor has stated that it had reference to another claim which his mother had against Government.

We hold that the western boundary of the plaintiff's property is the centre of the bed of the Jakhan Rao, and that the plaintiffs are entitled to a declaration to that effect.

We allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below, and decree the claim with costs in both Courts.

Appeal decreed.

1899

AUG. 9.

—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.

22 A. 96 =

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 194.

22 A. 102 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 198.

1899
AUG. 9.APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Aikman.*QURBAN HUSAIN (Plaintiff) v. CHOTE AND OTHERS (Defendants).^{*}
[9th August, 1899.]22 A. 102 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 198.Muhammadan Law—Pre-emption—Shias and Sunnis—Pre-emption claimed on ground of vicinage—Vendors and vendee Sunnis, pre-emptor a Shia.Held that a Muhammadan of the Shia sect could not maintain a claim for pre-emption based on the ground of vicinage under the Muhammadan law when both the vendors and the vendee were Sunnis. Gobind Dayal v. Inayat-ullah (1), and Pir Bakhsh v. Sughra Bibi (2) referred to.

[R., 30 A. 372 (374) = 5 A.L.J. 414 = A.W.N. (1908) 153; 32 C. 982 (986) = 9 C.W.N. 826.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of Aikman, J.

Maulvi Karamat Husain, for the appellant.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

[103] AIKMAN, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought to enforce a right of pre-emption based on Muhammadan law and custom.

The plaintiff's suit was dismissed by the Court of first instance, which held that the plaintiff had no right to pre-empt the property sold. This decision was, on appeal, affirmed by the Subordinate Judge.

The plaintiff comes here in second appeal and the sole question for decision is whether, under the circumstances of the case, the plaintiff-appellant has a right of pre-emption in respect of the property sold.

The plaintiff and the vendors are neighbours residing in the town of Koil in which the house property sold, and claimed in this suit, is situated. The plaintiff claims to be allowed to pre-empt the property sold on the ground of vicinage. The plaintiff is a Shia governed by the Imamiya Law, whereas the vendors are Sunnis governed by the Hanifeea law. The vendee is also a Sunni. Now by the Imamiya law, a neighbour, as such, has no right of pre-emption. It is admitted by the learned counsel who appears in support of the appeal that the plaintiff in this case might sell his house to anyone he likes, and that his Sunni neighbours could not successfully assert any right of pre-emption against him. But it is argued that, as according to the doctrines of the Sunni school, neighbours have a right of pre-emption, the plaintiff being a neighbour is entitled to take advantage of this right, even though he is not a Sunni. It is admitted by the learned counsel on both sides that in disposing of this case the Court ought to be guided by the rule of justice, equity and good conscience. But whilst one side argues that it would be in accordance with that rule to let the plaintiff have the benefit of the law governing the defendant-vendor, the other side contends that it would not be consonant with that rule to do so.

* Second appeal No. 193 of 1897, from a decree of Rai Anant Ram, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 17th December 1896, confirming a decree of M. Muhammad Shafi, M.A., Munsif of Aligarh, dated the 30th March 1896.

(1) 7 A. 775.

(2) 12 A. W. N. (1892) 34.

Very learned and able arguments were put forward by the counsel on either side in support of their respective positions. I do not propose to follow them in these arguments. For, admitting the appellant's contention that the case should be governed by [104] the law of the school to which the vendor belongs, the learned counsel for the appellant has failed to satisfy me that, according to the doctrines of that school, a neighbour against whom a Sunni has no right of pre-emption has nevertheless a right of pre-emption against the Sunni. In my judgment the principle of reciprocity lies at the root of the law of pre-emption.

It is true that according to the Hanifeea law it is not necessary that the pre-emptor should be of the same religion as the vendor. On p. 477 of Baillie's Digest, 2nd edition, that learned author says:—"Islam on the part of the pre-emptor is not a condition." He goes on to say, "so that zimmes (i.e., infidels subject to and under the protection of a Muhammadan Government) are entitled to exercise the right of pre-emption as between themselves or against Mooslims." Those words as between themselves are to my mind an indication that though a person need not be of the same religion as the vendor to entitle him to take advantage of the Hanifeea law of pre-emption, he must yet belong to a class of persons against whom a right of pre-emption can be enforced.

At p. 793 of his exhaustive judgment in the Full Bench case Gobind Dayal v. Inayat Ullah (1) Mahmood, J., observes:—"The rights and obligations created by that law (i.e., the Muhammadan law of pre-emption) as indeed by every other system with which I am acquainted, must necessarily be reciprocal." It has not, I repeat, been shown to my satisfaction that it was ever the intention of the Hanifeea law to confer a right of pre-emption on a neighbour regardless of the fact that no reciprocal right could be enforced against him.

The case relied on by the lower Courts, namely, Pir Bakhsh v. Sughra Bibi (2), differs from the present case, for there the plaintiff and the vendor were both Shias, whilst the vendee was a Sunni. But the following observation of the learned Judge who decided that case appears to me to be in point:—"I do not think that any rule of justice, equity and good conscience exists that [105] would enable us to allow the plaintiff, who from the fact of her being a Shia necessarily abhors the doctrines of the Sunni school, to take advantage of the law of that school in regard to pre-emption, and to maintain the pre-emption suit, any more than if the plaintiff stood in the position of the defendant-vendee she could be made liable to the doctrine of the Sunni school if the present vendee stood in the position of the plaintiff pre-emptor." For the above reasons I am of opinion that this appeal cannot succeed, and I would dismiss it with costs.

KNOX, J.—I also am of opinion that this appeal must be dismissed. The plaintiff, now appellant, is a Muhammadan gentleman of the Shia faith. He says in his plaint that he has a right of pre-emption under the Muhammadan law and custom in respect of the house sold, the subject matter of the suit.

The appellant has not proved the custom alleged, and the sole question is whether he has any right of pre-emption under the Muhammadan law.

Now if by the Muhammadan law the plaintiff means the Imamiya doctrines, he has no standing, and he sees this, and therefore urges that

1899

AUG. 9.

—
APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

22 A. 102=

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 198.

(1) 7 A. 775.

(2) 12 A. W.N. (1892) 34.

1899

AUG. 9.

APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

the decision should be in accord with the doctrines of Abu Hanifa, and if not with these, still under the general rule of justice, equity and good conscience, which he considers would award him his claim.

His learned counsel addressed us very able arguments on this view of the question, but I think the question must be decided upon the general principles of Muhammadan law.

The appellant is claiming what has been properly described as a weak right. He is trying to place a restriction upon liberty of transfer of property. It is for him to show that he is vested with some right or power to make such restrictions. The Shia law gives him—a Shia—no such right under the present circumstances, and it is for him to show us that he can take advantage of the Sunni law, which he would be the first to repudiate did it place any similar restriction upon himself. As he has shown no law or precedent to the above effect, I would hold that he has not proved [106] the existence of any such right of pre-emption in himself, and would dismiss the appeal with costs.

ORDER.—Appeal dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

22 A. 106 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 211.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ADAM KHAN AND ANOTHER.*
[7th November, 1899.]

Procedure—Complaint—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 203—Dismissal of complaint—Subsequent complaint arising out of the same matter.

When a competent tribunal has dismissed a complaint another tribunal of exactly the same powers cannot re-open the same matter on a complaint made to it. Nilratan Sen v. Jogesh Chundra Bhattacharjee (1) and Komal Chandra Pal v. Gourchand Audhikari (2) followed. Queen-Empress v. Puran (3) and Queen-Empress v. Umedan (4) referred to.

[Diss., 2 L.B.R. 27; F., 28 M. 255 (256) = 2 Cr. L.J. 752 = 2 Weir 247 A; R., 28 C. 652 (669) (F.B.); 8 Cr. L.J. 249 = 26 P.W.R. 1908 Cr; 1 N.L.R. 18 (20); D. 29 A. 7 (10) = 3 A.L.J. 562 = A.W.N. (1906) 245; 24 M. 337 (339) = 2 Weir 251; 29 M. 126 (135) = 3 Cr. L.J. 274 = 16 M.L.J. 79 = 1 M.L.T. 31; 5 A.L.J. 137 = A.W.N. (1908) 67 = 7 Cr. L.J. 297.]

THIS was a reference, under s. 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, made by the Superintendent of Dehra Dun through the Sessions Judge of Saharanpur. One Hira Lal brought a complaint against Adam Khan and Pandey Khan under s. 406 of the Indian Penal Code in the Court of an Honorary Magistrate. The Magistrate took the complainant's statement and dismissed the complaint under s. 203 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The complainant then made a similar complaint arising out of the same circumstances against the same men in the Court of a Deputy Magistrate. The Deputy Magistrate entertained the complaint and issued warrants for the arrest of the accused, who were put in the lock-up.

The case being brought to the notice of the Magistrate of the District, he made the present reference to the High Court with a view to having the order of the Deputy Magistrate set aside.

* Criminal Reference No. 463 of 1899.

(1) 23 C. 983. (2) 24 C. 286. (3) 9 A. 85. (4) 15 A.W.N. (1895) 86.

Mr. C. Dillon, in support of the reference.

Pandit Moti Lal (for whom Babu Durga Charan Banerji), for the complainant, Hira Lal.

JUDGMENT.

[107] BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—This case has been referred to a Divisional Bench upon the ground of the extreme probability that similar cases occur and are likely to occur with great frequency, and it is therefore important that there should be a clear decision of this Court upon the point at issue. The case comes before us upon a reference from the District Magistrate of Mussoorie, forwarded through the Sessions Judge of Saharanpur. It contains a recommendation that the proceedings in the Court below should be set aside as illegal.

The facts are that one Hira Lal lodged a complaint before a Bench of Honorary Magistrates at Mussoorie against Adam Khan and others, charging them with criminal breach of trust under s. 406 of the Indian Penal Code. The Bench after examining the complainant dismissed the complaint upon the ground that the matter complained of was one which ought to be tried in a Civil and not in a Criminal Court. At a later period the same Hira Lal preferred precisely the same complaint in the Court of another Magistrate, who thereupon took cognizance of it and issued warrants for the arrest of the accused. The warrants were executed. The accused were taken into custody, and remained there for a month before they were liberated by an order of a superior Court. It is upon the petition of the person so imprisoned that this reference, with the recommendation of the District Magistrate, has been forwarded to us. Mr. Dillon, who appears to support the recommendation, has cited to us two recent rulings of the High Court at Calcutta: one Nilratan Sen v. Jogesh Chundra Bhattacharjee (1) and the other Komal Chandra Pal v. Gour Chand Audhikari (2) which simply follows the ruling in the previous case. We have also been referred by Mr. Dillon to a recent unreported decision of this Court in Karim Bakhsh v. Adil Khan, decided by Mr. Justice Aikman on the 17th of June of the present year. The facts in the Calcutta cases are on all fours with those in the case which we have to decide. The rule laid down in those cases appears to us to be founded upon thoroughly satisfactory [108] reasons. The facts in the case decided by our brother Aikman in no way resemble those in the Calcutta cases, and our brother Aikman's decision is not inconsistent with the rule laid down in them. On the other hand, we have had cited to us the case of Queen-Empress v. Puran (3) and the case of Queen Empress v. Umedan (4), in which it has been held that a Magistrate who has dismissed a complaint is not thereby precluded from himself entertaining again what is in substance the same complaint. That is the only authority upon which Mr. Durga Charan relies. It does not, in our opinion, conflict with the rulings either of the Calcutta Court or of our brother Aikman. We think it utterly contrary to sound principles that one Magistrate of co-ordinate jurisdiction should, in effect and substance deal with, as if it were an appeal or a matter for revision, a complaint which had already been dismissed by a competent tribunal of co-ordinate authority. For these reasons, we accept the recommendation of the District Magistrate and set aside the proceedings pending in the Court below. We desire it to be distinctly understood that we decide

1899

Nov. 7.

REVI-
SIONAL

CRIMINAL.

22 A. 106 =

19 A.W.N.

(1899) 211.

(1) 23 C. 983.

(2) 24 C. 286.

(3) 9 A. 85.

(4) 15 A. W. N. (1898) 86.

1899
Nov. 7.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.

nothing except the question actually raised by the facts in this case, which is, that when a competent tribunal has dismissed a complaint, another tribunal of exactly the same powers cannot re-open the same matter on a complaint made to it.

22 A. 108 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 205.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Sir Arthur Strachey, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Banerji.

DAULAT SINGH AND ANOTHER (Defendants) v. JUGAL KISHORE (Plaintiff).^{*} [10th November, 1899.]

Execution of decree—Civil Procedure Code, s. 244—Question “arising between the parties to the suit”—Sale of property by the Collector as ancestral property—Suit to set aside sale on the ground that property was not ancestral.

Certain property of a judgment-debtor having been sold by the Collector acting under s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure as being ancestral [109] property, the judgment-debtor sued the decree-holder and the auction purchaser to have the sale set aside upon the two main grounds that the property was not ancestral, and therefore could not legally be sold by the Collector, and that the real purchaser at the auction sale was the decree holder himself who had not obtained the leave of the Court to bid. Held that the questions thus raised were questions arising between the parties to the suit within the meaning of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure and that the suit would not lie. Basti Ram v. Fattu (1) and Prosunno Kumar Sanyal v. Kali Das Sanyal (2), referred to.

[R., 24 A. 239 (240) = 22 A.W.N. (1902) 49; 26 A. 447 = 1 A.L.J. 65 = A.W.N. (1904) 61; 34 M. 417 (420) = 3 Ind. Cas. 429; 8 Ind. Cas. 429 = 21 M.L.J. 928 (932) = 9 M.L.T. 152 (154) = 1910 M.W.N. 662.]

THE facts of this case are sufficiently stated in the judgment of the Chief Justice.

Maulvi Ghulam Mujtaba, for the appellants.

The respondents were not represented.

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C. J.—The plaintiff in this case claims to recover certain immoveable property, which was sold by the Collector in execution of a decree transferred to the Collector for execution under the rules made under s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure, from the second defendant, who was the purchaser at that sale. The plaintiff was the judgment-debtor: the first defendant is the decree-holder: and the object of the suit is to recover possession of the property, notwithstanding the execution sale, on the ground that the sale by the Collector was vitiated by certain defects. After a remand made by the lower appellate Court to the Court of first instance, both Courts have decreed the claim. The question raised by this appeal on behalf of the defendants is whether the suit will lie.

Now the first ground on which the suit is based is that the property in question was not ancestral property, and that consequently the decree ought not to have been transferred for execution to the Collector. Before making its order of transfer the Civil Court, in accordance with the rules

^{*}Second Appeal No. 937 of 1896, from a decree of Pandit Rajuath Sahib, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 3rd August 1896, confirming decree of Babu Shiva Charan Lal, B.A., Munsif of Nagina, dated the 27th May 1896.

(1) 8 A. 146.

(2) 19 C. 683.

made by this Court, issued notice to the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor for the determination of the question whether the property was ancestral or not. The judgment-debtor, the present plaintiff, did not contest that application, and the order for transfer was thereupon made. It is clear, therefore, that the question whether the [110] property was ancestral or not was a question arising between the parties to the suit—the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor. That being so, the present suit, so far as this first point is concerned, is barred by s. 244 (c) of the Code of Civil Procedure, having regard particularly to the interpretation placed on that clause by the Full Bench of this Court in Basti Ram v. Fattu (1). It was there pointed out that the section prohibits not only a separate suit between the parties to the decree or their representatives, but also a suit by a party or his representatives against a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree, the object of which is to determine a question which properly arose between the parties or their representatives, and which relates to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree. As I have already stated, the question whether this property was ancestral did arise between the parties to the suit. It clearly related to the execution of the decree, because on it depended the Court which should have jurisdiction to execute the decree and the procedure by which the decree should be executed. The Full Bench decision to which I have referred is supported by the case of Prosunno Kumar Sanyal v. Kali Das Sanyal (2), decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council. For these reasons it appears to me that, so far as the suit is based upon an allegation that the property was being wrongly treated as ancestral for the purposes of execution, it is barred by s. 244 of the Code.

The second ground upon which the suit is based is that the auction-purchaser in this case in execution of the decree, although nominally the second defendant, who is the son of the decree-holder, was really the first defendant, the decree-holder himself, and that as the purchase by the decree-holder was without the permission of the Court, it was in violation of s. 294 of the Code. As to that it is sufficient to say that this question too falls within s. 244 of the Code, because, on the plaintiff's own showing, it is a question arising between the parties to the suit and relating [111] to the execution of the decree. So far as regards the second point, therefore, the suit is also barred by s. 244.

The third point raised by the suit is that the sale was effected by the Collector in disregard of an order directing the postponement of the sale passed by the Munsif who had transferred the execution of the decree to the Collector. As to that it is sufficient to say that no such order of postponement could be legally made by the Munsif. The execution having been transferred to the Collector, the Munsif, so long as it remained with the Collector, had no power to interfere with the proceedings, as by postponing the date of sale: only the Collector himself could do that.

These are the only grounds on which the suit has been brought. It follows from what I have said that the suit ought to have been dismissed. This appeal is allowed, the decrees of the Courts below set aside, and the suit dismissed with costs in all Courts.

BANERJI, J.—I am of the same opinion.

Appeal decreed.

1899
Nov. 10.
—
APPEL-LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 108=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 205.

(1) 8 A. 146.

(2) 19 C. 683.

1899
AUG. 18.
—
REVI-
SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
22 A. 111=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 202.

22 A. 111=19 A.W.N. (1899) 202.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair.

W. J. ELLIS (Applicant) v. THE MUNICIPAL BOARD OF MUSSOORIE, (Opposite Parties)* [18th August, 1899.]

Act No. XV of 1883 (N.W.P. and Oudh Municipalities Act), s. 46—Issue of distress warrant for recovery of alleged arrears of Municipal tax—Jurisdiction of Magistrate.

Held, that where a Magistrate, acting under s. 46 of Act No. XV of 1883, issues a warrant for the realization of arrears of Municipal taxes alleged to be due, the Magistrate is acting in a ministerial capacity only and has no jurisdiction to inquire as to whether such arrears are really due or not.

[R, 11 Cr.L.J. 87 (89)=4 Ind Cas. 951 (953)=2 P.R. 1910 (Cr.)=100 P.L.R. 1909=23 P.W.R. 1909 (Cr.); D, 130 P.L.R. 1903.]

THIS was an application for revision arising out of the following circumstances. The Secretary of the Municipal Board of Mussoorie wrote to the Magistrate of Mussoorie, on the 2nd May 1899, stating that a sum of Rs. 135-9-9 was due from one W. J. Ellis, Esq., of Kenneth Lodge, Mussoorie, on account of Municipal taxes from 1894 to 1898, and requesting the Magistrate to realize such amount under s. 46 of Act No. XV of 1883. [112] Orders were thereupon issued by a Magistrate of the first class to the police for the realization of the sum in question, no intimation of the application of the Board having apparently been given to the alleged defaulter. Mr. Ellis declined to pay the sum demanded and applied to the High Court for revision of the Magistrate's order for realization of the said sum. The main grounds of the application were that no arrears of any tax imposed under Act XV of 1883 were due by the applicant to the Municipal Board and, that no opportunity was given to the applicant to show cause why distress should not be levied on his property. Applicant's counsel relied on Municipality of Ahmedabad v. Jumna Punja (1).

Mr. W. Wallach, for the applicant.

The Government Pleader (for whom Munshi Gulzari Lal), for the Municipal Board.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR, J.—In this case a Municipality has levied a tax; it has charged the present applicant with certain arrears alleged to be due. It has applied to a Magistrate for recovery of those arrears by distress and sale of the moveable property of the applicant. Under protest payment was made. The applicant here challenges the right of the Magistrate to make such an order, and contends that the Magistrate ought to have judicially heard and determined the question whether any such arrears were due at all. The action which was taken by the Municipality and the Magistrate was apparently taken under s. 46 of Act No. XV of 1883. That section is couched in the following words:—"Arrears of tax imposed under this Act may be recovered, on application to a Magistrate having jurisdiction within the limits of the Municipality, by the distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to the defaulter within those limits." There are no provisions indicating that the Magistrate is applied to in a judicial capacity, and no provision for a judicial dealing with the case by him. I do not find my mind influenced by a decision cited from I.L.R., 17 Bom., 731, because that decision was upon a section of an Act containing words which did import a judicial determination. Nor do I find myself able to draw any inference from the statutory provisions [113] for the enforcement of the recovery of income-tax or land revenue. It seems to me that, had the Legislature intended to impose upon the Magistrate the duty of judicial inquiry and finding, it would have used appropriate words. In the absence of such words, I find it impossible to believe that the Legislature intended to confer upon the youngest and most inexperienced officer a function of trying such a question, for instance, as the legality of the imposition of a tax.

* Criminal Revision No. 438 of 1899.

(1) 17 B. 731.

In my opinion, the duty imposed on the Magistrate is purely ministerial, and provides the means whereby the recovery of the taxes could be enforced by a legal authority. This petition is therefore dismissed.

1899
AUG. 18.
—
REVI-SIONAL
CRIMINAL.
—
22 A. 111 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 202.

22 A. 113 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 215.

REVISIONAL CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Aikman.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. NANNI AND OTHERS.*

[6th November, 1899.]

Act No. XLV of 1860 (Indian Penal Code), ss. 268, 290—Public nuisance—Soliciting for purposes of prostitution.

Held that the soliciting for purposes of prostitution of passers-by on a public road is not a public nuisance as that term is defined in s. 268 of the Indian Penal Code.

THIS was a reference made under s. 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure by the Sessions Judge of Shahjahanpur. Three persons, prostitutes, being on a public road in Shahjahanpur about midnight, accosted a person who was going along the road and solicited him to go with them. The person thus accosted, being a Reserve Inspector of Police, caused the three women to be taken into custody, and they were tried for and convicted of the offence punishable under s. 290 of the Indian Penal Code, viz., a public nuisance. The accused applied for revision of their convictions and sentences to the Sessions Judge, who, being doubtful whether the acts complained of could properly be regarded as constituting a public nuisance, as that term is defined in s. 268 of the Indian Penal Code, referred the case to the High Court. On this reference the following orders were passed.

ORDER.

KNOX, J.—This is a reference by the Sessions Judge of Shahjahanpur. The District Magistrate at Shahjahanpur has convicted three persons, prostitutes, of an offence which he [114] considered they have committed under s. 290 of the Indian Penal Code. The evidence against them shows that all three came out on to a public road, and, thinking that a Reserve Inspector of Police, who was passing by, was a soldier, called out to him and solicited him to go back with them. The District Judge before whom the case was taken in an application in criminal revision was doubtful whether an annoyance caused

* Criminal Reference No. 345 of 1899.

1899
 NOV. 6.
 —
 REVI-SIONAL
 CRIMINAL.
 —
 822 A. 113=
 19 A.W.N.
 (1899) 215.

in a public place to a single person could be brought under the definition of a public nuisance, on the ground that it might have been any member of the public to whom the annoyance was caused. He has accordingly submitted the case to this Court under s. 438 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Section 290 renders punishable what are known as public nuisances in the Indian Penal Code. The definition of public nuisance is to be found in s. 268. A person is guilty of a public nuisance when (omitting that part of the section which does not refer to the present case) he does an act which must necessarily cause annoyance to persons who may have occasion to use any public right. Acts of a similar kind, and more particularly the act of loitering or importuning for the purpose of prostitution, can be provided against in Cantonments by the Cantonments Act of 1889. Further, a Municipal Board may, under Act No. XV of 1883, make rules for prohibiting, preventing, and punishing such acts within the Municipality as may, in the opinion of the Board, cause, or tend to cause, annoyance to persons who have occasion to use a public right. The language used in Act No. XV of 1883 at once shows the difference between the powers given to a Municipal Board and the powers given to Magistrates under s. 290 of the Indian Penal Code. In the latter case the act done is only punishable when it is an act which must necessarily cause annoyance to persons who have occasion to use any public right. We are not at the present moment considering acts or omissions which are the cause of common injury, danger, or annoyance to the public, or to the people in general, who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity. The difficulty in the present case lies in the words "must necessarily" which occur in s. 268. The Magistrate was satisfied that in the present case annoyance was caused, at least so we learn from the remarks which he [115] has sent up to this Court along with the reference, and there can be no doubt that annoyance is frequently caused by acts of this kind. We are not satisfied that the act of the women in this case was one which must necessarily have caused annoyance. If the act, of which these women were found guilty, was an act entirely without a remedy, it might be necessary to call attention to the absence of all remedy. All that need be done in the present case is to say that the Sessions Judge is so far right when he says that the act does not fall within s. 290 of the Indian Penal Code. The conviction will have to be set aside, and the fines, if paid, be refunded to the person or persons who paid them.

AIKMAN, J.—I am of the same opinion. In my judgment persons who are exercising the right of passing along a public road ought to be protected from being importuned for the purpose of prostitution. Within the limits of Cantonments such protection may be afforded by rules framed under s. 26, clause 23, of the Cantonments Act of 1889; similarly within the limits of Municipalities, protection may be afforded by rules framed by Municipal Boards under the provisions of s. 55, clause 1, of Act No. XV of 1883. But the sole question we have to deal with now is, whether the conduct of petitioners amounted to a public nuisance as defined in s. 268 of the Indian Penal Code. I entirely concur with my learned brother in holding that it did not. The conviction and sentence must therefore be set aside.

22 A. 115 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 207.

APPELLATE CRIMINAL.

*Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Aikman.*1899
Nov. 14.APPEL-
LATE
CRIMINAL.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. KHEM.* [14th November, 1899.]

Act No. XLV of 1860 (Indian Penal Code), s. 193 - Criminal Procedure Code, s. 164 —Statement made in the clause of a "judicial proceeding" - Statement made before a Magistrate under s. 164.

22 A. 115 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 207.

Held, that where a witness had made one statement on oath or solemn affirmation before a third class Magistrate under s. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and again another and totally inconsistent statement at the trial of the case before a Magistrate of the first class he might properly [116] be convicted under the second—if not under the first—paragraph of s. 193 of the Indian Penal Code. Queen-Empress v. Bharna (1), considered and distinguished.

[F., A.W.N. (1908) 73 = 7 Cr.L.J. 302; R. 14 Bom.L.R. 753 = 13 Cr.L.J. 709 (710) = 16 Ind.Cas. 517; 13 Cr. L.J. 33 (35) = 13 Ind. Cas. 273 = 5 S.L.R. 174.]

THIS was an appeal by the Local Government from the acquittal of one Khem by the Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad on a charge under s. 193 of the Indian Penal Code. The facts were, briefly, that Khem had been put before a Magistrate of the third class as a witness in a case of theft and had made a statement before the Magistrate under s. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure on solemn affirmation. Subsequently Khem, as a witness before the first class Magistrate who tried the case, made a diametrically opposite statement, also on solemn affirmation. Khem was tried on a charge framed in the alternative in respect of these two statements, and was convicted under s. 193 of the Code of Criminal Procedure by a Magistrate of the first class. Khem appealed to the Court of Session, and that Court acquitted him on the ground that the statement made by Khem under s. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure before the third class Magistrate was not made in the course of a judicial proceeding, and with reference to the case of Queen-Empress v. Bharna (1). From this acquittal an appeal was preferred by the Local Government.

The Government Advocate (for whom Mr. W. K. Porter), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX and AIKMAN, JJ.—In this case, as in the cases which have preceded, the accused had been convicted on an alternative charge of giving false evidence in that he made two contradictory statements. The first statement was made before a Magistrate of the third class while a police investigation in a case of theft was pending. The second was made before a Magistrate of the first class who tried the case. Khem in his defence stated that the statement which he had made in the Court of the Magistrate who tried the theft case was a true statement, and that the statement which he had made to the effect that three other persons had been present at the theft, namely, the statement which he made before the Magistrate of the third class, was made through fear and at the instigation of the police. The learned Sessions [117] Judge on Khem's appeal considered himself bound to follow the ruling Queen-Empress v. Bharna (1) and to hold that a statement taken

* Criminal Appeal No. 848 of 1898.

(1) 11 B. 702.

1899
 NOV. 14.
 —
 APPEL-
 LATE CRIMINAL.
 —
 22 A. 115=
 19 A.W.N.
 (1899) 207.

down in the course of a police investigation by a third class Magistrate is not evidence in a stage of a judicial proceeding within the meaning of ss. 191 and 193 of the Indian Penal Code. Even if this were a right view of the law, the false statement made under such circumstances would fall within the second paragraph of s. 193 of the Indian Penal Code. Moreover, the ruling which the learned Sessions Judge has followed is not one which applies to the present case. The statement with which the Bombay Court was dealing was a statement taken by a third class Magistrate in an investigation into a charge of murder, and it was on the ground that such Magistrate had not authority to carry on the preliminary inquiry in the case that the statement so recorded was held not to be evidence in a stage of judicial proceeding within the meaning of ss. 191 and 193 of the Indian Penal Code. If the view of the Bombay Court taken in that case is a correct view, it does not apply to the case before us, in which the Magistrate who recorded the statement under s. 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure had himself authority, inasmuch as the case was one of theft only, to complete the trial. We have examined the statements made by Khem on the 18th and 23rd of January. They are statements so contradictory that we cannot see any way of reconciling them, and one or the other of them must have been false to the knowledge of the accused. We accordingly allow the appeal, and, setting aside the appellate judgment of acquittal, restore the conviction of the Magistrate. We think, however, that it will be sufficient to direct that the accused suffer rigorous imprisonment for the space of three months with effect from to-day's date. Any portion of the imprisonment or detention since this appeal was filed that the accused has undergone on this charge will be deemed to be part of the substantive sentence.

[See also in this connection Queen-Empress v. Alagu Kone (1) and Queen-Empress v. Puran (2)—ED.]

22 A. 118 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 213.

[118] APPELLATE CRIMINAL.

Before Mr. Justice Knox and Mr. Justice Aikman.

QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GANGA DIN.*
 [15th November, 1899.]

Act No. XI of 1878 (Arms Act), ss. 19, 27—Exemptions from provisions of Arms Act—Government Notification No. 518 of the 6th March 1879—Government Notification No. 458 of the 18th March, 1898—"Personal use" of Arms—Arms carried and used by servant of exempted person.

By a notification under s. 27 of the Arms Act (Act No. XI of 1878) issued by the Government of India, certain persons, amongst them Rajas and Members of the Legislative Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of the N.W.P., were exempted from the operation of ss. 13 and 16 of the said Act; but with this proviso, that, "except where otherwise expressly stated, the arms or ammunition carried or possessed by such persons shall be for their own personal use, &c., &c." Held that the terms of this proviso would allow of a person exempted under the notification above alluded to sending a servant armed with a gun into a neighbouring district to shoot birds for him, and that a gun so carried and used by the servant of the exempted person was in the "personal use" of the exempted person within the meaning of the notification.

* Criminal Appeal No. 569 of 1899.

(1) 16 M. 421.

(2) 19 A.W.N. (1899) 39.

[Diss., 12 Cr. L.J. 122=9 Ind. Cas. 720 (721)=4 S.L.R. 214 (216); 4 S.L.R. 211; R., 13 C.W.N. 124=10 Cr. L.J. 555 (557)=4 Ind. Cas. 333 (334).]

1899
Nov. 15.

THE facts of this case were as follows:—

One Ganga Din Pasi, a servant of Raja Rampal Singh, a Member of the Local Legislative Council, was found within the district of Allahabad carrying a gun and ammunition and using the gun for the purpose of shooting game. On being asked by the Police for his license he replied that he had none, but that he was a servant of Raja Rampal Singh, to whom the gun and ammunition belonged, and was out shooting under his master's orders and for his master's benefit. Ganga Din was put upon his trial before a Magistrate of the first class for an offence under s. 19 of the Arms Act, 1878, but was acquitted with reference to the ruling of the High Court in In re Hurley (1). Against this order of acquittal an appeal was filed by the Local Government.

APPEL-
LATE CRIMINAL.
—
22 A. 118 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 213.

Prior to the year 1898, a notification of the Government of India, (No. 518 of the 6th March 1879) was in force, which, so far as the question raised by the present case is concerned, ran as follows:—"The Governor-General in Council is pleased, under s. 27, to exempt from the operation of all prohibitions and direction contained in ss. 13, 14, 15 and 16 of [119] the Indian Arms Act, 1878 * * * * the under-mentioned persons, namely:—

- (1) All Maharajas, Rajas, &c., &c.
- (2) All Members * * * of the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.
- (3) All Military and Naval officers, * * * * subject to the proviso that the arms and ammunition carried or possessed by such persons shall be for their own personal use, &c., &c."

By a notification of the Government of India of the year 1898 (No. 458 of the 18th March 1898) the proviso to clause (3) above quoted was removed from its situation at the end of clause (3) and appended to the first paragraph of section I of the Notification preceding clauses (1), (2), (3), &c.

The ground of appeal in the present case was that by reason of the new Notification the proviso above-mentioned applied not only to Military and Naval officers and others mentioned in clause (3), but to the persons designated in clauses (1) and (2) and that it could not be said that a gun in the possession of a servant in another district from that in which the master ordinarily resided was in the personal use of the master within the meaning and intention of Government Notification.

The Government Advocate, (for whom Mr. W. K. Porter) for the appellant.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (for whom Pandit Tej Bahadur Sapru), for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

KNOX and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is an appeal preferred by Government from an original order of acquittal passed by a Magistrate of the first class, Allahabad. One Ganga Din, servant of Raja Rampal Singh, a Member of the Legislative Council, N.W.P. and Oudh, was found within the district of Allahabad carrying a gun and ammunition, and

(1) 1 A. W. N. (1881) 7.

1899
 NOV. 15.
 —
 APPEL-
 LATE CRIMINAL.
 —
 22 A. 118=
 19 A.W.N.
 (1899) 213.

using the gun for the purpose of shooting game. Upon being asked by the Police to show his license he replied that he had no license, but that he was a servant of Raja Rampal Singh, who had ordered him to shoot game for him (the Raja), and that the gun and ammunition belonged to the aforesaid Raja. The Magistrate, we must take it, has found that [120] the pleas raised by Ganga Din are all true, that he is the servant of a master exempted from the operations of ss. 13 and 16 of Act No. XI of 1878. Following a precedent of this Court, In re Hurley, decided on the 12th January, 1880, and to be found at page 7 of the Weekly Notes for 1881, the Magistrate found the accused not guilty of any offence under s. 19 of the Arms Act, and acquitted him. It was contended by the Government in this appeal that the accused is guilty, and that the Magistrate has overlooked the fact that the rules in force, when the ruling cited by him was pronounced, have been amended by the Government Notification No. 458 of the 18th March, 1898. The last named notification is a notification amending a prior notification No. 518 of the 6th March, 1879. So far as this case is concerned, the amendment is one which purports to impose a limit or qualification upon the general exemption which under the notification of 1879 was conferred upon all Rajas. The general exemption thus conferred is now controlled by the proviso that the arms or ammunition carried or possessed by such Rajas shall be, except when otherwise expressly stated, for their own personal use. The learned counsel for the Crown contends that the use by Ganga Din, under the circumstances we have set out above, cannot be deemed the personal use of the Raja. We have considered his argument very carefully in view of the serious results which will follow from so literal an interpretation of these words. We are unable to construe, and have been shown no authority for construing, these words in the strict sense contended for. We are unable to hold, as the learned counsel desires us to, that the meaning is that only the Raja who may be exempted under the above notification, can carry on his own person the arms which he may happen to possess. It was allowed in the argument that personal use might extend to a case where the Raja might be intending to use the arms personally, and such arms were in the meantime being carried for the Raja by some servant or retainer. We cannot believe that the intention of the Government, when they granted the exemption, was that the privilege of the exemption should only extend to personal use by the Raja in the narrow sense contended for. Take, for instance, the case of the Raja's residence being attacked by dacoits; it surely never could be contended [121] that personal use extended only to the use of arms repelling the attack by the Raja, and that the use by any of the Raja's retainers for such purpose was not equally within the intention and scope of the exemption. If the Government did intend to limit the exemption to the extent now contended for, we should expect words of a far more stringent and limiting nature. In the present case we hold that Ganga Din has established to the satisfaction of the Court that he was using the arms he carried for what may fairly be termed the "personal use" of the Raja. We accordingly dismiss the appeal. Let the record be returned.

Appeal dismissed.

22 A. 121 = 19 A.W.N. (1899) 219.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

JHAMMAN LAL AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs) v. KEWAL RAM
(Defendant).* [21st November, 1899.]

Execution of decree—Civil Procedure Code, s. 244—Suit brought under circumstances where the proper remedy was by application under s. 244—Discretion of Court to treat the plaint as an application under s. 244.

Where certain judgment-debtors, whose property had been sold in execution of a decree, brought a suit to have the sale in execution set aside under circumstances in which their proper remedy in law, if any, was by means of an application under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, it was held that it was not an improper exercise of the discretion of the Court in which such suit was brought to treat the plaint as an application under s. 244 of the Code. Biru Mithata v. Shyama Churn Khawas (1) followed. Mayan Pathuti v. Pakuran (2) referred to.

[Not F., 5 Bom. L.R. 1036 (1041); F., 28 M. 64 (66); 5 P.R. 1907 = 23 P.L.R. 1908 = 40 P.W.R. 1907; R., 32 M. 425-427 = 4 Ind. Cas. 723 (724); 17 C.P.L.R. 178 (182); 7 Ind. Cas. 55 (59); D., A.W.N. (1900) 196.]

THE facts of this case, as stated in the judgment of the lower appellate Court, were as follows:—

“Khushwakt Rai, the father of the plaintiffs, owed a debt to Data Ram and others under a hypothecation bond, dated the 11th August, 1875, Data Ram and others brought a suit for the debt, and on the 25th August 1887, obtained a decree against the plaintiffs and Chunni Ram, their nephew (brother's son). In execution of this decree the hypothecated and unhypothecated [122] property of the judgment-debtors was sold at auction on the 26th April 1893, and the 20th February 1894, and the said auction sales were confirmed, and mutation of names was effected in favour of the auction-purchasers. The plaintiffs now contend that as they were employed in another district, they could not present themselves in Court at the time when the decree was passed in that case, nor could they obtain a knowledge of the execution proceedings; that the decree is in a great measure contrary to the judgment and is absurd; that the amount of the decree, in satisfaction of which the auction sales took place, has been overstated and is wrong; that the invalid and fraudulent proceedings taken by the defendant have caused great loss to the plaintiffs. Hence the plaintiffs pray that the decree passed on the 25th August 1887, so far as the defendant has fraudulently caused it to be prepared contrary to the judgment and prejudicial to the rights of the plaintiffs, may be set aside, and that the auction sale of the plaintiffs' purchased property detailed at the foot of the plaint, which, according to law, could not be sold in execution of the said decree, may be set aside, together with all the other fraudulent application proceedings. The Munsif, considering the suit to be an application under s. 244, has set aside the sale of the zamindari share in claim. The substance of the grounds of appeal, as stated by the pleader for the appellant, is as follows:—(1) that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to set

1899
Nov. 21.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.

22 A. 121 =
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 219.

* Second Appeal No. 419 of 1897 from a decree of Rai Anant Ram, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh, dated the 8th April 1897, reversing the decree of Maulvi Muhammad Azim-ud-din, Munsif of Aligarh, dated the 1st June 1896.

(1) 22 C. 483.

(2) 22 M. 347.

1899
Nov. 21.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 121=
19 A.W.N.
(1899) 219.

aside the auction sale, treating the regular suit as an application under s. 244. The finding of the lower Court is ultra vires."

On this first plea of the defendant-appellant the lower appellate Court set aside the decree of the Munsif, who had set aside the sale of the 20th February 1894, and dismissed the plaintiffs' suit.

The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court, their first plea being that "there is nothing in law to prevent the appellants' plaint being treated as an application under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure when it fulfils the other requirements of that section."

Babu Durga Charan Banerji, for the appellants.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri (for whom Harendra Krishna Mukerji), for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

[123] BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—We thoroughly concur in the reasoning which has induced the Calcutta High Court in Biru Mahanta v. Shyama Churn Khawas (1), and the Madras High Court in Mayan Pathuti v. Pakuran (2), to pass by the formal defect in bringing a suit instead of making an application under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It seems to us a reasonable exercise of discretion and one which could do no injury to the parties. The appeal is decreed. The decree of the lower appellate Court is set aside, and that of the first Court is restored with costs in all Courts.

Appeal decreed.

22 A. 123 (F.B.) = 20 A.W.N. (1900) 18.

FULL BENCH.

Before Sir Arthur Stochey, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Knox, Mr. Justice Blair, Mr. Justice Banerji, Mr. Justice Burkitt and Mr. Justice Aikman.

M. J. POWELL (Applicant) v. THE MUNICIPAL BOARD OF MUSSOORIE (Opposite Party).^{*}
[15th December, 1899.]

Act No. XV of 1883 (N.W.P. and Oudh Municipalities Act), s. 69—Complaint of offence against Municipal bye-law—Power of Municipal Board to give a general authority to institute complaints on its behalf.

Held that s. 69 of the N.W.P. and Oudh Municipalities Act, 1883, confers upon Municipal Boards in the North Western Provinces and Oudh the power to delegate generally their authority to make complaints in respect of municipal offences; and this general delegation includes not merely the giving of authority to do the formal act of presenting a complaint to a Court, but the exercise of discretion as to whether in any given case a complaint shall or shall not be made.
[R., 26 A. 482 (486).]

[N.B.—See in this connection 20 A.W.N. (1900) 41 an offshoot of 22 A. 123.—ED.]

THIS was a reference to a Full Bench of a question arising out of an application for revision of an order convicting the petitioner of an offence against the bye-laws of the Municipal Board of Mussoorie, namely, to what extent a Municipal Board is competent, under s. 69 of Act No. XV of 1883, to delegate its powers as to making complaints in respect of ^{*} Criminal Revision No. 442 of 1899.

(1) 22 C. 483.

(2) 22 M. 347.

municipal offences. The facts of the case, so far as they are necessary for the purposes of this report, appear from the judgment of the Chief Justice.

[124] Mr. W. Wallach, for the applicant.

The Municipalities Act enables municipal boards to frame rules and bye-laws encroaching on ordinary rights of the public and constituting offences of acts which according to the ordinary law of the land are not offences. Section 69 has been passed as a safeguard for the protection of the public and ought as such to be strictly construed. Its object is to prevent people who are innocent or may have been guilty of purely technical offences against municipal rules or bye-laws from being needlessly harassed by prohibiting a Court from taking cognizance of offences punishable under the Act or rules made under the Act, except on complaint of the Municipal Board or "some one authorized by the Board in this behalf," i.e., in behalf of each particular complaint. The Board has a duty imposed upon it, of which it cannot divest itself. The whole object of the section fails, if the Board be allowed to delegate its authority to a person to generally institute prosecution on behalf of the Board. If that construction were adopted the Board could vest a chaukidar or police constable with power to institute prosecutions under the Act whenever he thought fit; and the authority thus granted under s. 69 would very likely be frequently used as a means of oppression and annoyance. The same might be said in the case of small municipalities, where the authority in question would most likely be vested in a poorly paid secretary.

Counsel referred to kindred English Acts and pointed out that although local governments are of very long standing in England, no English Statute seems to go so far as to enable local bodies to generally vest the power to institute prosecutions in any one. Powers of delegation in English Acts are not granted in a vaguely worded section, but whenever they occur they are strictly specified and limited.

Counsel also referred to the explanations added to the corresponding sections in the recent Punjab Municipalities Act (Act XX of 1891, s. 186) and Burma Municipalities Act (Burma Act III of 1898, s. 195), to show that in those Acts an explanation was deemed requisite to invest the Board with the power of general delegation.

[125] Mr. E. Chamier, for the Municipal Board.

The words "authorised by the Board in this behalf" in s. 69 of Act No. XV of 1883 are wide enough to include a general authority; the construction contended for by the applicant is unnatural and would in the case of any large Municipality bring about a dead-lock, as the Board could not itself deal with every breach of the bye-laws and decide whether a prosecution should be instituted. The words "authorised in this behalf" are used in other Acts to denote a general as well as a special authority. See s. 59 of Act No. XII of 1881; s. 51 of Act No. XIV of 1882; s. 19, explanation 2, of Act No. XV of 1877.

No argument can be founded on the desirability or otherwise of allowing the delegation of the power to institute prosecutions. The Act contemplates the delegation by the Board of important functions: see ss. 26, 34 (e), 58, &c.

Unless compelled to do otherwise, the courts should place such construction upon s. 69 as will effectuate the obvious intention of the Legislature and not produce serious inconvenience. See Maxwell on 1899

DEC. 15.

FULL BENCH.

22 A. 123
(F.B.)=
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 18.

- 1899
DEC. 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 123
(F.B.)=
20 A.W.N.
(1900. 18.
- Statutes, pp. 319 and 423, Hardcastle on the interpretation of Statutes, pp. 99—102. Queen-Empress v. Hori (1).
Section 69 of Act No. XV of 1883 now in question is a reproduction of s. 46 of Act No. XV of 1873 and earlier enactments. The words "authorized in this behalf" have for a great many years been understood as including a general authority. In re-enacting this provision the Legislature must have been aware of the construction which had been placed upon it, and must have intended that the words should be understood in their received meaning. See Commissioners for Income Tax v. Pemsel (2).

JUDGMENT.

STRACHEY, C.J.—The petitioner in this case has been convicted and sentenced by a Magistrate of the Dehra Dun district for a breach of rule 19, part 2 of the bye-laws made by the Municipal Board of Mussoorie under the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Municipalities Act (No. XV of 1883). The first ground stated in the petition is as follows:—
"Because the Magistrate could not legally take cognizance of the offence [126] complained of, as no complaint was made either by the Municipal Board or by any person authorized by the Board on that behalf." That is the only point which the Division Bench dealing with this case has referred to the Full Bench. It relates to s. 69 of Act No. XV of 1883, which provides that "a Court shall not take cognizance of an offence punishable under this Act, or the rules made under this Act, except on the complaint of the Municipal Board, or of some person authorized by the Board in this behalf. Now on the 27th April 1897, as appears from a copy of the minutes of the Board, the following resolution was passed under the head of "Appointment of Public Prosecutors." "Resolved that the Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Health Officer and Secretary be vested with authority under s. 69, Act XV of 1883, to institute prosecutions on behalf of the Board." In the present case a complaint against the petitioner of a breach of the bye-law in question was made to the Magistrate by the Secretary of the Board. There can be no doubt that the authority under which he professed to make the complaint was the resolution which I have just quoted. It is not shown or suggested that, apart from that resolution, the Board gave any authority for the prosecution. The question is whether, by reason of the resolution, the Secretary was a person authorized by the Board in this behalf within the meaning of the section so as to entitle the Court to take cognizance of the offence on his complaint. On behalf of the petitioner it has been contended that the words "authorized by the Board in this behalf" do not include a general authority to prosecute in regard to offences under the Act or rules generally, such as that given by the resolution, but are confined to a specific authority to be given by the Municipal Board in relation to the specific offence for which the accused is to be prosecuted. In other words, that the case contemplated by the closing words of the section is one in which the determination to prosecute for the offence is the determination of the Municipal Board alone, and in which the Municipal Board having decided that there shall be a complaint, merely authorizes some person to lay that complaint before the proper Court. There is no authority to be found upon this point. It is clear that the section was enacted with a twofold purpose. The object was, in the first place, to exclude [127] prosecutions for what may be called municipal offences from the

(1) 21 A. 391.

(2) L.R. (1891) A.C. 531 at pp. 590—91.

interference of irresponsible persons, and to secure that such prosecutions should have the guarantee of the responsibility of the Municipal Board. A further object, in my opinion, was to relieve the Municipal Board of the necessity of itself dealing with each individual case of prosecution for a municipal offence, and to enable it to assign that particular function to some other person or persons. Now the first complaint spoken of in the section is the complaint of the Municipal Board. It is clear that the Municipal Board can make a complaint. But, as it is a corporate body, the only way in which it can make a complaint is to authorize some person to make one on its behalf, just as it can only do any other act through the instrumentality of some agent. So that, if the section stopped there, such cases could only be prosecuted by the Municipal Board considering the individual case and the propriety of the prosecution, passing a resolution that the prosecution should be instituted and directing its officer to take the necessary proceedings. That is how the matter would stand if the section ended with the words "Municipal Board." It is clear that the remaining words of the section were intended to provide for another sort of case. If the argument for the petitioner is sound, in a case where a Municipal Board desired not itself to make a complaint, but to authorize some other person to make one, it would have to adopt exactly the same procedure as I have just pointed out, it would have to adopt if making the complaint itself. The argument is that the authority there spoken of only means an authority to file the particular complaint, that authority being conferred after the Board had, as in the other case, itself determined on a prosecution by resolution passed at one of its meetings. It appears to me that such a construction involves two consequences, each of which is sufficient to condemn it. The first is that it renders the concluding words of the section absolutely superfluous. The second is that it entirely defeats what I think was the obvious intention of the Legislature that some relief at all events should be given to the Municipal Board, which has necessarily other and many duties to perform, without forcing on it that detailed and individual examination of every case which is required where the complaint is made by the [128] Board itself. Of course the wording of the section is not quite as exact as might be wished, because to some extent, and taken literally, the two parts of it overlap each other. A "complaint of the Municipal Board" in itself implies the Board authorizing somebody to make the complaint, because, as I have said, the Board being a corporate body cannot make a complaint at all without authorizing some one to make it. Again, if the Board does authorize some person in the words of the second part to make a complaint, that complaint is, strictly speaking, the complaint of the Board itself. But when you look at the section with an eye to the object which the Legislature had in view, I think the meaning is pretty clear. "Complaint of the Municipal Board" I think refers to a case where the Board is the real author of the complaint, in the sense that the complaint is the result of the determination of the Board itself. The complaint spoken of in the last words of the section similarly means, in my opinion, a complaint which is the result of a determination, not by the Board itself but by some person authorized by the Board in that behalf. That appears to me to be the only way in which you can give effect to the distinction which the Legislature evidently had in view, and to all the words of the section which the Legislature has enacted. If this view, is correct, it follows that the Legislature

1899
DEC. 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 123
(F.B.) =
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 18.

1899
DEC. 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 123
(F.B.)=
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 18.

meant by the concluding part of the section to empower a Municipal Board to give authority to some other person, not merely to do the formal or mechanical act of putting a complaint before the Magistrate, which it would have to do if it desired to make the complaint itself under the first part of the section, but to determine whether there should be a complaint at all. Is there anything in any word of this section which is inconsistent with this view? The words used are as general as possible:—"Authorized by the Board in this behalf." A general authority, that is an authority, to act in all cases or in a class of cases, is a familiar form of authority to an agent or an officer. The word "authorized" would include it just as much as the narrower kind of authority, which consists in authorizing an agent merely to take specific action in a particular case. That the wider meaning is not an exceptional or anomalous one is further shown by the instance cited by Mr. Chamier of [129] other enactments, such as s. 59 of the N. W. P. Rent Act, 1881, s. 51 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and s. 19, explanation 2, of the Limitation Act, 1877, in which the same words "authorized in this behalf" are clearly used in the sense of a general authority. Then if the language used is wide enough, why should we go out of our way to place restrictions on it? The Government Advocate has pointed out what would be the result of restricting it in the manner suggested. In some of the larger Municipalities constituted under this Act he said—and I think with truth—that the section would be utterly unworkable if so restricted. In a large community with a multiplicity of local business, and where offences against bye-laws of greater or less importance are of constant occurrence, it is impossible that the Municipal Board should meet and deliberate and pass resolutions in every case before any complaint could be instituted. The meetings of the Board are subject to regulations as regards convening, notices to be sent to the members, and as to quorum, and so pre-suppose a machinery which often means considerable delay, and which could not possibly be applied as a preliminary to each and every prosecution for a municipal offence. That is precisely the consideration which induced the Legislature to enact the concluding words of s. 69. I can see no a priori improbability, no considerations of public policy which would make it unlikely that the Legislature should entrust to a Municipal Board power to confer on other persons not only a specific authority to file a particular complaint, but a general authority to prosecute for municipal offences, including authority to determine whether a prosecution is desirable. Such a power might, it is said, be abused. If it were abused, a remedy might be found in Chapter V of the Act. That the Legislature itself regards such a power as one which may properly be given to a Municipal Board may be inferred from s. 186 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1891, which is in terms practically identical with s. 69 of Act XV of 1883, but to which an "Explanation" is appended providing that "the committee may authorize persons to prosecute either generally in regard to all offences under this Act and the rules thereunder, or particularly in regard only to specified offences or offences of [130] a specified class." The Burma Municipal Act, 1898, s. 195, contains a similar explanation. These provisions cannot, of course, be used for the purpose of construing Act XV of 1883, but they appear to me to support the view that there is no reason of public policy or convenience why a general authority should not have been included within the words which s. 69 uses. For these reasons I have come to the conclusion that the complaint in the present case was made by a person authorized by the Board within the meaning of s. 69, and that the first ground for the present petition therefore fails. This is my answer to the reference.

KNOX, J.—I concur in the answer given and in the reasons therefor.

BLAIR, J.—I find myself constrained to give the same answer to the question propounded as has been given by the Chief justice, and I find myself constrained to that conclusion by the consideration that any other construction would impose on Municipal Boards burdens absolutely intolerable. The section appears to me to be unfortunately drawn, and there are points of view from which I should have been inclined to adopt another interpretation, but I cannot believe that the Legislature intended by that section to make Municipal institutions unworkable.

BANERJI, J.—I would make the same answer to the reference as the learned Chief Justice. I find nothing in s. 69 of Act No. XV of 1883 to justify the contention that there cannot be a general delegation of authority by a Municipal Board in the matter of initiating and instituting complaints. The language of the section is wide and flexible enough to authorize a general delegation of the Board's discretion, and as the limitation of its provisions for which the petitioner contends will lead to great practical inconvenience, I see no reason for so construing those provisions as to give rise to such inconvenience.

BURKITT, J.—In this matter the argument ab inconvenienti is, in my opinion, overwhelmingly strong. It is clear from the arguments which we have heard to-day that unless the construction put on s. 69 by the learned Chief Justice be adopted, it will be impossible for any but the smallest Municipalities in these Provinces to cope with the absolutely [131] necessary work of prosecuting persons who have been guilty of breaches of Municipal bye-laws. For that reason, though I cannot wholly adopt the views of the learned Chief Justice, I am not prepared to record a dissentient judgment.

AIKMAN, J.—I concur in the answer proposed to be given to the reference by the learned Chief Justice and my brother Judges. The language of s. 69 of the N. W. P. and Oudh Municipalities Act, 1883, is, in my opinion, susceptible of the interpretation for which the learned Government Advocate contends. That interpretation is, to my mind, the most natural construction of the section, as it is undoubtedly the most convenient, and it is the construction which has all along been placed on the section by the Boards which have had occasion to act under it.

22 A. 131 (F.B.)=20 A.W.N. (1900) 15.

FULL BENCH.

Before Mr. Justice Knox, Mr. Justice Banerji and Mr. Justice Aikman.

IN THE MATTER OF THE NEW EGERTON WOOLLEN MILLS.*
[21st December, 1899.]

Stamp—Articles of association—Special resolution—Resolution superseding articles of association—Act No. VI of 1882 (Indian Companies Act), ss. 76, 79—Act No. I of 1879 (Indian Stamp Act), sch. i, art. 8.

A company limited by shares and already possessing articles of association proceeded to pass a special resolution, in virtue of which a document was

* Miscellaneous No. 183 of 1899.

1899
DEC. 15.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 123
(F.B.)=
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 18

1899
DEC. 21.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 131
(F.B.)=
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 15.

drawn up entitled "articles of association" in supersession of the articles theretofore in force. The record of this special resolution was, under the provisions of s. 79 of the Indian Companies Act, 1882, sent to the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies to be recorded by him. The document was impounded by the Registrar on the ground that it required to be stamped as articles of association and was not so stamped. Hereafter a reference was made by the Board of Revenue to the High Court under the provisions of s. 46 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1879, as to whether the document in question required to be stamped. Held that the Indian Companies Act did not contemplate any such thing as new articles of association, and that the document in question was nothing more than the record of a special resolution, and as such did not require to be stamped.

THIS was a reference made by the Board of Revenue for the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, under s. 46 of Act No. I of 1879. The circumstances which gave rise to the reference were, briefly, as follows. The new Egerton Woollen Mills, a company limited by shares and already possessing articles of [132] association, came to the conclusion that their articles of association stood in need of amendment. They accordingly passed a special resolution very largely altering and amending the articles, and the result of this resolution was embodied in a document headed "articles of association." This document, or a copy of it, was forwarded to the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies under the provisions of s. 79 of the Indian Companies Act, 1882, to be recorded by him. The Registrar impounded it, being of opinion that, owing to the procedure adopted by the company in entirely recasting their articles of association, the document constituted new articles of association and required a stamp of Rs. 25 under art. 8 of the second schedule to the Indian Stamp Act, 1879. At the instance of the Company the Board of Revenue referred to the High Court the question whether the document required to be stamped as articles of association, or whether it was merely the record of a special resolution.

Mr. W. K. Porter, for the New Egerton Woollen Mills, contended that the document in question was not articles of association; and did not require to be stamped as such. The Indian Companies Act, 1882, (vide ss. 37 and 39) contemplated that there should be only one set of articles of association during the existence of a Company. But by s. 76 of the Act a Company was empowered to "alter all or any of the regulations of the Company contained in the articles of association" by means of a special resolution, as defined by s. 77. This was what had occurred in the present case. The Company had by special resolution altered most of the articles of association, and, instead of publishing what was new in the form of an amendment to the articles of association, had entirely recast the articles. Such procedure was adopted for the sake of convenience, but it was not the making of "new articles of association." In point of law the document in dispute was nothing more nor less than the record of a "special resolution" a copy of which had, by reason of s. 79, to be forwarded to the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies for the purpose of being recorded by him; it did not constitute "articles of association" requiring to be registered under s. 40.

[133] Mr. E. Chamier, contra, argued that articles of association were in pari materia with rules which partners might make for themselves for the conduct of the partnership business. As such rules might be changed as often as the partners desired, so might articles of association of a Company. The document in question was on the face of it a complete set of articles of association, and required to be stamped as such. It was not permissible to look outside the document itself to ascertain what it was for the purposes of the stamp law. Chandrakant Mookerjee v. Kartikcharan Chaile (1) and Ramen Chetty v. Mahomed Ghose (2).

JUDGMENT.

KNOX, BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.—This is a case stated under s. 46 of Act No. I of 1879 by the Board of Revenue for decision of the question raised in the statement. The statement commences by asking for a ruling regarding the question of the stamp-duty payable on what are termed the New Articles of Association of the New Egerton Mills Company, Limited. It then sets out that an authenticated copy of these so-called "New Articles of Association" was submitted to the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies for registration, and that he impounded them, as he was of opinion that they required to be stamped. The reasons why the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies considered that the document was liable to stamp-duty are that, in his opinion, the New Egerton Woollen Mills Company, instead of altering its existing regulations or making new regulations to the exclusion of those already existing, as they were entitled to do under s. 77 of the Companies Act, had, for the sake of greater convenience and perspicuity, preferred to adopt an entirely new set of articles of association as the regulations of the company, to the exclusion of those before in force, they were therefore the articles of association of the company, and required to be stamped under art. 3 (presumably art. 8) of sch. I of the Stamp Act, 1879. The Board state that they agree with the view thus stated by the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies. Before proceeding further, we would point out that the word "New" is a word imported by the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies into the case. The document, which was presented to the Registrar of Joint [134] Stock Companies, and which is before us, is headed "Articles of Association of the New Egerton Woollen Mills Company Limited," and not "New Articles of Association," as set out in the reference. After carefully considering the provisions of the Indian Companies Act, 1882, and hearing all that has been said to us by the learned Government Advocate, we are of opinion that there can be no such document under the Indian Companies Act of 1882 as "New Articles of Association." Articles of association are specially referred to in s. 37 and following sections of the Act. The sections provide that a company limited by shares may, when on the eve of incorporation, draw up a memorandum of association, and may link with that document articles of association signed by the subscribers to the memorandum of association, and prescribing such regulations for the company as the subscribers to the memorandum of association deem expedient. If they do not add articles of association so executed to their memorandum of association, in that case the regulations contained in the table marked A in sch. I to the Indian Companies Act, 1882, shall be deemed to be the regulations of the Company in the same manner and to the same extent as if they had been inserted in the articles of association and the articles had been duly registered. We have not been referred to any section throughout the Act which provides for the framing of new articles of association, and it seems to us that such would really be a contradiction in terms. We can understand a body of individuals who are about to incorporate themselves into a company drawing up and executing articles of association which shall govern them when so incorporated, and 1899

DEC. 21.

FULL BENCH.

22 A. 131
(F.B.) =
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 15.

(1) 5 B.L.R. 103.

(2) 16 C. 432.

1899
DEC. 21.
—
FULL BENCH.
—
22 A. 131
(F.B.) =
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 15.

we can understand a company when incorporated resolving that there shall be new regulations which shall supersede or modify the articles which were drawn up at the time when the association was first determined upon. This is provided for by s. 76 of the Indian Companies Act, and provision is made in s. 79, whereby any and every resolution to this effect shall be printed and forwarded to the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies and be recorded by him. Bearing all this in mind, we are satisfied that the document which was submitted to the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies was submitted to him under s. 79 to be recorded by him, and not, as he [135] states, for registration. The document was not new articles of association, or articles of association at all within the meaning of the Indian Companies Act. It was a copy of the special resolution passed by the company, notifying to the Registrar, and through him to the world concerned, that the regulations of the company, which were covered by the resolution, would be the regulations by which the company would in future be bound. These regulations, even though they were new regulations to the exclusion of all the existing regulations of the company, are, by the second paragraph of s. 76, to be deemed to be regulations of the company of the same validity as if they had been originally contained in the articles of association. The law does not say that they are to be deemed articles of association, but expressly declares that they are to be deemed regulations of the same validity as if they had been contained in the articles of association. The document which has been forwarded to us is certainly not one which falls within art. 8 of sch. I of the Stamp Act of 1879, and is not liable to stamp-duty as provided by that article. This is our decision. Let the Registrar certify it as our answer to this reference.

22 A. 135 = 20 A.W.N. (1900) 12.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Aikman.

RAM BHAROSE (Defendant) v. KALLU MAL AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs).
[11th December, 1899.]

Partnership—Arbitration—Authority of one partner to sue on behalf of the firm—Authority of one partner to bind the firm by a submission to arbitration—Act No. I of 1877 (Specific Relief Act), s. 21.

Held that one partner, though entitled to bring a suit on behalf of the firm of which he is a member to recover a debt due to the firm, has no power, in the absence of special authority, to bind the firm by a submission to arbitration of the claim so brought. Stead v. Salt (1) and Strangford v. Green (2) referred to.

[Appr., 11 C.L.J. 658 = 14 C.W.N. 1106 (1112) = 6 Ind. Cas. 63; R., 1 Ind. Cas. 937; 103 P.L.R. 1902; D., 3 S.L.R. 5.]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Mr. W. M. Colvin (for whom Wallach), for the appellant.

Pandit Moti Lal, for the respondents.

* First Appeal No. 29 of 1899 from an order of Babu Nil Madhab Roy, Small Cause Court Judge, Cawnpore, dated 27th February 1899

(1) (1825) 3 Bing. (101).

(2) (29 Car. II) 2 Mod. 228.

JUDGMENT.

[136] BLAIR, J.—This suit was brought by the plaintiffs to recover money due to them for groceries sold and delivered to the defendant Ram Bharose. The plaintiff's business was a partnership business. One Udai Ram was called the managing partner, but there appears to be no fact found in this case which would distinguish his powers and rights from those of an ordinary acting partner. Proceedings had been commenced by him to recover the debt due to the firm, and we have the authority of English cases, which seem to us to deal with a state of facts in no way different from similar transactions in this country for the proposition that a partner suing to recover a debt due to the firm is acting within the range of his powers; in other words, that he is authorized to adopt the ordinary method provided by law for the recovery of debts due to the firm. Udai Ram, however, before the suit had been decided, referred the matter to arbitration, undertaking no doubt to bind the partnership concern by the award which should be made. Prior to the date fixed for making and publishing the award, a partner, Kallu Mal, gave notice to the arbitrator that he was not bound by the submission to the arbitration, and Udai Ram also repudiated his own liability. The plaintiffs brought this suit to recover their money due to them, narrating in their plaint the general circumstances relating to the arbitration. The substance of their plaint is "we are not bound by those arbitration proceedings. We are entitled to recover just as though they had never taken place." The appellant Ram Bharose set up in his statement of defence that under the true interpretation of s. 21 of Act No. I of 1877, and s. 251 of the Indian Contract Act, the arbitration agreement constituted a bar to the plaintiff's suit. The Munsif tried the issue of fact as to the liability of the partner Kallu Mal for the act of Udai Ram, and found that Kallu Mal had authorized the reference to arbitration, and thereby bound himself and his minor son, who was also a partner. The Court below found otherwise on the question of fact. It found that there was no authority to refer given by Kallu Mal. It discussed and considered no question of implied liability, and we think it reasonable to draw the inference that the question of implied liability of the partnership for the acts of the managing partner [137] was not raised before it. At all events there is no finding of such implied liability.

The third point which might have been raised before the lower appellate Court was that, although there might have been in fact no authority conferred upon Udai Ram to refer matters in dispute relating to partnership business to arbitration, still such a representation might have been made to the public as to the nature and extent of his power as to estop the plaintiffs from saying that he had not the fullest authority to enforce the demands of the firm by any machinery he might choose. That question does not appear to have been raised or decided. The defendant therefore having it found against him that there was in fact no authority, has also failed to obtain a finding upon the question whether there was an implied authority or estoppel made by representation of the partners. There was therefore no bar to the consideration of the details of the plaintiff's claim.

An order of remand has been made upon the basis that the plaintiffs have been held entitled to sue as the defendant has failed to establish any bar to their suit. The order of remand, therefore in our opinion, was right. The appeal should be dismissed, and the costs of this appeal should be costs in the cause.

1899

DEC. 11.

—
APPEL-

LATE

CIVIL.

—
22 A. 135=

20 A.W.N.

(1900) 12.

1899
DEC. 11.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 135=
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 12.

AIKMAN, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by Kallu Mal, Gopi Ram and Udai Ram, members of a partnership firm, to recover from the defendant Ram Bharose the price of goods supplied. In answer to the suit Ram Bharose pleaded that the matter in dispute had been, under agreement between him and Udai Ram, the managing member of the firm, referred to arbitration, and that consequently the existence of this agreement barred the plaintiff's suit. The Court of first instance sustained this plea and dismissed the suit. On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge set aside the decree of the Court of first instance and remanded the case under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure for decision upon the merits. It is against this order of remand that the present appeal is brought.

It is contended that the reference to arbitration was a valid reference, which binds the partnership, and consequently the suit is not maintainable. The question whether one partner can, without special authority, bind the firm by submission to [138] arbitration, does not appear to have been considered in any Indian case. The English authorities are unanimous in holding that one partner cannot, without special authority, bind his firm by such reference. In case of Stead v. Salt (1), a firm consisting of five members, brought a suit against the defendant to recover the price of work, labour and materials. It was pleaded that the subject of the demand, for the enforcement of which the action was brought, was concluded by an award. It appeared, however, that submission to the award was signed by three only out of the five members of the firm, and the Court held that submission by three members would not bind the five. There are other cases to the same effect to which it is not necessary to refer. For the appellant to succeed, it appears to me he must show that the reference to arbitration was either an act necessary for, or such as is usually done in, carrying on the business of the firm in question. He has failed to do so. He attempted to show that the other adult member of the firm had expressly consented to the reference, but the lower appellate Court disbelieved the evidence adduced by the defendant and held that no such consent was proved. It appears from the judgment of the lower appellate Court that no attempt was made to argue that Udai Ram, as managing member of the firm, had any implied authority to refer matters to arbitration. I am of opinion, therefore, that the plea, based upon the provisions of the last paragraph of s. 21 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, fails.

One other contention was urged by the learned counsel on behalf of the appellant, namely, that in any event Udai Ram, who virtually referred the matter to arbitration, was bound by the submission. An old case Strangford v. Green (2), is cited as authority for this contention. It may be that in a suit against Udai Ram personally the defendant may be entitled to some relief; but this will not affect the suit brought by the firm of which Udai Ram is a member. I concur in the order proposed.

BY THE COURT.—The order of Court is that the appeal be dismissed. Costs of this appeal will abide the event.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) (1825) 3 Bing. 101.

(2) 129 Car. II, 2 Mod. 228.

22 A. 139 = 20 A.W.N. (1900) 16.

[139] APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

BALWANT SINGH (Plaintiff) v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL (Defendant).* [11th December, 1899].

Act No. XIX of 1873 (N.W.P. Land Revenue Act), s. 241 (i), Act No. VIII of 1873 (Northern India Canal and Drainage Act), s. 45—Civil and Revenue Courts—Jurisdiction—Suit to recover alleged excess payments in respect of irrigation dues.

Held that no suit would lie in a Civil Court to recover payments alleged to have been made in respect of irrigation dues in excess of what was properly leviable on the plaintiff.

THIS was a suit instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Agra for the recovery of a certain sum of money alleged to have been paid under the following circumstances as detailed in the judgment of the Court of first instance:—

"The plaintiff is the zamindar of two villages, namely Kayatha and Gangni, pargana Firozabad, zila Agra, and pays the irrigation (called the owner's) rate for these villages. The owner's rate is levied on those lands alone which at the time of the last settlement were usar or bunjur or khakee, or nautor, and which are now irrigated through the canal; these have been assessed with an irrigation fee of those lands which did not use to be irrigated.

"On account of the village Gangni for the years 1292 to 1296 F. Rs. 833-11-10 were taken in excess of the real dues from the plaintiff's ancestor through mistake on account of owner's rate, that is, on account of those lands which at the time of the last settlement used to be irrigated by canal or wells, or any other means; that in the same way Rs. 3,709-14-3 were taken in excess of the correct dues for the village Kayatha for the same period; that the lands for which these fees have been taken are entered in the jamabandis as being Nahree or Chahee, but the owner's rate was taken with respect to them by mistake. That the numbers of these plots are given in the exhibits marked from A to T.

[140] "The ancestor of the plaintiff and the servants of his estate relying upon the jamabandis supplied to the zamindars twice a year paid the said amounts.

"In May, 1891, the karindas of the estate discovered the mistake, and therefore on the 14th of May 1891, an application was made to the Collector for a refund of the amount, but it was disallowed on the 1st of August, 1891.

"A notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code was served upon the Collector on the 9th of March 1894.

"The cause of action arose on the 13th of May 1891, when the ancestor of the plaintiff and the servants of the estate discovered the mistake, as well as on the 1st of August, 1891, when the application for a refund of the amount was disallowed.

"Upon these allegations the plaintiff seeks to recover Rs. 4,543 from the defendant.

"The defence is:—

* Second Appeal No. 194 of 1897, from a decree of W. F. Wells, Esq., District Judge of Agra, dated the 21st December 1896, confirming the decree of Maulvi Syed Muhammad Sirajuddin Ahmad, Subordinate Judge of Agra, dated the 6th August 1896.

1899
DEC. 11.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—

22 A. 139 =
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 16.

1899
DEC. 11.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 139=
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 16.

"That the plaint has not been properly signed and verified by the plaintiff.

"That the claim is barred by limitation, and the plaintiff has given a wrong cause of action.

"That the amounts in dispute as stated in the plaint are incorrect and greatly differ from the entries in the jamabandis filed by the plaintiff with the plaint.

"That the defendant before the institution of the present suit asked the plaintiff for an account and a list of fields in dispute in order to decide whether any mistake had really been made, but the plaintiff neither sent the said papers to the defendant nor showed them to his pleader.

"That no excess irrigation dues have been realized from the plaintiff, and the dues referred to in the plaint having been fully examined, have been rightly assessed and recovered.

"That the plaintiff and his ancestor had been always paying the irrigation dues and deriving benefits thereof, and the jamabandis have been always in their hands; they never raised any objection; that the present plaintiff has no locus standi. The allegation that the said dues were paid by mistake and the mistake was discovered on the 13th of May 1891, is wrong.

[141] "That the plaintiff applied to the Collector of Agra for a refund of the amount but it was rejected on the 1st of August 1891; that no excess irrigation fee has been recovered from the plaintiff, and if any has been recovered, he is not entitled to its recovery under circular A.D. of July 1883."

Upon these pleadings the Court of first instance dismissed the suit as barred by limitation.

The plaintiff appealed, and the lower appellate Court (District Judge of Agra) dismissed the appeal, finding the suit barred by limitation under art. 14 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.

The plaintiff thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri and Babu Satya Chandra Mukerji, for the appellant.

Mr. E. Chamier, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BLAIR and BURKITT, JJ.—In our opinion the suit does not lie by dint of s. 241, second paragraph of cl. (i), of the Land Revenue Act, No. XIX of 1873, and s. 45 of Act No. VIII of 1873. This question was not raised in the appeal or indeed elsewhere at all. The Court below dismissed the suit by the application of art. 14, sch. II of the Limitation Act. The appeal is therefore dismissed, but under the circumstances, without costs.

Appeal dismissed.

22 A. 141 = 20 A.W.N. (1900) 2.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

*Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.KANHIA LAL (Plaintiff) v. DEBI DAS AND ANOTHER (Defendants). [16th December, 1899.]Hindu law—Joint Hindu family—Suit for partition—Plea by defendants that some of the property in suit was their self-acquired property—Burden of proof.

In a suit for partition of property alleged to be the property of a joint Hindu family, of which the plaintiff was a member, the defendants, while admitting that some of the property scheduled in the plaint was joint property pleaded that the bulk of the property in suit, of which they were in possession, was their own self-acquired property. Held, that the burden of proof was on the defendants to show that such property was their self acquisition. [142] Gajendar Singh v. Sardar Singh (1), Dhurm Das Pandey v. Mussumat Shama Soondari Dibiah (2), and Gobind Chunder Mookerjee v. Doorgapersaud Baboo (3), referred to.

[F., 4 C.L.J. 56 (59); R., 33 A. 677 (682) = 8 A.L.J. 723 (730) = 10 Ind. Cas. 543; D., 16 C.P.L.R. 3 (6).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the Court.

Babu Jogindro Nath Chaudhri, Babu Ratan Chand and Munshi Gokal Prasad, for the appellant.

The Hon'ble Mr. Conlan and Mr. D. N. Banerji, for the respondents.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J. (BLAIR, J., concurring).—This is a second appeal in a partition suit. The reply of the defendants to that suit was that the great bulk of the property sought to be partitioned was their self-acquisition, and that it did not belong to the joint family. It was admitted that some of the property scheduled in the plaint was joint property.

At the hearing in the first Court the Subordinate Judge very properly placed on the defendants the onus of proving that the property claimed by them was their self-acquired property. The defendants refused to accept the ruling of the Court in that matter. They persisted in their contention that the onus lay on the plaintiff, and declined to call any evidence in support of their case. They contented themselves with putting in certain sale-deeds and such like documents. As to those papers it is sufficient to refer to the case of Gajendar Singh v. Sardar Singh (1). Such documents unsupported by any parol evidence, are insufficient to establish the defendants' case. The first Court gave the plaintiff a decree. On appeal the District Judge has reversed that decision. He held that the onus of proof lay on the plaintiff. In so holding we have no doubt he was entirely wrong, and we say so on the authority of Dhurm Das Pandey v. Mussumat Shama Soondari Dibiah (2) and of the High Court of Bengal in the case of Gobind Chunder Mookerjee (3), and the cases cited therein. We hold that as the defendants set up their separate acquisition in a suit for the partition of a joint family, which admittedly was possessed as such of some property, the presumption of law was that the whole of the property of each individual belonged to the common stock. The burden of * Second Appeal No. 410 of 1897 from a decree of C. Rustomjee, Esq. District Judge of Moradabad, dated the 24th March 1897, reversing the decree of Pandit Rajnath Sahib, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated the 11th December 1893.

(1) 16 A.W.N. (1896) 23. (2) 3 M. I. A. 229. (3) 22 W. R. C. R. 248.

1899
DEC. 16.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 141=
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 2.

proving separate self-[143]acquisition lay on the person asserting it. In our opinion therefore the decision of the Judge was absolutely wrong. We set aside his decree dismissing the suit.

It was urged for the respondents that we should now remand the record so as to give them an opportunity of putting in their evidence. We refuse to adopt that course. The defendants had ample opportunity to produce their evidence. They absolutely refused to submit to the ruling of the first Court and declined to produce evidence. They have only themselves to thank for the consequences. We refuse to assist them. The suit then was practically undefended and was properly decreed by the Court of first instance in the absence of any evidence for the defence. That was a right decree. We restore it, and (setting aside the decree of the lower appellate Court) we allow this appeal with costs.

Appeal decreed.

22 A. 143 = 20 A.W.N. (1900) 4.

APPELLATE CIVIL.

Before Mr. Justice Blair and Mr. Justice Burkitt.

ABDUR RAHIM (Plaintiff) v. THE MUNICIPAL BOARD OF KOIL
(Defendant).^{*} [16th December, 1899.]

Suit for declaration of right to be entered in list of candidates for appointment as member of a Municipal Board—Jurisdiction—Suit brought against the Municipal Board in its corporate capacity.

Where a plaintiff sued for a declaration of his right to have his name entered in the list of persons entitled to be candidates for election as members of a Municipal Board and brought his suit against the Board in its corporate capacity, it was held that such a suit would not lie against the Board, even if, which was not decided, it might lie against the revising authority, by the irregular action of which, it was alleged, the plaintiff's name had been excluded from the list of candidates.

[R., 18 Ind. Cas. 122 (124) = 16 O. C. 36 (39).]

THE facts of this case sufficiently appear from the judgment of the lower appellate Court, which was as follows:—

"The plaintiff appellant asks for a declaratory decree against the Municipal Board of Aligarh (sic), to the effect that he is entitled to be entered in the list of candidates for election as a member of the Board, and for damages amounting to Rs. 1,100.

[144] "His allegation is that he was elected as a member in March 1894, but his election was set aside by the Magistrate's order passed in May 1894.

"After this the Municipal Board appointed Mr. H. J. Smith, K. Muhammad Yusuf, L. Sri Lal and Sheikh Amin-ud-din as a revising authority for correcting the list of voters, for 1895.

"Muhammad Nur Khan, his former opponent, raised an objection to entry of name of plaintiff on list of voters, on the ground that he paid a monthly rent of less than Rs. 10. The matter was brought up before the revising authorities on 26th January, 1895, and some irregular and illegal proceedings took place, as detailed in the plaint, in consequence of which the name of plaintiff appellant was struck off list of candidates for membership. It is alleged that the order passed by the revising authority was passed mala fide at the instigation of Muhammad Nur Khan, to whom the members of the revising tribunal were partial (Mr. Smith alone excepted). In consequence of this illegal action of the revising tribunal plaintiff appellant failed to be elected in 1895, and this suit is the result.

^{*} Second Appeal No. 298 of 1897, from a decree of L.G. Evans, Esq., District Judge of Aligarh, dated the 4th March 1897, confirming a decree of Babu Bepin Behari Mukerji, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh dated the 6th December 1895.

"The learned Subordinate Judge fixed several issues and decided as below :—

1. The suit is cognizable by a Civil Court.
2. The order of the revising authorities was not wholly regular and the decision was erroneous.
3. The suit is not barred by s. 42, S. R. A.
4. The plaintiff is qualified to be a member.
5. The plaintiff can maintain a suit for damages, but he cannot get any because he has failed to prove malice on part of the revising authorities.

"The plaintiff has appealed against this decision. No objection has been taken under s. 561, Civil Procedure Code, by the defendant Municipal Board, but I hold that the defendant can nevertheless contest the findings of the lower Court where they are against them. 'A respondent who fails to file a petition under this section is not bound by the findings arrived at against him by the lower Court'—Bhagoji v. Bapuji (1), and may take any objection to the decree of the lower Court which he [145] might have taken if he had preferred a separate appeal—Kamat v. Kamat (2); In re M. Himmat Bahadur (3).

"Under these circumstances the Government Pleader on behalf of the Municipal Board urges :—

(1) that the suit is not cognizable by a Civil Court ;

(2) that the plaintiff is not entitled to the declaration asked for as against the defendant Board.

"I am referred to the ruling of the Calcutta High Court in Sabhabat Singh v. Abdul Gaffur (4) on behalf of the Board.

"The remarks of Mr. Justice Trevelyan, p. 111 et seq point to the conclusion that a suit would lie under the circumstances stated by the plaintiff appellant, that is, assuming that the allegation of the plaintiff appellant is correct, that his name was struck off the list of candidates in an irregular way by friends of Muhammad Nur Khan, who were not acting in good faith ; it stands to reason that the relief claimed is one which can be considered by the Civil Court acting under s. 42, Specific Relief Act.

"This is clearly the meaning of the ruling of the Calcutta High Court referred to above, and as no ruling can be cited to the contrary, I hold that the learned Subordinate Judge was right in finding that he has jurisdiction to try and decide this suit.

"The next point for decision is more difficult—

Can the plaintiff appellant claim the declaration asked for against the Municipal Board ?

"The plaintiff appellant, who has conducted his own case, admits that his claim is against the corporate body represented by the

1899
DEC. 16.
—
APPEL-
LATE CIVIL.
—
22 A. 143 =
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 4.

1899
DEC. 16.

President, and not against the President or any individual member personally.

APPEL-
LATE
CIVIL.

"In the Calcutta case above noted it was decided that no action for damages could lie against the Magistrate who set aside the election, as he only acted bona fide in pursuance of what he believed to be the duties of his office ; and it was further held that no declaration could be made against him, as the matter was not one in which he really had an interest.

22 A. 143=
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 4.

[146] "It was held, however, that an action did lie against those persons who denied the right of the plaintiff and put in force machinery which excluded his exercise of that right.

"In this case the plaintiff appellant bases his suit on the allegation that certain specified members of the Municipal Board, acting under the instigation of his opponent Muhammad Nur Khan, put certain machinery in motion, which resulted in his name being struck out of the list of candidates for the year 1895, and on this ground he says he is entitled to a declaration and damages as against the Municipal Board in its corporate capacity. In this case, according to the rules laid down for the Aligarh Municipality (G. O. No. 716, dated 9th August, 1884), the result of the proceedings of the revising authority was that their order became final, not being corrected by the Magistrate within one month from the last sitting. In other words, the proceedings of the revising authorities were automatically ratified by the Board under the rules, and the order of the revising authorities became for all practical purposes an order of the whole Board.

"But it is not contended that the members of the Board in their corporate capacity were actuated by any malice.

"The order of the revising authorities became the order of the Board under force of circumstances, and it is obvious that the position of the Municipal Board in its corporate capacity is in this case similar to the position of the Magistrate in the Calcutta case. The following remarks apply in this case, mutatis mutandis. 'What he (the Magistrate) did was done, or at any rate purported to be done, in pursuance of authority given to him by law. There is a question whether he had any authority to do what he did * * * ; but even if that be so, the Magistrate acted bona fide in pursuance of what he believed to be the duties of his office, and therefore he would not be liable to an action in respect of it. He would certainly not be liable to any action for damages, and, as far as a declaration against him is concerned, that is not a matter in which he really had any interest. * * * We think it very doubtful whether such a decree could be given, and certainly, as a matter of policy, it would not be right for us to do anything which would compel Magistrates of districts to be [147] brought in in suits of this kind when the contest is really one between the parties who have opposed one another at an election.'

"In this case, applying the principles laid down above, I hold that the real dispute lies between plaintiff appellant and the friends or partisans of Muhammad Nur Khan, and that the Municipal Board in its corporate capacity cannot be dragged into their quarrels.

"The Municipal Board in its corporate capacity acted bona fide in pursuance of rules laid down for its guidance by Government, and is not interested in any way with respect to the title of plaintiff appellant to any particular character or right. In this particular instance the right of plaintiff appellant to be elected a member of the Board is not a matter in which the Board in its corporate capacity is interested in the slightest degree.

"For the above reason, I hold that the plaintiff appellant cannot, under s. 42, Specific Relief Act, claim any declaration or ask for any damages against the Municipal Board in its corporate capacity, and the suit must therefore fail.

"It is unnecessary, under these circumstances, to express any opinion on the facts; but I may say that I agree with the learned Subordinate Judge in his finding on the sixth issue, viz., that the plaintiff-appellant is qualified under the rules to be a member of the Municipal Board.

"The learned Subordinate Judge for reasons given by him did not award costs to defendant Municipal Board, but in this appeal I am of opinion that the Board is entitled to its costs.

"The plaintiff-appellant should have been content with the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge that the proceedings of the revising authorities were irregular and their decision erroneous.

"It is quite clear that as against the Board in its corporate capacity he has no reasonable ground of complaint.

"Appeal dismissed with costs."

The plaintiff thereupon appealed to the High Court.

Babu Satya Chandar Mukerji, for the appellant.

Mr. E. Chamier, for the respondent.

JUDGMENT.

BURKITT, J. (BLAIR, J., concurring).—In this appeal various questions have been argued before us, and amongst others the [148] question as to whether any suit having for its object to obtain a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to have his name entered in the lists of electors or candidates could lie against the Municipal Board. We do not propose to decide any of those questions. We are of opinion that the appeal must fail on the short ground that the suit has been brought against the wrong party. The plaintiff's allegation is that by reason of certain tortious acts committed by the revising authority his name was wrongfully struck off the list of persons qualified to stand as candidates for election to the Municipal Board at the next election. This the plaintiff alleged as done at the instigation of, and with a view to please and show partiality to, a disappointed candidate. It is admitted for the plaintiff that he had a remedy by application to the District Magistrate (who had power to revise and amend the list prepared by the revising authority), but that he did not avail himself of that remedy.

We are clearly of opinion that if the plaintiff had any right of suit, as to which we express no opinion, his suit should have been instituted against the persons of whose alleged wrongful acts and misconduct he complains, namely, the persons who constituted the revising authority, and that the suit, if maintainable at all, would lie against them personally for the individual acts done by them. The revising authority had the duty imposed on it of preparing the lists of voters and candidates, subject to the final orders of the District Magistrate, and if the members of that body are responsible to any Court for wrongful acts done by them in the performance of that duty they are responsible as individuals. The Municipal Board in its corporate capacity is not answerable for the misconduct and wrongful acts of the revising authority in preparing the lists. It has no control over or power of amending those lists. The Magistrate of the District is the only authority by which those lists can be revised or amended.

For the above reasons we are of opinion that this appeal fails. We therefore dismiss it with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

1899
DEC. 16.
—
APPEL-LATE
CIVIL.

22 A. 143 =
20 A.W.N.
(1900) 4.

1899 22 A. 149 (P.C.)=4 C.W.N. 153=2 Bom. L.R. 523=27 I.A. 58=7 Sar. P.C.J. 601.

Nov. 11.

[149] PRIVY COUNCIL.

PRIVY

PRESENT:

COUNCIL.

Lords Watson, Hobhouse, and Davey, Sir Richard Couch and Sir Edward Fry.

22 A. 149

(P.C.)=4

C.W.N. 153=

2 Bom. L.R.

523=27

I.A. 58=7

Sar. P.C.J.

601.

[On Appeal from the High Court for the North-Western Provinces.]

BALKISHEN DAS AND OTHERS (Defendants) v. W. F. LEGGE (Plaintiff.) [27th & 28th June, 4th & 5th July and 11th November, 1899.]

Sale of land and agreement for re-purchase—Mortgage by conditional sale—Right to redeem—Intention—Regulations I of 1798 and XVII of 1806—Exclusion of extrinsic evidence to vary written instrument—Act No. I of 1872 (Indian Evidence Act), s. 92.

A deed of sale of land for value was accompanied by a deed of agreement between the parties for purchase back by the vendor of the land on payment by him of money to the vendee on a future date fixed. The deeds were followed by transfer of possession to the vendee, and his receipt of the profits.

The vendor did not exercise his right of re-purchase; but after many years, gave notice of his intention to redeem, and brought this suit to enforce his right of redemption as upon a mortgage by conditional sale.

Held: (1) that oral evidence for the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the parties to the deeds was not admissible, being excluded by the enactment in s. 92 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

This case had to be decided on a consideration of the documents themselves, with only such extrinsic evidence of circumstances as might be required to show the relation of the written language to existing facts.

(2) That there were contained in the deeds indications that the parties intended to effect a mortgage by conditional sale. In such a mortgage it is not necessary that the mortgagor should make himself personally liable for the repayment of the loan.

(3) The equity of redemption was rendered applicable to a mortgage of this class by the effect of the Regulation XVII of 1806. The Transfer of Property Act, 1882, s. 58, defines a mortgage of this character stating the already existing law, and practice regarding it; but owing to its date did not apply in this instance.

(4) Redemption had been rightly decreed in the Courts below.

(5) Whether such a mortgage would be redeemable under the Regulation law independently of intention indicated in the instrument was not a point calling for decision. Indications in this case appearing in the deeds were (a), words in the agreement for repurchase similar to those in Regulation I of 1798, relating to the deposit of mortgage money in the Treasury, giving the like power to deposit; (b), the inclusion in the present security of a sum due on an account, open to be increased, other than the price fixed for the repurchase; and other matters. Bhagwan Sahai v. Bhagwan Din (1) distinguished.

[Diss., 33 A. 340=8 A.L.J. 373=13 Bom.L.R. 391 (394)=13 C.L.J. 510=15 C.W.N. 521=11 Ind. Cas. 398=21 M.L.J. 1126=10 M.L.T. 23=(1911) 2 M.W.N. 370; N.F., 33 A. 585 (602)=8 A.L.J. 389=9 Ind. Cas. 1013; F., 26 B. 252 (F.B.)=3 Bom.L.R. 778; 30 B. 119=7 Bom.L.R. 669; 35 B. 231 (235)=13 Bom.L.R. 113=9 Ind. Cas. 941 (942); 25 M. =11 M.L.J. 370; 8 C.W.N. 101; 10 Ind. Cas. 630 (631); F. & Exp., 28 C. 289=5 C.W.N. 326; R., 27 A. 612 (617)=2 A.L.J. 360=A.W.N. (1905) 129; 30 B. 426=8 Bom.L.R. 553; 34 B. 59=11 Bom.L.R. 1130=4 Ind. Cas. 257; 35 B. 93=12 Bom.L.R. 972=8 Ind. Cas. 644; 30 C. 883 (893); 31 M. 187 (191)=18 M.L.J. 158; 2 Bom.L.R. 1058 (1067, 1068); 8 Bom.L.R. 287 (294); 8 Bom.L.R. 761 (762); 6 Ind. Cas. 817 (818)=6 N.L.R. 65; 8 Ind. Cas. 501; 10 Ind. Cas. 1004 (1006)=27 P.R. 1911=191 P.L.R. 1911=118 P.W.R. 1911; 11 Ind. Cas. 124 (125); 14 Ind. Cas. 65 (66)=1912 M.W.N. 164 (165); 19 Ind. Cas. 428 (429); 2 L.B.R. 99 (102); 3 L.B.R. 227; 3 L.B.R. 100 (108); 24 M.L.J. 91 (92)=

(1) 17 I. A. 98=12 A. 387.

13 M.L.T. 104 (106) ; 2 N.L.R. 57 (60) ; 3 N.L.R. 19 (26, 23) ; 3 N.L.R. 97 (99) ; 8 O.C. 275 (276) ; 11 O.C. 95 (97) ; 76 P.R. 1901=114 P.L.R. 1901 ; U.B.R. (1908), 3rd Qr., Evidence 15 ; Exp., 28 C. 256=5 C.W.N. 351 ; D., 7 A.L.J. 484 =6 Ind. Cas. 183 (184) ; 8 Bom.L.R. 764 ; 6 C.L.J. 208=11 C.W.N. 400 ; 10 C.L.J. 27 (29)=2 Ind. Cas. 953 (954) ; 11 C.L.J. 39 (42)=2 Ind. Cas. 13.]

1899
Nov. 11.
—
PRIVY
COUNCIL.

[150] APPEAL from a decree (23rd April 1897)* of the High Court, which affirmed, substantially, a decree, (8th February 1895) of the Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur.

22 A. 149
(P.C.)=4
C.W.N. 153=
2 Bom. L.R.
523=27
I.A. 58=7
Sar. P.C.J.
601.

The suit was brought by the respondent, William Francis Legge, on the 5th November 1894, for the redemption of an alleged mortgage of the 4th February 1873, on which date he executed to Balkishen Das, the appellant, together with Hari Das, since deceased, a firm of bankers in Benares, a deed of sale to them of his estate, named the Patilah taluk, the price stated being Rs. 1,50,000. The consideration was not paid in cash, but consisted in part of money unpaid upon a previous mortgage to the banking firm effected on the 8th April 1872 by the plaintiff in conjunction with a partner (whom he had since bought out) in carrying on Indigo factories, of which he was the sole owner in February 1873. The rest of the consideration was a balance, retained by the banking firm, of the amount then due on an estimate of expenses for conducting the factories, which they financed for the plaintiff.

A second deed, an ikrarnama, was executed by the banking firm to the plaintiff on the same day, and bore even date with the first deed, the deed of sale. By this ikrarnama the firm agreed that they would sell the taluk back to him if he paid on the 1st March 1876 the sum of Rs. 1,65,000 to them ; and it was thereby agreed :—(1) that, if the buyers or their heirs should raise any objections to receiving the money and to relinquishing the property, the seller should be competent to deposit that sum in cash in the Treasury, and thereupon obtain possession ;—(2) that if the estimate of the expenditure on the Indigo factories should be varied by consent from year to year, then the seller should be liable to pay along with the sum specified above whatever sum might be found to be due at that time, on the factories account.

On the 6th April 1873 a deed was executed between the parties containing "an estimate of expenditure upon the factories ;" and the respondent borrowed money, which was secured to be repaid in December 1873 upon an instrument separately mortgaging the factories ; which, after fresh borrowing and another deed of estimate in 1874, were sold on the 25th March 1875, [151] with some other properties, by the plaintiff to the bankers for Rs. 66,000.

The defence of Balkishen Das and of the sons of Hari Das, as his successors in the firm, was that the transaction of the 4th February 1873 was a sale out-and-out of Patilah, and not a mortgage. They denied that any relation of debtor and creditor was subsisting between the parties, and that any agreement to allow the vendor to repurchase for a specified sum, or any relation of mortgagee and mortgagor, continued after the date fixed for payment of the sum for the repurchase, if it was to take place ; that date having been the 1st March 1876.

The question to be decided on this appeal was the main one raised by the issues :—whether the instruments of the 4th February 1873 constituted a mortgage by conditional sale or a sale out-and-out. Oral evidence

1899
Nov. 11. was admitted on each side at the hearing to explain the intention of the parties to the transaction.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

22 A. 149
(P.C.)=4
C.W.N. 153=
2 Bom. L.R.
523=27
I.A. 58=7
Sar. P.C.J.
601.

The decision of the Subordinate Judge was in the plaintiff's favour. His judgment was that the deeds on their face constituted a conditional mortgage, and he found that by the ancient custom prevailing, the mortgage by conditional sale was generally effected in that way. He referred to the value of the property, which was in excess of the price stated in the sale-deed of 1873, as showing, with clauses in the ikrarnama (including those above mentioned), the intention of the parties to mortgage, and not actually to sell. His decree was for redemption, on payment by the plaintiff of the Rs. 1,65,000 stipulated for the repurchase, with Rs. 6,607 for principal and interest due on a sum left unpaid, on the expenditure estimated, after the sale of the factories in 1875.

This decision was maintained on the defendants' appeal by a Division Bench of the High Court (BANERJI and AIKMAN, JJ.). Their judgment is reported at length in Balkishen Das and others v. W. F. Legge (1). Upon a consideration of the terms of the ikrarnama, the surrounding circumstances and the oral evidence, they came to the conclusion, in concurrence with the Court below, that the contracting parties intended the transaction to be one of mortgage by conditional sale, and not to be an [152] absolute sale with merely a right to repurchase on a certain date. They did not regard as a precedent for this case that of Bhagwan Sahai v. Bhagwan Din (2), which they distinguished from the present.

Mr. J. D. Mayne and Mr. W. Colvin, for the appellants, argued that the judgments of the Courts below were wrong upon the construction of the deeds of 4th February 1873. The true intent and meaning of those deeds were that they ended the relation of debtor and creditor between the parties, and that the bankers became absolute owners of the taluka, after the 1st March 1876. The buyers were until that date under contract to convey that property back to the plaintiff if he should tender to them on that date Rs. 1,65,000, and should also pay any balance that might then be due under the deed of estimate of expenditure dated the 8th April 1872. Those sums were neither tendered nor paid on that date and therefore the sale was from that date indefeasible. The High Court had erred in holding that there were in the surrounding circumstances reason for their putting a construction upon the deeds of the 4th February 1873 different from that which the words literally bore. Also, in the absence of fraud, and for purposes other than to prove it, the Courts below were wrong in admitting oral evidence. This they had admitted to explain what the parties intended by the deeds that had passed between them, and to vary the meaning of the words used; so that what had been plainly a sale had been construed to have been a mortgage. This was in contravention of ss. 92 and 93 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, which excluded all evidence taken from outside the written agreement. Besides, the evidence for the plaintiff as to the meaning of the parties, even if admissible, was insufficient to outweigh the express words of the registered document. Again, both the Courts below had relied upon an assumed usage of the people to employ language importing a sale with a view to conveying the effect of a mortgage. This was not borne out by evidence. The appellant had the right to contend that there was upon the true construction of the words used in the deeds, not contradicted by any legal evidence, nor by any evidence rightly understood, a sale for valuable [153]

(1) 19 A. 434.

(2) 17 I.A. 98=12 A. 387.

consideration received by the vendor, coupled with a contract under which he was to be allowed to repurchase the property on a fixed day only. When he had failed to repurchase on that day, the right on his part to obtain possession of the property that had passed from him to the defendants ceased to be exerciseable. From and after the 1st March 1876 the relation of debtor and creditor no longer existed. They were then vendor and purchaser. There was no longer any loan, debt or mortgage after that date, the sale having become absolute.

The decision of this committee in Bhagwan Sahai v. Bhagwan Din (1) was then referred to—wherein was cited the judgment in Alderson v. White (2), to the effect that the rule of law on the subject was the following:—that prima facie, an absolute conveyance, containing nothing to show that the relation of debtor and creditor is to exist between the parties, does not cease to be an absolute conveyance and become a mortgage merely because the vendor stipulates that he shall have a right to repurchase. In Sital Pershad v. Luchmi Pershad Singh (3), the plaintiff failed to establish that a sale to him, with a right of repurchase, was in effect a mortgage; but in that case there were special circumstances, not presented in this, it was true. The sale in that case was declared to be an acquittance of the debt, and the money for repurchase was only to be received under circumstances personal to the debtor, and not shown. Here, there had been a resort to other modes of securing and of clearing the debt on the factories followed by the sale of them, which in 1875 left a comparatively small balance. The principle that continuing indebtedness was to support the view of continuing mortgage was referred to in The Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway Company v. The North Central Wagon Company (4).

Mr. A. Cohen, Q. C., and Mr. L. DeGruyther (Mr. A. J. Ashton with them), for the respondent, contended that the judgments of the Courts below were right as to the effect of the deeds of the 4th February 1873. The terms of those instruments, read together, could not but be construed as supporting [154] the view that they were intended to operate as a mortgage, and not as a sale out-and-out. Their form was one much used in the North-Western Provinces and elsewhere to constitute a mortgage by conditional sale, termed in the vernacular bai-bil-wafa. It was said to have been the practice of the Muhammadans to employ this form of mortgage, as it avoided, in their opinion, any infringement of their law against the creditor's taking interest from the debtor. Reference was made to Baillie's Moohummudan Law. Supplement "Of Sale," 782, 809. But sale and a right of purchasing back were commonly resorted to in transactions intended to have the effect of mortgages. In the present instance the intention of the parties to mortgage was shown in several ways by the provisions made in the deeds themselves; and, first, by the right secured to the vendor, should he conclude to repurchase and should the vendee refuse to accept his tender of the purchase money, to pay it into the District Treasury. That provision was in the words of a clause in Regulation I of 1798 relating to the mortgage by conditional sale, or bai-bil-wafa; secondly, the requirement that advances made, and to be made, for the working of the factories should be repaid at the same time with the payment of the repurchase money; thirdly, the excess of that money, by 1899

Nov. 11.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

22 A. 149
(P.C.)=4

C.W.N. 153=

2 Bom L.R.
523=27

I.A. 58=7

Sar. P.C.J.
601.

(1) 17 I. A. 98=12 A. 387.

(3) 10 I. A. 139.

(2) (1858) 2 Deg. and J. 105.

(4) (1888) L.R. 13 A. C. 554 (560).

1899 Rs. 15,000, over the Rs. 1,50,000, the ostensible sale price mentioned in the deed. Next, reference was made to Regulations I of 1798 and XVII of 1806, and the introduction of the right of redemption into the Indian law of mortgage. A statement of that right was not required to be in the deeds themselves, because it was an incident annexed by law without mention in the written contract. Macpherson on Mortgages, 7th ed., pp. 15, 16; Rashbehary Ghose on Mortgages, Tagore Law Lectures for 1877, pp. 136, 139. In 1865 the law of foreclosure in these mortgages was considered in Forbes v. Amir-un-nissa Begam (1), where the effect of a bai-bil-wafa, or mortgage by conditional sale, was dealt with as resulting from deeds of sale and defeasance in no way different from those in the present case. On the other hand, in Pattabhiramier v. Vencaturao Naicken (2), which came before this committee from Madras, to which Presidency the rule of the Bengal Regulations [155] allowing redemption at any time before foreclosure had not been extended, a sale was held to have become absolute after default. That was on the ground that the English law relating to the equity of redemption was no part of the ancient Indian law and usage in these matters.

1899
Nov. 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
22 A. 149
(P.C.)=4
C.W.N. 153=
2 Bom L.R.
523=27
I.A. 58=7
Sar. P.C.J.
601.

With reference to what was laid down in Alderson v. White (3), as belonging to mortgage, that the relation of debtor and creditor must be intended to continue, it was argued that the state of things as shown to be in contemplation by the ikrarnaama of the 4th February 1873 completely satisfied that requirement. The transaction involved that the security should include the debt upon the factory accounts. The principal English cases bearing upon an actual transaction of mortgage receiving effect, though ostensibly a sale, on the first appearance, upon evidence of the intention of the parties to secure repayment according to contract, instead of selling and buying out-and-out, were collected in Rochevoucauld v. Boustead (4). In Rakken v. Alagappudayan (5), the intention and agreement were proved by oral evidence and a suit for possession founded on a deed of sale was defeated by proof of a contemporaneous oral agreement for reconveyance on the payment of money borrowed. In that case was cited by the Court Bakshu Lakshman v. Govinda Kanji (6); and it was held that, without contravention of ss. 92, 93 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, if it is apparent that the transaction has been treated as a mortgage by the parties, a mortgage it will be held to constitute. The admission of oral evidence was shown by those cases to turn on the necessity of admitting it to expose fraud involved in the conduct of a pretended buyer knowing himself to be mortgagee.

Also were cited Bhup Kuar v. Muhammadi Begam (7); Ali Ahmad v. Rahmat-ul-lah (8), where the case of Bhagwan Sahai v. Bhagwan Din (9) is observed upon; Ramasami Sastrigal v. Samayappa Nayakan (10); Ras Muni Dibia v. Prankishen Das (11).

[156] Mr. J. D. Mayne replied.

Afterwards on the 11th November 1899, their Lordships' judgment was delivered by LORD DAVEY.

JUDGMENT.

In and prior to the year 1872 Hari Das and the appellant Balkishen Das carried on business as bankers at Benares. Hari Das was the managing partner. He died on the 27th April 1889. The present appellants

- | | | |
|----------------------------|--------------------|-------------------------------|
| (1) 10 M.I.A. 340 (346). | (2) 13 M I.A. 560. | (3) (1858) 2 De G. and J. 98. |
| (4) (1897) L.R. 1 Ch. 196. | (5) 16 M. 80. | (6) 4 B. 594. |
| (7) 6 A. 37. | (8) 14 A. 195. | (9) 17 I.A. 98=12 A. 387. |
| (10) 4 M. 179. | (11) 4 M.I.A. 392. | |

are Balkishen Das and the two sons and heirs of Hari Das. The respondent was at that time the owner of a taluka called Patilah in the district of Jaunpur and was also half-sharer of certain indigo factories known as Basharatpur, and carried on the business there in partnership with one De Momet, his co-sharer. By a deed dated the 8th April 1872 the taluka was mortgaged to Hari Das and Balkishen Das for Rs. 1,25,000, and by another deed of the same date (called a deed of estimate) the factories were also mortgaged to them as security for Rs. 60,000, which sum was to be applied partly in payment of previous debt and partly in providing for the necessities of the indigo business for the current year. At the end of the year 1872 it was found that the business had been carried on at a loss. The debt due to the bankers was Rs. 1,90,000, and further advances were needed for carrying on the business. The respondent in these circumstances bought out his partner De Momet and became sole owner of the factories and solely interested in the business. A fresh bandobast or settlement was thereupon made between him and the bankers and was carried into effect by three deeds, of which two relating to the taluka were dated the 4th February 1873 and the third relating to the factories was dated the 6th April 1873.

The first deed of 4th February 1873 was, on the face of it, an absolute sale by the respondent to the bankers for the price of Rs. 1,50,000, which was expressed to be paid in the following manner, viz., the bankers retained out of the Rs. 1,50,000 the sum of Rs. 1,37,333-6-0 principal with interest up to date which had by calculation been found due by the respondent to the bankers under the mortgage deed of the taluka dated 8th April 1872 and retained the balance Rs. 12,666-10-0 in part payment of the amount then due on the deed of estimate of expenses for conducting the factories of the Basharatpur concern.

[157] The other deed of the 4th February 1873 was in the following terms:—

"We, Babus Hari Das and Balkishen Das, sons of Babu Padam Das, proprietors of the firm of Babu Madhuban Das and Dwarka Das, caste Gujrati, resident of mohalla Gwaldas, in the city of Benares, do declare as follows:—

"The vendor, Mr. William Francis Legge, having, under the sale-deed dated 4th February 1873 sold absolutely, for Rs. 1,50,000, his zamindari right and property in the entire 16 annas of taluka Patilah, pargana Ungli, in the district of Jaunpur, comprising 25 villages, original and attached, together with all sir, sayer items, high and low lands, water and forest produce, water places and tanks, cultivated, uncultivated, saline, waste and jungle lands; village sites, ponds, katcha and pakka wells, collection houses, tenants, quarters, bamboo clumps, groves and detached fruit and timber trees of all sorts, and stone and wooden mills, inclusive of all the zamindari rights and interest appertaining to the said taluka, without exclusion of any right or property, to us, the executants, has caused mutation of names to be effected. We, the executants, therefore, of our own free will and accord, covenant and declare that if the said vendor pays on 1st March 1876, the amount of Rs. 1,65,000 in a lump sum, we shall sell to the said vendor the whole of the said ilaka sold, as it exists at present, for the said amount of Rs. 1,65,000, and we shall cause everything connected with mutation of names, &c., to be done, neither we nor our heir, shall have any objection thereto. If we or our heirs raise any objection to receive the money and relinquish the property, the vendor shall be competent to deposit the said amount in cash in the treasury, by virtue of this agreement, and obtain possession over the ilaka, we shall have no sort of objection to it. It has further been stipulated by the executants and the vendor that if the amount of the estimate money of the Basharatpur concern should keep varying on account of alterations made by consent of us, executants, from year to year, then the vendor shall be liable to pay along with the sum abovementioned, whatever sum may be found to be due at that time by him to us executants. The sahib shall not be competent to effect a sale until the payment of the estimate money relating to the factories of the Basharatpur concern. We shall recover from the vendor any amount of arrear that may 1899

Nov. 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
22 A. 149
(P.C.)=4
C.W.N. 153=
2 Bom. L.R.
523=27
I.A. 58=7
Sar. P.C.J.
601.

1899
NOV. 11.
—
PRIVY COUNCIL.
—
22 A. 149
(P.C.) = 4
C.W.N. 153 =
2 Bom. L.R.
523 = 27
I.A. 58 = 7
Sar. P.C.J.
601.

"be due to us by the cultivators by making an assignment thereof in favour of the vendor, and after the expiry of 1st March 1876, the said vendor shall not be competent either to pay the money or to make the purchase and the conditions of this deed of agreement shall be deemed to be null and void."

The question between the parties in this appeal is whether the two deeds together constituted a mortgage of the taluka or an out-and-out sale with a contract of repurchase.

After the execution of these deeds the bankers made further advances to the respondent to a large amount on account of the [158] Basharatpur concern. By the third deed dated the 6th of April 1873, the sum of Rs. 44,223-14-3 was found due from the respondent up to date, and he mortgaged the factories for Rs. 75,000, out of which the balance was paid off and money was provided for working the factories during the current year.

On the 3rd of March 1874 another deed of estimate was executed for that year, and finally by a deed dated the 25th March 1875 the respondent sold and conveyed the factories to the bankers for a price which left him a debtor to them in the sum of Rs. 5,953-4-3. There is no deed of defeasance to this deed and it was admittedly an absolute sale.

It should be noticed that on the execution of the deeds of 4th February 1873 the necessary mutation of names was made and the bankers entered into and have ever since been in possession or receipt of the rents and profits of the taluka.

The respondent did not buy back or redeem the property on the 1st of March 1876. But on the 5th of November 1894 he commenced the present action for redemption of the taluka, alleging that the deeds of 4th February 1873 constituted a mortgage by conditional sale with possession thereof. The defendants and present appellants, on the other hand, contended that the transaction was an absolute sale with a contract of resale, and the time having expired and the condition not having been fulfilled the contract had become null and void.

The Subordinate Judge held that the documents in question were deeds of mortgage by conditional sale and that the respondent was entitled to redemption. His judgment was affirmed by the High Court.

